because they follow one another during day and night, man being at no moment deprived of their guardianship.

1269A The verse lays down the principle in the most clear and emphatic words that all creation has been brought into existence solely by Allah, and that those who are taken as gods besides Allah (Christ being one of them) have not created anything. The words so that what is created became confused to them signify that the things made by man can never be so like the creation of nature that the two should ever become mixed up.

1270 Matá' includes here all kinds of things necessary for the life of man, such as utensils, tools, implements, and instruments of war (S).

1271 The parable set forth here signifies that the Holy Prophet and his followers, being meant for the good of mankind, will live and prosper; on the other hand, the worthless usages and customs of the Meccans, as well as those who upheld them, shall be swept away before the mighty current of truth as rubbish is borne away by a torrent.

Righteousness will bring its Reward and Transgression its Evil Consequences

19–24. The righteous and their reward. 25, 26. The transgressors and their end.

22 And those who are constant,[1273] seeking the pleasure of their Lord, and keep up prayer and spend (benevolently) out of what We have given them secretly and openly and repel evil with good;[1274] as for those, they shall have the (happy) issue of the abode,

1273 Patience in trials and sufferings is only one of the ideas which the word ṣabr conveys. According to Rgh, ṣabr is the keeping oneself constrained to that which reason or law requires, or to withhold from that from which they require to withhold, which in similar words may be put as being constant in doing good and refraining from evil.

1274. This passage lays down the noble doctrine of meeting evil with good, which Christians generally put forward as being taught nowhere but in the Christian religion. The Qur-án not only teaches it but improves upon it, making it practicable, so that its observance in Islam does not interfere with law and order, whereas the Gospel doctrine, owing to its impracticability, has not been observed to this day. The words used here are يدرؤن بالحسنة السيّئة i.e. repel evil with good. Evil is a thing which is by all means to be repelled, and hence good for evil is recommended only in cases when evil would be repelled by that good. A society which unconditionally requited evil with good would abolish all safeguards; evil-doers who received nothing but good for every evil they committed would most assuredly establish a condition of anarchy by their evil deeds. In a similar strain the Qur-án says elsewhere, he who forgives and amends (thereby) (42 : 40).

23 The gardens of perpetual abode which they will enter along with those who do good from among their parents[1275] and their spouses[1276] and their offspring; and the angels will enter in upon them from every gate:

25 And those who break the covenant of Allah after its confirmation and cut asunder that which Allah has ordered to be joined and make mischief in the land; (as for) those, upon them shall be curse and they shall have the evil (issue) of the abode.

Miracles of the Qur-án

27–30. The Qur-án gives true satisfaction to man's heart. 31. The transformation to be wrought.

27 And those who disbelieve say: Why is not a sign sent down upon him by his Lord?[1277] Say: Surely Allah makes him who will, go astray, and guides to Himself those who turn (to Him).[1278]

As against the raillery of Gibbon and Muir, I need only remark that azwáj is the plural of zauj, which means either husband or wife, and hence I have rendered it as spouse or mate.

1277 The answer to this question is given in the concluding words of the section: "There will not cease to afflict them because of what they do a repelling calamity, or it will alight close by their abodes until the promise of Allah comes about." This promise related to the utter annihilation of the power of the unbelievers. The question, why is not a sign sent down upon him? here as elsewhere in the Holy Qur-án, is really a demand for the 28 Those who believe and whose hearts are set at rest by the remembrance of Allah; now surely by Allah's remembrance are the hearts set at rest.

30 And thus We have sent you (Ar. thee.) among a nation before which other nations have passed away, that you might (Ar. thou mightest.) recite to them what We have revealed to you (Ar. thee.) and (still) they deny the Beneficent God. Say: He is my Lord, there is no god but He: on Him do I rely and to Him is my return.

31 And even if there were a Qur-án with which the mountains were made to pass away, or the earth were travelled over with it, or the dead were made to speak thereby;[1280] nay! the commandment is wholly promised annihilation of their power and their vanquishment, and the answer is always conveyed in somewhat similar terms, stating first that they should ask for mercy; that the Qur-án has healing power, the condition of the faithful being a witness to it; that the fate of the former generations affords a lesson; that smaller calamities continue to afflict them, and in these they can see the signs of their ultimate vanquishment; and that finally, if all those tokens are rejected, the great calamity will not fail to overtake them.

1278 Of the two alternative significances the words may bear either. The contrast with those who turn to Him makes the meaning adopted preferable. Thus there are two kinds of men, those who will go astray and those who will turn to Allah. The former are made to go astray and the latter are guided. But even if the meaning given in the margin is adopted, it is not meant that Allah leads certain men astray though they may desire to walk in the right way. Mark the contrast: "And guides to Himself those who turn to Him," and this will explain the meaning of the first part: "Allah makes whom He pleases go astray," for if He guides those who turn to Him, it follows naturally that those who do not turn to Him are led astray. Their leading astray by Allah is therefore only equivalent to a pronouncement of judgment as to their having gone astray. Compare 2 : 26 : "He does not cause to err by it any except the transgressors who break the covenant of Allah . . ." and 14 : 27 : "And Allah causes the unjust to go astray."

1279 Ṭubá, as an infinitive noun (from ṭába, meaning it became good), means a good final state or good future (LL).

1280 What would have happened if there were a Qur-án with which the mountains were made to pass away is not mentioned. Some commentators say the words لكان هذا القرآن are understood, i.e. this Qur-án would have answered this description (JB), thinking that there is a reference here to such demands as removing the mountains and the cutting short of journeys to distant lands (or, according to some, cleaving asunder the earth or cutting it up into rivers and canals) and the raising of the dead. But I think that the answer is contained in what follows and there is no omission here. That the Qur-án should work great wonders is not here treated as an impossibility, but rather as a very near probability, for it is immediately followed by the words the commandment is wholly Allah's, which is equivalent to saying that He is by no means unable to do it, and that His commandment will soon be established, by which is meant the establishment of the superiority of Islam. The "mountains," by which are meant the chief opponents of the Holy Prophet in the spread of Islam, were made to pass away; it soon spread in distant countries, and the dead were no doubt made to speak, for the whole of Arabia, which was quite dead, resounded with the proclamations of the Unity of Allah. That by the mountains are to be understood great men is sufficiently clear from what is said in the Q., which explains the word jabal as meaning سيد القوم i.e. the chief of a people and their most learned man. And that the dead signify those spiritually dead is made clear by the Qur-án itself in many places; see, for instance, 27:80: "Surely you do not make the dead to hear."

And (as for) those who disbelieve, there will not cease to afflict them because of what they do a repelling calamity, or it will alight close by their abodes, until the promise of Allah comes about;[1282] surely Allah will not fail in (His) promise.

1281 Yai'as does not here convey the significance of despair, but that of knowing, and this significance is favoured by the majority of commentators (Rz). There are examples of this use of the word in Arab poetry, as: i.e. I said to them when they imprisoned me on the road, Do you not know that I am the son of the rider of Zahdam?

اقول لهم بالشعب اذ يأسرونني * الم تيأسوا اني ابن فارس زهدم

1282 The passage is capable of bearing a double significance. The meaning is either that smaller calamities will continue to afflict them, or alight near their abodes, until the final promise relating to the utter annihilation of their power is accomplished; or by the calamities are meant the reverses in battles which the Meccans will, it is prophesied, suffer, and the Prophet (taking the alternative significance given in the margin) alight close by their abodes, as happened in Hudaibiyya, until the triumphant entry into Mecca was brought about. Whatever the significance, it is a grand prophecy relating to the triumph of the helpless Muslim community, which was now flying to Medina for refuge, and of the utter discomfiture

33 Is He then who watches every soul as to what it earns?[1283] And yet they give associates to Allah! Say: Give them a name;[1284] nay, do you mean to inform Him of what He does not know in the earth, or (do you affirm this) by an outward saying?[1285] Rather, their plans are made to appear fairseeming to those who disbelieve,[1286] and they are kept back from the path; and whom of a powerful enemy that had apparently succeeded in crushing Islam and dispersing the Muslims.

1283 The words like him who is not such are understood, but the omission is plainly hinted in the sentence that follows, and yet they give associates to Allah, i.e. notwithstanding that they know that Allah watches all things, while their associates do not do this.

1284 It is to show the utmost contempt for the alleged associates of the Divine Being that their worshippers are called upon to give them a name, as if it were said that they are not worthy a name (Rz). Or the meaning may be, give them a name expressing any qualification of godhead, such as a sustainer, creator, etc. (JB).

1286 As to who makes the evil deeds fairseeming to the wicked, compare 16 : 63, 6 : 43 and 29 : 38, in all of which it is plainly stated that it is the devil that makes evil deeds fairseeming to men. The last of these is very similar to what is said here, except that there the devil is mentioned as the agent: "And the devil made their deeds fairseeming to them and kept them back from the path." See also concluding portion of 809.

1287 It should be noted that the paradise mentioned here is called only a likeness, as also in 47 : 15. The reason is, as a saying of the Holy Prophet makes it clear, that the blessings of paradise are such as no eye has seen, nor has ear heard, nor has it entered into the heart of man to conceive of them. Therefore, what it actually is cannot be known to man until he has tasted of its blessings; the description given in the Qur-án being only a likeness of what it actually is, for an impression of a thing which is of a nature entirely different from the things of this world can only be conveyed by giving an example.

Steady Progress of Truth

38, 39. Every nation has a term. 40–43. Truth is already prevailing.

1288 The word ẓill has other meanings besides shade. According to Rgh it signifies mightiness, inaccessibility, ease, or plenty. It also signifies protection (LL). See also 591.

1289 By the Book is meant the Qur-án, as the context clearly shows. Some, however, take the Book to signify the previous revelation given to the Israelite prophets, and understand Jewish or Christian converts to Islam to be meant here (Bḍ).

1290 The significance is that the sign so often demanded will come at the appointed time. So early had revelation prophesied the ultimate discomfiture of the power of the Quraish, that even the Meccan period of the Holy Prophet's life seemed to them to be too long for the fulfilment of the prophecy, and therefore they continued to trouble the Prophet, requiring the immediate coming of that sign.

1291 A general statement made with reference to the power of the opponents of the Prophet, which must be made to pass away and another power established in its stead, because it was the Divine pleasure that truth should prevail.

1292 The same word, umm-ul-kitáb, occurs in 3:6, where the verses that are of obvious import are called the basis of the Book, because allegorical verses must be interpreted with reference to them. Here the Divine ordinance to annihilate the power of the opponents of the Holy Prophet and to bring about the predominance of Islam is called the basis of the Book, because the final vanquishment of the powers of evil, which was previously foretold, would be such a clear sign that all doubts and difficulties would be solved by reference to this plain proof.

1293 Aṭráf signifies sides, as indicating the high and the low or exalted men (LL). The reference may be either to some of the exalted men having died and the opposition being thus weakened, or to the diminution of the number of unbelievers, both high and low, by men daily leaving their ranks and joining the ranks of Islam.

1294 The meaning is that the plans of the enemy need not be feared, for all their planning is controlled by Allah, or the requital of their plans is in the hands of Allah.

1295 The Book here stands for previous revelation from Allah, and attention is called to the fact that all those who have any knowledge of previous revelations will testify to the truth of the revelation of the Qur-án, because it fulfils all previous prophecies and satisfies the criteria of a true revelation the surest test of this, as declared in Deut. 18: 22, is the fulfilment of prophecy.

The Title.

THE name of this chapter is taken from Abraham, whose prayer is mentioned in the sixth section. As this prayer speaks of the settling of Ishmael in the wilderness of Paran, the mention of it is meant to be a reminder to the Arabs of the truth of the Holy Prophet. This prayer forms the chapter's distinctive characteristic, distinguishing it from other chapters of this group.

Subject-matter.

It opens with the statement that the Qur-án is revealed that men may thereby be taken out of darkness and led into light, and goes on to show that the Mosaic revelation, although given with a similar object, was for a particular people. The second section shows that Moses also exhorted his people to accept the truth, but that all prophets had their message rejected at first. The third section maintains that in all cases opposition was at last destroyed; the Divine promise of help to the Prophet being brought to fulfilment and his powerful opponents rendered helpless. That truth is confirmed as the natural sequel is affirmed in the next section, and this is followed by one which shows that by rejecting truth man leads up to his own ruin, for every thing is made subservient to man, which establishes the grand truth of Divine Unity. Here follows Abraham's prayer expressing his disavowal of polytheism of every sort, with special reference to his descendants through Ishmael, for whom he also prayed. In the concluding section is found that the end of opposition to truth has always been, and shall always be, failure.

Context.

In the group of the seven chapters belonging to the same period and dealing with a similar subject, this chapter is the fifth, and it states more plainly what is affirmed in the last chapter, viz. that the object of revelation is to bring men into light, to remove every kind of polytheism, and that all opposition, however strong and determined, to such a noble cause, which has the welfare of the whole of humanity at heart, is destined to fail.

Revelation dispels Darkness

1–3. The Qur-án leads men into light. 4–6. All prophets did the same.

In the Name of Allah, the Beneficent, the Merciful.

1 I am Allah the Seeing.[a] (This is) a Book which We have revealed to you that you may bring forth men, by their Lord's permission, from utter darkness[b] into light—to the way of the Mighty, the Praised One,

3 (To) those who love this world's life more than the hereafter, and turn away from Allah's path and desire to make it crooked; these are in a great error.

4 And We did not send any apostle but with the language of his people, so that he might explain to them clearly;[1296] then

Date of revelation.

As regards the date of revelation, it may fairly be assumed that it belongs to about the same period as the sister chapters beginning with alif, lám, rá. The clear reference in v. 13 to the unbelievers planning the expulsion of the Prophet, and the reference in v. 46 to their mighty plans, afford conclusive evidence as to its revelation being about the period preceding the Flight.

1296 The statement made here that a prophet is sent with the language of his people is far from leading to any "logical inference" that "Muhammad regarded himself as merely the Prophet of the Arabs." Only a perversion of the words, or ignorance as to what is said elsewhere in the Holy Qur-án, can lead to such a conclusion. In 7 : 158 we have : "Say : O people ! surely I am the Apostle of Allah to you all—of Him Whose is the kingdom of the heavens and the earth." A similar statement is made in 34 : 28: "And We have not sent you but to all the men as a bearer of good news and as a warner." And here (i.e. in the verse under discussion) nothing is said about the extent of the mission of the Holy Prophet. It is a statement of a different nature altogether. All that is said here is that every prophet is sent with the language of his people—not that his people, or the nation to which he belongs, are the only people to whom he is required to deliver the message. And the reason for send-

Allah makes whom He pleases err and He guides whom He pleases, and He is the Mighty, the Wise.[1297]

SECTION 2

Truth is rejected first

7, 8. Moses exhorts his people to accept the truth. 9–12. Every prophet's message is met with rejection first.

7 And when your Lord made it known: If you are grateful, I would certainly give to you more, and if you are ungrateful, My chastisement is truly severe.

وَاِذْ تَاَذَّنَ رَبُّكُمْ لَىِٕنْ شَكَرْتُمْ لَاَزِيْدَنَّكُمْ وَلَىِٕنْ كَفَرْتُمْ اِنَّ عَذَابِيْ لَشَدِيْدٌ

8 And Moses said: If you are ungrateful, you and those on earth all together, most surely Allah is Self-sufficient, Praised:

وَقَالَ مُوْسٰٓى اِنْ تَكْفُرُوْٓا اَنْتُمْ وَمَنْ فِي الْاَرْضِ جَمِيْعًا ۙ فَاِنَّ اللّٰهَ لَغَنِيٌّ حَمِيْدٌ

ing a prophet with the language of a people is stated to be that he may explain to his people, because it is his people who are the first recipients of his message. And history tells us that the opposition to the message of a prophet is strongest among his own people, while it is equally true that a prophet is raised when and where he is most needed, and therefore the condition of the people whom he addresses in the first instance is the worst of all.

1297 The words whom He pleases should not be taken as being synonymous with arbitrarily. It is true that remaining in error and being guided are both often stated in the Holy Qur-án to be according to the pleasure of the Divine Being. But it is nowhere stated that His pleasure is exercised arbitrarily. On the other hand, we have it frequently stated who they are that are led astray and who they are that are guided. 2:26 is conclusive on the first point: "But He does not cause to err by it any except the transgressors," and so many other verses. See 44, 1099. As regards guidance see 13:27.

1298 ايام الله is explained by Mjd as meaning the favours of Allah (TA). The use of the word in a similar sense is well-known in Arabic literature, in which ايام العرب

None knows them but Allah.[1298A] Their apostles came to them with clear arguments, but they thrust their hands into their mouths[1299] and said: Surely we deny that with which you are sent, and most surely we are in serious doubt as to that to which you invite us.[1300]

Ar. disquieting.

10 Their apostles said: Is there doubt about Allah, the Maker of the heavens and the earth? He invites you to forgive you your faults and to respite you till an appointed term. They said: You are nothing but mortals like us; you wish to turn us away from what our fathers used to worship: bring us therefore some clear authority.

11 Their apostles said to them: We are nothing but or the days of the Arabs, is used for the conflicts of the Arabs. Hence, as a conflict is a source of blessings for the conqueror and a source of distress for the vanquished, the days of Allah signify His merciful dealings with the righteous and His punishment of the wicked.

1298A This statement deserves to be noted. The Qur-án does not claim to give a history of the prophets, and as it elsewhere states (4:164 and 40:78), there are apostles that have not been mentioned in the Holy Qur-án. But the statement made here is much wider, for it is claimed that no other book mentions them all; their number being so great, they are known only to Allah. In fact, the Bible does not contain more than a mangled account of some of the prophets of a single nation.

1300 The general statements made with regard to the apostles and the treatment of their people in this and the following section, while essentially true with regard to apostles generally, are particularly made in reference to the mission of the Holy Prophet Muhammad, the determined opposition and enmity of his people, their turning him out of the city, and their final discomfiture.

Opposition is at last destroyed

13–20. Divine promise of help and its fulfilment. 21. Opponents shall be helpless.

13 And those who disbelieved said to their apostles: We will most certainly drive you forth from our land, or else you shall come back into our religion.[1301] So their Lord revealed to them: Most certainly We will destroy the unjust:

14 And most certainly We will settle you in the land after them: this is for him who fears standing in My presence and who fears My threat.[1302]

15 And they asked for judgment and every insolent opposer was disappointed:

وَقَالَ الَّذِيْنَ كَفَرُوْا لِرُسُلِهِمْ

1301 This is no doubt equally a description of what the Holy Prophet was suffering at the hands of his enemies.

1302 The prophecy of the final triumph of the Holy Prophet and of the utter discomfiture and overthrow of the power of his opponents is of very frequent occurrence in the Holy Qur-án, but here it is expressed in the clearest words. The opponents are told that they may expel the Prophet, but there was not the least doubt that he would ultimately come back as a conqueror, and be made the ruler in the land after their power was crushed. This verse contains, in fact, the clearest prophecy of the flight of the Holy Prophet from Mecca and of his re-entry into that city as a conqueror and ruler, and following as it does a chapter in which the same prophecy is contained in an allegorical form, it is as it were a clear statement of the meaning of the allegory of the 12th chapter. It should be noted that the words used here as to the determination of the opponents to expel the Prophet and those indicating his re-entry are expressive of the greatest certainty.

1303 Má-un ṣadíd is translated variously as pus, filthy water, hot or boiled water. That ṣadíd means pus is true, but then it cannot be called má-un ṣadíd, and Palmer's rendering liquid pus is beyond the mark, for ṣadíd qualifies má (i.e. water), and water is not used in the original as a qualifying word for pus, pus being already liquid. Hence Palmer's translation as well as his note on this, as a "filthy expression," are hasty. Ṣadíd means hot water, or water boiled until it thickens (LA, TA), and as má-un ḥamím is the expression elsewhere used in the Holy Qur-án, this is the correct significance here.

1304 The word maut does not always mean death, and conveys a number of other significances. According to Rgh, the meaning here is the grief causing distress. The meaning is that grief and distress sufficient to cause death will be experienced by him, but he shall not die, for death or cessation of life implies rest, and this is what he shall not have. That is the real hell, i.e. a state in which a man is gnawed by grief and cannot find any comfort.

1305 Vv. 18–20 are again prophetical. V. 18 states that all the exertions of the opponents against the Holy Prophet shall be useless, while vv. 19 and 20 warn the unbelievers that their power will come to an end and another people will now take their place and rule the country.

SECTION 4

Truth is confirmed

22. The devil forsakes his followers. 23. The faithful are in peace. 24, 25. Truth has a firm basis. 26. Evil has no basis. 27. Faithful are confirmed.

22 And the devil[1306] shall say after the affair is decided: Surely Allah promised you the promise of truth, and I gave you promises then failed to keep them to you,[1307] and I had no authority over you,[1308] except that I called you and you obeyed me, therefore do not blame me but blame yourselves: I cannot be your aider (now) nor can you be my aiders: surely I disbelieved in your associating me with Allah before:[1309] surely it is the unjust that shall have the painful chastisement.

Or, because of.

وَقَالَ الشَّيْطٰنُ لَمَّا قُضِيَ الْاَمْرُ اِنَّ

طَيِّبَةً كَشَجَرَةٍ طَيِّبَةٍ اَصْلُهَا ثَابِتٌ
وَّفَرْعُهَا فِي السَّمَآءِ ۝

1306 The devil mentioned in this verse is none other than the proud misleader of the preceding one. Compare also 37:30, where the very words we had no authority over you are put into the mouths of the leaders of evil from among men.

1307 Whenever a person is misled into an evil deed he finds in the end that the promise of a good consequence for an evil deed was only a deception. Compare 4:120: "He gives them promises and excites vain desires in them, and the devil does not promise them but to deceive." See also 17:64.

1308 It should be noted that here the devil is made to deny having any authority over the evil-doers. According to the Holy Qur-án no one is compelled to an evil course: the evil one points out an evil way, and the evil-doer follows that way.

1309 The denial of being associated with Allah implies the confession that he did not deserve to be obeyed. When the evil consequences of an evil deed become manifest, the suggester of the evil course declares his freedom from having led the evil-doer to that course. Compare 35:14: "If you call on them they shall not hear your call, and even if they could hear they shall not answer you, and on the resurrection day they will deny your associating them (with Allah)." The words may also convey the significance I disbelieved because you associated me with Allah, the explanation being that the leaders disbelieve because their followers lead them by their flattery to think that they are worthy of being obeyed and followed.

25 Yielding its fruit in every season by the permission of its Lord? and Allah sets forth parables for men that they may be mindful.

26 And the parable of an evil word is as an evil tree pulled up from the earth's surface: it has no stability.[1311]

27 Allah confirms those who believe with the sure word in this world's life and in the hereafter, and Allah causes the unjust to go astray, and Allah does what He pleases.[1312]

تُؤْتِيْٓ اُكُلَهَا كُلَّ حِيْنٍۭ بِاِذْنِ رَبِّهَا ؕ وَيَضْرِبُ

اللّٰهُ الظّٰلِمِيْنَ ۙ وَيَفْعَلُ اللّٰهُ مَا يَشَآءُ ۝

1310 The parable likening a good word to a good tree follows immediately a description of the final abode of those who do good, which is repeatedly described in the Holy Qur-án as being a garden or gardens beneath which rivers flow. This gives us a clue to the real nature of the paradise of Islam. A good word is like a good tree which gives its fruit in every season, and therefore the fruits which a man shall find in paradise, ever ready and within his reach, are no other than the fruits of his own good deeds, and the trees of paradise are in fact man's own good deeds which have grown into trees, bearing a fruit which is an embodiment of the spiritual fruits of the good deeds of this life. It should also be noted that as good deeds are likened to fruit-bearing trees, faith is likened to water repeatedly in the Holy Qur-án, being the source of physical life. It is for this reason that, just as the righteous are always spoken of as being those who believe and do good, paradise is always described as being a garden in which rivers flow, the rivers corresponding to faith and the trees of the garden corresponding to the good which a man does.

It should also be borne in mind that kalimah (meaning word) is applied to every thing, whether it is a word that is spoken or a deed that is done. Explaining تمّت كلمة ربك صدقا و عدلا Rgh says: By the kalimah (word) is meant a thing, or an affair or a matter, because every matter is termed a kalimah, whether it is a word or a deed.

1311 The evil deed is likened to a tree whose roots do not go down into the earth, and in whose case, therefore, the process of nutrition must stop. Therefore an evil deed does not prosper and cannot bear any fruit.

1312 The clear statement made here explains many a dubious statement. Allah causes only the unjust, and not the innocent, to go astray. In other words, those who are guilty of iniquities are made to go astray, their very iniquities leading them astray. It is equivalent to the statement that Allah does not allow light to shine upon him who closes all the doors and windows of a room upon himself. The immediate cause of their going astray is their iniquity, and Allah only causes them to go astray because they are iniquitous. If they forsake their iniquities, Allah will not cause them to go astray.

SECTION 5

Man's Injustice in rejecting Truth

28–30. Man leads to his own destruction. 31. The faithful exhorted. 32–34. Everything is made subservient to man.

Ar. hast thou.

Or, ungratefulness.

28 Have you not seen those who have changed Allah's favour for unbelief[1313] and made their people to alight into the abode of perdition,[1314]

29 (Into) hell? they shall enter into it, and an evil place it is to settle in.

30 And they set up equals with Allah that they may lead (people) astray from His path. Say: Enjoy yourselves, for surely your return is to the fire.

31 Say to My servants who believe that they should keep up prayer and spend out of what We have given them secretly and openly before the coming of the day in which there shall be no bartering nor mutual befriending:

32 Allah is He who created the heavens and the earth and sent down water from the clouds, then brought forth with it fruits as a sustenance for you, and He has made the ships subservient to you, that they might run their course in the sea by His command, and He has made the rivers subservient to you.[1315]

33 And He has made subservient to you the sun and the moon pursuing their courses, and He has made subservient to you the night and the day.

أَلَمْ تَرَ إِلَى الَّذِينَ بَدَّلُوا نِعْمَتَ اللّٰهِ

قُلْ لِّعِبَادِيَ الَّذِينَ اٰمَنُوا يُقِيمُوا الصَّلٰوةَ
وَيُنْفِقُوا مِمَّا رَزَقْنٰهُمْ سِرًّا وَّعَلَانِيَةً

اَللّٰهُ الَّذِي خَلَقَ السَّمٰوٰتِ وَالْأَرْضَ

وَالنَّهَارَ ۝

1313 That is, they have rejected Allah's favour, by which is meant the revelation of the Holy Prophet, which aimed at making them a great and exalted people, and adopted unbelief in its place. Or the alternative significance given in the margin may be adopted, the meaning being, instead of gratitude for Allah's favour, they have become ungrateful.

1314 The statement is prophetical, as the past tense is often used in prophetical language as indicating certainty about the future.

1315 The whole of creation is here, and in the next verse, declared to be made subservient to man, to show his high place in creation. How much then does man degrade himself by bowing before and worshipping things which were made to serve him.

34 And He gives you of all that you ask Him; and if you count Allah's favours, you will not be able to number them; most surely man is very unjust, very ungrateful.

وَآتَاكُم مِّن كُلِّ مَا سَأَلْتُمُوهُ ۚ وَإِن تَعُدُّوا نِعْمَتَ اللَّهِ لَا تُحْصُوهَا ۗ إِنَّ الْإِنسَانَ لَظَلُومٌ كَفَّارٌ ۝

SECTION 6

Abraham's Prayer

35–41. Abraham's prayer is a clear testimony to the truth of the Prophet.

35 And when Abraham said: My Lord! make this city secure, and save me and my sons from worshipping idols:[1316]

وَإِذْ قَالَ إِبْرَاهِيمُ رَبِّ اجْعَلْ هَٰذَا الْبَلَدَ آمِنًا وَاجْنُبْنِي وَبَنِيَّ أَن نَّعْبُدَ الْأَصْنَامَ ۝

36 My Lord! surely they have led many men astray:[1317] then whoever follows me, he is surely of me, and whoever disobeys me, Thou surely art Forgiving, Merciful:[1318]

رَبِّ إِنَّهُنَّ أَضْلَلْنَ كَثِيرًا مِّنَ النَّاسِ ۖ فَمَن تَبِعَنِي فَإِنَّهُ مِنِّي ۖ وَمَنْ عَصَانِي فَإِنَّكَ غَفُورٌ رَّحِيمٌ ۝

37 O our Lord! surely I have settled a part of my offspring[1319] in a valley unproductive of fruit near Thy Sacred a 170. House,[a] our Lord! that they may keep up prayer;[1320] therefore make the hearts of some people yearn towards them and provide them with fruits; haply they may be grateful:

رَبَّنَا إِنِّي أَسْكَنتُ مِن ذُرِّيَّتِي بِوَادٍ غَيْرِ ذِي زَرْعٍ عِندَ بَيْتِكَ الْمُحَرَّمِ رَبَّنَا لِيُقِيمُوا الصَّلَاةَ فَاجْعَلْ أَفْئِدَةً مِّنَ النَّاسِ تَهْوِي إِلَيْهِمْ وَارْزُقْهُم مِّنَ الثَّمَرَاتِ لَعَلَّهُمْ يَشْكُرُونَ ۝

38 O our Lord! surely Thou knowest what we hide and what we make public, and nothing in the earth nor any thing in heaven is hidden from Allah:

رَبَّنَا إِنَّكَ تَعْلَمُ مَا نُخْفِي وَمَا نُعْلِنُ ۗ وَمَا يَخْفَىٰ عَلَى اللَّهِ مِن شَيْءٍ فِي الْأَرْضِ وَلَا فِي السَّمَاءِ

1316 That idolatry received a death-blow from the hands of one of Abraham's descendants shows that Abraham's prayer was not in vain; and that his descendants may have for a short time gone over to idol-worship does not lend any support to the allegation that the prayer was not accepted.

1317 The idols do not actually lead men astray, but as it is on account of them that people go astray, they are described as causing men to go astray. It is clear from this that the nominative here is not the active cause.

1318 The prayer of Abraham is in fact the prayer of the Holy Prophet and illustrates the breadth of his view. Those who follow him are of course his own, but he does not reject even those who disobey him, for he prays for Allah's mercy and protection even for them.

1319 That is, Ishmael and his descendants. Both according to oral Arab tradition and the Bible, Ishmael's descendants were settled in Arabia.

1320 The placing of his descendants in the vicinity of the Sacred House was a guarantee that they would keep up prayer; in fact, the only person who has made the institution of prayer to prosper for ever in the world was a descendant of that son of Abraham who was settled close to the Sacred House.

39 Praise be to Allah, Who has given me in old age Ishmael and Isaac: most surely my Lord is the Hearer of prayer:

40 My Lord! make me keep up prayer and from my offspring (too), O our Lord, and accept my prayer:

41 O our Lord! grant me protection[c] and my parents and the believers on the day when the reckoning shall come to pass!

SECTION 7

The End of Opposition

42. A respite. 43–46. All plans shall fail. 47–52. Opponents shall be brought in disgrace and subjugation.

42 And do not think Allah to be heedless of what the unjust do: He only respites them to a day on which the eyes shall be fixedly open,[1321]

43 Hastening forward, their heads upraised, their eyes not reverting to them and their hearts vacant.[1322]

44 And warn people of the day when the chastisement shall come to them, then those who were unjust will say: O our Lord! respite us to a near term, (so) we shall respond to Thy call and follow the apostles. What! did you not swear before (that) there will be no passing away for you!

45 And you dwell in the abodes of those who were unjust to themselves, and it is clear to you how We dealt with them and We have set forth parables to you.

Or, made (them) examples.

وَلَا تَحْسَبَنَّ اللَّهَ غَافِلًا عَمَّا يَعْمَلُ الظّٰلِمُونَ ۚ
إِنَّمَا يُؤَخِّرُهُمْ لِيَوْمٍ تَشْخَصُ فِيهِ الْأَبْصَارُ ۝
مُهْطِعِينَ مُقْنِعِي رُءُوسِهِمْ لَا يَرْتَدُّ إِلَيْهِمْ
طَرْفُهُمْ ۚ وَأَفْئِدَتُهُمْ هَوَاءٌ ۝
وَأَنْذِرِ النَّاسَ يَوْمَ يَأْتِيهِمُ الْعَذَابُ
فَيَقُولُ الَّذِينَ ظَلَمُوا رَبَّنَا أَخِّرْنَا إِلَىٰ أَجَلٍ
قَرِيبٍ ۙ نُجِبْ دَعْوَتَكَ وَنَتَّبِعِ

قَبْلُ مَا لَكُمْ مِنْ زَوَالٍ ۝
وَسَكَنْتُمْ فِي مَسٰكِنِ الَّذِينَ ظَلَمُوا
أَنْفُسَهُمْ وَتَبَيَّنَ لَكُمْ كَيْفَ فَعَلْنَا
بِهِمْ وَضَرَبْنَا لَكُمُ الْأَمْثَالَ ۝

1321 The expression indicates a state of intense terror in which one is unable even to wink the eye.

1322 The striking terror into the hearts of those who opposed the Prophet was witnessed in this very life when the Prophet advanced on Mecca. The vacancy or blankness of the heart also indicates a state of great terror.

Ar. and.

46 And they have indeed planned their plan,[1323] but their plan is with Allah,[1324] though their plan was such that the mountains should pass away thereby.

وَقَدْ مَكَرُوا مَكْرَهُمْ وَعِنْدَ اللّٰهِ
مَكْرُهُمْ ۚ وَإِنْ كَانَ مَكْرُهُمْ
لِتَزُولَ مِنْهُ الْجِبَالُ ۝

47 Therefore do not think Allah (to be one) failing in His promise to His apostles; surely Allah is Mighty, the Lord of Retribution.

فَلَا تَحْسَبَنَّ اللّٰهَ مُخْلِفَ وَعْدِهٖ رُسُلَهٗ ۚ
إِنَّ اللّٰهَ عَزِيزٌ ذُو انْتِقَامٍ ۝

48 On the day when the earth shall be changed into a different earth, and the heavens (as well),[1325] and they shall come forth before Allah, the One, the Supreme.

يَوْمَ تُبَدَّلُ الْأَرْضُ غَيْرَ الْأَرْضِ
وَالسَّمٰوٰتُ وَبَرَزُوا لِلّٰهِ
الْوَاحِدِ الْقَهَّارِ ۝

Ar. thou wilt.

49 And you will see the guilty on that day linked together in chains,[1326]

وَتَرَى الْمُجْرِمِينَ يَوْمَئِذٍ مُقَرَّنِينَ فِي الْأَصْفَادِ ۝

50 Their shirts made of pitch, and the fire covering their faces,

سَرَابِيلُهُمْ مِنْ قَطِرَانٍ وَتَغْشٰى وُجُوهَهُمُ
النَّارُ ۝

51 That Allah may requite each soul (according to) what it has earned; surely Allah is swift in reckoning.

لِيَجْزِيَ اللّٰهُ كُلَّ نَفْسٍ مَا كَسَبَتْ ۚ
إِنَّ اللّٰهَ سَرِيعُ الْحِسَابِ ۝

52 This is a sufficient exposition for the people and that they may be warned thereby, and that they may know that He is One God and that those possessed of understanding may mind.

هٰذَا بَلٰغٌ لِلنَّاسِ وَلِيُنْذَرُوا بِهٖ
وَلِيَعْلَمُوا أَنَّمَا هُوَ إِلٰهٌ وَاحِدٌ وَ
لِيَذَّكَّرَ أُولُوا الْأَلْبَابِ ۝

1323 The words are explained by commentators as meaning their mighty plans in which they exerted themselves to their utmost (Bd, Kf, JB). The reference is to the most energetic plans of the Quraish, which they were now making against the Holy Prophet.

1324 The words their plan is with Allah signify that their plan is controlled by Allah, Who will make it ineffective. Wonderful prophecies indeed in the mouth of a person whose only chance of saving himself now lay in escaping from his enemies, while they were taking every precaution not to allow him to escape, having decided to put him to death. See 8 : 30 and 998, where these plans are detailed.

1325 The transformation wrought by the Holy Prophet no doubt changed the earth into a different earth and the heaven into a new heaven. The Arabia at the birth of the Holy Prophet was not the Arabia at his death. Beliefs, usages, and practices which had baffled all attempts at reformation for centuries were swept away, and the ignorant, superstitious, and warring tribes had given place to a single nation, holding aloft the torch of knowledge and civilization to the whole world. Idolatry was blotted out of existence so completely that no vestige of it could be found among a people who had remained addicted to it for centuries. The verse no doubt speaks of the great resurrection, but it equally suggests in prophetic language the smaller resurrection brought about by the advent of the Holy Prophet in this very life.

1326 The powerful opponents of the Holy Prophet were brought before him linked together in chains in this very life, in the battle of Badr. These promises were fulfilled in this life to show that they were equally true as regards the next life.

CHAPTER XV

THE ROCK

(Al-Ḥijr)

REVEALED AT MECCA

(6 sections and 99 verses)

Abstract:

Sec. 1. Protection of the Qur-án.
Sec. 2. Allah controls all things.
Sec. 3. The devil's opposition to the righteous.
Sec. 4. Mercy for the righteous—an incident from Abraham's history.
Sec. 5. Transgressors perish: incidents from Lot's and Shu'aib's histories.
Sec. 6. Dwellers of the rock: a warning for the enemies of the Qur-án.

The Title.

THIS, the last of the chapters of the alif, lám, rá group, is named the Rock, because of the mention of the dwellers of the Rock in v. 80, whose fate is mentioned as a warning to those who contemplated the slaying of the Holy Prophet. While promising a complete protection for the message of truth contained in the Holy Qur-án against all evil designs, it intensifies the warning contained in the previous chapters against those who were bent on its destruction.

Context and subject-matter.

The last chapter closed by warning the opponents of the end which they were destined to meet if they did not abstain from persecuting the truth. The same subject is continued in the beginning of this chapter, because the Qur-án, which was meant for the welfare of humanity, must be guarded against all evil intentions. Thus it is in the very first section that the grand promise is expressly given that the Qur-án shall for ever be guarded against all corruption, and, of course, against all attempts to annihilate it. There were many signs of its truth, yet the reprobate opponents would not benefit by any of them. In the next section we are told that all things are controlled by Allah, so that the mischief-makers cannot inflict any injury on the elect, and the signs of the triumph of truth could already be witnessed. In the third section it is stated that the devil has always been opposing the righteous servants, yet his opposition is devoid of harm. The next, while promising mercy for the righteous, refers to an incident in Abraham's history as to how he was given the good news of the birth of a son through whom a great nation was to be blessed. The same messengers also bore to him the news that Lot's people were about to be destroyed because of their great iniquities. The fifth section, therefore, speaks of the punishment of the guilty people who would not listen to Lot, closing with a reference to Shu'aib, also a descendant of Abraham. The Arabs, however, are warned of the fate of a people nearer home, the S̱amood, who dwelt in rocks, and they are told that, all-important as the message of the Qur-án was, their mockery and opposition would not go unpunished.

SECTION 1

Protection of the Qur-án

1–8. Opponents shall meet their doom. 9. The Qur-án shall ever be guarded. 10–15. No signs would benefit the rejecters.

Date of revelation.

That the chapter was revealed at Mecca is agreed on all hands, but it is generally regarded to be earlier than the other chapters of this group. Yet it appears that opposition to the Prophet had grown so strong that, were it not for the Divine protection, his message would have been swept out of existence. Hence I am inclined to assign it to the last Meccan period, i.e. to the period to which the other chapters of this group belong, although it may be comparatively earlier.

1327 The passage does not refer only to life after death. The powerful opponents who were under the impression that Islam would soon be annihilated must no doubt have felt in after life, when the truth of Islam became manifest to them, that it would have been much better for them if they had accepted Islam at the first call of the Prophet and not opposed the truth.

1328 This verse, and that preceding, make clear the significance of the coming of angels. The demand is here as elsewhere: Why are not the angels brought? the words if you are of

9 Surely We have revealed the Reminder and We will most surely be its guardian.[1329]

10 And certainly We sent (apostles) before you among the nations of yore.

11 And there never came an apostle to them but they mocked him.

12 Thus do We make it to enter into the hearts of the guilty ;[1330]

13 They do not believe in it, and indeed the example of the former people has already passed.

14 And even if We open to them a gateway of the heaven, so that they ascend into it all the while,

15 They would certainly say : Only our eyes have been covered over, rather we are an enchanted people.[1331]

the truthful ones clearly showing that the coming of angels is demanded in relation to the fulfilment of prophecies. But the answer makes it still more clear. The words bil-haq (with truth) really signify in accordance with the requirements of truth, justice, and wisdom (LL), and the meaning therefore is that the angels will be sent when they are required to execute the judgment of the doom of the unbelievers ; and the concluding words, and then they would not be respited, dispel all doubts on the point, making it clear as daylight that the angels will be sent to punish the guilty ones.

1329 This is one of the most wonderful prophecies, whose fulfilment is, and shall ever remain, a standing testimony to the truth of the Holy Qur-án. The statement is first made in connection with the powerful opposition of the unbelievers, and is then made general, that the Qur-án shall for all time be preserved safe from all attacks to destroy it and from every kind of corruption. The wonderfully clear fulfilment of this prophecy is so evident a fact that a hostile writer like Muir is compelled to admit that " There is probably in the world no other book which has remained twelve centuries with so pure a text." The recent attempt of Dr. Mingana to prove alterations in the text of the Holy Qur-án has resulted in miserable failure, and his discovery has rather set the question at rest, because it was apparently the most powerful attack made on the purity of the text of the Holy Qur-án during the thirteen centuries it has been in existence. During the whole length and breadth of the Islamic world there does not exist a single copy with any variations from the recognized text, and thus not only was the Qur-án preserved from destruction against a powerful enemy, but it has also been preserved from corruption.

1330 Kazálika, or thus, refers to the mockery mentioned in the previous verse, the meaning being as they mock the revelation, so we cause it to enter into their hearts that they do not believe in it. How could they believe in it when they never gave it a serious thought, but scorned and treated it rather lightly ? It should be noted that though the act of not believing in the Divine revelation is described as being made to enter into hearts by Allah, it is into the hearts of those who have made themselves guilty by mocking it, which is equivalent to saying that this is due to their mockery, or a consequence of their mockery.

1331 This verse and the one preceding it speak of the hardness of their hearts, so that they have determined to reject the truth, though the clearest evidence of it may be brought before them.

1332 The three verses speak of the soothsayers and the diviners, who were among the opponents of the Holy Prophet. They pretended to receive communications from on high, but they were really driven away from the Divine presence, and therefore could not have any access to that source of purity. In speaking of the divinations as being followed by a visible flame, it is indicated that they meet with failure and disappointment. The description of spiritual truths in words relating to physical laws prevailing in the world is of common occurrence in the Holy Qur-án. Thus in v. 22 the fertilizing winds stand for the imperceptible advance of Islam (see 1333). For further reference see 2102, 2103, 2104, 2365, 2530, and 2592. The following verses of the Holy Qur-án deal with this subject: 37 : 8, 52 : 38, 67 : 5, 72 : 8.

1333 The lawáqiḥ, or fertilizing winds, are those which raise a cloud that gives rain, or those which make herbage and plants fruitful. The fertilizing winds, before the coming of the rains, represent the signs of the progress of Islam before its final triumph.

1334 Wáriṡ means an heir, and therefore one who remains after another has perished. The announcement made here is a prophecy that the true worshippers of Allah shall be heirs in the land while the others shall perish.

24 And certainly We know the foremost among you and We certainly know those who lay behind.
25 And surely your Lord will gather them together; surely He is Wise, Knowing.[1335]

Or, those of you who have gone before.
Or, come later.

SECTION 3

The Devil's Opposition to the Righteous

26–30. Though humble in origin, man is created to rule. 31–38. Devil's enmity to man. 39–44. He has no authority over man.

26 And certainly We created man of clay that gives forth sound, of black mud fashioned in shape.
27 And the jinn We created before of intensely hot fire.[1336]
28 And when your Lord said to the angels:[a] Surely I am going to create a mortal of the essence of black mud fashioned in shape.
29 So when I have made him complete and breathed into him of My inspiration,[1337] fall down making obeisance to him.[b]

Ar. created him.
[a] 47.

وَالْجَانَّ خَلَقْنَاهُ مِن قَبْلُ مِن نَّارِ السَّمُومِ ۝
وَإِذْ قَالَ رَبُّكَ لِلْمَلَائِكَةِ إِنِّي خَالِقٌ بَشَرًا

فَإِذَا سَوَّيْتُهُ وَنَفَخْتُ فِيهِ مِن رُّوحِي
فَقَعُوا لَهُ سَاجِدِينَ ۝

1335 Al-mustaqdimin are those who are foremost in accepting truth, and Al-musta'khirin, those who lag behind in accepting it. They will all be gathered together, i.e. ultimately those who now lag behind will be brought over to the right course. We have here, therefore, a prophecy that the Holy Prophet should not be disappointed of them. Some understand by these two words those who have gone before and those who will come afterwards respectively, in point of time. The meaning would still be the same.

1336 For an explanation of man's creation from dust see 862. In man's creation from dust there also seems to be a reference to his low and humble origin and to his temperate nature, as opposed to another kind of creation of a fiery nature, which is called the jinn or the devil. The two words, jinn and devil, are frequently applied to men of a fiery temperament or rebellious nature, men who lead others into evil. This description of the creation of men and jinn from dust and fire respectively is no doubt an allegorical description of the nature of those who are submissive to Divine laws and those who rebel against them, and the allegory is carried on further in what is stated of the rebellion of the devil against Adam, the two being taken as prototypes of the two kinds of temperament. The two descriptions of the origin of man, his being made from the clay that gives sound and of the mud that is fashioned in shape, refer to the two great characteristics which give man a superiority over other animals, there being a reference to the use of language in the clay that gives sound, and to the perfection of his make in the mud fashioned in shape. Were it not for the use of language and the perfection of his make, man could not have risen above the lower animals.

1337 This shows that man is made complete when the Divine inspiration, or spirit, is breathed into him. It should be noted that the Divine spirit (Ar. rūḥ) does not mean here the animal soul in man, but the spirit, or word of Allah, that gives him perfection.

30 So the angels made obei-sance, all of them together, a 57, 58 31 But Iblis (did it not[a]); he refused to be with those who made obeisance.
32 He said: O Iblis! what
Ar. hast thou. excuse have you that you are
Ar. thou art. not with those who make obei-sance?
33 He said: I am not such that I should make obeisance to a mortal whom Thou hast created of the essence of black mud fashioned in shape.
34 He said: Then get out of
Ar. thou art. it, for surely you are driven away:
Ar. thee. 35 And surely on you is curse until the day of judgment.
36 He said: My Lord! then respite me till the time when they are raised.[1338]
Ar. thou art. 37 He said: So surely you are of the respited ones, b 8. 38 Till the period[b] of the time made known.
39 He said: My Lord! because Thou hast made life evil to me,[1339] I will certainly make (evil) fairseeming to them on earth, and I will certainly cause them all to deviate,
40 Except Thy servants from
Or, sincere. among them, the chosen ones.
41 He said: This a right way with Me:
42 Surely, as regards My
Ar. thou hast. servants, you have no authority over them except those who
Ar. thee. follow you of the deviators.[1340] 43 And surely Hell is the promised place of them all:

1338 When a man is raised to life spiritually, the suggestions and the promptings of the devil cease to affect him. But until he finds spiritual life, evil suggestions mislead him now and then. This is the time made known in v. 38.

1339 The meaning has been fully explained in 865. It may be added here that this is a remarkable instance of what iḍlāl, ighwá, and such other words mean when attributed to Allah. The devil refuses to make obeisance to Adam of his own accord, and this is expressed by saying فبما اغويتني the meaning clearly being, because Thou hast judged me to be in error, not caused me to err.

1340 In a broad sense all men are servants of Allah. That the devil has no authority over any man is clear from 14:22, where the devil says to his followers: "I had no authority over you except that I called you and you obeyed me."

44 It has seven gates; for every gate there shall be a separate party of them.[1341]

Mercy for the Righteous—an Incident from Abraham's History

45–50. The faithful find peace and rest. 51–56. Goodness to Abraham. 57–60. Lot's people.

45 Surely those who guard (against evil) shall be in the midst of gardens and fountains:
46 Enter them in peace, secure.
47 And We will root out whatever of rancour is in their breasts—(they shall be) as brethren, on raised couches, face to face.
48 Toil shall not afflict them in it, nor shall they be ever ejected from it.[1342]
49 Inform My servants that I am the Forgiving, the Merciful,
50 And that My chastisement—that is the painful chastisement.
51 And inform them of the guests of Abraham:
52 When they entered upon him, they said, Peace. He said: Surely we are afraid of you.
53 They said: Be not afraid, surely we give you the good news of a boy, possessing knowledge. (Ar. thee.)
54 He said: Do you give me good news (of a son) when old age has come upon me?—of what then do you give me good news!

1341 Hell is mentioned by seven different names in the Holy Qur-án: (1) jahannam, or hell; (2) lazá, or the flaming fire (70 : 15); (3) ḥuṭamah, or the crushing disaster (104 : 4); (4) sa'ir, or the burning fire; (5) saqar, or the scorching fire; (6) jaḥím, or the fierce fire; (7) háwiyah, or the abyss (10 : 6). The seven gates mean the seven ways which lead into it, according to which there are seven different names. But see 47, where it is shown that the numeral seven in Arabic often stands for a large number, so that the meaning is that there are many gates or many ways leading to it.

1342 This is a very beautiful description of the Muslim paradise, but one which the Christian critics pass over without notice. There is absolute peace of mind, perfect security

55 They said: We give you good news with truth,[1343] therefore be not of the despairing.
56 He said: And who despairs of the mercy of his Lord but the erring ones?
57 He said: What is your business, then, O messengers?
58 They said: Surely we are sent towards a guilty people,

60 Except his wife; We ordained that she shall surely be of those who remain behind.

Transgressors perish: Incidents from Lot's and Shu'aib's Histories

61–72. Lot warns and is opposed. 73–77. Punishment overtakes the transgressors. 78, 79. Shu'aib's people are also punished.

61 So when the messengers
c 917A. came to Lot's followers,[c]
62 He said: Surely you are an unknown people.
63 They said: Nay, we have
Ar. thee. come to you with that about which they disputed.
Ar. thee. 64 And we have come to you with the truth, and we are most surely truthful:
65 Therefore go forth with
Ar. thy. d 917A. your followers[d] in a part of the
Ar. thyself. night and yourself follow their rear, and let not any one of you turn round, and go forth whither you are commanded.

from any inclination to evil or any other danger (v. 45); there is a brotherhood in which no one conceals any rancour in his heart for his brother, nor has any one a complaint against another (v. 47); and lastly, there is neither toil nor fatigue, nor is one to be ever deprived of that state of perfect bliss (v. 48). The last verse refutes the Hindu doctrine of a temporary salvation, and also establishes: (1) that those who are once made to enter paradise are not sent back to this world; and (2) that the garden in which Adam was at first placed was not the paradise of heavenly life, for in that case he would not have been ejected from it.

1343 بشرناك بالحق in this verse is exactly parallel to يبشرك بكلمة منه (3 : 44). It is neither the good news of haqq, or truth, in the first case, nor that of kalimah, or word, in the second, but in both cases the meaning is that the good news of a son is given—the words of a son being omitted in both cases—by means of (the correct meaning of bā in these two instances is by means of) Divine revelation, which is called the truth in the first instance and a word from Allah in the second.

66 And We revealed to him this decree that the roots of these shall be cut off in the morning.

67 And the people of the town came rejoicing.

68 He said: Surely these are my guests, therefore do not disgrace me,

69 And guard against (the punishment of) Allah and do not put me to shame.

70 They said: Have we not forbidden you from (other) people?[1344] — Ar. thee.

71 He said: These are my daughters, if you will do (aught).[1345]

72 By your life! they were blindly wandering on in their frenzy. — Ar. thy. Ar. intoxication.

74 Thus did We turn it upside down, and rained down upon them stones of what had been decreed.[b] — b 1197, 1198.

75 Surely in this are signs for those who examine.[1346]

76 And surely it is on a road that still abides.

77 Most surely there is a sign in this for the believers.

78 And the dwellers of the thicket also were most surely unjust;[1347]

79 So We inflicted retribution on them, and they are both, indeed, on an open road (still) pursued.[1348]

1344 As remarked in 1194, Lot was a stranger among the Sodomites, and, as this verse shows, he was forbidden by the people to entertain any stranger as a guest or to give him shelter, for such is the meaning of اولم ننهك عن العالمين as given by the commentators (Kf, JB). Hence it is that when he received his guests he immediately cried out, You are an unknown people, i.e. strangers.

1345 He offered his daughters as hostages, as a guarantee that the strangers would not make any mischief. See further 1194.

1346 Mutawassim is one who examines things in order to know the real character of a thing from outward signs. And by the mutawassimīn here are meant those who take a lesson or a warning from the fate of others.

1347 The dwellers of the thicket were Shu'aib's people (Kf, JB, Rz). But whether they are the ame as the people of Madian is not agreed upon. Being in all particulars almost identical with the latter, they may be taken to be the same. 1348, see next page.

SECTION 6

The Dwellers of the Rock and a Warning for the Enemies of the Qur-án

80–84. The dwellers of the Rock. 85, 86. The doom of the Prophet's opponents. 87. Importance of the Qur-án. 88–93. The Prophet should not grieve. 94–99. Message to be openly delivered.

80 And the dwellers of the Rock certainly rejected the messengers ;[1349]

81 And We gave them Our communications, but they turned aside from them ;

82 And they hewed houses in the mountains in security.

83 So the rumbling[a] overtook them in the morning ;

84 And what they earned did not avail them.

85 And We did not create the heavens and the earth and what is between them two but in truth ; and the hour is most surely coming, so turn away with kindly forgiveness.[1350]

86 Surely your Lord is the Creator of all things, the Knowing.

1348 Imám signifies a road because it is pursued or followed, the root being amma, meaning he directed his course to . . . or aimed at (LL, Kf). By both are meant the cities of the people of Lot as well as those of Shu'aib's people. The road alluded to is the road followed by caravans from Hijaz to Syria.

1349 The dwellers of the Rock are the people of Samood ; see 911.

1350 صفح عنه means he turned away from him and left him (TA-LL), or he turned away from his sin or crime, he forgave him (TA-LL). The verse gives us a true insight into the Holy Prophet's mind, and not only did he act upon this injunction while at Mecca, but he was equally forgiving in his conquests. One instance only in the conquest of Mecca is sufficient to prove this, when, having captured the city which had most tyrannically driven him out with his followers, and whose people were guilty of shedding the innocent blood of the Muslims, he forgave all, although he could have justly slain large numbers of them.

There is no doubt a reference here to the Holy Prophet's flight. The hour of punishment, of the discomfiture of opponents, was drawing nigh, and he must now leave them, as punishment was delayed so long as he was among them.

1351 The oft-repeated seven verses of the opening chapter of the Holy Qur-án are here spoken of (Bkh), which shows that the Fátiḥah was not only revealed, but also repeated in prayers, long before the revelation of this chapter. The Fátiḥah is called the grand Qur-án, because it contains the essence of the whole of the Qur-án.

Ar. thine.

1352 This verse gives us a picture of the holy mind, for which the riches and embellishments of this life had no temptation, and the unequalled simplicity of his life from the time that he married a rich widow to the time that he ruled Arabia may be guessed from the last scene of his life, when he ordered the last pie in his house to be given away to the poor. The verse, moreover, draws a picture of the utmost kindness and gentleness which he showed to his followers. The straining of the eyes signifies looking desirously.

1353 Al-yaqín (literally certainty), or that which is certain, is here generally understood to mean death (Bkh), because it is the one thing which is certain to come to every creature. حتى يأتيك اليقين (literally, until there comes to you that which is certain) is therefore understood to mean the whole of your life.

The Title.

THIS chapter is very appropriately named the Bee, because the bee, guided by instinct, which is called a revelation in its case (v. 68), gathers together sweet honey from flowers of all kinds, taking what is best in them, thus producing "a beverage of many colours in which there is healing for men," so Divine revelation to the Holy Prophet collected what was best in the teachings of all the prophets and presented it in the Holy Qur-án, which is also declared to be a healing (10 : 57) for the spiritual diseases of men.

Connection with the preceding Chapters.

The subject-matter of this chapter is the same as that of the preceding six chapters of the alif, lám, rá group, to which it really forms, as it were, a supplement; for whereas that group establishes the truth of revelation mostly by references to the past history of the prophets, this chapter does it by inferences drawn from the analogy of Divine work in creation, and further shows the truth of Divine Unity by similar inferences. Thus the evidence contained in that group of six chapters is supplemented by the evidence drawn from nature which is given in this chapter. The truth of revelation is further emphasized by laying stress upon the all-important principle of Divine Unity, the promulgation of which has always been the chief object of revelation.

Subject-matter.

This chapter amplifies the principles laid down in the last. A warning was given to the opponents of the Qur-án, and the approach of the doom is here announced. Then it is shown by reference to the great Divine gifts for the physical welfare of man that such a beneficent Master could not have neglected his spiritual welfare. The first section thus ends with the important statement: And upon Allah it rests to show the right way. The second section, still dwelling upon the benefits which the Divine hand has conferred upon man in physical nature, draws attention to man's superiority over the whole of creation, which is made subservient to him. It thus appeals to man's self-esteem, admonishing him not to bow before the created things (v. 20), which he has, indeed, been created to rule. The next two sections lead us again into the domain of prophecy by stating that the deniers shall come to disgrace. These are followed by two sections further explaining the truth of the statements made above and dealing with some of the false excuses of those who rejected the truth. The seventh section shows how human nature revolts against polytheism, and the eighth deals with the iniquities of the deniers, which, however, a Merciful God is slow to punish. The ninth establishes the necessity of revelation by reference to the working of law in nature, and the tenth shows that all men cannot be the recipients of that revelation, but that choice is made of the best. The eleventh speaks of the hour when the opponents shall be overthrown, though the punishment is delayed out of Divine mercy. The twelfth section refers to the evidence of prophets against their people, the thirteenth shows that it is nothing but good that is enjoined by revelation, and thus appeals to human instinct not to reject it. The Qur-án is next plainly stated to be a revelation in substitution for the former revelations, and not to be the work of a man. The fate of the Meccans, who still persist in rejecting its Divine truth, is then compared to that of a flourishing town which must be made to suffer fear and hunger because of the ingratitude of its people.

And now that the enemy is punished on account of transgression and his power broken, the chapter is closed by giving the Muslims certain directions which they must follow in order to become, and to remain, a great nation. Abraham, that great patriarch, honoured alike by the Jew, the Christian, and the idolatrous Arab, is stated to be a great exemplar, who was made great in this life, and who was a most righteous servant of Allah. He attained this high position on account of his being a great preacher of Divine Unity, and his absolute submission to his Maker, and that was what was now required of the Muslims. Their religious controversies were to be conducted in a spirit of utmost mildness and great wisdom; they were to be a forbearing, not a revengeful nation, for forbearance was the path to greatness and triumph.

Date of revelation.

The revelation of this chapter belongs to the last Meccan period, like that of the group which it supplements. A clear exposition of the truth of the Divine revelation seems to be set out at great length in this chapter, as a last argument against the reprobate sinners of Mecca. The mention, in vv. 41 and 110, of Muhájirs, i.e. those who fly from their home, and the injunction, in v. 115, relating to prohibited foods, have led some to think that these verses must have been revealed at Medina. As regards the first, it may be noted that the first flight of the Muslims to escape the severe persecution of the Meccans had taken place as early as the fifth year of the Holy Prophet's call; but it is more probable that the reference is to the second Muslim exodus from Mecca, which took place before the Holy Prophet's departure from that town. As regards the latter, it should be borne in mind that the subject of prohibited foods, having, as it did, a deep connection with idolatry, inasmuch as all that food was prohibited on which any other name than that of Allah was mentioned, was dealt with at Mecca not only in this chapter, but also in the 6th. So neither the first argument nor the second is reasonable, and the only conclusion left is that the entire chapter is a late Meccan revelation.

SECTION 1

Revelation testified to by Nature

1, 2. Approach of doom. 3–8. Creation testifies to Divine beneficence for man. 9. The right way pointed out by Allah.

In the name of Allah, the Beneficent, the Merciful.

بِسْمِ اللّٰهِ الرَّحْمٰنِ الرَّحِيْمِ ۝

1 Allah's commandment has come, therefore do not desire to hasten it;[1354] glory be to Him, and highly exalted be He above what they associate (with Him).

أَتٰى أَمْرُ اللّٰهِ فَلَا تَسْتَعْجِلُوْهُ ۚ سُبْحٰنَهٗ وَتَعٰلٰى عَمَّا يُشْرِكُوْنَ ۝

2 He sends down the angels with the inspiration[1355] by His commandment on whom He pleases of His servants, saying:[1356] Give the warning that there is no god but Me, therefore be careful (of your duty) to Me.

Ar. that.

يُنَزِّلُ الْمَلٰٓئِكَةَ بِالرُّوْحِ مِنْ أَمْرِهٖ عَلٰى مَنْ يَّشَآءُ مِنْ عِبَادِهٖٓ أَنْ أَنْذِرُوْٓا أَنَّهٗ لَآ إِلٰهَ إِلَّآ أَنَا فَاتَّقُوْنِ ۝

3 He created the heavens and the earth with the truth, highly exalted be He above what they associate (with Him).

خَلَقَ السَّمٰوٰتِ وَالْأَرْضَ بِالْحَقِّ ۚ تَعٰلٰى عَمَّا يُشْرِكُوْنَ ۝

4 He created man from a small life-germ,[1356A] and lo! he is an open contender.

خَلَقَ الْإِنْسَانَ مِنْ نُّطْفَةٍ فَإِذَا هُوَ خَصِيْمٌ مُّبِيْنٌ ۝

5 And He created the cattle for you; you have in them warm clothing and (many) advantages, and of them do you eat.

Ar. the cattle, He created them.

1354 The first words of this chapter are a fitting sequel to the previous chapters, which repeatedly give warning of punishment to the wicked opponents of the truth. The amr-ullah (lit. Allah's commandment) signifies the threatened punishment of Allah, which is here spoken of as having already come to express the highest degree of certainty as to its advent. The use of the past tense for the future is of frequent occurrence in Arabic literature, when great certainty about the future is to be expressed. But the unbelievers are asked not to hasten the punishment, for Allah, Who conferred so many physical benefits on them, is willing to bestow His spiritual gifts, as mercy has the foremost place in Divine nature. This is stated in the verses that follow. What that punishment was going to be is expressly stated at the end of this chapter (v. 112); see 1406.

1355 Rūḥ here signifies inspiration or Divine revelation, such as is imparted by means of an angel . . . so called because it quickens to life from the death of infidelity (or ungodliness) . . . and the prophetic commission. It also signifies the Qur-ān (LL).

1356 The particle an is usually rendered by that, but it is frequently used as an explicative meaning ai (or that is) or in the manner of ai, meaning qāilan, or qāilīna (i.e. saying), or some other form of qāla (i.e. he said) (Mgh-LL). For this use of an certain conditions are requisite, for which see Mgh.

1356A The nuṭfah signifies originally only pure water (TA : al-mā-uṣ-ṣāfī), the word being applied to a very small quantity as well as to a very large volume of it, so that any good drink is called a nuṭfah, so also is a sea (TA). The nuṭfah from which man is stated to be created is the small life-germ, or the spermatozoon, in the seminal fluid.

Ar. There is beauty in them for.

6 And they are pleasing to you when you drive them back (to home), and when you send them forth (to pasture).

وَلَكُمْ فِيهَا جَمَالٌ حِينَ تُرِيحُونَ وَحِينَ تَسْرَحُونَ ○

7 And they carry your heavy loads to regions which you could not reach but with distress of the souls; most surely your Lord is Compassionate, Merciful.

وَتَحْمِلُ أَثْقَالَكُمْ إِلَىٰ بَلَدٍ لَّمْ تَكُونُوا بَالِغِيهِ إِلَّا بِشِقِّ الْأَنفُسِ ۚ إِنَّ رَبَّكُمْ لَرَءُوفٌ رَّحِيمٌ ○

8 And (He made) horses and mules and asses that you might ride upon them and as an ornament; and He creates what you do not know.

وَالْخَيْلَ وَالْبِغَالَ وَالْحَمِيرَ لِتَرْكَبُوهَا وَزِينَةً ۚ وَيَخْلُقُ مَا لَا تَعْلَمُونَ ○

9 And upon Allah it rests to show the right way, and there are some deviating (ways); and if He please He would certainly guide you all aright.[1357]

وَعَلَى اللَّهِ قَصْدُ السَّبِيلِ وَمِنْهَا جَائِرٌ ۚ وَلَوْ شَاءَ لَهَدَاكُمْ أَجْمَعِينَ ○

SECTION 2

Nature upholds Unity

10–19. The whole creation is made subservient to man. 20, 21. No created object should be taken for a god.

Ar. from it is.

10 He it is who sends down water from the cloud for you; it gives drink, and by it (grow) the trees upon which you pasture.

هُوَ الَّذِي أَنزَلَ مِنَ السَّمَاءِ مَاءً لَّكُم مِّنْهُ شَرَابٌ وَمِنْهُ شَجَرٌ فِيهِ تُسِيمُونَ ○

11 He causes to grow for you thereby herbage, and the olives, and the palm-trees, and the grapes, and of all the fruits; most surely there is a sign in this for a people who reflect.

يُنبِتُ لَكُم بِهِ الزَّرْعَ وَالزَّيْتُونَ وَالنَّخِيلَ وَالْأَعْنَابَ وَمِن كُلِّ الثَّمَرَاتِ ۗ إِنَّ فِي ذَٰلِكَ لَآيَةً لِّقَوْمٍ يَتَفَكَّرُونَ ○

12 And He has made subservient for you the night and the day and the sun and the moon, and the stars are made subservient by His commandment; most surely there are signs in this for a people who ponder;

وَسَخَّرَ لَكُمُ اللَّيْلَ وَالنَّهَارَ وَالشَّمْسَ وَالْقَمَرَ ۖ وَالنُّجُومُ مُسَخَّرَاتٌ بِأَمْرِهِ ۗ إِنَّ فِي ذَٰلِكَ لَآيَاتٍ لِّقَوْمٍ يَعْقِلُونَ ○

13 And what He has created in the earth of varied hues; most surely there is a sign in this for a people who are mindful.

وَمَا ذَرَأَ لَكُمْ فِي الْأَرْضِ مُخْتَلِفًا أَلْوَانُهُ ۗ إِنَّ فِي ذَٰلِكَ لَآيَةً لِّقَوْمٍ يَذَّكَّرُونَ ○

1357 And so at last it was that at first Mecca and then the whole of Arabia accepted Islam. The verse indicates that the kind and merciful God Who granted man so many physical boons could not have neglected his spiritual requirements.

14 And He it is Who has made the sea subservient that you may eat fresh flesh from it and bring forth from it ornaments which you wear, and you see the ships cleaving through it, and that you might seek of His bounty and that you may give thanks.

Ar. thou seest.

15 And He has cast great mountains in the earth lest it might be convulsed with you, and rivers and roads that you may go aright,[1358]

Or, that they might give you food.

16 And landmarks; and by the stars they find the right way.

17 Is He then Who creates like him who does not create? Do you not then mind?

18 And if you would count Allah's favours, you will not be able to number them; most surely Allah is Forgiving, Merciful.

19 And Allàh knows what you conceal and what you do openly.

20 And those whom they call on besides Allah have not created anything while they are themselves created;

21 Dead (are they), not living, and they know not when they shall be raised.[1359]

وَهُوَ الَّذِي سَخَّرَ الْبَحْرَ لِتَأْكُلُوا مِنْهُ لَحْمًا
طَرِيًّا وَتَسْتَخْرِجُوا مِنْهُ حِلْيَةً تَلْبَسُونَهَا
وَتَرَى الْفُلْكَ مَوَاخِرَ فِيهِ وَلِتَبْتَغُوا
مِنْ فَضْلِهِ وَلَعَلَّكُمْ تَشْكُرُونَ ۝
وَأَلْقَىٰ فِي الْأَرْضِ رَوَاسِيَ أَنْ تَمِيدَ بِكُمْ
وَأَنْهَارًا وَسُبُلًا لَعَلَّكُمْ تَهْتَدُونَ ۝
وَعَلَامَاتٍ ۚ وَبِالنَّجْمِ هُمْ يَهْتَدُونَ ۝
أَفَمَنْ يَخْلُقُ كَمَنْ لَا يَخْلُقُ ۗ أَفَلَا
تَذَكَّرُونَ ۝
وَإِنْ تَعُدُّوا نِعْمَةَ اللَّهِ لَا تُحْصُوهَا ۗ
إِنَّ اللَّهَ لَغَفُورٌ رَحِيمٌ ۝
وَاللَّهُ يَعْلَمُ مَا تُسِرُّونَ وَمَا تُعْلِنُونَ ۝
وَالَّذِينَ يَدْعُونَ مِنْ دُونِ اللَّهِ لَا
يَخْلُقُونَ شَيْئًا وَهُمْ يُخْلَقُونَ ۝
أَمْوَاتٌ غَيْرُ أَحْيَاءٍ ۖ وَمَا يَشْعُرُونَ
أَيَّانَ يُبْعَثُونَ ۝

1358 When and how mountains were formed is a subject belonging to the domain of geology. The words of the Qur-án seem to point to the great upheavals and the violent agitations which led to the formation of the mountains, before man's existence on earth, and that having been effected, the convulsions are now comparatively very insignificant. The present condition of the earth with man upon it (to this attention is drawn in the words with you) is therefore one of stability, making life possible. The significance given in the margin, however, finds support from what is said elsewhere in the Holy Qur-án: "And the mountains, He made them firm, a provision for you and your cattle" (79 : 32, 33); as máda signifies also, he conferred a benefit, and máidah means food. But máda also means it went round, تميد بكم being the equivalent of تدور بكم (the particle an in this case simply meaning that), and the meaning in this case would be, He has cast great mountains in the earth that they (or it) might rotate with you.

1359 These two verses show conclusively that neither Jesus Christ nor any other person who is taken for god ever created anything, and secondly, that Jesus Christ was not alive at the time of the revelation of the Holy Qur-án, because it is stated in clear words that all those who are called on besides Allah are dead, not living, and the further statement that they do not even know when they shall be raised shows that the verse speaks of men taken for gods, and at any rate includes them.

Deniers of Divine Unity and Revelation

22–24. Denial of Unity and Revelation. 25. They shall bear a double burden.

22 Your God is one God; so (as for) those who do not believe in the hereafter, their hearts are ignorant and they are proud.

23 Truly Allah knows what they hide and what they manifest; surely He does not love the proud.

24 And when it is said to them, What is it that your Lord has revealed? they say: Stories of the ancients;

25 That they may bear their burdens entirely on the day of resurrection and also of the burdens of those whom they lead astray without knowledge; now surely evil is what they bear.

إِلٰهُكُمْ إِلٰهٌ وَّاحِدٌ ۚ فَالَّذِيْنَ لَا يُؤْمِنُوْنَ
بِالْاٰخِرَةِ قُلُوْبُهُمْ مُّنْكِرَةٌ وَّهُمْ
مُّسْتَكْبِرُوْنَ ۝
لَا جَرَمَ أَنَّ اللّٰهَ يَعْلَمُ مَا يُسِرُّوْنَ وَمَا
يُعْلِنُوْنَ ۚ إِنَّهٗ لَا يُحِبُّ الْمُسْتَكْبِرِيْنَ ۝
وَإِذَا قِيْلَ لَهُمْ مَّاذَا أَنْزَلَ رَبُّكُمْ ۙ قَالُوْا
أَسَاطِيْرُ الْأَوَّلِيْنَ ۝
لِيَحْمِلُوْا أَوْزَارَهُمْ كَامِلَةً يَّوْمَ الْقِيٰمَةِ ۙ
وَمِنْ أَوْزَارِ الَّذِيْنَ يُضِلُّوْنَهُمْ بِغَيْرِ عِلْمٍ ۗ
أَلَا سَآءَ مَا يَزِرُوْنَ ۝

SECTION 4

The Wicked shall come to Disgrace

26–29. Those who plan against truth shall meet with disgrace. 30–32. The righteous shall prosper. 33, 34. Final punishment to be awaited for.

26 Those before them did indeed devise plans, but Allah demolished their building from the foundations, so the roof fell down on them from above them, and the chastisement came to them from whence they did not perceive.[1360]

قَدْ مَكَرَ الَّذِيْنَ مِنْ قَبْلِهِمْ فَأَتَى اللّٰهُ
بُنْيَانَهُمْ مِّنَ الْقَوَاعِدِ فَخَرَّ عَلَيْهِمُ
السَّقْفُ مِنْ فَوْقِهِمْ وَأَتٰهُمُ الْعَذَابُ
مِنْ حَيْثُ لَا يَشْعُرُوْنَ ۝

1360 This is a prophecy relating to the fate of the opponents. They devised plans against the Prophet, and on the basis of those plans they erected a building which, when complete, was certainly to be destroyed, involving in its destruction the builders themselves, by the roof falling upon their heads. The meaning is that they will be given time to complete their plans, and then these plans and all that they spent on them will not only be brought to naught, but also prove a cause of their own ruin. Compare 8:36: "Surely those who disbelieve spend their wealth to hinder people from the way of Allah: so they shall spend it, then it shall be to them an intense regret, then they shall be overcome."

27 Then on the resurrection day He will bring them to disgrace and say: Where are the associates you gave Me, for whose sake you became hostile? Those who are given the knowledge will say: Surely the disgrace and the evil are this day upon the unbelievers:[1361]

Ar. My associates.

ثُمَّ يَوْمَ الْقِيٰمَةِ يُخْزِيْهِمْ وَيَقُوْلُ
اَيْنَ شُرَكَآءِيَ الَّذِيْنَ كُنْتُمْ تُشَآقُّوْنَ
فِيْهِمْ ؕ قَالَ الَّذِيْنَ اُوْتُوا الْعِلْمَ
اِنَّ الْخِزْيَ الْيَوْمَ وَالسُّوْٓءَ عَلَى
الْكٰفِرِيْنَ ۝

28 Those whom the angels cause to die while they are unjust to themselves. Then would they offer submission: We used not to do any evil. Aye: surely Allah knows what you did.

الَّذِيْنَ تَتَوَفّٰىهُمُ الْمَلٰٓئِكَةُ ظَالِمِيْٓ اَنْفُسِهِمْ
فَاَلْقَوُا السَّلَمَ مَا كُنَّا نَعْمَلُ مِنْ سُوْٓءٍ ؕ بَلٰٓى
اِنَّ اللّٰهَ عَلِيْمٌۢ بِمَا كُنْتُمْ تَعْمَلُوْنَ ۝

29 Therefore enter the gates of hell, to abide therein; so certainly evil is the dwelling-place of the proud.

فَادْخُلُوْٓا اَبْوَابَ جَهَنَّمَ خٰلِدِيْنَ فِيْهَا ؕ
فَلَبِئْسَ مَثْوَى الْمُتَكَبِّرِيْنَ ۝

30 And it is said to those who guard (against evil): What is it that your Lord has revealed? They say, Good. For those who do good in this world is good, and certainly the abode of the hereafter is better; and certainly most excellent is the abode of those who guard (against evil);

وَقِيْلَ لِلَّذِيْنَ اتَّقَوْا مَاذَآ اَنْزَلَ رَبُّكُمْ ؕ
قَالُوْا خَيْرًا ؕ لِلَّذِيْنَ اَحْسَنُوْا فِيْ
هٰذِهِ الدُّنْيَا حَسَنَةٌ ؕ وَلَدَارُ
الْاٰخِرَةِ خَيْرٌ ؕ وَلَنِعْمَ دَارُ
الْمُتَّقِيْنَ ۝

31 The gardens of perpetuity, they shall enter them, rivers flowing beneath them: they shall have in them what they please. Thus does Allah reward those who guard (against evil),

جَنّٰتُ عَدْنٍ يَّدْخُلُوْنَهَا تَجْرِيْ مِنْ تَحْتِهَا
الْاَنْهٰرُ لَهُمْ فِيْهَا مَا يَشَآءُوْنَ ؕ كَذٰلِكَ
يَجْزِي اللّٰهُ الْمُتَّقِيْنَ ۝

32 Those whom the angels cause to die in a good state, saying: Peace be on you, enter the garden for what you did.

الَّذِيْنَ تَتَوَفّٰىهُمُ الْمَلٰٓئِكَةُ طَيِّبِيْنَ ۙ
يَقُوْلُوْنَ سَلٰمٌ عَلَيْكُمُ ۙ ادْخُلُوا الْجَنَّةَ
بِمَا كُنْتُمْ تَعْمَلُوْنَ ۝

33 They do not wait aught but that the angels should come to them or that the commandment of your Lord should come to pass.[1362] Thus

Ar. thy.

هَلْ يَنْظُرُوْنَ اِلَّآ اَنْ تَاْتِيَهُمُ
الْمَلٰٓئِكَةُ اَوْ يَاْتِيَ اَمْرُ رَبِّكَ ؕ كَذٰلِكَ

1361 Mark that the punishment of the unbelievers on the resurrection day is described twice in this verse as being disgrace. This shows that disgrace is a sort of hell-fire which they had in this very life too.

1362 What is meant by the coming of the angels or the coming of the Lord is made clear by the next verse: it is the punishment for their evil deeds and ultimately their complete overthrow that is meant. They wait that the angels should come and the evil consequences did those before them; and Allah was not unjust to them, but they were unjust to themselves.

34 So the evil (consequences) of what they did shall afflict them and that which they mocked shall encompass them.[1363]

فَعَلَ الَّذِينَ مِنْ قَبْلِهِمْ وَمَا ظَلَمَهُمُ اللَّهُ
وَلَٰكِنْ كَانُوا أَنْفُسَهُمْ يَظْلِمُونَ ○
فَأَصَابَهُمْ سَيِّئَاتُ مَا عَمِلُوا وَحَاقَ بِهِمْ
مَا كَانُوا بِهِ يَسْتَهْزِئُونَ ○

SECTION 5

Prophets are raised to explain

35. False excuses. 36, 37. Prophets raised to guide. 38–40. Denial of life after death.

35 And they who give associates (to Allah) say: If Allah had pleased, we would not have served any thing besides Allah, (neither) we nor our fathers, nor would we have prohibited any thing without (order from) Him.[1364] Thus did those before them; is then aught incumbent upon the apostles except a plain delivery (of the message)?

36 And certainly We raised in every nation an apostle saying:[a] Serve Allah and shun the devil. So there were some of them whom Allah guided and there were others against whom error was due;[1365] therefore travel in the land, then see what was the end of the rejecters.

Ar. that.

of their deeds afflict them, and they wait that the commandment of the Lord should come to pass and they should be beset on all sides by that at which they mocked. The coming of the angels thus stands for the smaller afflictions, such as overtook them in the form of famine and war, while the coming to pass of the commandment of the Lord indicates the complete overthrow of their power which was brought about by the conquest of Mecca. Compare 268 and 2:210.

1363 The past tense, as already stated, is frequently used in the Holy Qur-án to denote the future, when it is required to express the highest degree of certainty (Rz, vol. 2, p. 242). The prophecy is an answer to the demand of the previous verse.

1365 حق عليه كذا means such a thing was suitable to the requirements of justice, etc., to take effect upon him (LL). Hence حقت عليهم الضلالة signifies that remaining in error was suitable to the requirements of justice in their case; in other words, they adhered to error, and there was no injustice on the part of Allah in their having remained on such a course. The apostles had delivered to them the message and shown them the right way, but they chose to remain in error. The words do not mean that Allah had decreed that they should remain in error, for then the sending to them of apostles would have been absurd. And in the concluding portion of the verse the rejecters of the Holy Prophet are told to take a lesson from the fate of the former rejecters of the truth, which would not have been done if they had been considered as foredoomed to err.

1366 حرص عليه signifies he strove or laboured or exerted himself for him (Msb, TA-LL); also, he was exceedingly eager for him (TA-LL).

1367 I think there has been a great misunderstanding in the interpretation of the words من يضل which clearly mean he who leads (others) astray. The use of adalla without an objective is permissible, as in و ان كثيرا ليضلون باهوائهم بغير علم i.e. and most surely many would lead (people) astray by their low desires out of ignorance (6 : 120). The meaning is therefore that those who do not only walk in error themselves, but are even engaged in leading others astray, cannot be guided so long as they stick to this course. But if it is necessary to make the words ambiguous, by interpreting them as meaning Allah does not guide him whom He causes to err, it is by no means justifiable to make them contradict the plain words of the Holy Qur-án; the Qur-án itself makes it quite clear as to those whom Allah causes to err. For instance, we have in 2 : 26 : "But He does not cause to err by it any except the transgressors," and in 14 : 27, "And Allah causes the unjust to go astray." Even, therefore, if we adopt the other interpretation, the words only mean that the transgressors and the unjust are not guided, the translation of من يضل being whom He judges to have gone astray.

1368 This is a most clear prophecy regarding those Muslims who had to fly from their homes on account of the persecutions of the Quraish. What is promised them is not only a reward of the hereafter but a goodly abode in this world too. Whether the reference here is only to the earlier flight to Abyssinia, or to the later flight to Medina, which had begun before the Holy Prophet's departure, one thing is certain: those who fled their homes in utter helplessness, and were in danger even of their very lives, were given the clearest promise of a great future in this life, and this promise proved true notwithstanding the hard struggle against a powerful nation, united at least in the determination to exterminate Islam. It is related of the Caliph 'Umar that he used to say, when he gave a gift to one of the emigrants: "Take this—may Allah bless you! This is what He promised you in this life, and what is for you in the hereafter is greater" (Kf), evidently referring to this verse.

1369 By the اهل الذكر (lit. the followers of the Reminder) are generally understood the Jews and the Christians, to whom it is supposed the Quraish are told to refer the question whether it is or it is not true that only men and not angels were sent with Divine revelation before, but the mention in the very next verse of the zikr or the Reminder having been sent to the Holy Prophet shows that the words apply to the Muslims. Some commentators, however, take the words generally as meaning learned men.

1370 This verse and the two that follow speak of the punishment in store for those who invented mischievous plans to kill the Prophet. The punishment spoken of in this verse is

46 Or that He may seize them in the course of their journeys, then shall they not escape;[1371]

47 Or that He may seize them by causing them to suffer gradual loss,[1372] for your Lord is most surely Compassionate, Merciful.

their being swallowed by the earth, which is a metaphorical expression for the utter annihilation of their power. Khasf, which is ordinarily rendered as cleaving open or swallowing, also means izlāl (TA), i.e. bringing to disgrace. Hence the meaning of يخسف بهم الارض or the earth swallowing them up is their being brought to disgrace in the land. Khasf also indicates the disappearance of a thing, as خسوف العين signifies the eyes sinking, or going away into the head, meaning its blinding (S, TA-LL). Hence the meaning of the phrase يخسف بهم الارض may be that they may be made to disappear altogether from the land, being the prophecy of the absolute disappearance of idolatry and unbelief from Arabia. Khasafa also signifies it became defective or suffered loss (Q-LL), and the infinitive noun khasf signifies being vile, abject, or contemptible (KL-LL), or the lowering, abasing, or humbling another (Ham, TA-LL), and accordingly the meaning may be He may make them suffer loss, or abase them in the earth.

1371 Taqallub signifies journeying for traffic (LL), because for this purpose one has to go and come again and again (lit. turning about). The prosperity of the Meccans depended on their journeying to Syria with their goods, and as Medina was in the way they suffered by the war they made upon the Muslims of Medina, because it interrupted their journeys and traffic. Thus this prophecy was fulfilled by them with their own hands.

1372 Takhawwafā-hū means he took little by little from it (S, Q, LA-LL), and the meaning is that they shall be diminished gradually until unbelief is utterly annihilated. This was the form which the punishment of the opponents of the Holy Prophet took. Their annihilation and the vanishing of their power, spoken of in the two previous verses, were brought about gradually, not suddenly, so that seeing the prophecy being fulfilled they may accept the truth. Thus they were dealt with kindly and mercifully, as the two attributes of the Divine Being brought in at the conclusion of the verse indicate.

prevalent among the Arabs, especially among their chiefs, and its abolition was one of the numerous blessings of Islam. With no physical or administrative power behind it to ensure its enforcement, the word of Allah swept off the deep-rooted custom as with a magician's wand, so that not a single case of the burial of a living girl has ever been met with since the mandate came. 1376 The reference is to their ascribing daughters to Allah, while they themselves did not like that any one of them should have a daughter, thus showing how obviously inconsistent with their inward convictions was their professed belief in the Divine Being.

1377 By the water from the heaven is clearly meant the Divine revelation, as the previous verse also shows. The death of the earth is its corruption, and the giving of life signifies its spiritual life, marvellous signs of which had already appeared in Arabia.

1378 This and the previous verse seem to aim at a comparison between the Divine laws as manifested in nature and the handiwork of man. It is the working of Divine law in nature that produces such a valuable and agreeable diet as pure milk, separating it from the other elements—blood and dung—to which food is reduced in the belly of a cow, a goat, or other animal. Divine Providence thus most successfully separates the pure elements from excrements, which the hand of man is unable to do. On the other hand, the most agreeable provisions produced by nature in the form of fruits are turned into such a poisonous drug as wine by the hand of man. The two illustrations thus point out that just as Divine laws working in the physical world produce the purest and most agreeable diets, separating them from obnoxious elements and useless excrements, so their working in the spiritual world produces the sublimest and most practicable moral teachings, which afford to man the purest and most agreeable spiritual diet. But the best teachings given by Divine revelation are likely to be corrupted by the hands of man, as the best of fruits is turned into such a disagreeable and obnoxious thing as wine, though if it had been preserved in its original condition it could have served as an excellent provision. The second illustration, in fact, points out how man has corrupted the pure teachings of Divine revelation, and therefore mankind cannot be trusted to evolve the highest moral and ethical code; it is only Divine law working in the spiritual world, i.e. Divine revelation, that gives to man pure moral teachings, nourishing him spiritually, as milk nourishes the human being physically.

which there is healing for men; most surely there is a sign in this for a people who reflect.[1379]

70 And Allah has created you, then He causes you to die, and of you is he who is brought back to the worst part of life, so that after having knowledge he does not know anything; surely Allah is Knowing, Powerful.[1380]

Selection of the Recipient of Revelation

71, 72. Degrees of superiority. 73, 74. Those who set up other gods. 75, 76, Parables showing that only the good are fit for selection.

أَفَبِنِعْمَةِ اللَّهِ يَجْحَدُونَ ۝

1379 This is another illustration to show that divine revelation brings about an object which cannot be effected by human exertions. In this case the Divine laws of nature are shown working in the bee, which gathers the sweet juice of different flowers, making it into honey. What this small creature effects, working instinctively in obedience to Divine laws, cannot be effected by the combined exertions of the whole of humanity. This illustration from the physical world is introduced to show a similar working of the Divine laws in the spiritual world, viz. that the Prophet, working as it were instinctively in obedience to the Divine laws prevailing in the spiritual and moral worlds, has by Divine revelation collected all that was best and noblest in any religion or religious teaching and summed it up in the Holy Qur-án: a work which could not be effected by the mere exertions of men. Hence it is that of the Qur-án it is said in 98 : 3, "wherein are all the right ordinances." The object is to show that the Holy Qur-án, as a collection of all the highest and noblest moral teachings, could only be produced by Divine revelation and not by human exertions. And just as honey is said to possess the quality of healing here, the Qur-án in 17 : 82 and elsewhere is called a healing. It should be noted that five kinds of the waḥ-y (literally revelation or inspiration) of Allah are mentioned in the Holy Qur-án; viz. first, in its relation to inanimate objects, as earth in 99 : 5; secondly, in relation to living creatures other than man, as the bee; thirdly, in relation to men and women other than prophets, as the apostles of Jesus in 5 : 111 and the mother of Moses in 28 : 7; fourthly, in relation to prophets and apostles; and fifthly, in relation to angels. It should be borne in mind that all these kinds of waḥ-y are not of the same nature, as, for instance, in the case of the bee, it is its very instinct that is a revelation to it. The revelation of the prophets is the expression of Divine will for the guidance of men.

1380 As in the individual, so in nations. Those who, before the Holy Prophet, had been given knowledge of Divine revelation had lost or corrupted it at the time of his advent; hence the necessity for a new Divine revelation.

1381 The verse points to the differences in the physical world and affords an answer to

72 And Allah has made wives for you from among yourselves,[1382] and has given you sons and daughters from your wives, and has given you of the good things; is it then in the falsehood that they believe while it is in the favour of Allah that they disbelieve?[1383]

Or, grand-children.

73 And they serve besides Allah that which does not control for them any sustenance at all from the heavens and the earth, nor have they any power.

74 Therefore do not give a likeness to Allah; surely Allah knows and you do not know.

Ar. likenesses.

75 Allah sets forth a parable—(Consider) a slave, the property of another, (who) has no power over anything, and one whom We have granted from Ourselves a goodly sustenance so he spends from it secretly and openly; are the two alike?[1384] (All) praise is due to Allah! Nay, most of them do not know.

the demand of the unbelievers expressly stated elsewhere (6:125): "We will not believe until we are given the like of what Allah's apostles are given," claiming an equal right with the Prophet to receive Divine revelation. It is therefore pointed out that as in the physical world it is seen that some are given greater abundance than others, while there are even those "whom your right hands possess" who do not possess any property and have to look to others for their maintenance, though working equally hard with them, so too there are differences in the spiritual world, as all men are not equally fit to receive the gift of Divine revelation. It is to this that the concluding words of the verse allude; the favour of Allah, which is the Divine revelation, should not be denied simply because all men are not equal recipients of it.

1382 The statement made here is that for all men wives are created from their anfus (plural of nafs, meaning soul or self); no one ever thinks of placing such an unnatural interpretation upon these words as that which is erroneously placed upon similar words about Adam, where the rib is made to take the place of soul or self. It should be observed that the words of the Qur-án do not allow this unnatural interpretation, which is based upon the story of Genesis.

1383 They believe in the superstition that the idols, which are inanimate objects, can intercede with Allah, and deny the favour of Allah being granted to a human being. Hence the next verse speaks of the idols.

1384 By slave is meant the idol-worshipper who, instead of being master of idols, stones, and such-like objects, as Allah had created him to be, chooses to become a slave to them, bows before them, and considers them more powerful than himself. By the master of the goodly provision received from Allah is meant he who is the recipient of the Divine revelation, i.e. the Holy Prophet. The comparison is introduced to show that the idol-worshippers will ultimately find themselves deprived of all power. See the parable of the next verse, which makes it clear. The words of the parable find an echo in the reply of Abu Sufyán, when the Holy Prophet, who was in the act of entering Mecca as a conqueror, inquired of him: "Has not the time come when you should know that there is no God but Allah?" Abu Sufyán replied: "By Allah, I am now certain that if there had been a God besides Allah, it would surely have availed me somewhat."

76 And Allah sets forth a parable of two men: one of them is dumb, not able to do anything, and he is a burden to his master; wherever he sends him, he brings no good; can he be held equal with him who enjoins what is just, and he (himself) is on the right path?[1385]

1385 This parable makes the same comparison as the previous one. The purport is here made clearer. The master of the goodly provision from Allah of the previous verse is here plainly called the enjoiner of what is just and the one who is on the right path, while the idol-worshipper is the one who is not able to do anything and who remains unsuccessful in whatever he undertakes—a prophetical allusion to the defeats and discomfiture of the idolaters.

1386 By the unseen is meant the knowledge of the unseen, or the knowledge of the eventual fulfilment of the prophecies; and by the hour is meant the hour of the doom of the opponents of the Prophet, the hour when their power was to be utterly destroyed. They are told that it would be accomplished sooner than they could imagine, because they considered it to be impossible.

1387 The withholding of the birds by Allah signifies His withholding the punishment which was to overtake the enemy in the form of battles, which, as prophecy clearly indicates, were to entirely subdue them. Both Arab proverb and Arab poetry bear witness to birds being spoken of as attending a victorious army to feed upon the corpses of the enemy left on the battlefield. Thus we have the well-known Arab proverb تبدد بلحمك الطير i.e. may the birds disperse thy flesh, which is a kind of imprecation, meaning "may the man die and his flesh may be dispersed and eaten by birds" (Majma'ul Amsál, by Maidáni, Part 1). Arab poetry has many references to this, but I cannot quote more than an instance or two. The famous Nábighah says:—

اذا ما غدا بالجيش حلق فوقه ∴ عصائب طير تهتدى بعصائب

i.e. when he goes out with the army, flocks of birds, being guided by the companies of the army, hover over his head. Here the birds are made the attendants of a victorious army, as if they knew that the army which they followed would slay the enemy, and that they would thus feed on dead bodies. And Abul-Ṭayyib says in praise of Muhammad bin Ishaq:—

اذا لقوا جيشا تيقن انه ∴ من بطن طير تنوفة محشور

i.e. and when they meet an army, it becomes certain that it shall be raised up from the bellies of the birds of Tanufah. Here the opposing army becomes certain of vanquishment and of being eaten by birds, so that, the bellies of the birds serving as their tombs, they should be raised from these bellies on the day of resurrection.

1388 The mention of one of two contrary things always involves the other; thus when heat is spoken of, cold is understood, and when light is spoken of, darkness is understood, and vice versa (Mubarrad-Rz). Hence by the preservation from heat spoken of here, preservation from heat and cold alike is meant. Or, as Zj says, since what preserves a man from heat also preserves him from cold (Rz), therefore the mention of the other would have been superfluous.

1389 As He has given you of the good things of this life, the physical blessings, He now completes these blessings by giving you the greatest of His blessings, i.e. Divine revelation.

82 But if they turn back, then on you devolves only the clear deliverance (of the message). — Ar. thee.

1390 In this verse, as well as in the concluding verse (v. 89) of this section, the broad humanitarian doctrine is taught that a prophet has been raised in every nation. A Christian annotator seems to note with some wonder that "this verse seems to necessitate the belief of some true prophet having existed in India, China, Japan, etc.," but certainly it is much more surprising that those who claim hundreds of prophets for a single nation like the house of Israel should grudge even a single true prophet to these vast countries and nations. Islam rejects all such narrow views of the spiritual providence of Allah, Who is not the "Lord God of Israel," but the Lord of all the nations and worlds.

Revelation enjoins Good

90. Good enjoined and evil prohibited. 91–96. Covenants to be fulfilled. 97–100. The faithful live a life of purity.

90 Surely Allah enjoins the doing of justice and the doing of good (to others) and the giving to the kindred, and He forbids indecency and evil and rebellion; He admonishes you that you may be mindful.[1393]

1391 These words should not be misconstrued to mean that the Prophet's mission was to no other people than the Arabians. The Arabians were the people to whom the Prophet directly preached, and therefore they were the first to be judged guilty in rejecting the Holy Prophet. That the Prophet's message was for all people to whom the truth was to be preached by his followers is shown by 2:143, "And thus we have made you an exalted nation, that you may be bearers of witness to other people and that the Prophet may be a bearer of witness to you."

1392 Brinkman's note that "If the Qur-án explains everything and is a guidance, what need is there for the sunnah?" is based on ignorance. Sunnah means way or practice, and by sunnah is meant the practice of the Prophet, as illustrating the precepts of the Qur-án. Moreover, by everything is meant every basic principle necessary for the spiritual welfare of man and to decide the disputes of various religions, and not everything that may possibly exist in the world.

1393 This verse deals comprehensively with the different degrees of goodness and evil. The lowest form of goodness is that which is called 'adl (literally justice) or returning good for good, and includes not only justice proper, but also the fulfilment of all duties and obligations, as they all more or less take the form of doing good for good. A higher degree of goodness is, however, that which is called iḥsán, or goodness proper. It is the doing of good in cases where man has received no benefit. The highest degree of goodness is that which is called the ايتاء ذي القربى or the giving to the kindred, for what a man gives to his own kindred, to his children or parents or brothers and sisters, is given out of a natural desire, and hence the last stage of goodness is that in which a man's nature is so inclined to good that he has not to make an effort for doing good, but his very nature inclines to good. Similarly this verse deals with the three degrees of evil, from the merest indecency to the wrongful conduct which violates the rights of individuals and nations.

1394 This is a parable, the meaning of which is explained in what follows.

1395 The opponents of Islam, being more numerous than its adherents, would not respect their covenants with the Muslims. Most commentators understand the words to be generally true of the Quraish: "It being usual with them, when they saw the enemies of their confederates to be superior in force, to renounce their league with their old friends." But the verse applies with much greater truth to the civilized Christian nations who have not the least regard for their treaties—especially when the other party to the treaty is weak—in fact, it has become a by-word among them that agreements are made to be violated. Rodwell's note, that "the Arabs, like most half-savage tribes, used to consider superior numerical strength as entitling them to disregard a treaty," only needs revision, in view of recent circumstances, by substituting the words "some civilized nations" for "half-savage tribes."

1396 His pleasure is exercised according to His laws; it is only the transgressors and the unjust who go astray. See verse 104, which makes this verse clear: "Surely as for those who do not believe in Allah's communications, Allah does not guide them." The subject has been fully explained in 44 and elsewhere; see 1099, 1297, 1312.

97 Whoever does good, whether male or female,[1397] and he is a believer, We will most certainly make him live a happy life, and We will most certainly give them their reward for the best of what they did.

1398 It is absolutely unreasonable to argue the doctrine of the abrogation of certain Quranic verses on the basis of this verse. All those verses which are considered as having abrogated previously revealed verses—and the number of these is limited to five by the more learned—belong to the Medina period, because, even admitting for the sake of argument that there was abrogation, it was not needed until the Holy Prophet had established himself at Medina and detailed commandments were required for the guidance of the Muslims. But this chapter belongs to Mecca, and there does not exist the slightest evidence that any verse had been abrogated while the Holy Prophet was at Mecca. Moreover, the context clearly shows that it was the revelation of the Qur-án itself that was called a forgery, and not an occasional change that any of its commandments could have undergone, with which change the unbelievers had, in fact, no concern. What the unbelievers objected to was either the revelation of a new book while there was in existence a previous revelation, or the destruction of their own customs and usages, which had become sacred to them. The answer in the first case is that the same Holy Spirit which brought revelation to Jesus Christ and other prophets also brought it to the Holy Prophet Muhammad, and in the second, that their usages were not founded on Divine revelation, while the Qur-án was based on such revelation. For a fuller discussion of the doctrine of abrogation see 152.

1399 The Holy Spirit is here stated to be the bearer of the revelation to the Holy Prophet, while elsewhere the same bearer is called the Rúḥ-ul-amín, or the Faithful Spirit (26 : 193), and the same is called Gabriel in 2 : 97.

1400 Various names have been suggested as to the person whom the opponents of the Prophet referred to. These are mostly the names of Christian slaves, Jabr, Yásir, 'Aish or Ya'ish, Qais, 'Addás. The name of Salmán is suggested by Prideaux, which Sale shows to be an utterly baseless conjecture, as Salmán came after the Flight. All these slaves were among the early converts to Islam, and it was they who were most cruelly persecuted by the Quraish; yet they remained firm under the severest tortures. Is it possible to conceive that they, without being the least gainers, should have thus willingly suffered persecutions for a cause which they knew to be false? This consideration is alone sufficient to show the absurdity of the allegation of the Quraish and their Christian followers, who attach such importance to this allegation. The general opinion of the Christians is that it was a Nestorian monk named Sergius, who is identified with the monk Buhairah, whom the Holy Prophet, while yet a boy, met on his journey to Syria with his uncle Abú Tálib. The absurdity of this view is also expressed by Sale. As regards the Christian slaves, they certainly cannot be supposed to have been the authors of the sublime themes of the Holy Qur-án. That the opponents of the Prophet said so is rather a proof of the falsehood of the assertion than an indication of its truth; for, unable to meet the arguments of the Holy Qur-án, they had to adopt less honest methods of making the Qur-án unpopular.

1401 It is clear from this that believing in Allah's commandments is equivalent to acting upon them.

1402 Only very rare instances are met with in the early history of Islam in which the converts even under compulsion ever recanted. Being sincere converts, they would not recant even under hardest trials. For instance, Yásir and Sumayyah, husband and wife, suffered death at the hands of the unbelievers because they would not recant, the latter being put to death most cruelly, her legs being tied to two camels which were made to run in opposite directions. Their son 'Ammar, however, having been affected by these tortures, was not so resolute. The cruellest persecutions were inflicted on those slaves who had become converts to Islam. Muir says: "These were seized and imprisoned, or they were exposed upon the scorching gravel of the valley to the intense glare of the midday sun. The torment was enhanced by intolerable thirst, until the wretched sufferers hardly knew what they said." Yet even under these trying circumstances, which would have maddened even the most resolute man, there were those among these slave-converts who were as firm as a mountain; as in the case of Bilál, of whom it is recorded that "in the depth of his anguish the persecutors could force from him but one expression: Ahad! Ahad! One! One! (only God)."

1403 How can a people be guided who reject the truth and refuse to act upon it?

1404 It is clear from this that Allah does not set seals on the hearts of men and thus hinder them from accepting the truth; on the other hand, it is they who reject and would not believe the truth, turning a deaf ear to the preaching of the Prophet (as the previous verses show), and thus seals are set on their hearts, etc. Nor is this done permanently, for, as v. 110 shows, even after this Allah forgives them if they repent and show perseverance in the pursuit of truth and righteousness.

1405 They fly from the place where they are persecuted so that they may not again be afflicted. It appears that some of the believers were now flying to Medina.

1405A It should be noted that the Jihád spoken of here is certainly not in connection with fighting, for the verse was revealed at Mecca.

112 And Allah sets forth a parable: (Consider) a town safe and secure, to which its means of subsistence come in abundance from every quarter; but it became ungrateful to Allah's favours, therefore Allah made it to taste the utmost degree of hunger and fear because of what they wrought.[1406]

فَكُلُوا مِمَّا رَزَقَكُمُ اللّٰهُ حَلٰلًا طَيِّبًا وَّاشْكُرُوا
نِعْمَتَ اللّٰهِ إِنْ كُنْتُمْ إِيَّاهُ تَعْبُدُونَ ۝

1406 The parable is set forth to depict the state of Mecca as it was before the time of the Holy Prophet and the fate to which it was to be reduced after he was rejected, after it became ungrateful for Allah's favour. Its first condition was one of great prosperity and influence, being the centre to which all tribes came for pilgrimage and trade, a picture of which is drawn in one of the concluding chapters of the Holy Qur-án: "So let them serve the Lord of this house, Who feeds them against hunger and gives them security against fear" (106: 3, 4). Its later state was, firstly, that in which, on account of the great famine that followed the curse uttered by the Holy Prophet—"O Allah! overtake them with years of famine like Joseph's years of famine"—they ate even bones and corpses (JB): this was the libás-ul-jú', or the covering of hunger; and secondly, that it trembled at the advent of an army of ten thousand Muslims, and this was the libás-ul-khauf, or covering of fear, being so called because no blood was shed. The word libás (literally, covering) used in connection with hunger and fear indicates the utmost degree of hunger and fear, which, as it were, covered them all over.

1407 This makes the prophecy indicated in the previous parable clear. This is the amr-ullah, or the commandment of Allah, the approach of which was announced at the commencement of this chapter. Thus the end of the chapter states with wonderful exactitude what that punishment would be.

115 He has only forbidden you what dies of itself and blood and flesh of swine and that over which any other name than that of Allah has been invoked,[a] but whoever is driven to necessity, not desiring nor exceeding the limit,[b] then surely Allah is Forgiving, Merciful.

إِنَّ اللَّهَ مَعَ الَّذِينَ اتَّقَوْا وَالَّذِينَ هُمْ مُحْسِنُونَ ○

1408 The principle laid down for preaching and religious controversy by the "unlearned Arabian" has yet to be learned by the most advanced people, whose controversies are carried on with no other object than that of faultfinding, and whose preaching only aims at carping at others. It shows the breadth of mind of the Holy Prophet, more especially when it is remembered that the injunction was given at a time when the Muslims were being most severely persecuted and there was the greatest reason for adopting a harsh attitude.

1409 As the context abundantly sets forth, the retaliation spoken of relates only to things said in controversies, and not to acts of war or bodily injuries, hence there is no need to ascribe this verse to the Medina period. But if once the permission to retaliate is given, the injunction to endure patiently what the opponents say and do is immediately repeated thrice, and this indicates the true spirit of the Islamic teaching. There is no evidence whatever that this and the two following verses were not revealed at Mecca.

THE ISRAELITES

(Baní-Isráeel)

REVEALED AT MECCA

(12 sections and 111 verses)

Abstract:

Sec. 1. Punishment of the Israelites.
Sec. 2. Every deed has a consequence.
Sec. 3, 4. Moral precepts.
Sec. 5. Unbelievers grow harder.
Sec. 6. Punishment must follow.
Sec. 7. The devil's opposition to the righteous.
Sec. 8. Opposition to the Prophet.
Sec. 9. Falsehood shall vanish before truth.
Sec. 10. The Qur-án is a wondrous miracle.
Sec. 11. Trivial excuses.
Sec. 12. A comparison with Moses' warning.

The Title and connection.

THIS chapter goes under the name of the Israelites, who, after being made a great nation and having risen to power and eminence in the world, were severely punished and almost annihilated on account of their transgressions. It opens and ends with a reference to the history of that nation. The beginning and the end of this chapter clearly indicate that it is meant to be a warning to the Muslims themselves as well as to the opponents of the Holy Prophet. It speaks of the fate of the Israelites when they became a great nation, and of that of their opponents when they were yet weak and oppressed; thus containing clear prophecies of the fate of the Quraish and of the disasters which were in store for the Muslims after their rise to power. It will be seen that the punishment of the Israelites themselves is referred to in the beginning, hence the connection of this chapter with the last is clearly established. The last chapter ended by showing to the Muslims how they could become a great nation, while this begins by calling their attention to the fate of a nation that had risen to greatness and then fallen; the reason of the fall being that it no more followed those principles which had been the cause of its greatness.

Subject-matter.

The opening reference is to the Mi'ráj, or the spiritual Ascension of the Holy Prophet, which must be interpreted as referring to the eminence which the Holy Prophet was to achieve and to the greatness to which Islam was to rise. Thus, while the last section of the last chapter gave certain directions to the Muslims, by following which they could become a great nation, here in the very commencement we have in the Holy Prophet's ascension a clear prophecy of the greatness of the Muslim nation. After this reference, the Muslims are warned of the fate of the Israelite nation, which had been raised to eminence before them, but which failed to retain that high position. The second section establishes the immortal principle that every deed has a consequence, the universal law of cause and effect, a right understanding of which alone can raise men to the true dignity which befits humanity. The next two sections contain moral precepts which the Muslims are required to follow. Yet all these high moral teachings only cause the unbelievers to grow harder, as is shown in the fifth section, hence the next section deals with their punishment, whilst it enjoins the faithful to be gentle, even to their opponents. The seventh section refers to the universal law that the mischief-makers have always stood up in opposition to the righteous, and the eighth speaks specifically of the opposition to the Holy Prophet. The next section, however, makes it clear that that opposition would be brought to naught, for falsehood must disappear before the advance of truth. The advent of the Holy Prophet has been here described as the advent of truth itself, or of the Spirit of Truth mentioned by John. The tenth shows how great a miracle is the Holy Qur-án in itself, yet the opponents seek other signs. How trivial are the excuses on which they reject the Holy Qur-án is set forth in the eleventh section, and the justice of their retribution is thus made clear. The last section draws attention to Moses' warning to Pharaoh, the mighty ruler of Egypt, and gives a similar warning through the Holy Qur-án, ending with a brief mention of the absurdity of the doctrine of "sonship," which is dealt with at greater length in the two chapters that follow.

Date of revelation.

The whole of this chapter was revealed at Mecca. The verses which speak of the designs of the Quraish to expel the Holy Prophet (73–76) are regarded by some as having been revealed at Medina, but that conclusion is rather strange, as the revelation on the very face of it is Meccan. The references to the ascension must have been revealed about a year or two before the Flight, while other portions may have been revealed still earlier. The principal portion of it appears to have been an earlier revelation than the group of the seven chapters which precede it. On the whole it would be safe to place it among the early revelations of the last Meccan period.

1410 This journey is generally supposed to refer to the ascension (Mi'ráj) of the Holy Prophet, for which see 1442, where the nature of the ascension is discussed. If the reference here is to the mi'ráj, the significance underlying it is the future triumph of the cause of the Holy Prophet. But the reference may as well be to the Holy Prophet's coming Flight to Medina. It was at night that the Holy Prophet left Mecca (Ibn-i-Hishám). The remote mosque would in this case mean the Prophet's mosque which was to be built at Medina, or Medina itself, as the Sacred Mosque stands for Mecca. Or it may signify Jerusalem, the significance being that the Prophet shall inherit all the blessings of the Israelite prophets, including the Holy Land.

1411 Rodwell says that this verse has no connection with the previous one, but this is not the case. The first verse really prophesies a great future for Islam and the Muslims, while this warns them of the pitfalls of greatness, citing the instance of a nation that had been made to rise to eminence before them.

1412 Compare 5:78: "Those who disbelieved from among the children of Israel were cursed by the tongue of David and Jesus son of Mary." Jerusalem was destroyed twice as a punishment for the transgressions of the Jews, once by the Babylonians, and again by the Romans. See Jesus' warning in Matt. 23:38: "Behold, your house is left unto you desolate," and Luke 21:24: "And Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles," and various other like references. The Psalms are also replete with warnings.

1413 Verse 5 relates the destruction of the temple at Jerusalem and the murder, imprisonment, and banishment of the Jews by the Babylonians in the year 588 B.C., while v. 6 relates to the return of the Jews and rebuilding of the temple under Zerubbabel, and to their subsequent prosperity. This is the turn of fortune spoken of here.

1414 This verse describes the destruction of the temple a second time, which was accomplished by the Romans under Titus. The personal pronouns refer in all cases to the enemy, whoever he might be, and by no means indicate that the same enemy who first destroyed the temple would do so on the second occasion.

1415 This relates to the advent of the Holy Prophet Muhammad, when the Israelites were again given a chance to reform, but they are told that if they return to mischief they will again be punished. When the Holy Prophet came to Medina, the Jews were at first in a conciliatory mood, but their enmity increased day by day, until they joined hands with the enemies of the Holy Prophet, devising plans to take his very life. The result was, they were punished as they had been previously.

1416 The night stands for the darkness of ignorance and unbelief (see 344), and the passing away of the night indicates that ignorance will vanish and the light of Islam will take its place.

13 And We have made every man's actions to cling to his neck,[1417] and We will bring forth to him on the resurrection day a book which he will find wide open:

16 And when We wish to destroy a town, We send Our commandment[1420] to the people of it who lead easy lives, but they transgress therein; thus the word proves true against it, so We destroy it with utter destruction.

1417 Tāir (lit. bird) means the actions of a man, which are, as it were, attached as a necklace to his neck (S, Msb, Q-LL). Why this significance was attached to the word is explained by an Arab superstition. It was a custom of the Arabs to augur good and evil from birds, by observing whether a bird flew away of itself or by being roused, whether it flew to the right or to the left, or directly upwards, and the proposed action was accordingly deemed good or evil; hence the word came to signify good and evil actions (Rz). In fact, this meaning of the word is explained by the concluding portion of the verse and by what follows in the next. The verse reveals the principle that every action produces an effect which is made to cling to a man, and that this very effect will be met with on the resurrection day in the form of a wide-open book. It is thus by leaving its effect behind that every action of man is recorded, and this very effect constitutes the book of a man's actions. Clinging to the neck indicates the inseparability of one thing from another (Rz), thus establishing the law of cause and effect.

1417A Note that according to this verse the reckoning of a man's actions shall be his own work on the day of resurrection. This statement throws a flood of light on the nature of that reckoning and the wazn and the mizān (7 : 8; 55 : 7), showing clearly that it is nothing but a complete manifestation of the effects of the deeds done in this life.

1418 This verse strikes at the root of the doctrine of atonement. The burden of the sins of one man cannot be taken away by another, for, as already stated, the effect of each man's actions clings to himself. This is in perfect accordance with the laws of nature. Nor does the verse contradict what is said in 29 : 13: "And most certainly they shall carry their own burdens and other burdens with their own burdens," which refers to those who mislead others; they shall therefore carry the burden of their own errors as well as the burden of misleading others, while those others must also answer for their own errors. For the significance of bearer of burden see 851.

1419 The chastisement spoken of is that which is inflicted for breaking the law that is given, but only after it has been promulgated. Hence it is stated here that no one is chastised unless the truth has first been preached to him through a prophet.

1420 The meaning of these words is often misunderstood. Allah does not command people to transgress, for it is plainly stated in 7 : 28, "Allah does not enjoin indecency," and the seed from which—if the child is properly taught this lesson—springs the great obligation of obedience to all constituted authority. Hence it is that obedience to parents is given such an important place in the moral code of Islam.

1422 اخوان الشياطين signifies the brethren, friends, and followers of the devil, and means evil-doers. While enjoining charity, the Holy Qur-án also draws attention to economy, thus indicating the golden mean.

1423 The hoping for mercy from the Lord means standing in need of the bounty of the Lord, i.e. not having anything to give to the needy. In that case one should still speak to him gently and not chide him with harshness, so that if the difficulty cannot be relieved, one's behaviour should at least be kind. A saying of the Holy Prophet declares a gentle word spoken to a fellow-man to be a deed of charity.

1424 By the shackling of the hand to the neck is meant being niggardly in one's expenses, and by stretching it forth to its utmost extent, being so profuse as to waste away all one's substance. The verse supplies a general rule regarding the mean to be adopted in one's ordinary expenses, and thus inculcates the duty of economy.

1425 Infanticide, in the case of daughters, was met with among the Arabs, because the females could not go out to war and thus procure for themselves, by means of plunder, their means of subsistence (Rz). But the civilized Christian countries stand more in need of this admonition than the Arabs of the time of ignorance, because the tendency is growing day by day among them either to limit the number of children or to totally dispense with offspring, and this may be accomplished by means other than that of strangling or burying children alive. The decreasing birth-rate of the more civilized countries is a clear sign of this tendency.

1426 This is another evil which is becoming prevalent with the growth of civilization. The Qur-án not only forbids fornication but enjoins men not to go near it, thus avoiding all those opportunities which are likely to tempt one to fall into the evil.

1427 This verse contains nothing inconsistent with what is said in 2 : 178. The words he is aided probably indicate that as the government is bound to aid him by bringing the murderer within reach of the law, the heir should not take the law into his own hands.

1428 If this injunction were followed, all society gossip would immediately cease, thereby relieving many an innocent man and woman of the heart-burnings which he or she suffers on account of evil and unfounded reports. The verse also forbids entering into discussions without accurate knowledge, or proffering uncertain opinion. In fact, peace and contentment would reign in society, instead of mutual strife and hatred, if the injunction were observed.

1429 Allah's purpose in repeating arguments and signs in the Qur-án is clearly to make them mindful, but the more they are reminded, the greater is their aversion to it, so that every fresh revelation of the Qur-án, instead of reminding them, becomes the occasion of their greater aversion: thus it adds to their aversion. It is really not the active cause, but the occasion of the increase of their aversion. This is further proof of the correctness of what is said in 24.

1430 That is, they would have prevailed against the Muslims with the help of their gods, because they thought that their gods interceded for them with Allah; the Muslims, being the rejecters of idols, could not have found access to the Divine Being, and accordingly could not have found help from Him to prevail against their enemy. Or the reference may be to the spiritual advantages which access to the Source of purity should bring to a man. If the idols could indeed give them access to the Divine Being, the idol-worshippers should long before have risen above all impurities.

1430A The whole universe is here mentioned as declaring the glory of Allah. Tasbíḥ is synonymous with tanzíh, and means the declaring God to be free from every imperfection and impurity, or from every thing derogatory to His dignity (LL). This declaration need not be with the tongue and in words; in fact, the very dependence of the whole creation on the Creator and its consequent imperfection is a glorification of the Creator.

1431 This hidden barrier is nothing but that erected by their own aversion, as plainly indicated in v. 41. Allah, according to that verse, sends the Qur-án to remind them, but because of their aversion to it a barrier is imposed between them and it.

1432 The context is alone sufficient to dispel illusion where verses like this are supposed to indicate that those who reject the Qur-án are compelled to do so by Allah Himself. The placing of the coverings on the hearts and heaviness into the ears of the unbelievers is no doubt attributed to Allah as the prime cause of all things, but how this covering or heaviness is directly brought about is plainly indicated in the latter part of this very verse. It is because they do not even listen to the mention of Allah, and fly in aversion from His word, that there follow a heaviness in their ears and a covering over their hearts. Allah brings this about, but He brings it about on account of the condition of their own hearts and ears. This is made very clear in 7:179: "They have hearts with which they do not understand and they have eyes with which they do not see and they have ears with which they do not hear."

Punishment must follow

53, 54. The faithful should be gentle to opponents. 55–60. Punishment of transgressors is a Divine law.

1434 The shaking of the head is to indicate one's disbelief in a thing. The answer, maybe it has drawn nigh, refers to the spiritual resuscitation of Arabia, which was now to be accomplished through the agency of the Holy Prophet, as an indication of the greater resurrection relating to the hereafter. The next verse makes it clear: Then shall you obey Him, giving Him praise. Only ten years after this the whole of Arabia resounded with Divine praises.

1435 The Muslims are here enjoined to be very kind when they speak to the unbelievers. It is related that when the Muslims complained to the Holy Prophet that they were abused by the idolaters, they were told to be kind and not to retaliate (JB). The breadth of mind disclosed in this teaching is unsurpassed. The believers had suffered the cruellest tortures at the hands of the unbelievers, including scoffing and abuse. Not content with this treatment, steps were now being taken to sweep Islam out of existence. Observe the treatment Islam enjoins in return for all these persecutions and abuses: Say to My servants (i.e. the Muslims) that they speak that which is best. And why? Because it was the devil (and this word often signifies the mischief-makers) that was causing these quarrels. The words evidently imply that these dissensions were only transient; the two parties would again become united. Or by 'ibâdî may be meant the opponents (Rz), especially the Jews and the Christians, because of the reference to David and the Psalms in what follows. The meaning in this case is that the opponents should cease reviling Islam, for they would soon have reason to regret this.

1436 It should be noted that in this verse, as elsewhere, mercy is mentioned first, thus showing that Divine mercy has precedence over Divine retribution. The opponents are therefore given greater hope of mercy than fear of retribution.

1437 By saying that some of the prophets are made to excel others, the excellence of the Holy Prophet over others is implied, and David is specially mentioned, because, as stated in the Psalms, he prayed for the utter destruction of his enemies, whereas the above two verses show the Holy Prophet was enjoined to deal mercifully with his opponents. As regards David's invoking curses and destruction on his enemies, a few examples from the Psalms will be sufficient: "Break their teeth, O God . . . let them melt away as waters . . . let them be as cut in pieces . . . let every one of them pass away" (Ps. 58:6–8). "Be not merciful to any wicked transgressors" (Ps. 50:5). "Consume them in wrath, consume them that they may not be" (Ps. 59:13).

1438 This and the previous verse seem to refer to the worship of prophets, saints, and rabbis by the Christians and the Jews. Explaining the words whom they call upon, JB adds, as the angels and Jesus and his mother and Ezra. These divinities, it is argued, themselves hoped for Divine mercy and feared His retribution; the nearer a person to the Divine Being, the greater was his hope of mercy and his fear of chastisement.

1439 It is a law to which history bears evident testimony. Populous towns and cities of 60 And when we said to you (Ar. thee.): Surely your (Ar. thy.) Lord encompasses men;[1440A] and We did not make the vision which We showed you (Ar. thee.) but a trial for men[1441] and the cursed tree[1442] in the Qur-án as well; and We cause them to fear, but it only adds to their great inordinacy.

one age are the ruins of another. This law which worked in old days operates even now. The hand of time continues to devastate old habitations, while new ones are erected in their place.

1440 This verse has been much misunderstood, but, as in so many other cases, the misunderstanding arises from careless or ignorant observation. The word áyat, as shown in 67, signifies both a message or a communication and a sign, the former significance being the one that is generally applicable unless there is something in the context to indicate that the latter significance must be adopted. As Divine communications were always rejected at first, that significance may be adopted here, the meaning being that the only thing which could possibly be a hindrance in the continuance of Divine communications to one generation after another would be the rejection of it by the first generation, but that consideration never hindered the Divine Being from sending communications to a later generation. The same is the significance if the alternative meaning given in the margin is adopted. That this verse does not deny the sending of signs is conclusively proved by the fact that it concludes with the statement that signs are sent to make men fear, and by the very next verse affirming in the clearest language that even now We cause them to fear, which could not have been done otherwise than by sending signs. The meaning is plain: If anything could ever have hindered Us from sending signs, that would have been their rejection by a former people, but We have always been Merciful, and not even rejection by one people of Our signs hindered Us from sending signs to a later generation.

1440A Ihátah, or encompassing, is used in the Holy Qur-án in the sense of holding in grasp as it were about to destroy; and by the people are here evidently meant the opponents of the Holy Prophet, the prophetical reference being to their utter discomfiture, which was to be brought about by the conquest of Mecca (Rz).

1441 Most commentators agree that the reference here is to the vision of Ascension (Bkh, Rz), which gave the Holy Prophet promises of great success after his flight, because so the vision of Ascension to heaven is to be interpreted (see 1410). There has been a difference of opinion among the learned as to whether the Holy Prophet's ascension was bodily or spiritual; the majority adhere to the first view, but among those who hold the latter view there are personages of sound opinion, such as 'Áyeshah and Mu'áviah. In view of the plain words of the Qur-án, however, which refer to the ascension as being the vision which We showed you, the opinion of the majority must be rejected. The Qur-án on several occasions mentions even visions without describing them as visions. But when it is plainly called a vision, not the least reason exists to question its nature. The sayings of the Holy Prophet do not indeed say whether it was a vision or not, but the circumstances related clearly show it to be a vision. Thus in a report received through Sharík, it is stated that the angel came to him: فی لیلة اخری فیما یری قلبه و تنام عینه و لا ینام قلبه i.e. on another night when his heart saw (things) and his eyes slept but his heart did not sleep; and the concluding words of this report are و استیقظ و هو فی مسجد الحرام i.e. and he awoke and he was in the Sacred Mosque (Bkh, kitáb ul Tauḥíd). In another report the words describing the condition in which he was at the time of ascension are بینا انا بین النائم و الیقظان i.e. whilst I was in a state between that of one sleeping and one awake. In fact, it is quite true that he was not asleep; he was in a vision though not in a dream, but at the same time it was not a corporeal ascension. He was actually carried to the Holy Presence, and he was shown great wonders, but it was in spirit that he was carried, and it was with the spiritual eye that he saw those wonders, not in body and with the physical eye, for things spiritual can only be seen with the spiritual eye. And this vision had an important significance. He saw it at a time when his condition was, to human seeming, one of utmost helplessness, and he was shown that a great future lay before him. His opponents, as usual, disbelieved in such visions, and laughed at them.

1442 The cursed tree is the tree of zaqqúm (Rgh). According to the Holy Qur-án, every good action is a good tree and every evil action is an evil tree. The peculiarity about the word zaqqúm (for the significance of which see 2111) is that it is made of the first two and the last letters of the sentence ذق انك انت العزیز الکریم meaning, Taste, for you to be sure are the mighty, the generous, with which those in hell shall be addressed (44:49). One explanation of the cursed tree being a trial for the unbelievers is given in 2111. But the statement is made here in contrast with the Prophet's vision, and both in fact have a deeper significance. As the Prophet's vision signified his future triumph and gave an indication of the greatness to which Islam would rise, the statement made elsewhere that the tree of zaqqúm was the food of sinners (44:43, 44) contained a prophecy of the discomfiture of the enemies of Islam, telling them that a deadly food was in store for them. It was these two prophecies that the opponents laughed to scorn, hence they were a trial for them. And the reason why the vision and the statement about the cursed tree are conjoined is thus evident. The triumph of Islam and the discomfiture of the enemy went hand in hand.

1443 You say جلب جلبة ثم امكث meaning it thundered and then refrained from raining of a coward who threatens and then is silent (LL). The devil is therefore here compared to a coward who comes with a great show but little real force, and who, if shown the least resistance, retreats at every step. According to I'Ab, every inviter who invites (others) to the disobedience of Allah is a satan uttering the cry (JB).

1444 The forces of the devil are no other than the evil-doers, those going quickly into evil being likened to riders, and those who walk slowly in their evil course being likened to footmen. According to JB, by the devil's horse and foot is meant every fast rider and slow walker in disobedience.

1445 The sharing of the devil in wealth signifies everything spent unlawfully or acquired unlawfully; and sharing in children is in reference to committing fornication, which results in illegitimate births (JB). It is for this reason that the expression روح منه (4:171), spoken about Jesus Christ, is translated by some as meaning a soul from Allah, in the sense that the devil had no share in him, the ultimate significance of the words thus being the clearance of Mary from the charge of fornication which the Jews brought against her, as is referred to in the Qur-án elsewhere in the words: "And their uttering a grievous calumny about Mary" (4:156).

1446 By My servants are to be understood all men, for as the devil himself is made to acknowledge in 14:22: "I had no authority over you." See 1308.

1447 A true picture is drawn here of human nature, which turns to Allah in affliction but forgets Him when relief comes. The words are spoken here in reference to the Quraish, who, when the famine and other minor distresses afflicted them, prayed to Allah alone for their removal, but went back to their idols when they found themselves free from affliction.

68 What! do you then feel secure that He will (not) make you disappear on a tract of land or send on you a punishment?[1448] Then you shall not find a protector for yourselves.

Or, bring you low.

69 Or, do you feel secure that He will (not) take you back into it another time, then send on you a fierce gale and thus drown you on account of your ungratefulness? Then you shall not find any aider against Us in the matter.[1449]

Or, disbelief.

Opposition to the Prophet

71, 72. Men shall be raised according to their deeds. 73–75. Attempts to make the Prophet give up his mission. 76, 77. Attempts to expel him from Mecca.

71 (Remember) the day when We will call every people with their leader:[1450] then whoever is given his book in his right hand, these shall read their book; and they shall not be dealt with a whit unjustly.[1451]

يَقْرَءُونَ كِتَابَهُمْ وَلَا يُظْلَمُونَ
فَتِيلًا ۝

1448 Ḥâṣib primarily means a thrower or pelter of stones, and ريح حاصب signifies a violent wind that raises pebbles (LL). Hence ḥâṣib comes to mean a punishment from Allah (TA-LL). The word is also applied to a cloud raining hail.

1449 These two verses remind the opponents of the Holy Prophet in clear words that though they may for a while escape the punishment, yet it is certain to overtake them. The distress is here likened to the sea. The heavy gale of which they are here warned blew on them on land and led to the precipitate flight of an army of ten thousand which was besieging Medina in what is known as the battle of the Confederates (Ibn-i-Hishâm), because the Quraish, determined to deal a death-blow to Islam, had come with all their allies.

1450 The meaning is that the righteous shall follow the righteous leaders and the wicked shall follow their wicked leaders. The word imám, or leader, here, is interpreted in several other ways, meaning scripture, prophet, law, book of deeds. The last of these significances also suits the context, as the books of deeds are spoken of in the following words; elsewhere, also, the Holy Qur-án says: Every nation shall be called to its book (45 : 28).

1451 This book is the one mentioned in v. 14, i.e. the effect of one's deeds, which shall be brought before every one in palpable form on the resurrection day.

1452 This verse gives us the guiding rule in determining what hellish life is and when it begins. We are here told in plain words that those who remain blind to truth in this life remain blind in the life after death, which shows in the first place that it is here that a hellish life begins with spiritual blindness; and secondly, that the hell of the next life is also a blindness. This is corroborated by what is said in 57:14, that the faithful shall have a light on that day, and the hypocrites shall ask for that light from them, but they shall not be allowed to have it, and this will be their torment.

1453 كاد يفعل كذا means he was near doing it as well as he purposed or intended to do it. For the latter significance, which I adopt here as suiting the context, see LL, who quotes Lth, M, and other authorities, in the article Kaud. The interpretation adopted by Rodwell and Palmer, they had well-nigh beguiled thee, and a somewhat similar translation given by Sale, is wrong, as it contradicts the statement made in the very next verse, according to which the Holy Prophet had already been so firmly established in the path of truth that he was not even near to inclining to them a little.

The commentators think the allusion to be to an incident which happened at Medina long after the revelation of this chapter. On the contrary, there is a clear and well-authenticated incident regarding the attempt of the Quraish at Mecca which, both as regards the offer of the Quraish and the firm reply of the Holy Prophet, exactly fits in with the statement of this verse and the one that follows. The Christian annotators are ever ready to distort the words, so as to make them allude to the supposed "lapse" of the Holy Prophet, but I leave that incident for discussion in its proper place (2382). The incident which I think is alluded to here is given in Ibn-i-Hishám. The chief men of the Quraish met in an assembly and invited the Prophet, saying to him that they were prepared to gather for him wealth or to make him their king if only he left them and their idols to do as they liked. The Prophet's reply was that he wanted neither of these things, but that it was for their welfare that he asked them to give up evil ways. On an earlier occasion, when a deputation of the Quraish went to Abú Ṭálib, the Prophet's uncle, to prevail upon him to dissuade the Prophet from speaking of their idols, and Abú Ṭálib told the Prophet that he too was unable to defend him against the Quraish, his reply was: "If they place the sun in my right hand and the moon in my left and ask me to give up my mission, I will not give it up until the truth prevails or I myself perish in the attempt."

1454 The word iz-an (then or in that case) refers to the concluding words of the last verse. The verse makes it clear that notwithstanding all the attempts of his opponents the Holy Prophet never inclined to them in the least. This is quite true in the light of the events narrated above, but, supposing for the sake of argument that there is a reference here to the alleged "lapse," the plain words of the Holy Qur-án negative any lapse, for the lapse should have been followed by a double punishment, which never happened.

1455 When the opponents failed to make the Prophet swerve from the path of truth, they planned to expel him from the land, though they were told beforehand that in that case, i.e. in case they expelled him from Mecca, they themselves should not stay behind him but for a short time. This prophecy speaks of the conquest of Mecca by the Holy Prophet in self-evident terms.

1456 It is stated here to be the Divine law, with regard to those who expel their prophets from their homes, that they themselves are destroyed in their turn. And this law, the verse states, would not be changed in the case of the Holy Prophet Muhammad, may peace and the blessings of Allah be upon him!

1457 From the declining of the sun to sunset are two prayers, i.e. the zuhr and 'aṣr, or the afternoon and later afternoon prayers, while from sunset till darkness there are two others, i.e. the maghrib and the 'ishá, or the sunset prayer and the prayer of nightfall, and the fifth is the morning prayer, which is called here the Qur-án-ul-fajr, or the morning Qur-án or morning recitation. Thus this verse mentions all the five prayers.

1458 Tahajjud is derived from hajada, which means he slept in the night, and also he was wakeful in the night (LA-LL). The addition of by it, meaning by means of prayer, shows the latter significance to be the one meant here. In Islamic religious terminology tahajjud invariably denotes the prayer said after rising from sleep, usually after midnight.

1459 Another clear promise that the very man whom the opponents had planned to expel from their city as a helpless man was to be raised to a position of eminent dignity. As time passes on the Prophet is ever rising to positions of greater and greater glory, and it is impossible to conceive of the resplendent glory to which he would rise in the resurrection.

1460 By the entering is meant the entry into the new place, i.e. Medina, after his flight, and by going forth, the flight from Mecca (JB, Kf).

1461 The coming of the Prophet is here spoken of as the coming of the Truth, in reference to the prophecy in John 16 : 13 as to the coming of the "Spirit of Truth" to guide men into all truth: "Howbeit when he, the Spirit of Truth, is come, he will guide you into all truth; for he shall not speak of himself, but whatsoever he shall hear, that shall he speak; and he will show you things to come." No one has appeared in the world after Jesus Christ answering this description except the Holy Prophet Muhammad. Of him the Holy Qur-án says in one of the earliest chapters: "Nor does he speak out of desire; it is naught but revelation that is revealed" (52 : 3, 4). And he it was who showed the things to come, his prophecies affording the clearest evidence of his truth. And again, he it was who claimed that he was the truth that was to come. And the disappearance of falsehood from Arabia before his eyes showed the truth of his assertion.

The vanishing of the falsehood is here spoken of in the past tense to indicate the certainty of its occurrence. Falsehood finally disappeared from Mecca when the Prophet re-entered it as a conqueror, and as the House of the Holy One was cleared of the idols, the Prophet recited this verse, the truth has come and falsehood vanished (Bkh), thus showing that he understood it to contain the prophecy of the conquest of Mecca.

1462 Because in rejecting it they were rejecting the remedy of their diseases and depriving themselves of the mercy sent through it.

1463 So He will make it clear by bringing about a distinction between the righteous and the wicked.

The Qur-án is a Wondrous Miracle

Ar. thee. Ar. thou wouldst.

87 But on account of mercy from your Lord—surely His grace to you is abundant.

وَقَالُوا لَن نُّؤْمِنَ لَكَ

1464 For the word rúḥ, meaning inspiration or revelation, see 553. Here, before this verse as well as after it, the Qur-án is the only topic of discussion, and therefore the context shows clearly that the question of the unbelievers is not about the soul of man, for which the proper word is nafs, but about the Qur-án itself, i.e. the revelation or the spirit.

1465 The meaning is that if We take it away there is none who can bring it back to you, and thus be your protector as against Us.

1466 For the uniqueness of the Holy Qur-án see 36. It may be noted that out of the four places in which the unbelievers are challenged to produce the like of the Quranic revelation this is the only one where the jinn and the men are spoken of together; in all the other places the shuhadá, or the leaders, take the place of the jinn. Now the word jinni (plural jinn) is used in Arabic language as signifying a man acting with penetrative energy in his affair, as is clearly maintained by Tabrezi on Ham: thus, reading this verse along with the other verses bearing the same import, it becomes certain that the word jinn in this verse conveys the same significance as the word shuhadá in the other verses. This settles conclusively that the word jinn is used in the Holy Qur-án for evil-disposed men.

1467 Maṡal is synonymous with waṣf (Rgh), and thus a description of anything may be called its maṡal, though its application to a description by way of comparison or a parable is more general. It is here affirmed that all that contributes to the moral and spiritual welfare of man is made distinct in the Holy Qur-án.

1468 The signs demanded in this and the following three verses relate to the promises made for the righteous and the threats of punishment for the wicked, as given in the Qur-án, and they were no doubt fulfilled in their time. Gardens with fountains were given to the Prophet and his followers in the conquest of Mesopotamia ; the heaven came down upon the rejecters, in the form of famine and distresses, the angels came down in battles and wrought havoc among them, and lastly, the great Divine manifestation took place in the conquest of Mecca, which is termed the coming of Allah. The ascension to heaven had also taken place, and the Prophet had brought to them a book, but all this was accomplished gradually, as is the Divine law in the case of apostles.

1469 The answer to all the demands of the unbelievers is that the Prophet was only a mortal apostle, the import of these words being that all those prophecies which he had made regarding his own great future or the discomfiture of his enemies would be brought to fulfilment gradually and in their time, and in the manner in which all prophecies are fulfilled, according to what has been the Divine law of the fulfilment of prophecies in the case of other mortal apostles.

1470 These nine signs are detailed in 935, where it is shown that they agree with the signs mentioned in Exodus. These signs are the rod, the shining hand, the drought, the loss of fruits, the widespread death, the locusts, the lice, the frogs, and the blood.

1471 Istafazza-hú means he unsettled him, and also he deceived him so as to cast him into destruction, and he slew him (TA-LL). Al-arḍ here means the face of the earth, not the land of Egypt.

1472 By the land is meant the land promised to the Israelites, to settle in which Moses asked Pharaoh to allow his people to leave Egypt.

1473 The latter promise here relates to the promise given to Moses for the raising up of another prophet like him. This is corroborated by what is said in the next verse about the revelation of the Qur-án, which came with truth, i.e. in fulfilment of a true promise. By the rolling up of the Israelites is meant that they would make way for another people.

1474 Allah's revealing the Qur-án with truth indicates His revealing it in fulfilment of prophecies which He had uttered by the mouths of His prophets; and the coming with truth signifies its actually fulfilling all those prophecies.

1475 The promise spoken of here is no doubt the promise given to the former prophets regarding the advent of the Holy Prophet; and by knowledge in the previous verse is also meant knowledge of the prophecies.

1476 The name Raḥmán, or the Beneficent God, seems to have been particularly objectionable to the Arabs, who objected to its use even so late as the truce at Hudaibiyyah, when the Quraish would not allow 'Ali to write بسم الله الرحمن الرحيم and insisted that he should commence the writing with باسمك اللهم The Christians also do not recognize Allah to be Raḥmán, because the attribute of raḥmániyyat signifies that Allah shows mercy to His creatures without their having done anything to deserve it, while the Christian doctrine of atonement is based on the belief that Allah cannot show mercy to His creatures because He must be just; an error due to the misapprehension that Allah cannot be Just and Merciful at one and the same time. No doubt a mere judge may be unable to show mercy, but Allah is more than a judge. He is a judge and cannot be unjust, but He is also the Master, and therefore Merciful to the sinners. To show mercy is not synonymous with being unjust.

1477 The two extremes with regard to prayer are its utterance in a very loud voice or not uttering any word at all with the tongue, which some people do on the assumption that Allah knows what is in their hearts. The Muslims are told to take the middle course between these two extremes.

THE CAVE

(Al-Kahf)

REVEALED AT MECCA

Abstract:

Sec. 1. A warning to Christians.

Sec. 5. A parable.
Sec. 6. The guilty are brought to judgment.

Sec. 12. Christian nations.

The Title.

IT will be seen from the above abstract that this chapter deals entirely with the Christian religion and the Christian nations. Not only is this evident from a perusal of, especially, the first and the last sections of the chapter, but the Holy Prophet is also related to have said that the first ten verses, and according to some the last ten verses, should be recited as a protection against the great tribulation of the latter days. Why is this chapter called the Cave, then? The cave has, in fact, much to do with the growth and progress of the Christian religion, because the distinctive characteristic of its early history is its institution of monkery, which required for its practice such corners of solitude as caves. And even the story of the Dwellers of the Cave may be interpreted as the story of the Christian religion, whose first condition was one of dwelling in caves in perfect seclusion, cut off from all connection with men, but whose last condition is quite contrary to it, so much so that its votaries have now devoted their entire energies to the betterment of their worldly condition, wholly neglecting the hereafter. They thus follow a way entirely opposite to that of the early Fathers of Christianity. And hence it is that this chapter, which, as it were, gives the whole history of Christianity, deals in its beginning with the connection of Christianity with the cave, i.e. with its institution of monkery, and at its close with its worldly occupations, which is its ultimate condition. Reference to both these aspects is contained in the epithet Aṣḥáb-ul-kahf-i-warraqím, i.e. the fellows of the cave and the inscription (see 1481).

Connection with the previous chapter.

The last chapter dealt with the Israelites and the punishment which they twice suffered. The second occasion was the one connected with the rejection of Jesus Christ, and hence the last chapter was brought to a close by pointing out the erroneousness of attributing a son to the Divine Being, while that very doctrine is denounced at the commencement of this chapter, thereby clearly establishing the connection of the two. Moreover, as Christianity

A Warning to the Christians

1–3. The Qur-án warns and gives good news. 4, 5. Doctrine of sonship is false. 6. Prophet's sorrow for the promoters of it. 7, 8. The luxuries of this life do not last for ever. 9. Dwellers of the cave. 10–12. Their previous history.

1 (All) praise is due to Allah, Who revealed the Book to His servant and did not make in it any crookedness.[1478]	الحمد لله الذي أنزل على عبده الكتب ولم يجعل له عوجا is really an outgrowth of the Judaistic religion, the mention of the one necessitates the mention of the other.

Subject-matter.

The chapter opens with a plain denunciation of the Christian doctrine of the sonship of Jesus, and then refers to the earthly "embellishments" which hinder the Christian nations from accepting the truth; yet, we are told, it was their ancestors who cut off all worldly connections for the sake of their religion. The second and the third sections deal with a certain story of Christian youths who sought refuge in a cave, but the story has evidently beneath it a deeper significance, and contains prophetical reference to the later history of Christianity itself. The fourth section shows that, the day of Christianity being over, true guidance was now offered in the Holy Qur-án. The fifth illustrates in a parable that the Christians shall reject the truth because of their greater power and wealth. The next two sections deal with the bringing of the guilty to judgment and their ultimate helplessness, while the one succeeding indicates how warning is disregarded when first given. The ninth and tenth sections take us back to the story of Moses, whose travels in search of knowledge make him discover a man of God far superior in knowledge to himself. If the story be taken as speaking of the Mi'ráj, or ascension, of Moses, it may be interpreted as affording a contrast between the narrow limits of the Mosaic dispensation and the universal nature and the high ideal of the Islamic dispensation. The eleventh section speaks of Darius I, the two-horned one of Daniel's vision, and of his great efforts against the two tribes known as Gog and Magog, the real object being a prophetical allusion to their latter-day representatives. The last section of the chapter again refers in plain language not only to the basic doctrine of the Christian religion, but also to the great ingenuity in manufactures of the nations professing that religion, whose labour is lost in this world's life, and thus draws a very true picture of the present condition of the Christian nations.

Date of revelation.

The whole of this chapter was revealed at Mecca, and most probably belongs to the Middle Meccan period, which may approximately be taken as extending from 4 to 8 B.H.

1478 The following saying of the Holy Prophet, which is treated as authentic in the most trustworthy collections of hadís, conclusively settles what is meant by the appearance of the Antichrist in the latter days. The report is to the following effect: Abú Dardá relates that the Prophet (may peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) said: He who remembers the first ten verses of the chapter entitled the "Cave" is protected from the tribulation of the Dajjál (Antichrist). Shi'ba mentions the last ten verses of the "Cave" instead of the first ten (Muslim).

Or, maintainer (of truth).

2 Rightly directing,[1478A] that he might give warning of severe punishment from Him and give good news to the believers who do good that they shall have a goodly reward,

3 Staying in it for ever;

4 And warn those who say: Allah has taken a son.

Now, according to this saying, the opening or the concluding ten verses of this chapter are a special safeguard against the Antichrist. If we now look for the subject specially dealt with in these verses, it will be found that both in the first and the last sections of this chapter the Christian doctrine of the divinity of Jesus is condemned. In the first section a warning is given to those who say Allah has taken to Himself a son, in the last to those who take human beings for gods, and both these doctrines are the fundamental doctrines of the Christian religion as now preached. The Holy Qur-án does not speak of the appearance of Dajjál, or Antichrist, anywhere, but the Prophet's saying quoted above plainly shows that what is called the Antichrist in the sayings of the Holy Prophet is the same as the erroneous Christian doctrine of the sonship and divinity of Jesus Christ as dealt with in the Holy Qur-án. Christianity in its present form, being opposed to the true teaching of Christ, is thus the only Antichrist known to the Qur-án. It may be added that Dajjál signifies one who conceals the truth with falsehood (LL), or a liar (TA-LL), or a great deceiver (LL).

1478A The Qur-án is here described as possessing two qualifications. The first refers to its own perfection in the words, did not make in it any crookedness, so that it is perfect in itself; and the second speaks of it as a book suited to make others perfect, for it is called qayyim as meaning one that rightly directs others without making them swerve to this or that side. Or it is called qayyim as regulating the affairs of men or as maintaining the spiritual truth, which indeed would have been entirely lost to the world but for its being guarded by the Holy Qur-án.

1479 This verse gives us an insight into the anxiety which the Holy Prophet had on account of a fallen humanity, an anxiety so great that he is spoken of here as almost killing himself with grief. His was a life of absolute devotion to the cause of humanity, his only concern being that man should rise to the true dignity for which God had made him. This anxiety was not only for those who were directly addressed by him, but, as the context shows, it was as deep for another people who attributed a son to the Divine Being, and whom outward finery was to mislead to such an extent as to make them strangers to spiritual truth. Reading the next verse along with this, no doubt is left that the Prophet was shown the earthly embellishments which are so great a trial for Christendom to-day.

8 And most surely We will make what is on it bare ground without herbage.[1480]

Ar. dost thou.

9 Or, do you think that the Fellows of the Cave and the Inscription were of Our wonderful signs?[1481]

10 When the youths sought refuge in the cave, they said: Our Lord! grant us mercy from Thee, and provide for us a right course in our affair.

11 So We prevented them from hearing in the cave for a number of years,[1482]

مِنْ أَمْرِنَا رَشَدًا ۝
فَضَرَبْنَا عَلَىٰ آذَانِهِمْ فِي الْكَهْفِ
سِنِينَ عَدَدًا ۝

The word ḥadīs means new or recent, and hence is applied to a narration or announcement which is new or which gives some new information. It here refers to the Qur-án.

1480 The 7th and the 8th verses direct man's attention to the fact that the finery of this life does not last for ever. The beautiful tracts of land and the fair cities of one age are built upon the ruins of another. A dweller of the desert of Arabia, with no sight before his eyes but that of the sands of the desert and bare and rugged hills, could not imagine the earth being embellished. The picture drawn here is evidently of beautiful cities with all their attractions and luxuries, which so engross men that they neither pay attention to the preaching of truth nor to the pursuit of righteousness. Yet where there is growth there is decay, and those who indulge in luxuries do not escape ruin; it is their ruin that is indicated in the words bare ground without herbage. Earthquakes and terrible wars lay waste most beautiful cities, and prophecies in the Gospel as well as in the Holy Qur-án clearly point to a time when nation shall rise against nation and great earthquakes will occur. The powerful hand of God is thus seen clearly working in the history of the world.

1481 Kahf signifies a cave as well as a place of refuge, and raqīm means an inscription or a tablet with a writing upon it. Now the cave, as I have already stated in the introduction to this chapter, stands for that peculiar aspect of the Christian religion which finds manifestation in its institution of monkery, this being the distinctive characteristic which it assumed soon after its birth. But what about the inscription? This word, I think, contains a prophetical reference to another aspect of the Christian religion quite opposed to its first aspect of growth in the cave. Inscription is, in fact, as prominent a feature of the business activities of the Christian nations of to-day as the cave was a feature of their religious activities in the early days, and the Holy Qur-án seems to have chosen these epithets to designate the Christian nations by thus indicating their most prominent characteristics in their early and latter days. The first and the last conditions of Christianity thus seem to be hinted at in the cave and the inscription respectively, a religion of monkery turned into a religion of business, the cave representing the former and the inscription the latter. As for the story of the dwellers of the cave, see 1483.

1482 Explaining this verse, TA says that the meaning of ضربنا على اذانهم is منعنا هم السمع i.e. we prevented them from hearing. This is Dk's explanation, and it is nearest the original sense of the words, for one significance of ḍaraba is sadda, i.e. he prevented (TA-LL). The preventing from hearing is then understood to be equivalent to causing to sleep, but the original meaning is favoured by the context, the significance being that these people remained cut off from the rest of the world for a number of years, so as not to hear much about what was happening in the outside world. Thus the Holy Qur-án neither supports the story of these men remaining in the cave for hundreds of years nor of their being actually in a condition of sleep all this while.

The Dwellers of the Cave

Ar. thee

13 We relate to you their story with the truth; surely they were youths who believed in their Lord and We increased them in guidance.[1483]

زِدْنٰهُمْ هُدًى ۝

1482A The raising them up might signify raising them up from sleep, as also raising them up into a condition of activity, after their remaining cut off from the world as stated in the previous verse. What this does mean with reference to the story itself or with reference to the history of Christianity is explained in the second and the third sections.

1483 The memorable story of the "seven sleepers," with whom the "Fellows of the Cave and the Inscription" are identified, is a story of the reign of the Emperor Decius. Seven noble youths of Ephesus, it is said, took refuge in a cave to escape Decius' persecution. But the Emperor, eventually learning this, ordered the entrance to the cave to be firmly secured with a pile of large stones. It is stated that the youths fell asleep as soon as they were shut up in the cave, and awoke 187 years after this in the reign of Theodosius, when the stones were removed by the slaves of one Adolius to supply building material for some edifice. They then sent one of their number, Jamblicus, to bring food for them from the city, but he was taken to the judge on presenting a coin of the reign of Decius, and thus the youths were discovered. It is related that the Emperor himself saw their radiant faces. This is the account given by Gibbon. But some state that these youths remained in that condition for 375 years.

That there may be a modicum of truth underlying this story is not only most probable, but almost certain, for the story could not otherwise have found such a wide prevalence. The story as narrated in the Qur-án does not credit the unnatural incidents of the above account. It only speaks of some men having taken refuge in a dark cave on account of a religious persecution; where and when it does not state. That is all that is stated in this section of the story, and apparently it seems to be continued in the third, while according to another view the third section may be a prophetic description of the later growth of Christianity itself. Taking, however, the first view, what is related in the third section is, that after they had rested for a part of a day, they made arrangements to get their food from outside, and remained in this condition probably for some years; but were subsequently discovered, and an edifice being built at the mouth of the cave caused them to perish. It mentions conjectures as to their number and the number of years they remained in the cave, but does not go beyond saying that they were some men who remained there for some years.

There is another very plausible suggestion that the persons referred to here were Joseph of Arimathæa and some other early Christians, their place of refuge being Glastonbury in England, which on account of its northern position well answers the description of the cave as given in the Qur-án. According to William of Malmesbury, Joseph of Arimathæa "was sent to Britain by St. Philip, and having received a small island in Somersetshire, there constructed with twisted twigs the first Christian church in Britain, afterwards to become the abbey of Glastonbury. The legend says that his staff planted in the ground became a thorn flowering twice a year" (En. Br. Art. "Joseph of Arimathæa"). In the tenth edition of En. Br. Joseph of Arimathæa is said to have "wandered into Britain in the year 63." "The Glastonbury thorn, which is said to be a distinct variety, was regularly visited by pilgrims

14 And We strengthened their hearts with patience, when they stood up and said: Our Lord is the Lord of the heavens and the earth; we will by no means call upon any god besides Him, for then indeed we should have said an extravagant thing:[1483A]

15 These our people have taken gods besides Him: why do they not produce any clear authority in their support: who is then more unjust than he who forges a lie against Allah?

16 And when you forsake them and what they worship save Allah, betake yourselves for refuge to the cave; your Lord will extend to you largely of His mercy and provide for you a profitable course in your affair.

Ar. thou mightest.

17 And you might see the sun when it rose decline from their cave towards the right hand, and when it set leave them behind on the left while they were in a wide space thereof. This is of the signs of Allah; whomsoever Allah guides, he is the rightly guided until it was destroyed about the Reformation times." Again we find in the En. Br., under Glastonbury: "According to the legends which grew up under the care of the monks, the first church of Glastonbury was a little wattled building erected by Joseph of Arimathæa as the leader of the twelve apostles sent over to Britain from Gaul by St. Philip." The legends of the "Holy Grail" again connect the name of Joseph of Arimathæa with Britain. According to one of these the Grail, which was the dish of the last supper, was confided to the care of Joseph, while according to another, "the Grail is said to have followed Joseph to Britain" (En. Br., Art. "Grail"). All these may be legends, but they are certainly not without an undercurrent of truth. The connection of the name of Joseph of Arimathæa with Britain is the strong central fact underlying them all. What makes it still more significant is the fact that Joseph of Arimathæa, who appears very prominently in the closing scenes of the Gospels, so much so that one Gospel looks upon him as a disciple of Jesus, altogether disappears from the history of Christianity as imaged in the exertions of the apostles. Does this not show that he had changed the scene of his exertions? May then Joseph of Arimathæa and his companions be taken as being referred to in the story of the "Fellows of the Cave and the Inscription"? If an answer could be found in the affirmative, then England could definitely be said to be the cave referred to in the Holy Qur-án, and the description of the cave given in v. 17 well applies to it (see 1484). But even if our answer to that question is in the negative, the story itself is not without a deeper meaning, and more statements than one show that there is a reference to the history of Christianity itself in the story.

1483A This is to show that the early followers of Christianity were Unitarians.

1484 The verse does not speak of any miraculous change in the sun's course; it does not speak of any change at all. It simply describes the position of the cave, which was so situated that it did not admit sunshine. This could easily happen in a cave with its mouth to the north (situated in the northern hemisphere and above the tropic of Cancer). In fact, the description applies to any country in the northern hemisphere north of the tropic of Cancer. It may be noted that it is only in the northern hemisphere, and in countries situated mostly to the north of Arabia, that the Christian nations have prospered. The whole of Europe thus, in one sense, answers the description of the cave.

1485 What is related in this section is clearly applicable to the story of the seven sleepers, as also to the later history of Christianity. Taking the first view, the meaning is that the youths who fled for fear of persecution and betook themselves to a cave slept for some time with a dog at the door of the cave. The whole scene was rather awe-inspiring; a dark cave, in some distant and uninhabited part of the country, with some men sleeping in it and a dog at the door, would have inspired awe into the heart of a casual looker-on. Applied to the history of Christianity the statement is equally true. In this case it should be borne in mind that ruqūd also means inactive, or stagnant. Thus, according to TA, رقد عن الامر means قعد و تاخر —i.e. he abstained or held back from the affair; and رقدت السوق is equivalent to كسدت i.e. the market became stagnant or dull with respect to traffic, and ruqūd is infinitive noun of raqada. Similarly aiqāẓ is plural of yaqiẓ, which means a man vigilant, wary, in a state of caution, or a man having his attention much roused (LL). According to TA you say تيقظ للامر meaning tanabbaha—i.e. he had his attention roused to the affair.

The turning about to the right and the left, which signifies an uneasy condition while sleeping, may be used as expressing the activities of a man or a nation. Thus there may be a reference here to the lethargy in which the Christian nations remained for a long time, and to their subsequent going about in the world to the right and to the left, i.e. spreading in all directions. While there is nothing strange in the persecuted men having taken a dog with them to guard them from wild animals, the fact that nowadays Europeans are very fond of dogs, and carry them about with them, is very significant, as showing that the reference here may also be to the later history of Christianity. The scene of a modern European house is on the whole so impressive, that the description given here of the cave is equally applicable to it.

19 And thus did We rouse them that they might question each other. A speaker among them said: How long have you tarried? They said: We have tarried for a day or a part of a day. (Others) said: Your Lord knows best how long you have tarried.[1486] Now send one of you with this silver (coin) of yours to the city, then let him see which of them has purest food, so let him bring you provision from it, and let him behave with gentleness, and by no means make your case known to any one:[1487]

20 For surely if they prevail against you they would stone you to death or force you back to their religion, and then you will never succeed.

21 And thus did We make (men) to get knowledge of them,[1488] that they might know that Allah's promise is true and that as for the hour there is no doubt about it.[1489] When they disputed among themselves about their affair and said: Erect an edifice over them[1490]—their Lord best knows them. Those who prevailed in their affair said: We will certainly raise a mosque over them.[1491]

1486 The TA gives labs, meaning as ibṭá, i.e. being slow or tardy or backward. The question and the answer may refer either to the time for which the youths slept or to the centuries of inactivity or tardiness of the Christian nations. A day of a thousand years is spoken of in the Holy Qur-án on more occasions than one (see 22:47, etc.), and therefore the word day, applied to the history of a nation, may signify a thousand years.

1487 The circumstances narrated in this passage do not call for any explanation. After having been refreshed with sleep, which might have been brought on by the fatigue of the journey, they might have thought of procuring food for themselves in that solitary cave. In reference to the history of Christianity, the passage may be said to speak of the commercial activities of the Christian nations.

1488 That is, they would have remained hidden had it not been for the necessities of life, which they had still to procure from the city. It was their going out to purchase food that brought them to the knowledge of the outside world. It is not stated how long they continued in this state: they may have passed some days or months or years, but their daily going out at last made their hiding-place known to others. Comparing this with v. 11, however, we may say that they passed several years in this condition, but that they passed two or three hundred years is nowhere stated in the Holy Qur-án. The underlying significance of these words as relating to the history of the Christian nations may be easily guessed.

1489 The result of their becoming known is described in words which show that they were put to death, because the promise of Allah as to a future state of life is fully realized only after death. The hour often denotes the doom of a people or a nation in this world, the time of their decay, and sometimes of their annihilation.

1490 These words show how their death was brought about; it was by closing the mouth of the cave. This is what is meant by the erection of an edifice over them. Or the words may signify the erection of a monument.

1491 The masjid, or the mosque, is the house of worship of the Muslims in particular.

1492 This verse and verse 25, coming as they do after the story is finished, show that these are only conjectures of the people with regard to them. Their number and the number of years during which they remained in the cave are both matters which are said to be only known to Allah. I'Ab is, however, of opinion that the words condemning the first two as conjectures show that the last-mentioned number—i.e. seven—is correct.

1493 The direction contained in these words is of a general nature, with special prophetic reference to the Prophet's flight and his taking refuge in a cave. It was not in his power to bring about this escape, and therefore it was not for him to say that he would do such and such a thing at such and such a time. He had entirely to trust in Allah, Who was to bring it about as He thought best for him.

1494 The meaning is that the difficulties which had to be experienced by the dwellers of the cave would be removed from the Prophet's way. He had to pass only three days in the cave, and though a powerful enemy exerted itself to its utmost, his hiding-place at only a distance of three miles from the city, whither food was conveyed to him, could not be discovered. Or, the meaning is that the Qur-án affords a better guidance.

25 And they remained in their cave three hundred years and (some) add (another) nine.[1495]

26 Say: Allah knows best how long they remained; to Him are (known) the unseen things of the heavens and the earth; how clear His sight and how clear His hearing![1496] There is none to be a guardian for them besides Him, and He does not make any one His associate in His judgment.

1495 There is not the least doubt that this verse is conjoined to v. 22, and the statement made here is one of the many conjectures regarding the period of their stay, the words and they say, occurring in the latter verse, being understood here. The words that follow, say: Allah knows best how long they remained, clearly show this to be the case. Some of the earliest commentators, Qatada among them, have held this opinion (Rz, JB); and the explanatory reading of Abdulla—and they say they remained . . . corroborates this view (Rz, Kf). But if the words are not taken as such, there may be a reference to the three centuries during which Christianity was more or less a persecuted religion in the Roman Empire, all persecution of Christians stopping with the conversion of Constantine. The special mention of the addition of nine years to three hundred seems to be due to their reduction to lunar years. It may be added that the Nicene Creed, which formulated the doctrine of the Trinity, was promulgated in the year 325 A.D., and thus the Christian religion may be said to have retained some of its purity for three centuries, after which the Trinitarian instead of the Unitarian religion became the state religion, and thus the partisans of Unity became more and more insignificant. Therefore the remaining in a cave for three hundred years may refer to the time during which Christianity suffered more or less from persecution and retained some of its original purity before Constantine's conversion.

1496 Palmer is right in noting that both Sale and Rodwell have translated the words ابصر به و اسمع wrongly, not understanding the Arabic idiom, but his own rendering, He can see and hear, does not make the sense of the original clear. The words signify, according to all Arabic grammarians and lexicologists, ما ابصر و اسمع which literally means, what a sight he has! what a hearing he has! and the idiomatic expression adopted in my translation is therefore the correct rendering.

1497 It is absurd to argue from this that the directions given through revelation to a people are unchangeable, in the sense that no man can add to or take away from them a word. By kalimāt are clearly meant here prophecies, because it is the prophecy of the Prophet's flight and his final triumph over his enemies that is dealt with here. These prophecies, it is claimed, cannot be altered by men, and they must come to pass however great the opposing forces.

1498 Because they will have only the effect of what they did. The water of spiritual life they had not had in this life, and so they shall not have any water in the life after death.

1499 It is after these things that men hanker in this life, but the ornaments and robes of this life are transitory. The righteous, who in this life desire and struggle for only spiritual ornaments and moral beauty, shall find these visible in after-life. It should, however, be borne in mind that these prophecies were brought to fulfilment in this very life. The Arabs, whose only wealth consisted of their camels and horses, and whose clothes were made of skins or rough textures, found the treasures of Rome and Persia laid at their feet, and the bracelets of gold and silk brocade interwoven with gold, which they had never seen, were now brought to them in abundance, while the gardens of Mesopotamia and Persia were given to them for a permanent heritage.

SECTION 5

A Parable

32 And set forth to them a parable of two men; for one of them We made two gardens of grape-vines, and We surrounded them both with palms, and in the midst of them We made cornfields.[1500]

33 Both these gardens yielded their fruits, and failed not aught thereof, and We caused a river to gush forth in their midst, 34 And he possessed much wealth; so he said to his companion, while he disputed with him: I have greater wealth than you, and am mightier in followers.

Ar. thou.

35 And he entered his garden while he was unjust to himself. He said: I do not think that this will ever perish,

36 And I do not think the hour will come, and even if I am returned to my Lord I will most certainly find a returning-place better than this.[1501]

37 His companion said to him while disputing with him: Do you disbelieve in Him who created you from dust,[a] then from a small life-germ,[b] then He made you a perfect man?

Ar. dost thou.
Ar. thee.

38 But as for me, He, Allah, is my Lord, and I do not associate any one with my Lord:

39 And wherefore did you not say when you entered your garden: It is as Allah has pleased, there is no power save in Allah? If you consider me

Ar. didst thou.

1500 The parable—it is clearly called a parable and is not at all a story—set forth here is undoubtedly a parable to illustrate the condition of those possessing abundance of wealth and the Muslims. The former received an abundance of the wealth of this life, as is indicated by the gardens of the parable, while the latter, though poorer in worldly possessions, were richer in the heavenly blessings of Allah. The former reject the message of truth—of which the latter are the bearers—and their vaunt is the same as that of the wealthy man in the parable: I have greater wealth than you, and am mightier in followers.

1501 By the "hour" is meant the hour of doom which must overtake every people who heedlessly reject the truth.

Ar. thee. to be inferior to you in wealth and children :

40 Then maybe my Lord will give me what is better than
Ar. thy. your garden, and send on it a
Or, thunder-bolts. reckoning from heaven, so that it shall become even ground without plant :

41 Or its waters should sink down into the ground so that
Ar. thou art. you are unable to find it.

42 And his wealth was destroyed; so he began to wring his hands[1502] for what he had spent on it, while it lay, having fallen down upon its roofs, and he said : Ah me! would that I had not associated any one with my Lord.

43 And he had no host to help him besides Allah, nor could he defend himself.

44 Here is protection only Allah's, the True One; He is best in (the giving of) reward and best in requiting.

The Guilty are brought to Judgment

45, 46. Transitoriness of the adornments of this life. 47–49. The guilty confronted with what they did.

45 And set forth to them the parable of the life of this world : like water which We send down from the cloud so the herbage of the earth
Ar. tangled becomes luxuriant on account of it, then it becomes dry, broken into pieces which the winds scatter; and Allah is the holder of power over all things.

46 Wealth and children are an adornment of the life of this world; and the ever-abiding, the good works, are better with
Ar. thy. your Lord in reward and better in expectation.

1502 The original words are يقلب كفيه literally meaning he turns his hands over and over or upside down (Kf). But تقليب الكفين being the action of him who is repenting or grieving, the phrase is used in the sense of repentance or grief; the English idiom to wring the hands comes nearest to it in form and significance.

47 And the day on which We will cause the mountains to pass away and you will see the earth a levelled plain and We will gather them and leave not any one of them behind.[1503]

SECTION 7

Their Helplessness

50 And when We said to the angels: Make obeisance to Adam;[a] they made obeisance but Iblís (did it not).[b] He was of the jinn, so he transgressed the commandment of his Lord. What! would you then take him and his offspring for friends rather than Me, and they are your enemies? evil is (this) change for the unjust.[1505]

1503 Making the earth a levelled plain indicates the removal of all those mighty obstacles which stood in the way of the Prophet, and these are the mountains which shall be made to pass away. See 1604.

1504 This comprehensive book is the same as is spoken of in 17:13, 14, "And We have made every man's actions to cling to his neck, and We will bring forth to him on the resurrection day a book which he will find wide open—Read your book; your own self is sufficient as a reckoner against you this day." There is not the slightest action, good or bad, which does not leave its effect behind.

1505 Here Iblís is plainly declared to be one of the jinn or the evil spirits, so it is an error to take him for an angel or a good spirit. The spirit of evil is always rebellious, and it is against this that man is warned, so that he should resist every evil tendency.

51 I did not make them witnesses of the creation of the heavens and the earth, nor of the creation of their own souls; nor could I take those who lead (others) astray for aiders.

52 And on the day when He shall say: Call on those whom you considered to be My associates. So they shall call on them, but they shall not answer them, and We will make their union a perdition.[1506]

Or, cause a separation between them.

53 And the guilty shall see the fire, then they shall know that they are going to fall into it, and they shall not find a place to which to turn away from it.

SECTION 8

Warning is disregarded

54–57. Disregard of warning. 58. Merciful God defers punishment. 59. Their doom is appointed.

54 And certainly We have made distinct in this Qur-án every kind of description; and man is most of all given to contention.

55 And nothing prevents men from believing when the guidance comes to them, and from asking forgiveness of their Lord, except that what happened to the ancients should overtake them, or that the chastisement should come face to face with them.

Ar. the course of.

Or, of various sorts should come to.

56 And We do not send apostles but as givers of good news and warning, and those who disbelieve make a false contention that they may render null thereby the truth, and they take My communications and that with which they are warned for a mockery.

1506 Bain has three significances, viz. disunion, union, and between (LL), and maubiq means perdition or separation, or fatal enmity (TA). I prefer the meaning which Farrá and Sairafí adopt, leaving the alternative significance to the margin. The meaning in the former case is that the very union which exists between the leaders of evil and the evil-doers will become a cause of their perdition.

57 And who is more unjust than he who is reminded of the communications of his Lord, then he turns away from them and forgets what his two hands have sent before? Surely We have placed veils over their hearts lest they should understand it and a heaviness in their ears; and if you call them to the guidance, they will not ever follow the right course in that case.[1507]

Moses' Travels in search of Knowledge

60 And when Moses said to his servant:[1510] I will not cease until I reach the junction of the two rivers[1511] or I will go on for years.[1512]

وَإِذْ قَالَ مُوْسٰى لِفَتٰىهُ لَآ أَبْرَحُ

1507 How clearly is stated here again when it is that veils are placed over hearts; it is when man becomes so iniquitous as to turn away from the truth and so callous as not to care for the evil that he does. He hardens his heart and refuses to listen; hence a veil is placed over his heart and there is a heaviness in his ears.

1508 The appointed time referred to is the battle of Badr, in which the power of the Quraish was crushed (Kf). Or, the reference may be to latter-day opposition.

1509 The personal pronoun their refers to the opponents of the Holy Prophet.

1510 Some reports give his name as Joshua son of Nún, being the man who afterwards appears so prominently in the history of Israel. The Qur-án, however, does not give his name.

The incidents narrated in the ninth and the tenth sections may be the actual experience of Moses or this journey may simply be an ascension of Moses, like the ascension of the Holy Prophet referred to in the last chapter. What is stated in the next section makes the latter view more probable, but even taking it to be an actual journey in search of knowledge, there is nothing improbable in it. See next foot-note.

1511 The words مجمع البحرين have been misunderstood generally. It should be borne in mind that Moses lived in Egypt for forty years, and the junction of the two rivers

1512, see next page.

61 So when they had reached the junction of the two (rivers), they forgot their fish, and it took its way into the sea, going away.[1513]

62 But when they had gone farther, he said to his servant: Bring to us our morning meal, certainly we have met with fatigue from this our journey.

63 He said: Did you see when we took refuge on the rock, then I forgot the fish, and nothing made me forget it but the devil, and it took its way into the river; what a wonder![1514]

Ar. didst thou.

64 He said: This is what we sought for; so they returned retracing their footsteps.

65 Then they found one from among Our servants whom We had granted mercy is no other than the junction of the two great branches of the Nile at Khartoum, one of which is called the Baḥr-ul-Abyaḍ or the White Nile and the other the Baḥr-ul-Aswad or the Blue Nile. That the story of this journey of Moses is not found in the Bible or even in Rabbinical literature is no argument against it. The Rabbinical literature relates things about Moses which give us strong reason to believe that such a journey was very probably undertaken by him. South of Egypt was the kingdom of Ethiopia, whose southern boundary reached Khartoum, or the junction of the two Niles, and various accounts met with both in Rabbinical and Hellenistic literature (see Jewish Encyclopædia) agree that Moses went to Ethiopia. According to one of these accounts he became king of Ethiopia by reason of his great prowess in having defeated an enemy, and married the king's widow. This is corroborated to some extent by the statement in the Bible that "Miriam and Aaron spoke against Moses because of the Ethiopian woman whom he had married" (Num. 12:1). Hence a journey to Khartoum, which was near the southern boundary of Ethiopia, made in search of knowledge is most probable. Some commentators, however, do not take the words majma'-ul-Baḥrain literally, and consider the meaning to be a union of two persons, who are compared to two oceans of human and Divine knowledge. I would, however, suggest that if we accept this journey in the light of an ascension it would be an indication of the limitation of the Mosaic dispensation. Moses' going on for years until he reached the Majma'-ul-Baḥrain would mean that the Mosaic dispensation would see its termination after a time; the new dispensation taking its place being one which was to be guided by a prophet who is described here as being the Majma'-ul-Baḥrain, i.e. the union of the two seas of human and Divine knowledge, or one in whom the temporal and the spiritual would find their highest manifestation, such being the Holy Prophet Muhammad, may peace and the blessings of Allah be upon him.

1512 Ḥuqub signifies a long time (Bḍ), or a year or seventy years or eighty years.

1513 The loss of the fish was, according to a report, to serve as a sign that the goal had been attained (Bkh). There is nothing either in the Holy Qur-án or in the report to show, however, that this was a roasted fish.

1514 The taking of refuge on the rock shows that they were staying at a place which was flooded by the river, and Moses' companion, when fleeing for refuge, forgot to take the fish along with him. The wonder is not expressed at the fish having gone down into the river, but because he had forgotten to mention the loss to Moses.

1515 The interpretation of the three incidents shows a manifestation of Divine wisdom in what takes place in the everyday life of man. Divine laws as manifested in nature are really working towards ultimate good, though sometimes they may appear to the outward eye to be working to the detriment of somebody. The beneficent hand of Allah that works in nature is always directing humanity to the goal of great good, though that goal must necessarily be reached with apparent loss. Sometimes the loss is only apparent, as in the case of making a hole in the boat; there was no real loss, but the apparent loss served a great purpose and brought much benefit to the owner. The second instance is that in which there is real loss to a person, but it is for the good of humanity at large, for life must be sacrificed for the ultimate good of humanity. The third instance shows that for the good of humanity deeds must be done which bring no immediate reward, and that good done by one generation is not devoid of benefit to the next.

Moses himself had, in fact, to undergo the experience of his teacher, and the incidents seem no more than prophetic allegories of Moses' own life-work. Just like the scuttling of a boat which causes apprehension as to the safety of its inmates, Moses had to lead his people to a place where they thought they had only been brought to be drowned; but their safe passage through the water showed that it was for their good. Then he had to order his men to fight against iniquitous people and to put them to death, but he was not shedding human blood to no purpose, for it was really a step towards the evolution of a better race. And finally, his laying down his own life for the Israelites—descendants of a righteous man—corresponded to his teacher's building the wall for the orphans without claiming recompense. Read in this light, the narration is clearly an ascension of Moses, foreshadowing the great events which were to befall him.

80 And as for the boy, his parents were believers and we feared lest he should make disobedience and ingratitude to come upon them:

وَأَمَّا الْغُلٰمُ فَكَانَ أَبَوٰهُ مُؤْمِنَيْنِ فَخَشِيْنَآ أَنْ يُّرْهِقَهُمَا طُغْيَانًا وَّكُفْرًا ۝

81 So we desired that their Lord might give them in his place one better than him in purity and nearer to having compassion:

فَأَرَدْنَآ أَنْ يُّبْدِلَهُمَا رَبُّهُمَا خَيْرًا مِّنْهُ زَكٰوةً وَّأَقْرَبَ رُحْمًا ۝

82 And as for the wall, it belonged to two orphan boys in the city, and there was beneath it a treasure belonging to them, and their father was a righteous
Ar. thy. man; so your Lord desired that they should attain their maturity and take out their
Ar. thy. treasure, a mercy from your Lord, and I did not do it of my own accord.[1516] This is the significance of that with which you could not have patience.

وَأَمَّا الْجِدَارُ فَكَانَ لِغُلٰمَيْنِ يَتِيْمَيْنِ فِي الْمَدِيْنَةِ وَكَانَ تَحْتَهُ كَنْزٌ لَّهُمَا وَكَانَ أَبُوْهُمَا صَالِحًا فَأَرَادَ رَبُّكَ أَنْ يَّبْلُغَآ أَشُدَّهُمَا وَيَسْتَخْرِجَا كَنْزَهُمَا رَحْمَةً مِّنْ رَّبِّكَ وَمَا فَعَلْتُهُ عَنْ أَمْرِيْ ذٰلِكَ تَأْوِيْلُ مَا لَمْ تَسْطِعْ عَّلَيْهِ صَبْرًا ۝

The Two-horned One and Gog and Magog

Ar. thee. 83 And they ask you about Zulqarnain.[1517] Say: I will recite to you an account of him.

وَيَسْـَٔلُوْنَكَ عَنْ ذِي الْقَرْنَيْنِ قُلْ سَأَتْلُوْا عَلَيْكُمْ مِّنْهُ ذِكْرًا ۝

84 Surely We established him in the land and granted him means of access to every thing,

إِنَّا مَكَّنَّا لَهُ فِي الْأَرْضِ وَآتَيْنٰهُ مِنْ كُلِّ شَيْءٍ سَبَبًا ۝

1516 This shows that it was meant to be only a lesson for Moses.

1517 The word zulqarnain literally means the two-horned one. The reference is to the two-horned ram of Daniel's vision (Dan. 8:3), which he interpreted as the kingdom of Media and Persia, which were combined into a single kingdom under one ruler, Cyrus, who is erroneously called Darius in the Bible (En. Bib. and Jewish En., Art. "Darius"). The reference in Daniel's vision is, however, not to Cyrus but to Darius I Hystaspis (521–485 B.C.), "who allowed the Jews to rebuild their temple, and is referred to in Ezra 4:5, 24; 5:5; 6:1; Hag. 1:1; 2:10; Zech. 1:17, and probably in Neh. 12:22. His liberality towards the Jews is in complete accord with what we know otherwise of his general policy in religious matters towards the subject nations" (En. Bib. "Darius").

That "the two-horned ram" of Daniel's vision is the king of Media and Persia is made plain in Daniel's book, where the interpretation of the dream is given in the following words: "The ram which thou sawest having two horns are the kings of Media and Persia" (Dan. 8:20). That the reference in the Qur-án in the history of Zulqarnain is to Darius I is clear from the fact that "Darius was the organizer of the Persian Empire. His conquests served to round out the boundaries of his realm in Armenia, the Caucasus, and India, and along the Turanian steppes and the highlands of Central Asia" (Jewish En., "Darius I"). The following remarks in the En. Br. strengthen this view: "Darius in his inscriptions appears as a fervent believer in the true religion of Zoroaster. But he was also a great statesman and organizer.

The time of conquests had come to an end; the wars which Darius undertook, like those of Augustus, only served the purpose of gaining strong natural frontiers for the empire and keeping down the barbarous tribes on its borders. Thus Darius subjugated the wild nations of the Pontic and Armenian mountains, and extended the Persian dominion to the Caucasus; for the same reason he fought against the Sacæ and other Turanian tribes." The references in this quotation to Darius being a fervent believer in the true religion of Zoroaster, to his subduing the barbarous tribes on the borders, to his gaining strong natural frontiers for the empire, and to his fighting against the Sacæ clearly point him out as the Zulqarnain of the Qur-án.

1518 Maghrib-ush-shams, or the place where the sun set, signifies the westernmost point of his empire, because going towards the west he could not go beyond it, and to him it was the place where the sun set.

1519 The words in Arabic are عين حمئة which literally mean a black sea, 'ain meaning an abundance of water, or a place in which water remains and collects (TA-LL), and ḥame'ah meaning black mud (TA-LL). The place referred to is no other than the Black Sea, as, Armenia being within the kingdom of Persia, the Black Sea formed the north-western boundary of the empire.

1520 Being a true follower of Zoroaster, the well-known Persian prophet, Darius seems to have invited these tribes to his religion.

1521 The three journeys alluded to seem to have been undertaken with the object of strengthening the frontiers of the empire, the most important of these being directed to the part of the frontier between the Caspian and the Black Seas, where the Caucasus afforded a natural protection against the attacks of the Scythians. Darius goes first westward to the Black Sea, then eastward, and lastly northward to Mount Caucasus. The description of the people found here as a people who had no shelter from the sun is a description of the barbarous aboriginal tribes on the shores of the Caspian. The En. Br. says in the article on Media: "The names in the Assyrian inscriptions prove that the tribes in the Zagros and the northern parts of Media were not Iranians nor Indo-Europeans, but an aboriginal population, like the early inhabitants of Armenia, perhaps connected with the numerous tribes of the Caucasus. We can see how the Iranian element gradually became dominant: princes with Iranian names occasionally occur as the rulers of these tribes. But the Gelæ, Tapuri, Cadusii, Amardi, Utii, and other tribes in Northern Media and on the shores of the Caspian were not Iranians."

1522 The two mountains are the mountains of Armenia and Azarbaijan. The people settling there spoke a different language and could not understand the Iranian language.

1523 This verse brings us face to face with an all-important subject—viz. the identity of Gog and Magog. The Bible references to Gog and Magog are somewhat loose. In Gen. 10:2 and 1 Chron. 1:5, "Magog is mentioned as the second son of Japheth, between Gomer and Madai, Gomer representing the Cimmerians and Madai the Medes. Magog must be a people located east of the Cimmerians and west of the Medes. But in the list of nations, Gen. 10, the term connotes rather the complex of barbarian peoples dwelling at the extreme north and north-east of the geographical survey covered by that chapter. . . . In Ezek. 38:2 Magog occurs as the name of a country; in Ezek. 39:6 as that of a northern people, the leader of whom is Gog" (Jewish En., Art. "Gog and Magog"). "Josephus identifies them with the Scythians, a name which among the classical writers stands for a number of unknown ferocious tribes. According to Jerome, Magog was situated beyond the Caucasus near the Caspian Sea" (Jewish En.). The En. Br. considers the traditional identification of Gog and Magog with the Scythians to be "plausible." In fact, it not only considers the opinion of Josephus and Jerome identifying Gog and Magog with the Scythians to be plausible, but also adds that "this plausible opinion has been generally followed," with this reservation, that the word may be applied to "any or all of the numerous but partially known tribes of the north; and any attempt to assign a more definite locality to Magog can only be very hesitatingly made."

All these writers have, however, not paid sufficient attention to the words of Ezek. 38:2, "Gog, the land of Magog, the chief prince of Meshech and Tubal." Tubal and Meshech are almost always mentioned together, and their identification has been a task of great difficulty, so much so that a renowned Biblical critic suggests the names of certain nations in South Palestine. But this contradicts the views of ancient writers like Josephus, who settle the Magog north of the Caucasus. If we go, however, to the north of Caucasus we find still two rivers bearing the names of Tobal and Moskoa, on the latter of which is situated the ancient city of Moscow, and on the former the more recent town of Tobolsk. It seems almost certain that these two rivers received their names from the two tribes of Ezek. 38:2, the Tubal and Meshech, and then gave their names to the two above-mentioned cities, thus keeping the names of these tribes. This view is in accordance with the opinion of Josephus, who identifies Magog with the Scythians, for "throughout classical literature Scythia generally

95 He said: That in which my Lord has established me is better, therefore you only help me with workers, I will make a fortified barrier between you and them; meant all regions to the north and north-east of the Black Sea, and a Scythian any barbarian coming from these parts."

It is clear from the above that the name Magog stands for tribes which occupied territories to the north and north-east of the Black Sea, tribes which gave their names directly or indirectly to the towns of Tobolsk and Moscow.

There is, however, another point worth considering, and that is the gigantic effigies of Gog and Magog in Guildhall, London. "It is known," says the En. Br., "that effigies similar to the present existed in London as early as the time of Henry V." An explanation of this remarkable circumstance is given by Geoffrey of Monmouth: "Gaemot or Gaemagot (either corrupted from or corrupted into Gog and Magog) was a giant who, along with his brother Gorineus, tyrannized in the western horn of England until slain by foreign invaders" (En. Br., Art. "Gog and Magog"). It is very difficult to speak with anything bordering on accuracy about the early connections of different races, but the preservation of the effigies of Gog and Magog in England, which can be traced to a very early period in English history, makes it probable that the Angles or the Saxons had in very ancient times some connection with the Scythians or other tribes living north of the Caucasus or the Black Sea. The relations of the different nations in early history are very complicated, and it is out of place to enter into any such discussion here. But it may be noted that the Goths, who are considered to be the easternmost of the Teutonic races, are said to have migrated into Scythia (En. Br., "Goths"), which shows the existence of connection between the two races. And again, "the Batharnæ also, who in the third century B.C. invaded and settled in the regions between the Carpathians and the Black Sea, are said by several ancient writers to have been Teutonic by origin, though they had largely intermarried with the native inhabitants" (En. Br., "Teutonic Peoples").

Next we come to the statement that the tribes found by Darius between Azerbaijan and the Armenian mountains were constantly harassed by their northern neighbours, the Scythians. History bears evidence to the truth of this statement. The Scythians, or, according to some writers, the Sacæ, constantly troubled Asia. According to Herodotus the Scyths ruled Media for twenty-eight years (En. Br., Art. "Scythia"). "About 512 Darius undertook a war against the Scythians. . . . The purpose of this war can only have been to attack the nomadic Turanian tribes in the rear, and thus to secure peace on the northern frontier of the empire" (En. Br., Art. "Darius"). The portion which I give in italics shows that Darius exerted himself to his utmost in securing peace on the northern frontier of his empire, where the Caucasus, bounded on both sides by the Black and Caspian Seas, afforded a natural protection.

The barrier referred to in this verse, and described in the verses that follow, is the famous wall at Derbent (Ar. Darband). An account of this wall is given by Muslim geographers and historians, for instance, in Marásid-ul-Ittila' and Ibn-ul-Faqíh. The following account, however, taken from the Encyclopædia Britannica, should be more convincing: "Derbent or Darband, a town of Persia, Caucasia, in the province of Daghestan, on the western shore of the Caspian. . . . It occupies a narrow strip of land beside the sea, from which it climbs up the steep heights inland. . . . And to the south lies the seaward extremity of the Caucasian wall (50 miles long), otherwise known as Alexander's Wall, blocking up the narrow pass of the Iron Gate or Caspian Gate (Portus Albanæ, or Portus Caspæ). This, when entire, had a height of 29 feet and a thickness of about 10 feet, and with its iron gates and numerous watch-towers formed a valuable defence of the Persian frontier." (Italics in the last sentence are mine, for which see the next foot-note.) The misnomer Alexander's Wall seems to have been due to the mistake made by Muslim historians in supposing Zulqarnain to be Alexander.

1524 The blocks of iron were needed for the iron gates in the wall, for which see the concluding lines of the last note.

1525 The allusion here seems to be to some mighty conflict of the nations, and the words no doubt refer to some catastrophe like that which is predicted in the Gospels in the words: "For nation shall rise against nation, and kingdom against kingdom: and there shall be famines, and pestilences, and earthquakes, in divers places. All these are beginning of sorrows" (Matt. 24: 7, 8).

1526 These words clearly indicate that the Christians are meant here, because theirs is the most prominent example of having taken a servant of Allah for their God. Moreover, the last ten verses of this chapter are, according to a saying of the Holy Prophet (narrated in the Muslim), a protection against the Antichrist, thus showing that they contain a teaching that is an antidote against the poison of the erroneous doctrines of Christianity.

103 Say: Shall We inform you of the greatest losers in (their) deeds?

104 (These are) they whose labour is lost in this world's life and they think that they are well-versed in skill of the work of hands.[1527]

105 These are they who disbelieve in the communications of their Lord and His meeting, so their deeds become null, and therefore We will not set up a

106 Thus it is that their recompense is hell, because they disbelieved and held My communications and My apostles in mockery.

107 Surely (as for) those who believe and do good deeds, their place of entertainment shall be the gardens of Paradise, 108 Abiding therein; they shall not desire removal from them.

109 Say: If the sea were ink for the words of my Lord, the sea would surely be consumed before the words of my Lord are exhausted, though We were to bring the like of that (sea) to add thereto.[1529]

110 Say: I am only a mortal like you; it is revealed to me that your god is one God, therefore whoever hopes to meet his Lord, he should do good deeds, and not join any one in the service of his Lord.

1527 This is a clear description of the present attitude of the civilized nations to their moral and spiritual needs—their labour is entirely submerged in this world's life, and they cannot give a moment's consideration to the life after death, and their only qualification is that they are well versed in the skill of the work of their hands.

1528 Evil deeds have no weight or estimation in the sight of Allah, though they yield an evil fruit to the doer of them. Hence those who have performed no good deeds shall not have any "balance set up for them." By the deeds becoming null is meant that these deeds shall bring them no good in after-life; their exertions being entirely confined to this world, they had reaped whatever fruit these exertions could bring in this very life.

1529 This verse should be specially noted by those who think that the Qur-án supports the doctrine of Jesus' divinity by calling him His kalimah or word, for here the words of Allah are said to be so numerous that they cannot be exhausted by writing down. Hence, in the language of the Holy Qur-án, every creature of God is called His kalimah or word. See also 1956.

CHAPTER XIX

MARY

(M a r y a m)

REVEALED AT MECCA

(6 sections and 98 verses)

Abstract

Sec. 1. Zacharias and John.
Sec. 2. Mary and Jesus.
Sec. 3. Abraham.
Sec. 4. Other prophets.
Sec. 5. How the opponents were dealt with.
Sec. 6. False doctrine of sonship.

The Title and connection.

THE controversy with Christianity is continued in this chapter, and the title is taken from the name of Jesus' mother, Mary; the circumstances connected with her having given birth to Jesus are narrated here. But while the last chapter deals at greater length with the history of Christianity than with its doctrines, this devotes considerable space to the falsity of the Christian religious dogmas, which it shows to be absolute innovations and quite foreign to the teachings of all the prophets.

Subject-matter.

The first two sections deal with the last representatives of prophecy in the house of Israel, viz. John and Jesus. The false doctrines that grew up round the name of the latter are clearly denounced at the end of the second section; the history of Abraham in the third, and that of some other prophets in the fourth, are referred to as showing that Allah always sent men as His prophets to reform the world. Towards the close of the fourth section it is stated that mere faith unattended with good deeds or righteousness is as nothing, and cannot benefit a people except when it is translated into practice. The fifth section deals with the opponents of the prophets generally, while the sixth brings to a close the discussion of the Christian religion by outspokenly denouncing the false doctrine of the sonship of Jesus.

Date of revelation.

It is quite certain that the most important portion of this chapter, viz. that relating to the history of Mary and Jesus, was revealed early at Mecca, most probably about the fifth year of the Holy Prophet's mission, because this portion was recited by Ja'far, head of the first batch of the Muslim immigrants in Ethiopia, before the Christian king of that country, when a deputation of the Quraish urged the king to expel the Muslim refugees from his country. This incident cannot be later than the sixth year of the Prophet's mission, because the emigration took place in the fifth year, and the shelter which the Muslims found in a foreign land excited the jealousy of the Quraish, and they at once sent a deputation to the Negus for the purpose of misrepresenting the Muslim religion. From this it would appear at how early a date the

Zacharias and John

4 He said : My Lord ! surely my bones are weakened and my head flares with hoariness, and, my Lord ! I have never been unsuccessful in my prayer to Thee :

Or, grown weary.

5 And surely I fear my cousins after me, and my wife is barren, therefore grant me from Thyself an heir,[1531]

6 Who should inherit me and inherit from the children of Jacob, and make him, my Lord, one in whom Thou art well pleased.[1532]

كٓهٰيٰعٓصٓ
ذِكْرُ رَحْمَتِ رَبِّكَ عَبْدَهُ زَكَرِيَّا

Qur-án expressed its opinion of the Christian religion, vehemently denouncing its fundamental doctrines: They say: The Beneficent God has taken to Himself a son: certainly you have made an abominable assertion: the heavens may almost be rent thereat and the earth cleave asunder and the mountains fall down in pieces (vv. 88, 90). This quotation is a sufficient answer to the generality of Christian critics of Islam, who allege that the Holy Prophet's attitude towards the Christian religion was changed later. As the Qur-án has praised the virtues of nations unstintedly, so it has openly denounced their errors, and its attitude towards all other religions remained unchanged from the first to the last. This chapter contains the earliest notice of the Christian religion, which does not materially differ from what the latest revelation (for instance, ch. 5) contains.

1530 I make a slight departure in explaining the abbreviation at the commencement of this chapter from the usual interpretation put upon it. It is said that each of these letters stands for one of the names of the Divine Being, káf standing for káfí, i.e. sufficient, há for hádí, i.e. Guide, yá for يده فوق الايادى i.e. One whose power is above all powers, 'ain for 'Alím, i.e. Knowing, and ṣád for Ṣádiq, i.e. Truthful (JB, Kf, Rz). I make a departure in the interpretation of the letter yá, interpreting it as a letter of interjection meaning O, which is the interpretation unanimously adopted in the case of the same letter as occurring at the commencement of the 36th chapter. This appears to me to be much better, for in the abbreviations a letter generally stands for a single word throughout the Holy Qur-án. With this slight modification the five letters would mean Sufficient art Thou as a Guide, O Knowing, Truthful Lord ! Each letter in this case stands for a single word.

1531 His fear was due to their not leading righteous lives, so that he feared there should be none to lead people into the ways of righteousness after him.

7 O Zacharias! surely We give you good news of a boy whose name shall be John: We have not made before anyone his equal.[1533]

(Ar. thee.)

8 He said: O my Lord! when shall I have a son,[a] and my wife is barren, and I myself have reached indeed the extreme degree of old age?

(a 419.)

9 He said: So shall it be; your Lord says: It is easy to Me, and indeed I created you before, when you were nothing.

(Ar. thy. Ar. thee. Ar. thou wert.)

10 He said: My Lord! give me a sign. He said: Your sign is that you should not speak to the people three nights while in sound health.[1534]

(Ar. thy. Ar. thou shouldst.)

11 So he went forth to his people from his place of worship, then he made known to them that they should glorify (Allah) morning and evening.

12 O John! take hold of the Book with strength, and We granted him wisdom while yet a child,

يٰزَكَرِيَّآ اِنَّا نُبَشِّرُكَ بِغُلٰمِ ۣاسْمُهٗ يَحْيٰى ۙ لَمْ نَجْعَلْ لَّهٗ مِنْ قَبْلُ سَمِيًّا ۝

قَالَ رَبِّ اجْعَلْ لِّيْٓ اٰيَةً ۗ قَالَ اٰيَتُكَ اَلَّا تُكَلِّمَ النَّاسَ ثَلٰثَ لَيَالٍ سَوِيًّا ۝

فَخَرَجَ عَلٰى قَوْمِهٖ مِنَ الْمِحْرَابِ فَاَوْحٰٓى اِلَيْهِمْ اَنْ سَبِّحُوْا بُكْرَةً وَّعَشِيًّا ۝

يٰيَحْيٰى خُذِ الْكِتٰبَ بِقُوَّةٍ ۗ وَاٰتَيْنٰهُ الْحُكْمَ صَبِيًّا ۝

1532 The inheritance from the children of Jacob is the inheritance of the Divine blessing of prophethood which had been promised to Jacob's children.

1533 Samí means a competitor, or contender for superiority in eminence or glory (TA-LL); hence also an equal, or a like (S, M, Q, TA-LL). The word occurs again in this chapter in v. 65 and bears the same meaning, not namesake, because there it is spoken about Allah. It is not of course meant that one like John or equal to him was never before created in the world (though Jesus Christ in Matt. 11:11 seems to hold this view, for he says: "Verily I say unto you, Among them that are born of women there hath not risen a greater than John the Baptist"), but the meaning is that one like him was not born in Zacharias' family, because in the previous verse it was his own relatives about whom Zacharias said that he feared them, and therefore an assurance was now given to him that the promised son would not be like the other members of his family whom he feared. Or the meaning may be that one like him had not appeared in that age.

1534 The word lail, i.e. night, is interpreted as including the day, as yaum, or day, includes the night. Moreover, in 3:40 the words are three days, thus showing that three days and three nights are meant. It should also be noted that the Qur-án does not support the idea that Zacharias was struck dumb, and seems to contradict the Bible narrative by saying here plainly that he was to observe this commandment though in sound health, such being the meaning of sawiyyá. The truth is here evidently on the side of the Qur-án, and the writer of the Gospel had clearly some misapprehension, for being struck dumb had no connection with being granted a son. According to the Holy Qur-án, the object of assuming silence was to be engaged solely in prayer to the Divine Being, and hence Zacharias told his people also to glorify God. The sign was given as an answer to his question, When shall I have a son? It implies that when he assumed silence for three days and nights, and glorified God alone during the time, his wife should conceive. See also 420.

1535 The various aspects of the character of John should be pondered over by the upholders of the exclusive innocence of Jesus Christ. John was pure and sinless and never disobeyed Allah. Nowhere is Jesus Christ praised in better words. The words, in fact, show that every prophet is pure and sinless and never disobeys Allah.

1536 This shows that it was in a vision that the angel came, and the conversation that follows also took place in a vision. The word tamassala used here lends support to this, for the word signifies assuming the likeness of another thing, and this happens only in vision. This is clear even if the ordinary significance given in the margin is adopted, for the spirit or angel of God appears to His chosen ones only in visions, and angels are not seen by the physical eye.

1537 It should be noted that Jesus is called here a ghulám, i.e. a boy, not kalimah (i.e. word) or rúḥ (i.e. inspiration), while the prophecy of his birth as announced to Mary is given in detail. This shows clearly that elsewhere the words kalimah or rúḥ only stand for the prophecy, while Jesus Christ was nothing more than a boy. The words I will give you a pure boy are the words of the revelation, and hence the speaker of these words is Allah. For such a construction, in which a part of the verse is put into the mouth of the angel, while the other part gives the word of Allah, see verse 21, where the words, and that We may make him a sign, seem to be spoken apparently by the angel, but are the words of the Divine Being.

and that We may make him a sign to men and a mercy from Us; and it is a matter which has been decreed.

22 So she conceived him; then withdrew herself with him to a remote place.

23 And the throes (of childbirth) compelled her to betake herself to the trunk of a palm-tree.[1538] She said: Oh, would that I had died before this, and had been a thing quite forgotten![1539]

24 Then (a voice) called out to her from beneath her: Grieve not, surely your Lord has made a stream to flow beneath you:

Ar thy.
Ar. thee.

25 And shake towards you the trunk of the palm-tree, it will drop on you fresh ripe dates:

Ar. thee.
Ar. thee.

26 So eat and drink and refresh the eye. Then if you see any mortal, say: Surely I have vowed a fast to the Beneficent God, so I shall not speak to any man to-day.

Ar thou seest.

27 And she came to her people with him, carrying him[1540] (with her). They said: O Mary! surely you have done a strange thing.[1541]

Ar. thou hast.
Or, brought something (strange), a forger of lies.

فَرِيًّا ۝

1539 This shows that Mary gave birth to Jesus under the ordinary circumstances which women experience in giving birth to children. The throes of childbirth were too severe for her to bear, and hence she gave utterance to such words. The reference to the throes of childbirth clearly shows that an ordinary human child was coming into the world, and thus it bespeaks a denial of his divinity. Or there may be a reference to Gen. 3:16, in sorrow thou shalt bring forth children. The object in either case is clearly to show that the birth of Jesus was not attended with any extraordinary circumstances, and that his mother brought him forth in the ordinary way, so his conception also could not have taken place otherwise than in the regular course of nature.

1540 The conversation that is related to have taken place in the verses that follow is alone sufficient to make it clear that the coming of Mary to her people with her son, as stated in this verse, relates to a time when Jesus had grown sufficiently old to have been raised to the dignity of a prophet, and to have received Divine revelation in the form of a book (as he speaks of having been given the book in v. 30). The commentators, merely because the verse follows one in which the birth of Jesus is spoken of, understand the verse to relate to a time when Jesus was as yet a baby. But it should be noted that the Holy 28 O sister of Aaron ![1542] your father was not a bad man, nor was your mother an unchaste woman.

Qur-án does not relate stories in all their details, and often omits a number of incidents which are not needed for its purpose. Compare, for instance, the 11th and 12th verses, the first of which relates only Zacharias' receiving the joyful news of a son, while the second asks that son to take hold of the Book with strength; and it would be as reasonable to infer from these two verses that John was born quite a grown-up man (as soon as the prophecy was announced) as to draw the conclusion from the verses under discussion that Jesus was taken to his people by his mother as soon as he was born, and that he immediately grew to the age of thirty-three years to declare that he was made a prophet. Jesus could only say that he was a prophet when he was actually entrusted with the mission of a prophet, and not before, and Jesus' address to his people, as related in vv. 30 and 31, clearly shows that he had already been entrusted with that mission. Moreover, it is too unreasonable to suppose that as soon as Mary gave birth to the child she took it to her people to make a show of it. The Qur-án, v. 22, states that she was then going to some remote place, and thus the incident related here could not have taken place immediately after delivery. But if then it could take place after the lapse of a year, why not after the lapse of thirty years? The word carrying does not show that she was carrying him in her arms, but it means that he was being carried on an animal. Compare 9:92, where some of the companions are spoken of as coming to the Prophet that he might carry them, and he is related as saying in reply that he had not that on which to carry them.

1541 While retaining the ordinary translation of the words لقد جئت شيئا فريا I give another significance of the words in the margin. If the ordinary rendering is adopted, the reference in Mary's doing (or, bringing) a strange thing may be to her having given birth to a son who claimed greater authority than the elders of Israel, with a deeper hint to the calumny against her, for which see 644 (4:156). But as the word fariyy clearly signifies a forger of lies, the alternative significance given in the margin better suits the context, and in the light of this rendering Jesus' reply is quite reasonable, for when the Jews called him a forger of lies, it was his duty to rebut that charge, and hence he says that he is a prophet. It is remarkable that in his reply Jesus does not make a single reference to the circumstances of his birth. Hence the inference is quite reasonable that the question, whichever significance of the words may be taken, was directed against the mission of Jesus and not against the circumstances relating to his birth.

1542 It is only a limited acquaintance with the Arabic language that has made men like Rodwell call this an anachronism. As shown in 412, Mary belonged to the priestly class, as Wherry also admits, "because she was of the Levitical race (as by her being related to Elizabeth it should seem she was)," and therefore she is rightly called ukhta Hárún, or sister of Aaron, the word ukht being by no means limited to the close blood-relationship like its equivalent in English; see 412 for further explanation. IJ relates the following incident: Safiyya (the Prophet's wife) came to the Apostle of Allah, may peace and the blessings of Allah be upon him, and said: "The women say to me, A Jewess, daughter of two Jews." He said to her: "Why did you not say: Surely my father is Aaron and my uncle is Moses and my husband is Muhammad?" This incident shows clearly that a woman belonging to the Jewish race was spoken of as being immediately related to Aaron and Moses.

1543 Old and learned Jews would no doubt speak of a young man who was born and brought up before their eyes as one who was but yesterday a child in the cradle, as if disdaining to address one so young. It should be noted that they speak of Jesus as one who was (not is) a boy in the cradle.

30 He said: Surely I am a servant of Allah; He has given me the Book and made me a prophet:[1544]

31 And He has made me blessed wherever I may be, and He has enjoined on me prayer and poor-rate so long as I live:[1545]

32 And dutiful to my mother, and He has not made me insolent, unblessed:[1546]

33 And peace on me on the day I was born, and on the day I die, and on the day I am raised to life.

34 Such is Jesus son of Mary; (this is) the saying of truth about which they dispute.

35 It beseems not Allah that He should take to Himself a son, glory be to Him; when He has decreed a matter He a 163. only says to it "Be," and it is.[a]

36 And surely Allah is my Lord and your Lord, therefore serve Him; this is the right path.[1547]

37 But parties from among them disagreed with each other, so woe to those who disbelieve, because of presence on a great day.

1544 It is clear that this conversation did not take place when Jesus was an infant in the cradle, but when he had actually been made a prophet, because he speaks of himself as such, i.e. not as one who would be made a prophet, but one who had actually been made a prophet, which was only when he was a grown man.

1545 It is absurd to suppose that prayers and alms had been enjoined on Jesus while he was yet a day old and that he really observed these injunctions at that age. In fact, Jesus' answer clearly shows that he was addressing his people after he had been entrusted with the mission of prophethood, and he does not say a word about his having been born without the agency of a male parent.

1546 Here only the mother is spoken of, whereas in a similar case in v. 14 John is spoken of as being dutiful to both parents. This may be due to the fact that Joseph may not have been living at the time when Jesus spoke these words. Joseph was already an old man when he married Mary, and by the time that the ministry of Jesus begins we find no mention of him even in the Gospels, the mother and brothers being the only relations mentioned; or the mother alone is mentioned because the Gospels relate an incident showing that Jesus was rude to his mother (Matt. 12 : 48), and this verse disproves the statement, it being one of the objects of the Qur-án to clear Jesus of all false charges.

1547 According to Matthew, when Jesus was tempted of the devil, who asked him to worship him, Jesus' reply was: "For it is written, Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and Him only shalt thou serve" (Matt. 4 : 10).

38 How clearly shall they hear and how clearly shall they see on the day when they come to Us; but the unjust this day are in manifest error.

39 And warn them of the day of intense regret,[1548] when the matter shall have been decided; and they are (now) in negligence and they do not believe.

40 Surely We inherit the earth and all those who are on it, and to Us they shall be returned.

1548 Here the punishment which is elsewhere called fire is called ḥasrat or intense regret, and this is frequently described in the Holy Qur-án as being the lot of the evil-doers.

48 And I will withdraw from you and what you call on besides Allah, and I will call upon my Lord: maybe I shall not remain unblessed in calling upon my Lord.
49 So when he withdrew from them and what they worshipped besides Allah, We gave to him Isaac and Jacob, and each one of them We made a prophet.[1549]
50 And We granted to them of Our mercy, and We left (behind them) a truthful mention of eminence for them.[1550]

51 And mention Moses in the Book; surely he was one purified, and he was an apostle, a prophet.[1551]
52 And We called to him from the blessed side of the mountain, and We made him draw nigh, holding communion (with Us).
53 And We gave to him out of Our mercy his brother Aaron, a prophet.

1549 It is elsewhere made clear that Jacob was his grandson (11 : 71; 21 : 72). Nor should it be supposed that giving signifies only the giving of a son, for of Moses it is said a few verses further on, We gave to him his brother Aaron, a prophet, though Aaron was older than Moses.

1550 The literal significance of جعلنا لهم لسان صدق عليا is, We made for them the tongue of truth to be lofty. As the tongue is the vehicle of expression, therefore lisána ṣidqin stands for a truthful mention. However humble a life a prophet may lead, he is granted an eminence among later generations, but the distinguishing characteristic of a prophet is that his record of eminence is a truthful one.

1551 Rasool, or apostle, means one who is sent with a message for the regeneration of men, while nabí, or prophet, is one who has the gift of prophecy, i.e. who receives a naba' or information from on high. The elect who are chosen for the regeneration of man are called prophets as receiving knowledge from Allah, and apostles as delivering to humanity the message received.

54 And mention Ishmael in the Book; surely he was truthful in (his) promise, and he was an apostle, a prophet.[1552]

55 And he enjoined on his family prayer and alms-giving, and was one in whom his Lord was well pleased.

56 And mention Idrís in the Book; surely he was a truthful man, a prophet,

57 And We raised him to an elevated state.[1553]

58 These are they on whom Allah bestowed favours, from among the prophets of the seed of Adam, and of those whom We carried with Noah, and of the seed of Abraham and Israel, and of those whom We guided and chose; when the communications of the Beneficent God were recited to them, they fell down making obeisance and a 978 weeping.[a]

59 But there came after them an evil generation, who wasted prayers and followed the sensual desires, so they will meet perdition,

60 Except such as repent and believe and do good, these shall enter the garden, and they shall not be dealt with unjustly in any way:

1552 Christians think that prophethood was the exclusive heritage of Isaac and his seed, but the Bible gives as great promises for Ishmael as for Isaac. And when Abraham prayed to the Lord "that Ishmael might live before Thee" (Gen. 17 : 18), the reply was : "And as for Ishmael, I have heard thee" (Gen. 17 : 20), which shows that Ishmael was made a prophet. See 168 and 170. In the Holy Qur-án Ishmael is mentioned by name on the following occasions as one of the prophets : 2 : 125, 127–129, 133, 136, 140 ; 6 : 87 ; 19 : 54, 55 ; 21 : 85, and 38 : 48, while he is referred to in 37 : 101–107.

1553 Idrís is the same as Enoch (Bḍ). The word rafa', which is used of Jesus, is also used of Enoch, and some commentators therefore misinterpret the words as indicating that Enoch was taken up to heaven alive, like Jesus. But the same mistake is made in both cases, for rafa' signifies raising to high dignity. See 437. The mistake seems to have arisen from what is said of Enoch in the Bible. Thus, in Gen. 5 : 24 : "And Enoch walked with God, and he was not, for God took him." The New Testament is plainer yet : "By faith Enoch was translated that he should not see death ; and was not found, because God had translated him" (Heb. 11 : 5). Only once again is he mentioned in the Holy Qur-án, viz. in 21 : 85.

unseen; surely His promise shall come to pass.

63 This is the garden which We cause those of Our servants to inherit who guard (against evil).[1555]

64 And we do not descend but by the command of your Lord; to Him belongs whatever is before us and whatever is behind us and whatever is between these, and your Lord is not forgetful:[1556] [Ar. thy.] [Ar. thy.]

1554 The word Muslim is derived from the same root, salam, meaning peace, as salám, and therefore the Muslim is one who is at peace. It is by making peace here with the Creator and His creatures that one can find peace hereafter, and this is the great truth underlying the Islamic idea of paradise, for of paradise it is frequently stated in the Holy Qur-án that there shall be nothing but peace therein.

1555 The state of perfect peace spoken of in the previous verse is here called the garden which the righteous shall inherit.

1556 The words "we do not descend" are generally understood to refer to the coming of angels with Divine revelation. There is no doubt that the reference here is to the revelation of the Holy Prophet, the significance being that, as the angels brought revelation to previous prophets, so they now bring revelation, by the command of the Lord, to the Holy Prophet Muhammad. The concluding words of the verse, and your Lord is not forgetful, are meant to signify that the promises and prophecies made by Allah through His prophets could not be forgotten. Thus an account of the previous prophets is concluded with a reference to the revelation of the Holy Prophet, and this is the subject dealt with in the remaining sections of the chapter.

Some, however, think that these are the words of the faithful, which hey will speak when they enter paradise (AbM-Rz).

1557 The devils here are clearly those who lead others into evil.

1558 The wicked only are spoken of, as the context shows clearly. That the righteous shall not go to hell is made clear in many places in the Holy Qur-án. See a few verses further on: "The day on which We will gather those who guard (against evil) to the Beneficent God to receive honour, and We will drive the guilty to hell thirsty" (vv. 85-6). And in 21 : 102 we are told that the righteous shall not hear the faintest sound of hell.

1559 It does not mean, as already shown, that the righteous shall first be brought to hell and then delivered. For the meaning of summa see 45. The word is used to begin an altogether new statement.

1560 Compare v. 68, where it is said that the guilty shall be brought to hell on their knees. Those who did not bend their knees in humility in this life shall be made to bend them hereafter.

1561 That is, they are proud of their great wealth and numerous forces.

see what they were threatened with, either the chastisement or the hour;[1562] then they shall know who is in more evil plight and weaker in forces.[1563]

76 And Allah increases in guidance those who go aright; and ever-abiding good works are with your Lord best in recompense and best in yielding fruit.[1564]

Ar. thy.

77 Have you, then, seen him who disbelieves in Our communications and says: I shall certainly be given wealth and children?[1565]

Ar. hast thou.

78 Has he gained knowledge of the unseen, or made a covenant with the Beneficent God?

79 By no means! We write down what he says, and We will lengthen to him the length of the chastisement,

80 And We will inherit of him what he says, and he shall come to Us alone.[1566]

81 And they have taken gods besides Allah, that they should be to them a source of strength;[1567]

82 By no means! They shall soon deny their worshipping them, and they shall be adversaries to them.

1562 The hour signifies the hour of doom, the time when they shall be utterly destroyed, their power departing from them once for all. The chastisement, in comparison with the doom, signifies a lighter punishment.

1563 In these words it is clearly indicated that the time will come when they will find themselves in an evil condition, and their forces weaker than the forces of Islam.

1564 You say ضيعة كثيرة المرد i.e. an estate yielding much revenue (A-LL).

1565 The only desire of the unbelievers is for wealth and children.

1566 The reference is to his saying in verse 77: "I shall certainly be given wealth and children." The meaning is that the wealth and children of which the unbelievers are so proud shall be taken away from them, and Allah (i.e. the servants of Allah, or the Muslims) shall inherit them. It is foretold that the wealth of the unbelievers shall fall into the hands of Muslims and their children shall go over to Islam.

1567 The unbelievers looked to their idols for aiding them against the Muslims. The reply is given in the next verse: They (i.e. their idols) shall not be a source of strength to them, but they shall be their adversaries.

SECTION 6

False Doctrine of Sonship

83–87. The devils mislead. 88–96. Gravity of the sin of attributing a son to Allah. 97, 98. A warning for the contentious.

Ar. dost thou.

83 Do you not see that We have sent the devils against the unbelievers, inciting them by incitement?

84 Therefore be not in haste against them, We only number out to them a number (of days).[1568]

85 The day on which We will gather those who guard (against evil) to the Beneficent God to receive honours,[1569]

86 And We will drive the guilty to hell thirsty.[1570]

87 They shall not control intercession, save he who has made a covenant with the Beneficent God.

88 And they say: The Beneficent God has taken (to Himself) a son.

Ar. brought . . . thing.

89 Certainly you have made an abominable assertion:

90 The heavens may almost be rent thereat, and the earth cleave asunder, and the mountains fall down in pieces,

91 That they ascribe a son to the Beneficent God.

92 And it is not worthy of the Beneficent God that He should take (to Himself) a son.[1571]

1568 The meaning is that their doom is already decreed, but it will overtake them at the appointed time; and the days of their life will be numbered out to them till that time arrives.

1569 Wafd is a party coming to a king to receive honours (JB); hence the significance.

1570 Wird signifies a coming to or arriving at water (LL); hence it signifies thirsty, because thirsty beasts are driven to water.

1571 The five verses 89–92 contain a most emphatic and clear condemnation of the Christian doctrine of the Godhead of Jesus Christ, and it is to this that this chapter particularly refers. It may be noted that this chapter belongs to about the fifth year of the Holy Prophet's mission, as portions of it were read out before the Negus by Ja'far, who was the head of the Muslim emigrants to Abyssinia. Thus Islam had set before itself from the very first the grand object of the reformation of Christianity. The particular point on which stress is laid in this chapter, as against the fundamental errors of the Christian religion, is the raḥmâniyyat or beneficence of the Divine Being, which establishes the doctrine that for the forgiveness of a sinner God does not require to be paid any compensation. It is for this reason that the name Raḥmân, in preference to all other names of the Divine Being, is mentioned over and over again in this chapter, and the key to the whole position is contained in v. 92 in the words: It is not worthy of the Beneficent God that He should take to Himself a son.

93 There is no one in the heavens and the earth but will come to the Beneficent God as a servant.

94 Certainly He has a comprehensive knowledge of them, and He has numbered them a (comprehensive) numbering.

95 And every one of them will come to Him on the day of resurrection alone.

96 Surely (as for) those who believe and do good deeds, for them will Allah bring about love.[1572]

97 So we have only made it easy in your tongue that you may give good news thereby to those who guard (against evil) and warn thereby a vehemently contentious people.

Ar. thy.
Ar. thou mayest.

98 And how many a generation have We destroyed before them! Do you see any one of them or hear a sound of them?

Ar. dost thou.

إِلَّآ اٰتِي الرَّحْمٰنِ عَبْدًا ۝
لَقَدْ أَحْصٰىهُمْ وَعَدَّهُمْ عَدًّا ۝

فَإِنَّمَا يَسَّرْنٰهُ بِلِسَانِكَ لِتُبَشِّرَ بِهِ

هَلْ تُحِسُّ مِنْهُمْ مِّنْ أَحَدٍ أَوْ
تَسْمَعُ لَهُمْ رِكْزًا ۝

As has been shown at the very outset, the word Raḥmán, which along with Allah is mentioned as a proper name of the Divine Being, and which next to Allah occurs most frequently in the Holy Qur-án (with the exception of the name Ar-Raḥím, which is derived from the same root and carries a somewhat similar significance), means the Beneficent God Who shows mercy to man without his having done anything to deserve it (3). This directly contradicts the doctrine of atonement, which is the basis of the theory of the divinity of Jesus. For if God could forgive sins without requiring any compensation from man, if He could show mercy though man might have done nothing to deserve it, then there was no need of atonement, and consequently no need of attributing a son to the Divine Being who should be offered up as a sacrifice. The name Raḥmán shows that Allah does not look for compensation or atonement, and is merciful to all His creatures, providing for them beforehand all that is necessary for them, and thus this one word in fact contains a condemnation of all the errors of the Christian religion.

The Christian faith is self-contradictory. While it denies the possibility of God showing mercy to sinners without the atonement by Christ, yet it asks them to seek forgiveness from God and to expect that He will forgive them without exacting any compensation. The well-known Lord's prayer makes this contradiction evident when it asks: "And forgive us our debts as we forgive our debtors" (Matt. 6 : 12). Now, when is a man said to forgive his debtor? Only when he remits the debt and does not exact any compensation or return of his money from him. And the same, according to Christ's plain teaching, we should expect of God, viz. that He is able to forgive us our sins without requiring the least compensation from us. Thus this prayer leaves no place for the doctrines of atonement and sonship.

1572 It is by right belief and good deeds that true love for Allah and His creatures is inspired in the heart. Allah's bringing about love for the righteous means that He loves them Himself and inspires a love for them in the hearts of other people, while they also love Allah as well as their fellow-beings. The righteous servants of God are not liked much at first in this world, but gradually their goodness prevails and they are loved and admired. There is no doubt a prophetic reference here to the great love with which the hearts of the enemies of the Prophet were to be inspired in the near future.

CHAPTER XX

TÁ HÁ

REVEALED AT MECCA

(8 sections and 135 verses)

Abstract:

Sec. 1–5. The history of Moses.
Sec. 6. The Prophet's opponents shall be brought low.
Sec. 7. The devil's misleading.
Sec. 8. Punishment is certain.

The Title.

THE initial letters of this chapter serve as its title. The greater part of it is devoted to the story of Moses, which is here given in detail. It will be seen that not only are references to Moses of much more frequent occurrence in the Holy Qur-án than references to other prophets, but the history of Moses is also given in much greater detail. The reason for this is to be found in the fact that the Holy Prophet came in fulfilment of the prophecy of Moses, which foretold the advent of a prophet who was to be the like of Moses. Hence the frequency of references and the elaboration of detail.

Context and subject-matter.

As the last chapter deals at length with the story of Jesus, this, dealing as it does in detail with the story of Moses, is placed after. It opens with a comforting message to the Holy Prophet, to the effect that he should not be disheartened by the bitter opposition to his preaching, because his mission would assuredly be crowned with prosperity. The first five sections (out of a total of eight) are taken up with the story of Moses, the Prophet's mission being introduced towards the close of the fifth section. The remaining three sections are taken up with the description of the opposition to the Prophet and the consequences of that opposition.

Date of revelation.

The revelation of this chapter belongs in all probability to the same period as that of the last chapter, because, even as there is proof of the last chapter being recited by the Muslim emigrants before the Negus, there is also evidence to show that this chapter was revealed before the sixth year of the Prophet's mission. Both Ibn-i-Hisham and Ibn-i-Sa'd connect this chapter with the story of 'Umar's conversion to Islam, which took place in the sixth year. They say that it was the recital of this chapter by his sister that changed 'Umar's murderous intention against the Prophet into a feeling of deep love and reverence for him. The mere circumstance that the commentators have not narrated this incident is no proof against its correctness, for it is vouched for by two of the best historians. The reason of the commentators' silence is to be found in the fact that they do not enter into a discussion concerning the exact date of the revelation of a chapter.

The History of Moses

In the name of Allah, the Beneficent, the Merciful.

Or, Be at rest.

Ar. thee. Ar. thou mayest.

2 We have not revealed the Qur-án to you that you may be unsuccessful.[1574]

وَاِنْ تَجْهَرْ بِالْقَوْلِ فَاِنَّهٗ يَعْلَمُ

1573 Ṭáhá, a combination of the two letters ṭá and há of the alphabet, is, according to most of the earliest commentators, I'Ab, Qtd, Mjd, Hasan, Sa'íd, etc., a word meaning (according to some in certain dialects and according to others in some sister-languages) يا رجل i.e. O man (Rz). AH quotes two couplets of the poets of the tribe of 'Akk, showing that in their dialect ṭáhá is a well-known word meaning O man, so that one of them would not answer you if you said yá rajulu, but would reply if you said ṭáhá. The couplets quoted are دعوت بطه فى القتال فلم يجب i.e. I called out O man ! in fighting, but he did not answer; and ان السفاهة طه من خلا ئقكم i.e. surely meanness is of your characteristics, O man. The same authority says that Ṭáhá is one of the names of the Holy Prophet. Kf interprets it as meaning يا هذا i.e. O you. It is also explained as meaning be at rest (TA-LL), being thus a word of comfort to the Holy Prophet.

1574 That is, it could not be that the Prophet, to whom the Qur-án was revealed, should remain unsuccessful in bringing about the transformation for which it was revealed. It is a consolation to the Holy Prophet, and at the same time a clear prophecy that a mighty transformation will be brought about, not only in Arabia but in the whole of the world, for that was the object which the Holy Qur-án had set out to accomplish from the first.

1575 This verse, and those that follow it, give the reason why the Qur-án cannot be a failure. This is because it is a manifestation of the will of Him who holds sway over all.

1576 Sará means moisture of the earth, or moist earth (LL).

1577 The secret is that which a man hides in his heart, but what is not yet even in man's heart is hidden still more—all being known alike to Allah.

8 Allah — there is no god but He; His are the very best names.

9 And has the story of Moses come to you? (Ar. thee.)

10 When he saw fire, he said to his family: Stop, for surely I see a fire, haply I may bring to you therefrom a live coal or find a guidance at the fire.[1578]

11 So when he came to it, a voice was uttered: O Moses:

12 Surely I am your Lord, therefore put off your shoes, surely you are in the sacred valley, twice,[1579] (Ar. thy. Ar. thy. Ar. thou art. Or Ṭuwá.)

13 And I have chosen you, so listen to what is revealed: (Ar. thee.)

14 Surely I am Allah, there is no god but I, therefore serve Me and keep up prayer for My remembrance:

15 Surely the hour is coming—I am about to make it manifest[1580]—so that every soul may be rewarded as it strives:

1578 As we have here the words he saw fire, so we have in 12 : 4 I saw eleven stars. In both cases it was not an actual sight of the physical eye. In Joseph's case it was only a dream or a vision, but in the case of Moses it was a sight of the spiritual eye which is granted to the prophets of God, especially on occasions when they receive Divine revelation. Now, as the verses that follow show clearly that Moses received a Divine revelation on the same occasion, there remains not the least doubt that his seeing the fire was also a part of the revelation, and hence it was with the spiritual eye that he saw it. The Holy Qur-án has stated elsewhere that revelation is received only in three ways (42 : 51), and in each of these the recipient is really given particular senses with which to feel and see things (see 2235).

It may be added that the fire is a symbol of war, as we have in the Holy Qur-án itself: "Whenever they kindle a fire for war, Allah puts it out" (5 : 64). Thus in Moses seeing the fire there was an allusion to the coming struggle with Pharaoh, or probably to the wars with the tribes settling in the Holy Land.

1579 The command to put off the shoes is a metaphorical expression for making the heart vacant from care for family and property (Bḍ). According to others "it is a command to stay; like as you say to him whom you desire to stay, Pull off thy garment and thy boots and the like" (TA-LL).

I translate the word ṭuwan, or ṭuwá, as meaning twice, the significance being twice blessed, as qualifying the valley, or twice called, referring to Moses' call. But some think that Ṭuwá is the name of the valley. Rgh gives a third explanation, saying that the word ṭuwá (lit. rolled up) is spoken in reference to the election of Moses, so that he had not to exert himself to attain that great goal.

1580 The phrase اكاد اخفيها is often misunderstood. Ikhfá is one of the words which convey contrary significances. But that here it does not mean concealing is made clear by the context. It is the coming of the hour and the meting out of rewards and 19 He said : Cast it down, O Moses!

20 So he cast it down, and lo! it was a serpent running.[1581]

21 He said: Take hold of it and fear not; We will restore it to its former state:

punishments that the verse deals with, which is clearly removing of the veil or making the hour manifest; for the giving of rewards and punishments takes place when the hour comes. It should be noted that the hour does not necessarily signify the resurrection; on the other hand, it very often indicates the doom of a people, the hour of the departure of their glory and power.

1581 As I have already stated, all this was experienced by Moses in that particular state in which the recipient of a revelation finds himself at the time of the revelation. I have explained this fully in 926. I may here add that the Qur-án here affords evidence that what was shown to Moses on this occasion had a deeper significance beneath it, and this is clearly stated in v. 23, where the object of showing these signs is stated to be that We may show you of Our greater signs. Thus the two signs mentioned here were really indications of something greater. To know this we have to see what 'aṣá means. This has already been explained in 96, where it is shown that the word 'aṣá stands metaphorically for a community, hence the sight of his staff becoming a running serpent was shown to him as an indication that his community, i.e. the Israelite people, who had been reduced to a state of intellectual death under Pharaoh, would soon become a living nation.

1582 Bearing in mind what has been said above, the yad-i-baiḍá, has also a deeper meaning. يد بيضاء lit. a white hand, signifies حجة مبرهنة i.e. an argument made very clear (TA); and a demonstrating or demonstrated argument or allegation or evidence (M-LL). The showing of the white hand to Moses signified that he would be able to afford a convincing argument, or it implied a revelation from on high that should serve as a light.

مَحَبَّةً مِّنِّي ۚ وَلِتُصْنَعَ عَلَىٰ عَيْنِي ۝

1583 It is to put an unnatural interpretation on the words to search for the knot or impediment of the tongue in the burning of it. عقدة اللسان is according to LA ما غلظ منه i.e. the coarseness or roughness of it. And the man who has 'uqdah (i.e. knot) in his tongue is called 'aqid, which is explained by LL as meaning a man having an impediment in his tongue, unable to speak freely.

1584 Wazír (from wizr, meaning burden) is literally one who bears burden, and hence an aider or helper, because he bears the burden of another. It may also be rendered as minister, as the word is extensively used as signifying a minister of a king.

1585 This is in accordance with the Bible narrative. Moses was born at a time when Pharaoh had commanded all male children born to the Israelites to be thrown into the Nile. Moses' mother kept him concealed for three months, and at last, unable to hide him any longer, threw him into the river in an ark of bulrushes, whence he was picked up by Pharaoh's daughter (Exod. 2 : 1–10).

1588 This contains a clear warning to Pharaoh of his end in case of rejection. Moses and Aaron were directed to convey this message. The whole account of their actual going to Pharaoh and the delivery of this message is omitted here, and the next verse gives us Pharaoh's reply to their demand.

1589 This verse contains an argument for the necessity of Divine revelation. It says that, as Allah has created everything, and then given it the qualities and means by which it can attain to perfection—for this is the true significance of hadá, or guiding a thing (to its goal)—so man also stands in need of spiritual and moral direction for his attainment of spiritual perfection.

59 (Moses) said: Your appointment is the day of the Festival, and let the people be gathered together in the early forenoon.

60 So Pharaoh turned his back and settled his plan, then came.[1590]

61 Moses said to them: Woe to you! do not forge a lie against Allah, lest He destroy you by a chastisement, and he who forges (a lie) indeed fails to attain (his desire).

62 So they disputed with one another about their affair and kept the discourse secret.

63 They said: These are most surely two enchanters who wish to turn you out from your land by their enchantment and to take away your most exemplary usage.

Or, distinguished chiefs.

64 Therefore settle your plan, then come standing in ranks, and he will prosper indeed this day who overcomes.

65 They said: O Moses! will you cast, or shall we be the first who cast down?

Ar. wilt thou.

66 He said: Nay! cast down. Then lo! their cords and their rods—it was imaged to him on account of their enchantment as if they were running.[1591]

1590 جمع امره and اجمع امره both indicate he determined or resolved upon his affair; and accordingly جمع كيده means he determined upon or settled (LL) his plan. For the meaning of kaid, see 965.

1591 The forces of untruth appear to carry the day for a while, but are soon vanquished. As to what was the nature of these cords and rods and what is meant by their running, the Bible does not help us much to understand. The Qur-án gives hints in certain places; for instance, in 7:117, where they are described as being the lies they told. Both the words 'aṣá and ḥabal are used in the Arabic language metaphorically in a number of ways. For instance, you say قرعه بعصا الملامة (literally, he struck him with the staff of censure), whereas the significance is that he exceeded the usual bounds in censuring him. And you say, فلان يصلي عصا فلان (literally, such a one straightens the staff of such a one by turning it round over the fire), meaning, such a one manages or regulates the affairs of such a one. Likewise قشرت له العصا literally, I peeled for him the staff) signifies I revealed to him what was in my mind. And 'aṣá is synonymous with lisán—i.e. the tongue (TA, LL). Similarly ḥabal signifies something more than a mere cord; in fact, it means any means of access

67 So Moses conceived in his mind a fear.

68 We said: Fear not, surely you shall be the uppermost:

Ar. thou shalt.

69 And cast down what is in your right hand: it shall devour what they have wrought; they have wrought only the plan of an enchanter, and the enchanter shall not be successful wheresoever he may come from.

Ar. thy.

70 And the enchanters were cast down making obeisance; they said: We believe in the Lord of Aaron and Moses.[a]

a 930.

71 (Pharaoh) said: You believe in him before I give you leave; most surely he is the chief of you who taught you enchantment, therefore I will certainly cut off your hands and your feet on opposite sides, and I will certainly crucify you on the trunks of the palm-trees, and certainly you will come to know which of us is the more severe and the more abiding in chastising.

72 They said: We do not prefer you to what has come to us of clear arguments and to Him who made us, therefore decide what you are going to decide; you can only decide about this world's life:

Ar. thee.

Ar. thou art.

Ar. thou canst.

73 Surely we believe in our Lord that He may forgive us our sins and the enchantment to which you compelled us; and Allah is better and more Abiding.

Ar. thou didst compel.

74 Whoever comes to his Lord (being) guilty, for him is surely hell; he shall not die therein, nor shall he live.[1592] to a thing—Rgh: كل ما يتوصل به الى شيء and the word of God is also called a ḥabal (3:102). Therefore, if ما يافكون or the lies they told, expresses the true nature of the cords and the rods, the use of the two words clearly corroborates this conclusion. And this is further supported by the saying ان من البيان لسحرا explained in 148, where an eloquent speech is called siḥr, or enchantment, the very word used here.

1593 This shows that there was at that time a dry path in the sea. It shows also that there was only one path, and the twelve paths of the commentators are not mentioned in the Holy Qur-án. See also 82.

1594 Ḥalla has the aorist yaḥillu as well as yaḥullu, the infinitive noun in both cases being ḥalúl. حل عليه with yaḥillu as the aorist means it became due to him, while with yaḥullu as the aorist the meaning is it alighted or descended upon him (TA-LL). As the word occurring here is yaḥillu, and not yaḥullu, therefore, the correct interpretation of the words is that displeasure from your Lord should be due to you.

Ar. thee.
Ar. thy.

83 And what caused you to hasten from your people, O Moses?

Ar. thy.
Ar. thee.

85 He said: So surely we have tried your people after you, and the Sámiri has led them astray.[1595]

86 So Moses returned to his people wrathful, sorrowing. Said he: O my people! did not your Lord promise you a goodly promise: did then the time seem long to you, or did you wish that displeasure from your Lord should be due to you, so that you broke (your) promise to me?

Ar. thee.

87 They said: We did not break (our) promise to you of our own accord, but we were made to bear the burdens of the ornaments of the people, then we cast them away, and thus did the Sámiri suggest.[1596]

88 So he brought forth for them a calf, a (mere) body, which had a hollow sound, so they said: This is your god and the god of Moses, but he forgot.[1597]

مُوسٰى ۵ فَنَسِىَ ○

1595 Whether this Sámiri was some ancestor of the Samaritans or not need not be discussed. The verse only shows that some person other than Aaron was responsible for making the calf. From Rabbinical literature (see Jewish En., Art. "Calf") it appears that the Egyptians who had come with the Israelites were foremost in demanding the making of the calf. And 'Atá held on the authority of I'Ab that he was an Egyptian who had believed in Moses and came along with the Israelites (Rz). The opinion that he was of a people who worshipped the cow is also traceable to I'Ab (Rz).

1596 The Israelites may have borrowed ornaments from the Egyptians, as is affirmed in Exod. 12:35, and the reference may here be to those ornaments, or the significance may simply be that the nomadic tribes of Israel, who were unaccustomed to these things, had imbibed these habits from the Egyptians, and now gave up those ornaments at the suggestion of the Sámiri. The words فكذلك القى السامرى are generally taken to mean that the Sámiri also cast away the ornaments, and though the word alqá means he cast away, yet the object of alqá is not mentioned here. The reply of the people states clearly they had not done the thing of their own accord, and hence the reference in the concluding words is to the suggestions cast into the minds of the people by the Sámiri. And you say القاه عليه meaning he put it into his mind, or he suggested it (Kull-LL). It also means he dictated it, i.e. a writing (Msb-LL). The word kazálika, meaning thus, therefore refers to the proposal of the casting away of the ornaments.

96 He said: I saw what they did not see, so I followed only partly the way of the apostle, then I cast it away: thus did my soul embellish (it) to me.[1600]

قال بصرت بما لم يبصروا به فقبضت قبضة من أثر الرسول فنبذتها وكذلك سولت لي نفسي

1597 According to I'Ab, it had neither a voice nor a soul, but it was only a hollow sound produced by the air passing through the hollow of the metal of which it was made (JB).

1598 The argument made use of in this verse shows that the Holy Qur-án condemns the worship of all those gods who neither return answers to the prayers of their worshippers nor control their destinies. The logical consequence of this argument is that the true worshipper of God receives a reply to his prayers.

1599 From this it is clear that not only had Aaron no part in making the calf, but he even enjoined his people to give up its worship. The Qur-án here differs from the Bible in declaring a prophet to be free from the sin of associating gods with Allah.

1600 The stories built upon the simple words قبضت قبضة من اثر الرسول do not deserve to be noticed. Suffice it to say that even Rz discredits them. That the apostle is

97 He said: Begone then, surely for you it will be in this life to say, Touch (me) not; and surely there is a threat for you, which shall not be made to fail to you, and look at your god to whose worship you kept (so long); we will certainly burn it, then we will certainly scatter it a (wide) scattering in the sea.[1601]

Gabriel, that he rode on a horse, that by اثر الرسول (lit. the footprints of the apostle) is meant footprints of the horse, are conjectures pure and simple, to which the Qur-án does not lend the least support. The rasúl, or apostle, is evidently Moses himself; his aṣar signifies his sunnah, i.e. his practices and sayings, a significance to which all authorities agree (LL), the word being well known in Muslim religious literature, and the qabḍatun is taking or following those practices in part, because qabḍatun denotes a single act of taking, or only a handful, i.e. a small part of it. The meaning is thus clear: the man who made the calf asserts that he had a clearer perception of things than the Israelites, that he accepted the teachings of Moses only partially, and confesses that he now threw off even that part and made a calf for worship.

1601 This shows that the ashes of the calf were thrown into the sea, and the story of the Israelites being made to drink of water mixed with the ashes of the calf is not, therefore, credited by the Holy Qur-án (see 137). The punishment given to the Sámiri is that of an outcast in society, who is prohibited from having any intercourse or relations with the Israelite people.

1601A The word zurqá means blue-eyed, and thus it serves as an indication of the nations who are spoken of here as being gathered. According to Bḍ, blue being the colour of the eyes of the Rúm (i.e. the Greeks or the Romans), who were most hated by the Arabs, that colour was regarded by the Arabs as the worst colour for the eye. The word may also signify blind, in reference to the guilty being raised up blind on the resurrection day, for which see v. 124.

1602 The object of 'ashrá is omitted; but, as elsewhere the lovers of the world are described as loving to be granted a life of a thousand years (2:96), and they are told that even their being granted such a long life will in no way remove them further off from the chastisement, what is apparently indicated here is that they shall have enjoyed ten centuries of great prosperity. Or, if the word days is understood, the ten days of the life of a nation would also mean ten centuries.

1603 Because a day is equal to a thousand years. See 22:47: "And they ask you to hasten on the chastisement, and Allah will by no means fail in His promise, and surely a day with your Lord is as a thousand years of what you number." It is the man who reminds them of this Divine promise that is called the fairest in course.

1604 The word jabal means a mountain, as well as the lord or chief of a people (Q, TA-LL). That the latter significance is intended here is shown by the context; see in particular v. 108: "On that day they shall follow the inviter." In the same sense are to be taken the two verses that follow: they point to the removal of all obstacles that hindered the propagation of truth.

1605 The inviter in whom there is no crookedness is no other than the Holy Prophet, as is clearly stated elsewhere, "Who revealed the Book to His servant and did not make in it (or him) any crookedness" (18:1). The whole verse clearly points to a time when Islam should be completely established, and instead of opposition the voices should be low before the Beneficent God. The lowness of the voice indicates submission.

110 He knows what is before them and what is behind them, while they do not comprehend it in knowledge.

يَعْلَمُ مَا بَيْنَ أَيْدِيهِمْ وَمَا خَلْفَهُمْ وَلَا
يُحِيطُونَ بِهِ عِلْمًا ۝

Or, chiefs. 111 And the faces shall be humbled before the Living, the Self-subsistent God, and he who bears iniquity is indeed undone.

وَعَنَتِ الْوُجُوهُ لِلْحَيِّ الْقَيُّومِ وَقَدْ
خَابَ مَنْ حَمَلَ ظُلْمًا ۝

112 And whoever does good works and he is a believer, he shall have no fear of injustice nor of the withholding of his due.

وَمَنْ يَعْمَلْ مِنَ الصّٰلِحٰتِ وَهُوَ مُؤْمِنٌ
فَلَا يَخَافُ ظُلْمًا وَّلَا هَضْمًا ۝

113 And thus have we sent it down an Arabic Qur-án, and have distinctly set forth therein of threats that they may guard (against evil) or that it may produce a reminder for them.

وَكَذٰلِكَ أَنْزَلْنٰهُ قُرْاٰنًا عَرَبِيًّا وَّصَرَّفْنَا
فِيهِ مِنَ الْوَعِيدِ لَعَلَّهُمْ يَتَّقُونَ
أَوْ يُحْدِثُ لَهُمْ ذِكْرًا ۝

114 Supremely exalted is therefore Allah the King, the Truth: and do not make haste with the Qur-án before its revelation is made complete to you (Ar. thee.) and say: O my Lord! increase me in knowledge.[1606]

فَتَعٰلَى اللّٰهُ الْمَلِكُ الْحَقُّ ۚ وَلَا تَعْجَلْ
بِالْقُرْاٰنِ مِنْ قَبْلِ أَنْ يُّقْضٰى إِلَيْكَ
وَحْيُهُ ۫ وَقُلْ رَّبِّ زِدْنِي عِلْمًا ۝

115 And certainly We gave a commandment to Adam before, but he forgot; and We did not find in him any determination (to disobey).[1607]

وَلَقَدْ عَهِدْنَا إِلٰى اٰدَمَ مِنْ قَبْلُ
فَنَسِيَ وَلَمْ نَجِدْ لَهُ عَزْمًا ۝

SECTION 7

The Devil's misleading

116–121. The devil deceives. 122, 123. Allah is merciful. 124–128. The spiritually blind.

116 And when We said to the angels: Make obeisance to Adam,[a] they made obeisance, but Iblís (did it not)[b]; he refused.

a 56.
b 57, 58.

وَإِذْ قُلْنَا لِلْمَلٰٓئِكَةِ اسْجُدُوا لِاٰدَمَ
فَسَجَدُوا إِلَّا إِبْلِيسَ ۗ أَبٰى ۝

117 So We said: O Adam! this is an enemy to you (Ar. thee.) and to your (Ar. thy.) wife; therefore let him not drive you both forth from the garden[c] so that you should (Ar. thou shouldst.) be unhappy:

c 60.

فَقُلْنَا يٰاٰدَمُ إِنَّ هٰذَا عَدُوٌّ لَّكَ وَ
لِزَوْجِكَ فَلَا يُخْرِجَنَّكُمَا مِنَ
الْجَنَّةِ فَتَشْقٰى ۝

1606 The making haste with the Qur-án signifies the Holy Prophet's desire that the warning to the unbelievers may be given in clear words, so that they may benefit by it. This is explained at length in 2614.

1607 This shows that Adam's fault was not intentional, and hence no sin can be attributed to him on this ground.

118 Surely it is (ordained) for you that you shall not be hungry therein nor bare of clothing;

Ar. thee. Ar. thou shalt.

119 And that you shall not be thirsty therein nor shall you feel the heat of the sun.[1608]

Ar. thou shalt. Ar. shalt thou.

120 But the devil made an evil suggestion to him; he said: O Adam! shall I guide you to the tree of immortality and a kingdom which decays not?

Ar. thee

121 Then they both ate of it, so their evil inclinations became manifest to them,[a] and they both began to cover themselves with leaves of the garden,[b] and Adam disobeyed his Lord, so his life became evil (to him).[1609]

a 866.

b 867.

122 Then his Lord chose him, so He turned to him and guided (him).

123 He said: Get forth you two therefrom, all (of you), one of you (is) enemy to another. So there will surely come to you guidance from Me, then whoever follows My guidance, he shall not go astray nor be unhappy;

إِنَّ لَكَ أَلَّا تَجُوعَ فِيهَا وَلَا تَعْرَىٰ ۝
وَأَنَّكَ لَا تَظْمَؤُا فِيهَا وَلَا تَضْحَىٰ ۝

هَلْ أَدُلُّكَ عَلَىٰ شَجَرَةِ الْخُلْدِ وَ
مُلْكٍ لَا يَبْلَىٰ ۝
فَأَكَلَا مِنْهَا فَبَدَتْ لَهُمَا سَوْآتُهُمَا وَ
طَفِقَا يَخْصِفَانِ عَلَيْهِمَا مِنْ وَرَقِ
الْجَنَّةِ ۚ وَعَصَىٰ آدَمُ رَبَّهُ فَغَوَىٰ ۝
ثُمَّ اجْتَبَاهُ رَبُّهُ فَتَابَ عَلَيْهِ وَهَدَىٰ ۝
قَالَ اهْبِطَا مِنْهَا جَمِيعًا بَعْضُكُمْ
لِبَعْضٍ عَدُوٌّ ۚ فَإِمَّا يَأْتِيَنَّكُمْ مِنِّي
هُدًى ۙ فَمَنِ اتَّبَعَ هُدَايَ فَلَا
يَضِلُّ وَلَا يَشْقَىٰ ۝

1608 The garden of which a picture is given here is an earthly garden in which all comforts necessary for a man are made available to him. The words you shall not be hungry therein should be read along with what is said elsewhere: And eat from it a plenteous food wherever you wish (2 : 35). Allegorically it signifies a state of contentment or rest in which there is no yearning to either good or evil, being as it were a state of inertia, devoid of exertion or ambition.

1609 Ghawá is explained by Rgh as meaning فسد عليه عيشه i.e. his life became evil to him. It is also interpreted as meaning he was disappointed, or he acted ignorantly (TA-LL).

It should be noted that while in the picture of the garden drawn above in vv. 118 and 119 mention is made of four things, the consequence of getting out of that state is only one, the becoming manifest to them of their evil inclinations or their shame. An explanation of this is found in 7 : 26, where it is said: "O children of Adam! We have indeed sent down on you clothing to cover your shame and clothing for beauty; and clothing that guards (against evil), that is the best." Thus it is the clothing that guards against evil that is really spoken of here, and by the manifestation of the shame is meant the consciousness of having done something evil. The allegorical nature of what is so often related as the story of Adam is thus evident. It will be further seen that the remedy pointed out by the Holy Qur-án is of a spiritual nature: "So surely there will come to you a guidance from Me; then whoever follows My guidance no fear shall come upon them, nor shall they grieve" (2 : 38). This shows that the spiritual aspect of man's life and not the physical one is the real theme of Adam's story. This is further made clear by the verses that follow, viz. 123 and 124.

124 And whoever turns away from My reminder, his shall surely be a straitened life, and We will raise him on the day of resurrection, blind.[1610]

125 He shall say: My Lord! why hast Thou raised me blind, and I was a seeing one indeed?

126 He will say: Even so: Our communications came to you, but you neglected them; even thus shall you be forsaken this day.

Ar. thee. Ar. thou didst neglect. Ar. shalt thou.

127 And thus do We recompense him who is extravagant and does not believe in the communications of his Lord; and certainly the chastisement of the hereafter is severer and more lasting.

128 Does it not then direct them aright how many of the generations in whose dwelling-places they go about We destroyed before them? Most surely there are signs in this for those endowed with understanding.

وَمَنْ أَعْرَضَ عَنْ ذِكْرِي فَإِنَّ لَهُ

1610 The straitened life is really, as pointed out above, a life of spiritual straitness, because it is of the spiritual aspect of man's life that the Holy Qur-án is speaking here.

1610A Both Rodwell and Palmer are wrong in translating this passage. The meaning is clear. The unbelievers would have the threatened punishment hastened. But they had been told that so long as the Holy Prophet was among them they would not be punished. This was the word that had already gone forth. The appointed term was the battle of Badr, which is frequently spoken of in the Holy Qur-án as being the time when a blow will be dealt to the power of a persecuting enemy. See 982.

132 And enjoin prayer on your followers,[a] and steadily adhere to it; We do not ask you for subsistence; We do give you subsistence, and the (good) end is for guarding (against evil).

133 And they say: Why does he not bring to us a sign from his Lord? Has not there come to them a clear evidence of what is in the previous books?[1610C]

134 And had We destroyed them with chastisement before this, they would certainly have said: O our Lord! why didst Thou not send to us an apostle, for then we should have followed Thy communications before that we met disgrace and shame.

1610B The Holy Prophet, while told to bear patiently the persecutions for a time, is also told to seek comfort in prayer. Hence the injunction to bear patiently is at once followed by an injunction to pray. And he did find comfort in prayer under the severest persecutions. "The coolness of my eyes is in prayer," he is reported to have said. This verse speaks of the five obligatory prayers and the two optional ones. Before the rising of the sun is the morning prayer, before its setting the 'aṣr prayer. Three prayers, the maghrib, the 'ishá and the tahajjud (the last named being optional), occur during hours of the night, while during parts of the day are the ẓuhur and the ḍuḥá, the latter again being optional, being a short prayer before midday, as the ẓuhur is the after midday prayer.

1610C The Holy Qur-án is here called a clear evidence of what is contained in the previous books, because it fulfils their prophecies and also adduces arguments for the assertions made in them.

PART XVII

CHAPTER XXI

THE PROPHETS

(Al-Anbiyā)

REVEALED AT MECCA

(7 sections and 112 verses)

Abstract:

Sec. 1. Judgment approaches.
Sec. 2. Truth has always triumphed.
Sec. 3. The truth of revelation.
Sec. 4. Allah deals with men mercifully.
Sec. 5. Abraham's history.
Sec. 6. Allah delivers prophets from their enemies.
Sec. 7. The righteous shall inherit the land.

The Title.

THIS chapter deals more with the deliverance of the righteous than the punishment of the wicked, more with the triumph of truth than the annihilation of falsehood, though the one no doubt implies the other. While it is devoted in part to general statements regarding the deliverance of the prophets and the ultimate triumph of their cause, and hence it goes under the name of Prophets, the history of Abraham, the great father of numerous prophets, is particularly referred to, as affording an example nearer to the case of the Holy Prophet than the example of any other prophet.

Connection with preceding chapters.

As regards the arrangement of chapters, it may be noted that the sixth and seventh belong to the first group of Meccan chapters and complement each other. The second group consists of seven chapters, from the 10th to the 16th inclusive. The third group, beginning with chapter 17, also consists of seven chapters. The first chapter of this group, while promising Islam a great future, cites the example of the Israelites and in what manner they were dealt with. This is followed by that which deals with the history of Christianity, then by one giving prominence to the histories of John and Jesus, a fourth dealing chiefly with the history of Moses. Naturally, then, these chapters should have been followed by the history of that great patriarch who is the father of both the Israelites and the Ishmaelites. Another phase of this chapter is the deliverance of the righteous, even as the punishment of the wicked is the distinguishing characteristic of the four that precede it, and thus destruction is here followed by construction.

Subject-matter.

The chapter begins with the certainty of the punishment of the Meccans, and is followed by a clear declaration that the judgment approaches and the reckoning is nigh. This is

Judgment approaches

1–4. Warning is unheeded. 5. They waver in judgment. 6–10. Former prophets and their opponents.

In the name of Allah, the Beneficent, the Merciful.

1 Their reckoning has drawn near to men, and in heedlessness are they turning aside.

2 There comes not to them a new reminder from their Lord but they hear it while they sport,

3 Their hearts trifling; and those who are unjust counsel together in secret: He is nothing but a mortal like yourselves; what! will you then yield to enchantment while you see?

4 He said: My Lord knows what is spoken in the heaven and the earth, and He is the Hearing, the Knowing.

5 Nay! say they: Medleys of dreams; nay! he has forged it; nay! he is a poet; so let him bring to us a sign as the former (prophets) were sent (with).[1611] borne out by the fact that truth must triumph now as it has always done, and this is shown in the second section. The third draws attention to the truth of revelation in general, and the revelation of the Prophet in particular. The fourth calls attention to the predominance of mercy in Divine nature, for merciful dealing was specially to mark the punishment of the Holy Prophet's opponents, and in this respect Abraham was to be his prototype, whose history forms the subject-matter of the next section. The sixth shows how prophets have always been delivered from the hands of their enemies in the most critical circumstances, and the last adds that the righteous are made to inherit the land, specially referring to the Holy Land, which was now promised to the Muslims as righteousness had departed from the house of Israel.

Date of revelation.

As regards the date of revelation, while there is nothing to show that any portion of it was revealed elsewhere than at Mecca, there are no data which could help us in deciding an approximately probable date of its revelation. In all probability, however, it belongs to the middle period of the Holy Prophet's Meccan career.

1611 The Quraish seem to have been quite puzzled—as the Christian critics of the Qur-án are puzzled to-day—what they could liken the Qur-án to. They first call it a siḥr, i.e. skilful eloquence (TA), because, notwithstanding their opposition to it, it had an attraction for them. But then there are prophecies which mere eloquence cannot produce, so they call it medleys

6 There did not believe before them any town which We destroyed: will they then believe?[1612]

7 And We did not send before you any but men to whom We sent revelation, so ask the followers of the reminder if you do not know.

Ar. thee.

8 And We did not make them bodies not eating the food, and they were not to abide (for ever).[1613]

9 Then We made Our promise good to them, so We delivered them and those whom We pleased, and We destroyed the extravagant.

10 Certainly We have revealed to you a book in which is your eminence; what! do you not then understand?[1614]

SECTION 2

Truth has always triumphed

11–15. The wicked are destroyed. 16–18. Truth prevails in heavens and earth. 19–26. Unity is the great truth preached by all prophets. 27–29. Sinlessness of prophets.

11 And how many a town which was iniquitous did We demolish, and We raised up after it another people!

12 So when they felt Our punishment, lo! they began to fly from it.

وَكَمْ قَصَمْنَا مِنْ قَرْيَةٍ كَانَتْ ظَالِمَةً

of dreams. Then they think that there is a settled purpose therein, by reason of its asserting the Prophet's triumph and the discomfiture of his powerful enemies, so they call it an intentional forgery; and lastly, as if to devise one word combining all these, they call him a poet. Then they demand a sign the like of which was given to the former prophets, meaning their destruction and his triumph, because the Qur-án had repeatedly called their attention to the fate of those who had rejected the truth before them.

1612 They are told, in reply to their demand for a sign similar to those given to the former prophets, that persistence in wickedness and unbelief have always been punished with destruction, but they are called upon to follow the truth and avoid punishment. They have, however, been warned that if they would not obey, then what had led to the destruction of those before them would also lead to theirs.

1613 This shows clearly that every prophet had a mortal body needing food for its support, and that every one of them tasted of death. Therefore Jesus also must have had a body which stood in need of food and must have tasted of death. So the idea that he is alive in the heavens is clearly opposed to the Holy Qur-án. The Qur-án has plainly said that all prophets were mortals, so the prophet Jesus must also have been a mortal, and he could not now be alive, needing no food, as the holders of the belief in his ascent to heaven think.

1614 Whenever the Quraish demanded that the threatened punishment should be inflicted upon them, the reply always was that the Qur-án was a blessing and a mercy for them. The same truth is expressed here. They demand a sign like that of former prophets, but they are told that the Qur-án has been revealed to make them a great and eminent nation in the world. As for zikr meaning eminence, fame, renown, honour, see S, Msb, Q, TA and LL. Also compare 94 : 4, 43 : 43, in all which places zikr has the same meaning.

1615 The metaphor in ḥaṣíd is taken from seed-produce which is reaped and in khâmid from fire which is extinguished and the ashes of which are left smouldering. The above verses contain a clear warning for the Meccans.

1616 It is a continuance of the warning given in the previous verses. They were made to witness signs of the truth of the Prophet and of the Unity of Allah in heaven and earth, and they are now told to bear in mind that these signs were not in vain. In nature every cause has an effect and every end is achieved by means. Everything in nature is serious, so man too must take things seriously.

1617 The in is here náfiyah, i.e. negativing the statement already made. Diversion in this verse carries the same significance as sporting in the previous verse. The commentators, however, add that lahw, in the dialect of Yeman, signifies wife or child, and thus the statement made in the verse is a refutation of the Christian doctrine that Jesus Christ is the son of God (Rz, Bḍ). The meaning in this case would be that God does not take to Himself a son.

1618 This statement is the logical sequence of the statement in the two previous verses: truth in nature is always prevailing against falsehood. 1619, see next page.

22 If there had been in them any gods except Allah, they would both have certainly been in a state of disorder; therefore glory be to Allah, the Lord of 23 He cannot be questioned concerning what He does and they shall be questioned.

24 Or, have they taken gods besides Him? Say: Bring your proof: this is the reminder of those with me and the reminder of those before me.[1621] Nay: most of them do not know the truth, so they turn aside.

26 And they say: The Beneficent God has taken to Himself a son;[1622] glory be to Him. Nay! they are honoured servants;[1623]

27 They do not precede Him in speech and (only) according to His commandment do they act.[1624]

1619 Here we have a clear statement that those who are taken for gods could not raise the dead to life. This must be borne in mind in any discussion about the miracles of Jesus Christ, whose alleged divinity in particular is the subject matter of these verses.

1620 This is a conclusive argument against polytheism. There is order in the universe because one law pervades the whole of it, and one law clearly points to one Author and Maintainer of that law. Had there been other gods, one law could not have governed the whole of the universe, and disorder and confusion would certainly have been the result. The unity of law is a clear proof of the Unity of the Maker.

1621 The great and fundamental truth of the Unity of Allah is common to all religions.

1622 This is a clear reference to the Christian doctrine of the sonship of Jesus.

1623 The meaning is that they whom they call sons are honoured servants of Allah, the reference being to prophets, because it is a prophet whom they call a son of God. Against the doctrine that Jesus Christ is the son of God the Qur-án does not say that he is an honoured servant, but that they are honoured servants, which, while negativing the doctrine of the sonship of Jesus, adduces an argument against it. That argument is in the words honoured servants, for these words draw our attention to the fact that many men were spoken of as the sons of God, but that the title signified nothing more than that they were honoured servants, and that therefore Jesus was son of God exactly in the same sense as the others.

1624 This verse gives us a conclusive testimony to the sinlessness of prophets. When they speak they do not precede Allah in speech, i.e. they speak according to what He has taught them, not speaking of their own accord. And when they act, they act according to 28 He knows what is before them and what is behind them, and they do not intercede except for him whom He approves, and for fear of Him they tremble.

29 And whoever of them should say, Surely I am a god besides Him, such a one do We recompense with hell; thus do We recompense the unjust.

The Truth of Revelation

30–35. Arguments of the truth of revelation. 36–41. Their mockery and its punishment.

30 Do not those who disbelieve see that the heavens and the earth were closed up, but We have opened them;[1625] and We have made of water[1626] every thing living; will they not then believe?

His commandment. Thus both their speech and their actions are in accordance with Divine will, and therefore it cannot be said that they commit sin. The context shows clearly that the verse speaks of prophets, and not of angels.

1625 The closing up of the heavens and the earth is an allusion to the cessation of Divine revelation for a time before the advent of the Holy Prophet, which was marked by the absence of a prophet in the world for six hundred years and the prevalence of corruption all over the world. The opening up of the heavens and the earth signifies the coming of revelation, which brought life to the world. In physical nature we see that the rain opens up the earth.

1626 While this statement reveals a remarkable truth in the physical world, a truth which science has established only recently, and which was not known to the world generally at the time of the Holy Prophet, viz. that water is the source of all life, it draws attention to the equally remarkable spiritual truth that it is only by Divine revelation, which is again and again compared to water in the Holy Qur-án, that life is given to a world otherwise dead in sin and corruption. Thus, according to the Holy Qur-án, this heavenly water always continues to be rained upon earth, and the door to Divine revelation is not closed upon the world in any age.

1627 The wide ways are the ways pointed out by prophets among every nation. By following these ways they could find the right direction, i.e. the truth concerning the Holy Prophet.

32 And We have made the heaven a guarded canopy and (yet) they turn aside from its signs.[1628]

1628 Arabia had its spiritualists, the astrologers and the diviners who pretended to have access to the secrets of heaven, for a full explanation of which see 3530. They are told that they cannot have any such access. Or the meaning may be that revelation (being called here heaven) is guarded against all attacks.

1629 They were afflicted with small evils, and the removal of these again brought to them a turn of good events. All this was by way of probation; the greater punishment which was to bring about the final overthrow of their power was yet in store for them.

1630 The Arabs, being an idolatrous people, would not, like the Christians, call Allah by the name Ar-Raḥmán; hence the Beneficent God is here spoken of in contrast with the idols. In practice, too, they denied the beneficence of Allah (the quality of showing mercy to His creatures without their deserving it), for they repeatedly asked for the punishment to be hastened to them, though they were again and again told to seek His mercy. Their scoffing at the Prophet was also due to the delay of the punishment, because they thought that the Prophet's warning contained empty threats.

1631 So prominent is the characteristic of haste in man that he may be said to have been created, as it were, of very haste. The expression is explained by what follows: Now will I show to you My signs, therefore do not ask Me to hasten them on.

1632 This verse in clear terms refutes those who say that no signs were shown by the Prophet. It explains that whenever it is said that signs are with Allah, the meaning is that He will show those signs, not that they will not be shown.

1633, see next page.

1633 The particular sign which they again and again demanded was that a destructive punishment like that which overtook former people should overtake them.

1634 The rejecters of truth have always scoffed at the idea of being punished for their rejection. Thus do all doers of evil think that they shall not be made to suffer the consequences of their misdeeds.

This and the two preceding verses assert in the clearest and most forcible words that the final triumph of truth will be brought about.

1635 That is, were it not that Allah were beneficent to you and guarded you, there is none who could guard you. Or if He, notwithstanding His beneficence, were to punish you because of your persistence in evil to such a degree as to call for the wrath of even a Beneficent Master, there would be none to guard you against that punishment.

45 Say: I warn you only by revelation; and the deaf do not hear the call whenever they are warned.

1636 The distinction given to Moses was that he overthrew a most powerful enemy. The last verse of the section predicts that a similar sign would be shown in the case of the Holy Prophet.

1637 The history of Abraham is contained in various chapters of the Holy Qur-án, the different portions supplementing each other, there being very little repetition. The following is a complete list of all references to him: 2:124–132, 133, 135, 136, 140, 259, 261; 3:64–67, 83; 4:125; 6:75–88; 9:114; 11:69–76; 12:6; 14:35–41; 15:51–60; 16:119–122; 19:41–49; 21:51–72; 22:26–29; 26:69–89; 29:16, 17, 24–27; 37:83–113; 38:45, 46; 43:26–28; 51:24–34; 58:26; 60:4.

1638 The story of Abraham's breaking the idols is related in Jewish Rabbinical literature, Gen R 38, and Tauna Debe Eliyahu 2 : 25 (Jewish En.).

1639 No regard being paid to punctuation, this passage قال بل فعله ج كبيرهم هذا has been wrongly translated by many; there is a stop after the words بل فعله and the words كبيرهم هذا are thus separated from the first words. The rendering, the chief of them here has done this, would be only correct if there were no pause after the first words, but the pause being there in all the copies of the Qur-án, the two phrases must be translated independently of each other. Thus fa'alahú would signify some doer has done it—Rz: فعله من فعله —and the word bal is not necessarily a particle of digression, implying the negation of what precedes it, often denoting no more than and or surely. Thus LL says: "Sometimes it is used to denote the passing from one subject to another without cancelling what precedes it and is synonymous with wao, as in the saying in the Qur-án, 85 : 20, 21 و الله من وراءهم محيط بل هو قرأن مجيد (And God from behind them is encompassing, and it is a glorious Qur-án; or here it may mean as in an example below) . . . (Msb)." The other passage كبيرهم هذا being an independent statement, means the chief of them is this, because it was left unbroken by Abraham, and is connected with what follows, therefore ask them, if they can speak. The use of the plural in the latter part of the statement is in no way objectionable, as examples of this kind, i.e. of transition from singular to plural, are of such frequent occurrence in Arabic literature and in the Holy Qur-án that I need not offer an explanation.

1640 نكسوا على رؤسهم may mean either that they were made to hang down their heads on account of the shame, for their deities had proved so helpless as to be unable to name even the person who did them injury, or that they were turned upon their heads upside down, i.e. they were made to fall back into disputation with Abraham after having confessed their weakness.

1641 This event no doubt kindled the fire of opposition against Abraham, but it did no harm to him and he remained in peace. The next verse shows that this fire was only a kaid, or a hard struggle, against him, or a war of opposition to him. They may have resolved to burn him, but their plan failed. See further 1910, 1910A.

1642 According to the Biblical account of Abraham, the patriarch undertook successful expeditions against Chedorlaomer, king of Elam, and his confederate kings. Rabbinical literature also gives the names of certain kings whom Abraham defeated.

1643 It is a Meccan Sura, and it shows clearly that the Qur-án regards Jacob not as Abraham's son, but as his grandson, for such is the significance of the word náfilah.

Allah delivers Prophets from their Enemies

76, 77. Noah is delivered. 78-82. David and Solomon are granted knowledge and power. 83, 84. Job is delivered. 85, 86. Ishmael, Idrís and Zulkifl are taken into Divine mercy. 87, 88. Jonah is delivered. 89, 90. Zacharias' prayer accepted. 91. Mary and her son. 92, 93. All people are a single nation.

76 And Noah, when he cried aforetime, so We answered him, and delivered him and his followers from the great calamity.

77 And We helped him against the people who rejected Our communications; surely they were an evil people, so We drowned them all.

78 And David and Solomon when they gave judgment concerning the field when the people's sheep pastured therein by night, and We were bearers of witness to their judgment.

79 So We made Solomon to understand it; and to each one We gave wisdom and knowledge; and We made the mountains, declaring glory (to Us), and the birds[1644] subservient to David; and We were the doers.

وَنُوحًا إِذْ نَادٰى مِنْ قَبْلُ فَاسْتَجَبْنَا

1644 Elsewhere it is stated that everything that exists in the heaven or the earth is made subservient to man (45 : 13); and on various occasions it is mentioned that the rivers, the sea, the sun and the moon, night and day, etc., are made subservient to man (16 : 12, 14; 13 : 2, etc.). This explains the meaning of making things subservient or taskhîr, which thus signifies only making them useful to man. Nor need any stories be built up on the mountains declaring glory, for elsewhere it is said that there is nothing that does not declare the glory of Allah (17 : 44).

But see 2022, where a similar statement occurs and is shown to refer to the conquests of David. For other references to David see 2 : 252; 4 : 164; 5 : 78; 6 : 85; 27 : 15, 16; 34 : 10–13; 38 : 17–30.

1645 It is not here stated that the making of coats of mail was not known before David. He had to fight many battles and against very strong enemies, and there is no doubt that in these battles he had to equip the armies of Israel in the best possible manner; and if he therefore equipped his troops with coats of mail on a large scale for their protection against the enemy, there is nothing wonderful about it. The story of iron becoming wax in his hands is a pure fable. See further 2023, 2024.

1646 For other references to Solomon see 2 : 102; 4 : 163; 6 : 85; 27 : 15–44; 34 : 12–14; 38 : 30–40. The meaning given in the margin conveys the true significance of the words. Solomon's fleet did him an important service. According to Biblical history, "with the Phenicians he united in maritime commerce, sending out a fleet once in three years from Ezion-geber, at the head of the gulf of Aqaba, to Ophir, presumably on the eastern coast of the Arabian peninsula. From this distant part and others on the way he derived fabulous amounts of gold and tropical products. These revenues gave him almost unlimited means for increasing the glory of his capital city and palace, and for the perfection of his civil and military organization" (Jewish Ency.). Also compare 14 : 32: "And He made the ships subservient to you, that they might run their course in the sea by His command," which is in exact accordance with what is stated here. For what taskhīr, or subservience, signifies, see 1644.

1647 The shayāṭīn, i.e. the devils that dived to bring up pearls from the bottom of the sea, were not different from the divers of to-day, though they must have been fiercer and stronger men, because strength had to supply the place of knowledge in those days. The word shaiṭān in Arabic signifies one who is excessively proud, rebellious, or audacious, whether a man, or a jinn, or a beast (LL). See further 2027.

1648 Restoring Job's ahl, i.e. followers or family, does not mean that they were raised to 88 So We responded to him and delivered him from the grief, and thus do We deliver the believers.

89 And Zacharias, when he cried to his Lord: O my Lord! leave me not alone; and Thou art the best of inheritors.[1655] life from among the dead, for when a man is separated from his friends or family we speak of his friends or family being restored to him without entertaining the least idea of their being raised to life from among the dead. See 2144, 2145, and 2146, where is described Job's joining his family and friends after a long journey accompanied by many difficulties.

1649 The name given here is Zulkifl, which literally means one having a portion that would suffice (Rgh). The commentators differ in identifying him with one of the Biblical prophets, Zacharias, Elias, or Joshua (Rz). Rodwell states, on the authority of Travels of Niebuhr, that the Arabs call Ezekiel by the name of Kifl. The suggestion, therefore, that by Zulkifl is meant the Prophet Ezekiel is more sound. This prophet is mentioned only once again, as here without any reference to his history, in 38 : 48.

1650 Zunnún is another name for Jonah, the Arabic equivalent of the latter being Yúnus, by which name the prophet is mentioned in 6 : 87, 10 : 98, and 37 : 140. Zunnún literally signifies lord of the fish, and a similar epithet صاحب الحوت i.e. the companion of the fish, is given in 68 : 48. The title of the prophet is taken from the incident of the fish, for an explanation of which see 2123.

1651 The Qur-án is far from teaching that Jonah was wroth with Allah. Evidently he was wroth with his people because of their stubbornness (Rz). See also 2121.

1652 لن نقدر عليه is, according to commentators, equivalent to لن نضيق عليه i.e. we would not straiten him; and the same is the meaning of قدر عليه as given by the lexicologists. See LL, which quotes several authorities.

1653 ظلمات البحر signifies calamities or hardships of the sea (M-LL); and difficulty is compared to darkness because of the inability of a man to find his way when in difficulty, as when in darkness.

1654 Jonah's prayer gives us a true picture of human nature in affliction. Man, no doubt, always makes himself the sufferer of loss, and it is Divine grace which takes him by the hand. The "I" here stands for "man." As for zulm, according to some its primary significance is nuqs (MF, TA), i.e. the making to suffer loss or detriment (LL).

1655 That is, one who will remain after all have perished.

94 Therefore whoever shall do of good deeds and he is a believer, there shall be no denying of his exertion, and surely We will write (it) down for him.

1656 By fitness is meant fitness to bear a child, because she was thought to be barren.

1657 Nothing is said about immaculate conception here. The guarding of chastity, which is the true significance of احصنت فرجها does not preclude the lawful union of husband and wife.

1658 The basic principle of all religions taught by the prophets has been one and the same in all ages and all countries, that Allah is the Lord of all and He alone must be served. The word ummat either signifies a community or religion (Rgh), the word being used in the latter sense elsewhere in the Holy Qur-án, as in 43 : 22, this being, in fact, the primary significance of the word, which means a way or a course of acting and also religion (LL). The basic principles of the religions of all the prophets are one and the same, and therefore all prophets themselves form a single community.

1659 By qaryah, i.e. town, here are meant ahli-qaryah, i.e. the people of a town, and harám means wájib, i.e. binding, essential, or due, according to Kasáí, I'Ab giving the same meaning

98 Surely you and what you worship besides Allah are the firewood of hell; to it you shall come.

99 Had these been gods, they would not have come to it and all shall abide therein.

100 For them therein shall be groaning and therein they shall not hear.[1662]

101 Surely (as for) those for whom the good has already gone forth from Us, they shall be kept far off from it;[1663] to the word by a slight variation in the reading, and in support of this significance is quoted a verse of Abdur Rahman bin Jumana, a poet of the days of ignorance:

فان حراما لا ارى الدهر باكيا + على شجوه الا بكيت على عمرو

where ḥarám is evidently equivalent to wájib (Rz). The verse reveals the great truth that those who are made to taste of death are not sent back into this world. Nisai and Ibn-i-Maja relate a saying of the Holy Prophet according to which Jábir, son of Abdulla, was informed by the Prophet that his father Abdulla, who was slain in a battle with the enemies of Islam, on being asked by the Almighty what he desired most, expressed a wish to go back into the world and be slain again in the cause of truth, but received the reply that this could not be, for "the word has gone forth from Me that they shall not return," where the concluding words are evidently the concluding words of this verse, and therefore the verse, read along with this saying, settles conclusively that no one who is dead returns to life in this world. The verse also points out that a nation that is destroyed does not rise again.

1660 The previous verse contains a prohibition against the return to life of those who are dead, or the rise of nations that are once destroyed. This one points out that even Gog and Magog, notwithstanding their mighty predominance in the world, will follow the same law. For ḥattá, meaning even, see LL, who quotes Mgh.

1661 This shows that a time will come when Gog and Magog shall prevail over the whole world. The breaking forth from every elevated place signifies the taking possession of every position of advantage and of eminence.

1662 Those who turn a deaf ear to the preaching of truth here shall be raised deaf in the life after death.

1663 This verse totally refutes the false idea that even the righteous shall first go to hell. They are here declared to be so far off from it as not even to hear its faintest sound.

1664 It is the bliss of communion with the Divine Being which the souls of the righteous long for, so it is that bliss in which they shall live in the hereafter.

103 The great fearful event shall not grieve them, and the angels shall meet them: This is your day which you were promised.

وَّاحِدٌ ۚ فَهَلْ اَنْتُمْ مُّسْلِمُوْنَ ○

1665 The rolling up of the heaven and the bringing about of a new creation refer to the complete transformation which was to be brought about in Arabia by the Prophet's message, a transformation so great that, as it were, both earth and heaven were changed. Instead of the mutual strifes of one tribe with another, leading to endless confusion and disorder in the land, there was a single united nation marching forth with triumph and enlightenment, and instead of the childish fancies and impious superstitions of fortune-tellers, diviners, and star-worshippers, and in place of idolatry which degraded human nature itself, there was an entire resignation to Divine will and holy communion with the real Source of all Holiness. This interpretation is corroborated by the verse that follows.

1666 The Qur-án had repeatedly warned the unbelievers that Islam would be made triumphant in the land, and the righteous servants who were made to suffer persecution would one day be masters of the land. The words also contain a prophecy of the possession of the Holy Land by the Muslims, which was fulfilled in the Caliphate of 'Umar. Compare Ps. 37 : 29.

1667 While the words no doubt contain a reference to the merciful dealing with the Prophet's opponents, the real significance is that the Prophet's advent will prove a mercy not only to the Arabs by making them a foremost nation in the world, but to the whole of humanity. And, in fact, the teachings of the Qur-án have not only benefited its followers, but even those who still reject its message, for, notwithstanding their rejection of it, they have accepted many of its majestic principles. Even European nations will be found to have prospered to the extent to which they have acted upon the principles of Islam. Islam has, moreover, proved a mercy to the nations on account of having brought back into the world all those teachings leading to the glory and greatness of man which had been quite lost to the world before its advent, and of having eradicated numerous superstitious beliefs and doctrines degrading humanity.

These words clearly establish the excellence of the Holy Prophet above all other prophets

109 But if they turn back, say: I have given you warning in fairness and I do not know whether what you are threatened with is near or far:
110 Surely He knows what is spoken openly and He knows what you hide:
111 And I do not know if this may be a trial for you and a provision till a time.
112 He said: O my Lord! judge Thou with truth; and our Lord is the Beneficent God Whose help is sought against what you ascribe (to Him).

of the world, for whereas every prophet before him was sent as a mercy to a particular people, he is sent as a mercy to the whole world. Through him shall all nations of the earth be blessed. And there is no doubt that the Cimmerian darkness which prevailed over the whole world before the advent of the Prophet was dispelled by his advent, and light and learning have followed the footsteps of Islam.

The Title and context.

THIS is the sixth chapter of the third Meccan group, and while the last chapter dealt generally with the ultimate triumph of truth, this deals particularly with the triumph of the truth proclaimed by the Holy Prophet at Mecca, from whence he was being expelled, and this city is plainly pronounced herein as being the future centre of the Muslims, where pilgrims from all quarters of the world would resort. Here too the Muslims are permitted to fight in defence of the Sacred House, which was really a defence of the liberties of all religions. The chapter is called The Pilgrimage because the proclamation of pilgrimage originally made by Abraham was now repeated by the Holy Prophet and addressed to the whole world, being no longer confined to the borders of Arabia. The permanence of the pilgrimage was really a sign of the permanence of Islam, hence the triumph of Islam is the real significance of the proclamation of pilgrimage.

Subject-matter.

The internal arrangement of the chapter is clear from the abstract. A promise is given to the righteous at the close of the last chapter that they shall inherit the land. This implies the doom of the present masters, consequently they are warned of the approach of judgment and of the terribleness of their doom in the opening verses of this chapter. The second section asserts in the most clear and emphatic words the certainty of Divine help to the Holy Prophet, the emphasis being no doubt due to the utter helplessness of the Prophet, against whom secret plans had been formed, and who was about to flee from his enemies. The next section asserts the triumph of the believers, who were now fleeing by twos and threes to escape persecution by their cruel oppressors. Their triumph, however, involved the conquest of Mecca, for without that spiritual centre their triumph could not be complete, hence the fourth section speaks of the Sacred House and the pilgrimage to it. The connected subject of sacrifices is dealt with next, and the sacrifices which the Muslims themselves were now required to make, viz. the laying down of their lives in the cause of truth, are spoken of in the sixth section, which introduces the subject of fighting. The opposition to the Holy Prophet is mentioned in the seventh, and the eighth clearly states that the faithful shall be established in the land when they have made great sacrifices. Allah's dealing, however, with even the opponents of the truth is merciful, and therefore the punishment is withheld for a while. This we are told in the ninth section, which also shows that mere differences of belief are not punished in this world. The tenth, which is the last section, sums up the whole by showing that polytheism shall ultimately be uprooted.

Date of revelation.

Though it is admitted by all authorities that the major portion of this chapter was revealed at Mecca, doubts have been entertained as to certain verses which are said to have been revealed at Medina. I'Ab is of opinion that vv. 19–22 belong to Medina revelation (AH), while the rest of the chapter is considered by him to be Meccan. But his opinion as to the actual time or place of the revelation of these verses is not based on historical information, but is really due to his interpretation of them. He thinks that the words these are two adversaries who dispute about their Lord refer to the two parties at Badr, but a reference to the text will show that the words refer to the believers and unbelievers generally; and there is not a word in these verses indicating that they speak of two fighting armies and not of two parties controverting each other's religious views. The text, on the other hand, favours the latter interpretation. Moreover, the omission of these verses seriously interrupts the continuity of the subject. The opening words of v. 18 clearly speak of two parties, the believers and the unbelievers, as is shown by v. 18, where two classes of people are mentioned, those who obey Allah and those against whom punishment has become necessary, and while the latter are spoken of in vv. 19–22, their punishment being clearly indicated there, the former are spoken of in vv. 23, 24. Hence vv. 19–22 must have been revealed along with the rest of this portion of the chapter, and their Meccan origin is thus established beyond all doubt.

Rodwell is certainly wrong in placing this chapter among the latest Medina revelations; he is also in error when he considers it to be 107th in the order of revelation. Muir places it at the close of the Meccan suras of the fifth period, and external as well as internal evidence tends to show the correctness of his view. The suggestion that vv. 26–41, speaking of the pilgrimage, belong to Medina is without a foundation. Regarding vv. 39–41, however, I may add that though they speak of permission to fight, it does not follow that they were revealed at Medina merely because no fighting took place at Mecca. For a full discussion of this point see 1697. It is noteworthy that the oath of allegiance taken by the Medina converts at 'Aqaba, before the Holy Prophet's flight, contained a promise that they would fight in defence of the Holy Prophet. Such an oath would not have been taken if a revelation permitting fighting in self-defence had not been received by the Holy Prophet. As regards vv. 58, 59, see 1705, and in the matter of v. 67 no ground is given regarding its Medina origin.

SECTION I

The Judgment

1, 2. Terribleness of the judgment. 3, 4. Deniers. 5–7. The dead shall be raised. 8–10. Disgrace in this life as forerunner of punishment in the hereafter.

In the name of Allah, the Beneficent, the Merciful.

بِسْمِ اللّٰهِ الرَّحْمٰنِ الرَّحِيْمِ ○

1 O people! guard against (the punishment from) your Lord; surely the violence[1668] of the hour is a grievous thing.[1669]

يٰٓاَيُّهَا النَّاسُ اتَّقُوْا رَبَّكُمْ ۚ اِنَّ زَلْزَلَةَ السَّاعَةِ شَيْءٌ عَظِيْمٌ ○

2 On the day when you shall see it, every woman giving suck shall quit in confusion what she suckled, and every pregnant woman shall lay down her burden, and you shall see men intoxicated, and they shall not be intoxicated but the chastisement of Allah will be severe.

Ar. thou shalt.

يَوْمَ تَرَوْنَهَا تَذْهَلُ كُلُّ مُرْضِعَةٍ عَمَّآ اَرْضَعَتْ وَتَضَعُ كُلُّ ذَاتِ حَمْلٍ حَمْلَهَا وَتَرَى النَّاسَ سُكٰرٰى وَمَا هُمْ بِسُكٰرٰى وَلٰكِنَّ عَذَابَ اللّٰهِ شَدِيْدٌ ○

1668 The word zalzalah originally signifies a great motion and a violent agitation (I'Ab, Rz), and hence زلزلة الارض means an earthquake. But the use of the word in other senses is extensive. Zalzala means originally he put him into a state of commotion or agitation (LL). And you say جاء بالابل يزلزلها meaning he brought the camels, driving them with violence (TA). And according to the same authority زلزل القوم means the people were turned away from the right course and fear was cast into their hearts. It is noteworthy that the word is specially used in connection with the enemy's defeat, implying a casting of terror into its heart. Thus in 33 : 11 and also in a prayer of the Prophet when all the Arab tribes allied themselves to destroy the small Muslim community at Medina, we find اللهم اهزم الاحزاب و زلزلهم i.e. O Allah! put to flight the combined forces and make their state of affairs to be unsound (TA-LL), or rather we may translate zalzilhum as meaning cast terror into their hearts (IAs). And according to Ibn-i-Anbari اصابت القوم زلزلة means a condition of affright befell the people (LL). And zalázil (which is plural of zalzalah, and is not a plural of an unknown singular, as LL seems to think) is plainly given as meaning difficulties, trials, afflictions (TA-LL). Thus the zalzalatus sá'at is nothing but the terror or affliction of the hour. Such is also one of the significances adopted by AH.

1669 In the Holy Qur-án the word As-sá'at or the hour does not necessarily imply the day of judgment. It often implies the time of judgment in this life, the time when the threatened doom overtakes a people, and this seems to be the significance here, for the very next verse depicts that terror in such words as are only applicable to this life—there being neither pregnant women nor those giving suck on the judgment day. Some consider that a severe shaking of the earth is meant as a sign of the approach of the great judgment, but even in that case it might imply any terrible calamity, such as a great war.

3 And among men there is he who disputes about Allah without knowledge and follows every rebellious devil ;[1670]

4 Against him it is written down that whoever takes him for a friend, he shall lead him astray and conduct him to the chastisement of the burning fire.

5 O people ! if you are in doubt about the raising,[1671] then surely We created you from dust,[1672] then from a small life-germ, then from a clot, then from a lump of flesh, complete in make and incomplete, that We may make clear to you ;[1673] and We cause what We please to stay in the wombs till an appointed time, then We bring you forth as babies, then that you may attain your maturity ; and of you is he who is caused to die, and of you is he who is brought back to the worst part of life,[1674] so that after having knowledge he does not know anything ; and you see the earth sterile land, but 1670 The words may apply to Abu Jahl or Naḍar-bin-Hars̱, but they might as well apply to any one else answering the description. The devil here is, as very frequently in the Holy Qur-án, the devil in human form (Rz).

1671 The word ba's̱ (raising) is used in three senses in the Holy Qur-án : viz. (1) the raising of the dead to life according to their good or evil deeds on the judgment day, which is the day of the great manifestation of all spiritual realities ; (2) the raising of the spiritually dead to life by the prophets ; and (3) the raising up of prophets by Allah for the guidance of mankind. The word as used here may include all three cases, whether it is the denial of the resurrection or the denial of Allah's raising a prophet (i.e. Muhammad) or the denial of the Prophet's raising them to spiritual life. The argument contained in this and the following verses is equally applicable to all, but it most prominently refers to the spiritual resurrection of the dead.

1672 These words explain the meaning of Adam's, or man's, creation from dust, which is frequently referred to in the Holy Qur-án, for all people are first plainly addressed and are subsequently told that they are all created from dust. But as it is clear that the meaning here cannot be that their figures are moulded from clay, we are led to the conclusion that the reference to Adam's, or man's, creation from dust implies simply his humble origin, or the ultimate springing of all life from earth.

1673 By the various elements from which man is said to be created here are meant the various stages through which every human child passes, the object being to show how humble is his origin. Or the reference may be to the various stages of life through which man has passed in his evolution to the present stage of perfection. Attention is drawn in this to the growth and development of spiritual life in man.

1674 By ارذل العمر or the worst part of life is meant dotage and decrepitude (Rz).

when We send down on it the water, it stirs and swells and brings forth of every kind a beautiful herbage.[1675]

6 This is because Allah is the Truth and because He gives life to the dead and because He has power over all things,

7 And because the hour is coming, there is no doubt about it; and because Allah shall raise up those who are in the graves.[1676]

8 And among men there is he who disputes about Allah without knowledge and without guidance and without an illuminating book,

9 Turning away haughtily[1677] that he may lead (others) astray from the way of Allah; for him is disgrace in this world, and on the day of resurrection We will make him taste the punishment of burning:

1675 The stirring and swelling of the earth means its stirring and swelling with the growth of herbage. Compare 41:39 and see 2210. The illustration draws attention to the fact that revelation quickens dead hearts as rain quickens dead earth. The next verse makes it plain: Because He gives life to the dead and because He has power over all things. See also what follows here.

1676 To understand what is meant by those who are in the graves, compare 35:22: "Surely Allah makes whom He pleases hear, and you cannot make those hear who are in the graves." Therefore the significance is that even those whom you look upon as incorrigible will be brought over to the acceptance of truth by Allah.

1677 ثانى عطفه signifies literally folding up, twisting, or turning his side ('Iṭf meaning the side of a man from the head to the hip), but the expression is used metaphorically to signify behaving proudly (LL) or turning away (Rgh). I'Ab interprets it as meaning showing haughtiness, and Ibn-i-juraij as turning aside from the truth (AH).

Certainty of Divine Help

11–13. The weak in faith. 14–16. The Prophet shall be helped. 17. Differences of belief to be judged hereafter. 18–22. Rejecters punished with disgrace and grief.

11 And among men is he who serves Allah (standing) on the verge,[1678] so that if good befalls him he is satisfied therewith, but if a trial afflicts him he turns back headlong; he loses this world as well as the hereafter; that is a manifest loss.

1678 على حرف (lit. on the verge) is variously explained, the ultimate significance being in all cases the same. LL quotes many of these explanations. It either means standing aloof with respect to religion in a fluctuating state, like him who is in the outskirts of the army, who if sure of victory and spoil stands firm and otherwise flees (Kf, Bd), or the meaning is, who serves Allah in doubt or suspense, being unsteady like him who stands on the edge of a mountain (Q, Zj); or who serves Allah in one mode of circumstances, i.e. when in ample circumstances (S, Q). All these explanations indicate the attitude of a man who wavers, being ready to quit the faith on any pretence.

1679 This passage is misconstrued on account of a misconception in connection with the personal pronoun hu in yanṣurahu, which refers really to the Holy Prophet. The second difficulty is in connection with the object of yaqṭa', i.e. cut (it) off, which is understood as being really the Divine assistance, which the opponents are told must come to the Holy Prophet however hard their struggle against that Divine assistance, and this is clearly indicated by the concluding words of the verse. The prophecies of the final triumph of truth and of the coming of Divine assistance to the Holy Prophet were repeatedly declared in the Holy Qur-án, and the unbelievers were enraged at this. They are told that the Divine assistance must come, and that they should leave no stone unturned in their struggle against it, insomuch that, if they could, they should rise to heaven and cut off all heavenly or Divine assistance from the Prophet. Or the meaning may be as given in the margin, the significance being, in that case, that they may carry their anger to the greatest possible extremity and be driven to the utmost desperation, yet they would be unable to stop the coming of Divine help. The meaning is in either case that Divine assistance which is promised to the Prophet shall come to him most surely, however hard the struggle made against him, or however great the disappointment of the opponents.

1680 It is implied that differences in religious beliefs do not call for a punishment in this life, but that they shall be decided on the day of judgment. It is the mischievous conduct of those who oppose the propagation of the truth that calls for punishment in this life.

1681 The verse contains a clear prophecy that the opponents shall ultimately be brought low before the Prophet.

1682 The two adversaries are the believers and the unbelievers. It should be noted that the enmity of the two parties, whose original difference is only a dispute about their Lord, is now assuming a graver aspect, and the fate of the two in the coming conflicts is clearly foretold—of the unbelievers in vv. 19–22 and of the believers in vv. 23–25.

1683 The iron whips indicate holding in subjection. Thus says TA قمعه قهره و ذلله i.e. qama' (which is the root from which maqma', meaning whip, is derived) signifies he held him in subjection and brought him to submission.

1684 من غم (from grief), being a badal for minhá, explains the nature of the chastisement in this and the previous verse. It is a grief which will constantly grow and burn their souls so as to melt them.

1685 There is a reference here to the conquests of the great neighbouring kingdoms by the Muslims and the bringing of the treasures of those kingdoms into the possession of the Arabs. The following incident, mentioned by Baihaqi, shows that the companions of the Prophet understood these prophecies in this sense: The bracelets of Kisrá, the Persian monarch, were brought to 'Umar, and he caused Suráqa, son of Málik, to wear them, on which he praised the Almighty. The reason for 'Umar causing the bracelets to be worn by Suráqa is also given by the same authority in another report, according to which the Holy Prophet had said to Suráqa: "How will you feel when you wear the bracelets of Kisrá?" ("Khaṣáiṣ-ul-Kubrá," vol. ii., p. 113; printed at Hyderabad, Deccan).

1686 Or 'ákif may signify the dweller in Mecca, and bád, the dwellers in the desert, or the two may respectively signify one who dwells in it constantly and one who comes to it occasionally. The unbelievers, being then in possession of the Sacred Mosque, prevented the Muslims from using it. They are told that this state of things shall be brought to an end, for it must be open to all visitors, and that could only be brought about by the Muslims being made masters of it.

1687 The words are addressed to the Holy Prophet, and contain a mighty prophecy that Mecca will become the centre to which men shall come for pilgrimage. The grandeur of this prophecy becomes the greater when it is borne in mind that it was announced just at the time when the Holy Prophet was being driven away from Mecca by his enemies, who were being left the sole masters of the place. At the time of this prophecy the Holy Prophet and his followers had no access to the holy place, as is clearly stated in v. 25. Just under circumstances when Mecca seemed to have lost every chance of becoming a Muslim centre, and when the Muslims themselves were in danger of being entirely swept off, the mighty prophecy is pronounced in the most forcible words that Islam shall spread to all nations and Mecca shall become the universal centre to which pilgrims from all nations shall always continue to resort. This one sign is sufficient to demonstrate the truth of the Divine message to the Holy Prophet, for no human foresight could ever utter such a grand and sublime prophecy under such adverse circumstances.

1688 The dámir, or the lean camel, is particularly mentioned here to indicate the great distances from which the pilgrims should come.

1689 The subject of sacrifice is one that is specially related to the pilgrimage, because every pilgrim must sacrifice an animal. The outward act of sacrifice on this occasion indicates the reason which has required pilgrimage to be made one of the principles of Islam. In fact, it is the lesson of sacrifice that is taught in both these institutions. The subject as regards the sacrificing of animals is fully discussed in the next section. Here it may only be noted that the pilgrimage requires all comforts of the body to be sacrificed before an ordinance of Allah, and this is the practical lesson taught in pilgrimage, without which

It may be added that the act of the pilgrim finds an echo throughout the Muslim world, for every Muslim in well-to-do circumstances sacrifices an animal on this occasion, which is known as the 'Íd uḍḍuḥá.

1690 The mention of the Ka'ba as the Ancient House, here and in v. 33, shows that it is so old that it came to be known throughout Arabia by that name, thus pointing to its very remote antiquity. See further 170.

1691 The principle of sacrifice is one which is accepted in one form or another by all nations of the world. Like all other religious principles which are universally recognized, the principle of sacrifice finds a deeper meaning in Islam. The outward act is still there as of old, but it no more conveys the meaning attached to it in some ancient religions, viz. that of appeasing an offended Deity, or that of serving as an atonement for sins, but signifies the sacrifice of the sacrificer himself, and becomes thus an outward symbol of his readiness to lay down his life if required and to sacrifice all his interests and desires in the cause of truth. Hence it is that words introducing the subject of sacrifice are immediately followed by an injunction to submit oneself entirely to Allah, Who is the one God, i.e. the only Being Who deserves to be made the true object of one's love and the true goal of one's life. See further what follows.

1692 It is by the mention of Allah's name that an animal is sacrificed, and here the Muslims are told that it is not an empty mention of a word that they make, but the meaning underlying it is that their own hearts should tremble at the mention of that name, and they should bear in mind, if they have sacrificed an animal over which they hold control, how much more necessary it is that they should lay down their lives in the way of Allah, Who is not only their Master but also their Creator and their Sustainer, and thus exercises a far greater authority over them than they do over animals. Hence a verse speaking of sacrifices is immediately followed by one which requires the exercise of great patience and endurance under hard trials by the faithful. In the sacrifice of animals Islam thus gives a lesson to its followers of laying down their own lives in the cause of truth.

1693 The meaning conveyed here is the same as that in the previous verse. The camels which are brought for sacrifice to Mecca by the pilgrims are here stated to be only outward signs of the true religion of Allah, that religion being no other than the religion of entire submission and of laying down all one has, even one's life, in the way of Allah.

1694 The flesh of the animals sacrificed is not to be wasted, but it should serve as food for the poor and the needy. Thus, while inwardly laying down one's life in the cause of truth, it is to be borne in mind that outwardly a Muslim should devote himself to the service of humanity. The burying of the flesh of the numerous sacrifices at Mecca, on the occasion of the pilgrimage, is not in accordance with any injunction of the Holy Qur-án or any saying of the Holy Prophet. It can be turned to good use.

Believers permitted to Fight

39. Fighting permitted in self-defence. 40, 41. Object of war to establish freedom of religion. 42–46. People destroyed formerly. 47, 48. Punishment will not be hastened.

39 Permission (to fight) is given to those upon whom war is made because they are oppressed, and most surely Allah is well able to assist them;[1697]

أُذِنَ لِلَّذِينَ يُقَاتَلُونَ بِأَنَّهُمْ ظُلِمُوا ۚ
وَإِنَّ اللَّهَ عَلَىٰ نَصْرِهِمْ لَقَدِيرٌ ۝

1695 This verse settles conclusively that it is not the outward act of sacrifice which is acceptable, but the deep meaning of sacrifice which underlies it. Those who consider Islam to be a religion of ceremonial should note these plain words. It should also be borne in mind that the idea of atonement is quite foreign to the Islamic sacrifices. It is the righteous whom Islam requires to sacrifice, and this is hinted at in the words, to Him is acceptable the guarding (against evil) on your part.

1696 That which shall be repelled from the believers is the mischief of the unbelievers (Rz). With this verse, which brings this section to a close, is introduced a new subject—the subject of fighting in the way of Allah, which is dealt with at length in the following section. This sheds light upon the connection which exists between the two subjects, and, moreover, serves to illustrate how apparently unconnected verses are deeply connected with one another, the connection being sometimes so deep as to be undiscoverable to a superficial observer. The connection in this case is that when the true meaning of sacrifice has been taught, the Muslim has in fact been prepared to bring into practice the theory of the sacrifice. Hence he is told that the time is near when he shall be required to lay down his very life in the defence of truth, which the opponents are striving to exterminate. Therefore, the subject of fighting in the cause of truth is a fitting sequel to the subject of sacrifices, as casting further light upon the inner meaning of sacrifice, and also requiring that doctrine to be carried into practice.

1697 According to authentic reports, this is the earliest permission given to the Muslims to fight. There is nothing to show that this verse was not revealed at Mecca. On the other hand, it is clearly a Meccan revelation, like the rest of this chapter, and it was owing to this revelation that in the well-known oath of allegiance taken at 'Aqaba the Holy Prophet required a promise from the Medina deputation that they would defend him against his enemies even as they would defend their own children. The words in which the permission is granted show clearly that war was first made on the Muslims by their opponents; and secondly, that the Muslims had already suffered great oppression at the hands of their persecutors. It also shows that when permission was given the Muslims were very weak, for they are comforted by the words that Allah is able to help them. The words of the next verse, those who have been expelled from their homes, may refer to the immigration to Abyssinia, or to the slow exodus to Medina which commenced soon after the 'Aqaba allegiance.

1698 Those who call Islam a religion of fanaticism may be reminded here that the religious freedom which was established by Islam in a country like Arabia thirteen hundred years ago has not yet been surpassed by the most civilized and tolerant of nations, while many of the civilized Christian nations are still as far from upholding this noble principle as ever they were. It deserves to be noted that the lives of Muslims are to be sacrified not only to stop their own persecution by their opponents and to save their own mosques, but to save churches, synagogues, and cloisters as well—in fact, to establish perfect religious freedom. The mosques, though they are the places where the name of Allah is remembered most of all, come in for their share of protection even after the churches and the synagogues—such is the tolerant attitude of Islam to other religions. Has any other religious teacher taught that noble principle, or is there a single direction in the sacred scriptures of any other religion that its followers should lay down their lives to protect the places of worship of other religions? Muslims closely followed these directions, and every commander of an army had express orders to respect all houses of worship, and even the cloisters of monks, along with their inmates.

1699 The statement made here affords a conclusive proof that the ailments spoken of in the Holy Qur-án are not the ailments of the body, but spiritual diseases. Many an intricate point can be easily settled if this fact is borne in mind.

1699A Here the Qur-án seems to speak plainly of the punishment of the opponents of truth who were to come later. The people spoken of here are a people who have been allowed to oppose the progress of Islam for a thousand years.

1700 The phrase which I render as strive to oppose Our communications is سعوا في ايٰتنا معاجزين The first part of this is a parallel to سعيت في امر فلان which, according to LL, means I strove in respect of the affair of such a one either to rectify or to vitiate it, and the latter part, mu'ájizín, signifies fighting and contesting (with the prophets and their followers) to render (them) unable (to perform the command of Allah). See LL for authorities.

وَإِنَّ الظّٰلِمِيْنَ لَفِيْ شِقَاقٍ بَعِيْدٍ ۙ

1701 The story which is suggested as explaining this verse is absurd and altogether baseless. That the story of the praising of idols and of according recognition to any power or privilege of intercession in their behalf is a pure forgery is shown in 2382. Here I may only note that all' learned commentators have always rejected it, as Rz observes: As regards those who aim at accuracy and truth they say that this story is false and a forgery. Bd makes similar remarks.

The words of the Qur-án do not, and cannot, mean that when a prophet recites a revelation the devil introduces his own words into his recitation. Apart from the apparent absurdity of it, we find the Qur-án negativing any such suggestion. For instance, in 72:26-28, which was revealed before this chapter, we find the plain statement that the messages of the Lord are delivered in all their purity: "He does not reveal His secrets to any, except to him whom He chooses as an apostle; for surely He makes a guard to march before him and after him, so that He may know that they have truly delivered the messages of their Lord." Moreover, it is absolutely inconceivable that such an important incident as the Prophet's having accepted the intercession of idols should have been mentioned in the Qur-án eight years after it happened. It is admitted on all hands that the chapter An-Najm (the 53rd chapter), in which the change is said to have taken place, was revealed about the fifth year after the Prophet's preaching, while the portion of this chapter under discussion was revealed on the eve of the Prophet's departure from Mecca. That more than half the Qur-án should have been revealed during this long period without a single reference to the alleged story, and that it should then have been quite unnecessarily referred to in a sura where it is quite out of place, is alone sufficient to give the lie to the contention of men like Muir that this story is referred to here. It is also worthy of note that the form of the words is so general that it of necessity follows (if the reference to the alleged story may be taken to be implied here) that every prophet and every apostle must have experienced a similar insertion into his revelation at the devil's suggestion, but this idea must be condemned, not only because no single word of the Holy Qur-án can be produced in its support, but also because history falsifies it. For internal evidence as to the falsity of the story see 2382.

What is the meaning of the words then? Tamanná, according to all lexicologists, signifies he desired; and according to TA, tamanní signifies the desire to attain to that which is liked by one. Now, what every prophet desires is the establishing in the world of the Unity of the Divine Being and of the truth that is revealed to him, and it is with this desire of every prophet that the devil, who is no other than his leading opponent, interferes, instigating men, making suggestions to them, as stated here, to oppose the prophet and the spread of the truth. That this is the true meaning is also shown by the context, which deals with the establishing of the truth and the desire of the opponents of truth to annihilate it. See the previous verse, which condemns those who fight and contest with the Prophet to render him unable to estab-

1702 The devil's strivings against the Prophet become a trial for the weak, who, unable to endure the severe persecutions of their enemies, go back to unbelief.

1703 It should be noted that in the concluding passage the unjust (ẓálimín) are substituted for the devil, and opposition for ilqá or suggestion, thus showing that the devil's suggestion is nothing but the opposition of the enemies of truth, being a suggestion to the hearts of the enemies of the Prophet.

1705 The mere occurrence of the word hájarú (they fled) in this verse does not show that it was not revealed at Mecca, for a flight of the faithful to Abyssinia had taken place as early as the fifth year of the Holy Prophet's preaching. Moreover, it should be noted that the Holy Prophet, with Abú Bakr and 'Ali, were the last men to depart from Mecca on the occasion of the second flight. A true and generous leader of men, he waited to see his faithful followers depart before he left, so that their safety might be ensured. There is no doubt that if he had left his followers behind him they would have encountered a very hard fate at the hands of an exasperated enemy. The reference to some being slain after their flight is clearly prophetical.

1706 This verse permits the Muslims, who were long persecuted and oppressed, to punish their persecutors, but at the same time recommends pardon and forgiveness by referring to those two attributes of the Divine Being in the concluding words of the verse.

1707 Apparently the succession of the day and the night refers here to the turn of fortune hinted at in the previous verse, because an oppressed community could not punish its persecutors unless it gained the mastery over them. The same is indicated in the two attributes of the Divine Being with which the verse is closed. The verses that follow contain hints to the same effect.

66 And He it is who has brought you to life, then He will cause you to die, then bring you to life (again); most surely man is ungrateful.

1708 The first part of the verse gives a promise of victory to the Muslims, while the latter part warns the opponents that Allah withholds the punishment from them for a time, for He is kind and merciful to men. The withholding of the heaven means the withholding of the punishment which the opponents were told would come down upon them from heaven.

1709 This verse gives us another proof of the principles of tolerance and equal religious freedom to all inculcated by Islam.

1711 The true religion of Allah, which has been the religion of all the prophets, is Islam, or entire submission to Allah. Abraham prayed that from among his descendants there should arise a nation of Muslims (2:128). Abraham himself is repeatedly spoken of in the Holy Qur-án as being a Muslim, for he submitted himself to Allah with the complete submission of a true Muslim.

PART XVIII

CHAPTER XXIII

THE BELIEVERS

(Al-Mu'minún)

REVEALED AT MECCA

(6 sections and 118 verses)

Abstract:

Sec. 1. Success of the faithful.
Sec. 2, 3. Noah and the prophets after him.
Sec. 4. A repetition of the history of prophets.
Sec. 5. Polytheism is self-condemned.
Sec. 6. Regrets of the wicked.

The Title, context, and date of revelation.

THIS chapter, which brings the third group of the Meccan chapters to a close, is known under the name of The Believers because it deals with the success of the believers. It is rightly regarded by Sayooti as the last Meccan revelation. At any rate there is no difference of opinion as to its Meccan origin, and that it belongs to the latest period of the Holy Prophet's Meccan career is amply attested by internal evidence. The concluding section, which states how the wicked shall regret their deeds, seems to be like a parting word uttered to a relentless enemy. The opponents were made to taste of torment, and again they were shown mercy, but punishment and mercy had left them as reprobate as ever. Surely there is clear evidence here of the late revelation of this chapter, and Sayooti's opinion seems to be well founded.

Subject-matter.

As the final word of kind advice and as a firm expression of the success of the believers, the chapter no doubt forms an appropriate sequel to a group of chapters dealing with the great and triumphant future of Islam. It seems to continue, in fact, the subject-matter of the last chapter, and therefore asserts the success of the believers in clear and forcible words in the first section, which is followed by two others referring to similar success in the case of former prophets. The fourth section tells us that the history of the Holy Prophet Muhammad (may peace and the blessings of Allah be upon him!) is, in fact, a repetition of the history of previous prophets. The last great Divine revelation was a final blow at polytheism, which really stands condemned out of the mouths of its own votaries, as the fifth section shows. The sixth naturally brings the subject to a close by showing how the wicked will regret what they indulged in so freely.

SECTION 1

Success of the Faithful

1–11. True believers and their success. 12–14. Spiritual growth compared to physical growth. 15, 16. Life after death. 17–22. Divine gifts in nature as evidence of spiritual gifts.

In the name of Allah, the Beneficent, the Merciful.

1 Successful indeed are the believers,[1712]
2 Who are humble in their prayers,
3 And who keep aloof from what is vain,
4 And who act aiming at purification,[1713]
5 And who guard their private parts,[1714]
6 Except before their mates or those whom their right hands possess, for they surely are not blameable,[1715]

Or, are givers of poor-rate.

بِسْمِ اللّٰهِ الرَّحْمٰنِ الرَّحِيْمِ
قَدْ اَفْلَحَ الْمُؤْمِنُوْنَ ۙ
الَّذِيْنَ هُمْ فِيْ صَلَاتِهِمْ خٰشِعُوْنَ ۙ
وَالَّذِيْنَ هُمْ عَنِ اللَّغْوِ مُعْرِضُوْنَ ۙ
وَالَّذِيْنَ هُمْ لِلزَّكٰوةِ فٰعِلُوْنَ ۙ
وَالَّذِيْنَ هُمْ لِفُرُوْجِهِمْ حٰفِظُوْنَ ۙ
اِلَّا عَلٰٓى اَزْوَاجِهِمْ اَوْ مَا مَلَكَتْ اَيْمَانُهُمْ
فَاِنَّهُمْ غَيْرُ مَلُوْمِيْنَ ۚ

1712 The last two chapters opened with a warning of the approach of judgment. This, as a fitting sequel, opens with a declaration of the triumph of the believers, for it was possible that the wicked should have tasted punishment without resultant good to the faithful. To dispel all such doubts it is stated that the believers shall be successful even in this life. The past tense قد افلح is used to denote the great certainty, as in اتی امر الله in 16 : 1 regarding the punishment of the unbelievers. Both these things are so certain to come about that they are again and again spoken of as having, as it were, already come to pass.

1713 The words occurring here are للزكوة فاعلون whereas throughout the Holy Qur-án, where zakát in the sense of alms or poor-rate is mentioned, the form adopted is يؤتون الزكوة where zakát occurs as an objective complement. The lám occurring here is therefore taken as denoting aim and cause (Rgh, TA-LL), and zakát, carried back to its literal sense (being derived from zaká, i.e. it became pure), means purification, a significance which is borne by it also elsewhere in the Holy Qur-án, as in حنانا من لدنا و زكوة in 19 : 13, meaning "tenderness from Us and purity." But it should be noted that this significance is preferred simply on account of the construction of the phrase, and not because, as is supposed by some, zakát (alms or poor-rate) was not enjoined at Mecca, where this chapter was revealed. Ṣalát, or prayer, standing for the performance of one's obligations towards Allah, and zakát, or alms, standing for the performance of one's obligations towards one's fellow-beings, form in early as well as in later revelation the two pillars of Islam, and it was only the details of the institution of zakát that were given at Medina.

1714 Furúj, plural of Farj, indicates the part of a person which it is indecent to expose (Msb, Q-LL), and hence حفظ الفرج means generally the observing of continence.

1715 The words اوما ملكت ايمانهم of which a literal rendering is given in the translation, usually indicate servants or slaves. A Muslim, man or woman, is not allowed to expose, in the presence of others, any part of the body which it is not decent to expose, but a certain degree of freedom is allowed to women in the presence of their

7 But whoever seeks to go beyond that, these are they that exceed the limits;

8 And those who are keepers of their trusts and their covenant,

9 And those who keep a guard on their prayers;

10 These are they who are the heirs,

11 Who shall inherit the Paradise; they shall abide therein.

12 And certainly We created man of an extract of clay,[1716]

13 Then We made him a small life-germ in a firm resting-place,

14 Then We made the life-germ a clot, then We made the clot a lump of flesh, then We made (in) the lump of flesh bones, then We clothed the bones with flesh, then We caused it to grow into another creation, so blessed be Allah, the best of the creators.[1717]

15 Then after that you will most surely die.

16 Then surely on the day of resurrection you shall be raised.

17 And certainly We made above you seven ways; and never are We heedless of creation.[1718] husbands and female servants, and to men in the presence of their wives and male servants. According to the Islamic ideas of decency, the exposure of such parts of the body as European ladies are generally in the habit of exposing in ballrooms and theatres is disallowed. It should be noted that this chapter is a Meccan revelation, and the conditions under which slave-girls could be taken as wives were given later at Medina (see 561), so that if the reference here is to sexual relations, the permission regarding those whom their right hands possess must be read subject to the conditions of 4 : 25. It may be added that slave-girls when taken as wives did not acquire the full status of a free wife, and hence they are spoken of distinctly.

1716 The creation of man is here traced back to earth, as being an extract or essence of the earth, for the life-germ in sperma is an extract of the food which is drawn from earth in whatever form it may be. It should be noted that while the first ten verses speak of the spiritual growth of man, his physical growth is here spoken of, and thus a comparison may be established between the physical and the spiritual growth.

1717 The several stages in the growth of the human child as given here are quite in accordance with scientific investigation. Only it should be borne in mind that the letter fa, meaning then, as used in then We clothed the bones, . . . does not always imply order. This is clear from the context, which states that there is first a lump of flesh, and the nucleus of the bones is generated in this flesh.

18 And We send down water from the cloud according to a measure, then We cause it to settle in the earth, and most surely We are able to carry it away.

وَأَنْزَلْنَا مِنَ السَّمَاءِ مَاءً بِقَدَرٍ فَأَسْكَنَّاهُ فِي الْأَرْضِ ۖ وَإِنَّا عَلَىٰ ذَهَابٍ بِهِ لَقَادِرُونَ ۝

19 Then We cause to grow thereby gardens of palm-trees and grapes for you; you have in them many fruits and from them do you eat;

20 And a tree that grows out of Mount Sinai which produces oil and a condiment for those who eat.[1719]

وَشَجَرَةً تَخْرُجُ مِنْ طُورِ سَيْنَاءَ تَنْبُتُ بِالدُّهْنِ وَصِبْغٍ لِلْآكِلِينَ ۝

21 And most surely there is a lesson for you in the cattle: We make you to drink of what is in their bellies, and you have in them many advantages and of them you eat,

وَإِنَّ لَكُمْ فِي الْأَنْعَامِ لَعِبْرَةً ۖ نُسْقِيكُمْ مِمَّا فِي بُطُونِهَا وَلَكُمْ فِيهَا مَنَافِعُ كَثِيرَةٌ وَمِنْهَا تَأْكُلُونَ ۝

22 And on them and on the ships you are borne.

SECTION 2

Noah's Success

23–29. Noah's rejection and promise of deliverance. 30–32. Another prophet sent with a similar message.

23 And certainly We sent a 901. Noah[a] to his people, and he said: O my people! serve Allah, you have no god other than Him: will you not then guard (against evil)?

وَلَقَدْ أَرْسَلْنَا نُوحًا إِلَىٰ قَوْمِهِ فَقَالَ يَا قَوْمِ اعْبُدُوا اللَّهَ مَا لَكُمْ مِنْ إِلَٰهٍ غَيْرُهُ ۖ أَفَلَا تَتَّقُونَ ۝

24 And the chiefs of those who disbelieved from among his people said: He is nothing but a mortal like yourselves who desires that he may have superiority over you, and if Allah had pleased, He could certainly have sent down angels. We have not heard of this among our fathers of yore:

فَقَالَ الْمَلَأُ الَّذِينَ كَفَرُوا مِنْ قَوْمِهِ مَا هَٰذَا إِلَّا بَشَرٌ مِثْلُكُمْ يُرِيدُ أَنْ يَتَفَضَّلَ عَلَيْكُمْ وَلَوْ شَاءَ اللَّهُ لَأَنْزَلَ مَلَائِكَةً مَا سَمِعْنَا بِهَٰذَا فِي آبَائِنَا الْأَوَّلِينَ ۝

1718 Instead of the seven heavens, here we have the seven ways, which are no doubt the orbits of the seven members of the solar system, excluding the earth. This shows that the word heaven is used in a variety of ways in the Holy Qur-án. It means what is overhead: it means the clouds; it means the upper regions; it means the planets of the solar system; it means their orbits; it means the whole starry creation as seen by the eye.

1719 In the tree that grows out of Mount Sinai, and which produces oil, there seems to be reference to the blessed olive-tree of 24 : 35 as representing the Muslim nation (see 1757).

25 He is only a madman, so bear with him for a time.

26 He said: O my Lord! help me against their calling me a liar.

27 So We revealed to him, saying: Make the ark before Our eyes and (according to) Our revelation; and when Our command is given and the b 1179, 1180. Ar. thy. of every kind a pair, two,[b] and your followers, except those among them against whom the word has gone forth, and do not speak to Me in respect of those who are unjust; surely they shall be drowned.

29 And say: O my Lord! cause me to alight a blessed alighting, and Thou art the best to cause to alight.

30 Most surely there are signs in this, and most surely We are ever trying (men).

31 Then We raised up after them another generation.

32 So We sent among them an apostle from among them, saying: Serve Allah, you have no god other than Him: will you not then guard (against evil)?

Prophets after Noah

33–41. Opponents destroyed. 42–44. Other generations follow their fate. 45–49. Moses and Pharaoh. 50. A refuge given to Jesus and his mother.

33 And the chiefs of his people who disbelieved and called the meeting of the hereafter a lie, and whom We had given plenty to enjoy in this world's life, said: This is nothing but a mortal like yourselves, eating of what you eat from and drinking of what you drink:[1720]

وَقَالَ الْمَلَأُ مِنْ قَوْمِهِ الَّذِينَ كَفَرُوا
وَكَذَّبُوا بِلِقَاءِ الْآخِرَةِ وَأَتْرَفْنَاهُمْ فِي

مِمَّا تَشْرَبُونَ ○

1720 The prophets are rejected because they are subject to the same laws of nature in their human requirements as other men. The objection would no doubt be valid against any one

34 And if you obey a mortal like yourselves, then most surely you will be losers:

35 What! does he threaten you that when you are dead and become dust and bones that you shall then be brought forth?

36 Far, far is that which you are threatened with:

37 There is naught but our life in this world: we die and we live and we shall not be raised again:

38 He is naught but a man who has forged a lie against Allah, and we are not going to believe in him.

39 He said: O my Lord! help me against their calling me a liar.

40 He said: In a little while they will most certainly be repenting.

41 So the punishment overtook them in justice, and We made them as rubbish; so away with the unjust people.[1721]

42 Then We raised after them other generations.

43 No people can hasten on their doom nor can they postpone (it).

44 Then We sent Our apostles one after another; whenever there came to a people their apostle, they called him a liar, so We made who claimed to be God, but as prophets are human beings they must be subject to the laws of nature governing other human beings. And no one can be a model for men who is not himself a human being, and who is not subject to the same laws of nature as other men, for only a man can show men the way by walking in it himself, thereby showing how they can avoid falling a prey to the frailties of human nature. Hence, a Divine incarnation, or God in a human body, can no more serve as a model to men than a man can be a model to a horse or a dog. If Jesus were sinless because he was God, he cannot be a model for us who are not gods: we want a mortal to show us how to avoid the pitfalls with which we as mortals are surrounded.

1721 It is the occurrence of the word ṣaiḥah in this verse which has led many to think that vv. 33–41 of this section refer to Húd or Sálih. But it should be borne in mind that ṣaiḥah means punishment (LL), and is equally applicable to punishment by earthquake or by any other means. In the chronological order of prophets given in the 7th chapter it is Húd who follows Noah, and his people 'Ád were destroyed by a sandstorm. Hence I translate the word ṣaiḥah as meaning punishment.

some of them follow others and We made them stories; so away with a people who do not believe![1722]

45 Then We sent Moses and his brother Aaron, with Our communications and a clear authority

46 To Pharaoh and his chiefs, but they behaved haughtily and they were an insolent people.

47 And they said: What! shall we believe in two mortals like ourselves while their people serve us?

48 So they rejected them and became of those who were destroyed.

49 And certainly We gave Moses the Book that they may follow a right direction.

50 And We made the son of Mary and his mother a sign, and We gave them a shelter on a lofty ground having meadows and springs.[1723]

1722 The significance of making them stories is that the stories of their evil fate were the only remembrance of them left after they had perished.

1723 There has been much discussion as to the land spoken of in this verse. Rabwah is lofty ground, and qarár means cultivated land and a place where water rests in a meadow (TA-LL). Neither Jerusalem nor Egypt, nor Palestine nor Damascus, which are the names suggested, answers the description, which applies only and exactly to the valley of Cashmere. Part of the lost ten tribes of Israel is also traced to Cashmere, where a large number of towns and villages bear the names of the towns and villages of Palestine. The presence of a tomb known as the tomb of Nabí Sáhib (i.e. the prophet), or Isá Sáhib (i.e. Jesus), or Yús Ásaf Nabí (i.e. the prophet Yús Ásaf), in the Khan Yár street in the capital of Cashmere, lends additional support to this theory. The fact that the chapter deals with the final triumph of prophets and their followers and their deliverance from the hands of their enemies also gives us a clue to the mystery attending the circumstances of the disappearance of Jesus Christ; for, as has been shown in 645, Jesus did not die on the cross. This verse tells us that, being delivered from the hands of his enemies, he was given shelter at some other place, and the description of that place as indicated in this verse, along with the fact that Cashmere has a tomb which every available evidence shows to be the tomb of Jesus himself, leads us to the conclusion that Cashmere is the land referred to in this verse. As regards the tomb, the following evidence shows that the sacred body of no less a personage than Jesus Christ rests there. (a) Oral testimony, based on traditions, of the people of Cashmere tells us that the tomb belongs to one who bore the name of Yús Ásaf, who was known as a nabí (i.e. a prophet), and who came to Cashmere from the west about 2,000 years ago. (b) The Tárikh-i-A'zamí, an historical work written some two hundred years ago, says, referring to this tomb, on p. 82: "The tomb is generally known as that of a prophet. He was a prince, who came to Cashmere from a foreign land. . . . His name was Yús Ásaf." (c) The Ikmál-ud-Dín, an Arabic work which is a thousand years old, also mentions Yús Ásaf as having travelled in some lands. (d) Joseph Jacobs states, on the authority of a very old version of the story of Yús

A Repetition of the History of Prophets

51–56. Righteousness of prophets and opposition to them. 57–61. Characteristics of true believers. 62–70. Opposition shall fail. 71–74. Acceptance of truth will make them eminent. 75–77. Persistence in rejection will bring severest punishment.

51 O apostles! eat of the good things and do good; surely I know what you do.

52 And surely this your community is one community and I am your Lord, therefore be careful (of your duty) to Me.

Or, religion. Or, religion.

53 But they cut off their affair among themselves into portions, each party rejoicing in that which is with them.

Or, became divided ... parties.

54 Therefore leave them in their overwhelming ignorance till a time.

55 Do they think that by what We aid them with of wealth and children, 56 We are hastening to them of good things? Nay, they do not perceive.

57 Surely they who from fear of their Lord are cautious,

Or, compassionate.

58 And those who believe in the communications of their Lord,

59 And those who do not associate (aught) with their Lord,

60 And those who give what they give (in alms) while their hearts are full of fear that to their Lord they must return,

Ásaf, that he (Joasaph) at last reached Cashmere, and there died ("Barlaam and Josaphet," p. cv). This evidence shows that the tomb in Khan Yár is the tomb of Yús Ásaf. But who is this Yús Ásaf? That he is called a nabi (prophet) both in oral tradition and in history settles the time in which he lived, for no prophet is recognized by the Muslims to have appeared after their Holy Prophet. Again, there is a striking resemblance between the names Yús and Yasú', the latter being the Arabic form of Jesus. There is a striking resemblance in the teachings of Yús Ásaf and Jesus; for instance, the parable of the seed-sower occurring in Matt. 13:3, Mark 4:3, and Luke 8:5 occurs also in "Barlaam and Josaphet" (p. cxi). Another very striking circumstance is that Yús Ásaf gives the name Bushrá (the exact Arabic word for Gospel) to his teaching, as the following passage from the "Ikmál-ud-Dín" shows: "Then he began to compare the tree to Bushrá, which he preached to the people." All these circumstances lead us to the conclusion that Jesus Christ went to Cashmere after the event of the crucifixion, and that he preached, lived, and died there.

61 These hasten to good things and they are foremost in (attaining) them.

62 And We do not lay on any soul a burden except to the extent of its ability, and with Us is a book which speaks the truth, and they shall not be dealt with unjustly.

63 Nay, their hearts are in overwhelming ignorance with respect to it and they have besides this other deeds which they do.

64 Until when We overtake those who lead easy lives among them with chastisement, lo! they cry for succour.

65 Cry not for succour this day; surely you shall not be given help from Us. [Or, defended against.]

66 My communications were indeed recited to you, but you used to turn back on your heels,

67 Haughtily discoursing about it, you withdrew yourselves to a distance. [Or, talked foolishly.]

68 Is it then that they do not ponder over what is said, or is it that there has come to them that which did not come to their fathers of old?

69 Or is it that they have not recognized their Apostle, so that they deny him?

70 Or do they say: There is madness in him? Nay! he has brought them the truth, and most of them are averse from the truth.

71 And should the truth follow their low desires, surely the heavens and the earth and all those who are therein would have perished. Nay! We have brought to them their reminder, but from their reminder they turn aside. [Or, eminence. Or, eminence.]

72 Or is it that you ask them a recompense? but the recompense of your Lord is best, and He is the best of those who provide sustenance. [Ar. thou askest. Ar. thy.]

73 And most surely you invite them to a right way. [Ar. thou invitest.]

Polytheism is self-condemned

1727 The doing of good in return for evil is the common teaching of all prophets; it is by no means a monopoly of the teaching of Christ. But nowhere is the principle put in such a beautiful and practical form as in the Qur-án, and the whole change is worked by the simple change of a single word. To return good for evil is only possible under certain circumstances, and notwithstanding all the sentimental praises of the Gospel doctrine, no individual or community who has taken that teaching for a guide has found it possible in practice to return good for evil in all cases; some of the latter-day disciples of the great teacher have, perhaps because of the impracticability of the original doctrine, adopted rather the opposite course. The Qur-án, however, says, repel evil by what is best. Evil is a thing that must be repelled; it is not a thing that must be encouraged. But in repelling it the rule to be observed is that it must be repelled by what is best. If you can repel an evil by doing good for it, it is what is recommended; but if punishment is necessary, and the meekest follower of Christ must admit the necessity of the punishment of evil, that would be the better course. The aim is to repel evil, and the method of repelling it is to be the best that is possible in the circumstances. The rule laid down here was the guiding rule of the life of the Holy Prophet, and is really a true description of his character in requiting the evil of his enemies.

1728 The evil suggestions of the devils were really the evil suggestions of the wicked ones who were opposed to the progress of Islam, and the Prophet is here told to look upon Állah as his only support. But even if the words are taken in a general sense there can be no objection, for to seek refuge in the Lord is the height of goodness. Nowhere has a man a better refuge than in the Source of all strength, and no mortal can aspire to a higher honour than having his refuge in the Lord. The command to the Prophet to say this is really an image of the aspiration of his soul, the inmost desire which furnished the guiding rule of his life. His soul rested in that highest degree of security from all evil suggestions which is termed the refuge in the Lord. As he stood on the firmest ground against all evil suggestions, we do not find any mention of the devil making evil suggestions to him as he made to Jesus Christ, for such no doubt were the three temptations offered to him by the devil which Matthew speaks of in 4:1–10. "Then was Jesus led up of the spirit into the wilderness to be tempted of the devil." And the temptations offered are described in the verses that follow. Evidently these were suggestions into the heart, which Jesus rejected like a righteous man.

1729 These words make it quite certain that the devils of the two previous verses are no other than the wicked opponents of the Holy Prophet, and their evil suggestions are only their cruel persecutions of the Holy Prophet and his followers.

1730 The original has irji'ún, in which irji'ú is in the plural, whereas it should have been irji' in the singular in accosting the Divine Being. But in Arabic the plural is sometimes used to denote a repetition of the singular verb, and thus irji'ún is here regarded as equivalent to irji'ní repeated twice (Bd), and it is so translated. A well-known example of this is afforded by the famous verse قفا نبك من ذكرى حبيب و منزل where qifá (the dual form of the imperative) stands for qif (the singular imperative form) repeated twice.

100 Haply I may do good in that which I have left. By no means! it is a (mere) word that he speaks; and before them is a barrier until the day they are raised.[1731]

1731 That the dead do not return to life is a principle which is reaffirmed here (see 1659). According to the Holy Qur-án there are three states of a man's life, viz. his life in this world, his life in barzakh, and the great manifestation of all spiritual realities that will take place on the day of resurrection; the state of barzakh being the intermediate state in which the soul lives after death till the greater resurrection. Here it is stated in plain words that no one who has passed into the state of barzakh through death's door is allowed to go back into the previous state. See further 2165.

1732 Mawázín is the plural of mauzún, meaning a thing that is weighed (Kf). As only good deeds have a weight, and of the doers of evil it is said that "We will not set up a balance for them on the day of resurrection" (18:105), the word mawázín is translated here as meaning good deeds. See also 859 and 1528.

1733 The word ikhsa' is used to drive a dog back; hence it indicates driving away as one despised and hated.

1734 Really it was not the believers who caused them to forget the remembrance of their Lord, but on account of their mocking the believers, the unbelievers forgot their Lord; hence the believers are here spoken of as having caused the unbelievers to forget their Lord.

1735 This verse clearly establishes the doctrine of the responsibility of human actions. Man is not created in vain, but he shall be returned to his Lord to meet the consequences of what he does in this life.

CHAPTER XXIV

THE LIGHT

(An-Nūr)

REVEALED AT MEDINA

(9 sections and 64 verses)

Abstract:

Sec. 1. Law relating to adultery.
Sec. 2. 'Ayesha's slanderers.
Sec. 3. Slanderers of women.
Sec. 4. Preventive measures against fornication and slander.
Sec. 5. Manifestation of Divine light in Islam.
Sec. 6. Manifestation of Divine power.
Sec. 7. Establishment of the kingdom of Islam.
Sec. 8. Respect for each other's privacy.
Sec. 9. Matters of state should take precedence of all private affairs.

The Title:

"LIGHT," the title of this chapter, is taken from the statement made in sec. 5, where Islam is shown to be the most perfect manifestation of Divine light, and is compared to a most refined and resplendently brilliant light which shall shine in the East as well as the West.

Context.

The continuity of the Meccan revelation, which begins with the 10th chapter, may apparently seem to have been abruptly broken by the introduction of a Medinian revelation, but the reader who has followed the chain of reasoning showing the continuity of the subject-matter in the present arrangement of chapters cannot fail to observe the deep relation that exists between the last group of the Meccan chapters and this Medinian revelation. The trend of the last group of the Meccan chapters has been to show the ultimate triumph of Islam. As already pointed out in the head-note to the last chapter, the group of the Meccan chapters beginning with the 17th and ending with the 23rd chapter deals with the great and triumphant future of Islam, and hence it is fittingly followed by a chapter which promises in the clearest words the establishment of the kingdom of Islam. The principal point dealt with in this chapter is not really the subject of adultery and its preventives, but the fact that the light of Islam is the purest ray of Divine light, that it shall never die out, that its light shall not be limited either to the East or to the West, but shall lighten both (v. 35), and that the kingdom of Islam shall be permanently established (v. 55). But as the establishment of a kingdom brings ease and luxury in its train, leading to such social evils as adultery and slander, the undermining evils of society, the latter subject is also dealt with here, along with the preventive measures calculated to check these evils.

Subject-matter.

The chapter begins with a condemnation of adultery, because it is the one evil which, though the least condemned in present-day civilized societies, is the most abhorrent to Islamic

SECTION 1

Law relating to Adultery

1, 2. Punishment for adultery. 3. Adulterers and adulteresses to be socially avoided. 4, 5. Punishment for a false charge of adultery. 6–10. Accusation of adultery against one's wife.

In the name of Allah, the Beneficent, the Merciful.

civilization. It is to draw attention to this point that the ordinance relating to the punishment of the adulterer and the adulteress is combined with the injunction: Let not pity for them detain you in the matter of obedience to Allah. In the same section are corelated subjects, such as false accusation of adultery against women, and the case when the husband, while certain of the adultery of his wife, is unable to bring forward any evidence. The second section deals with the gravity of the sin of those who talked slander about a most innocent woman, 'Ayesha, the Holy Prophet's wife. This is followed by another pardoning 'Ayesha's slanderers and condemning the slanderers of women in general. The fourth section deals with measures which would serve as a check upon adulterous intercourse. Then follow three sections dealing with the kindling of Divine light in Muslim hearts and the manifestation of Divine power in establishing the kingdom of Islam. The eighth section again refers to the subject-matter of the opening sections by enjoining respect for each other's privacy, which is calculated to put restraint upon the tongue of slander, and the last section teaches respect for the Prophet's orders, because in his hands lies the decision of all matters of importance, and because private matters should not take precedence of matters of state.

Date of revelation.

The whole of this chapter is universally held to be a Medinian revelation (AH), and hence the attempt of the latest Christian annotator to ascribe vv. 35–45 to Mecca, without assigning a reason for his assertion, is unworthy of attention. The exact date of the revelation of some portions of the chapter can be ascertained with probable certainty, as that of the verses relating to 'Ayesha's slanderers, which were revealed about a month after the return from the expedition against the Bani Mustaliq, which took place in the month of Sha'bán in the fifth year of Hejira. The verses immediately preceding, which relate to the punishment of adultery, and those following, dealing with false charges of adultery against innocent women, and the preventive measures given further on in sec. 4, as well as those in sec. 8, are all closely related to the subject-matter of sec. 2, and therefore must have been revealed about the same time, while the remainder of the chapter, having a still deeper relation to the subject-matter of the sections referred to above, must be taken to belong also to the fifth year of Hejira. Therefore the whole of this chapter was most probably revealed in that year.

and let a party of believers witness their chastisement.[1736]

3 The fornicator shall not marry any but a fornicatress or idolatress, and (as for) the fornicatress, none shall marry her but a fornicator or an idolater; and it is forbidden to the believers.[1737]

4 And those who accuse free women then do not bring four witnesses, flog them, (giving) eighty stripes, and do not admit any evidence from them ever; and these it is that are the transgressors,[1738]

5 Except those who repent after this and act aright, for surely Allah is Forgiving, Merciful.

6 And (as for) those who accuse their wives and have no witnesses except themselves, the evidence of one of these (should be taken) four times, bearing Allah to witness that he is most surely of the truthful ones.[1739]

7 And the fifth (time) that the curse of Allah be on him if he is one of the liars.

1736 Chastity, as a virtue, is not given the first place in modern civilized society, and hence, while fornication is not a criminal offence, even adultery is not considered a sufficiently serious one to subject the guilty party to any punishment except the payment of damages to the injured husband. This, indeed, is a very low view of sexual morality. Materialism has taken such a strong hold of the civilized mind that even chastity, the most precious jewel in a woman's crown of virtue, can be compensated for by a few pounds. The breach of the greatest trust which can be imposed in a man or a woman, the breach which ruins families, destroys household peace, and deprives innocent children of their loving mothers, is not looked upon even as seriously as the breach of trust of a few pounds. Hence the Islamic law seems to be too severe to an easygoing Westerner.

1737 This verse places one guilty of fornication under a kind of interdict. His or her company is to be shunned, so much so that whores and whoremongers are not allowed to have matrimonial relations in good Muslim society. This, more than anything else, would check the offence of fornication.

1738 This is an effectual restraint against slander and gossip, which so often bring disaster upon the heads of innocent women. Unless there is the clearest evidence of adultery against a woman—the evidence of four witnesses—the slanderer is himself to be punished.

1739 The ordinance relates to the case of husbands who accuse their wives of adultery and have no evidence. See a case reported in Bkh. In such a case a divorce is effected, the husband not being punishable for the accusation, though he cannot produce witnesses, and the wife not being punishable for adultery if she denies the charge in the manner stated. Compare Num. 5 : 11-31.

9 And the fifth (time) that the wrath of Allah be on her if he is one of the truthful.

'Ayesha's Slanderers

11 Surely they who concocted the lie are a party from among you.[1740] Do not regard it an evil to you; nay, it is good for you. Every man of them shall have what he has earned of sin; and (as for) him who took upon himself the main part thereof, he shall have a grievous chastisement.[1741]
12 Why did not the believing men and the believing women, when you heard it, think well of their own people, and say: This is an evident falsehood?[1742]
13 Why did they not bring four witnesses of it? But as they have not brought witnesses they are liars before Allah.[1743]

1740 The incident referred to in this section took place when the Prophet, accompanied by his wife 'Ayesha, was returning from the expedition against Bani Mustaliq in the fifth year of the Hejira. 'Ayesha had gone out on a private occasion, but when she returned she perceived that she had lost her necklace, and went back to search for it. In her absence the attendants, supposing her to be in her howdah, started while it was yet dark. When she returned, finding the camel and the men gone, she sat down there and was brought to Medina by Safwán, who was coming in the rear. Some mischievous persons from among the hypocrites spread false reports, slandering her, and some of the Muslims also associated themselves with the slander. 'Ayesha's innocence was at length established by this revelation, and those who had taken part in the accusation were punished. This is the grievous punishment referred to in the concluding words of the verse.

1741 He who took the main part thereof upon himself is said to be 'Abdulla bin Ubayy bin Salul, the chief of the hypocrites (Bkh), because he concocted the lie and circulated the false report. But according to another report it was Hassan bin Sabit, the poet, who became blind in his old age, this being the grievous punishment predicted here (Bkh).

1742 There was not a single witness nor any circumstance that could lend a colour to the false report. 1743, see next page.

14 And were it not for Allah's grace upon you and His mercy in this world and the hereafter, a grievous chastisement would certainly have touched you on account of the discourse which you entered into.

15 When you received it with your tongues and spoke with your mouths what you had no knowledge of, and you deemed it an easy matter while with Allah it was grievous.

16 And why did you not, when you heard it, say: It does not beseem us that we should talk of it: glory be to Thee! this is a great calumny?

17 Allah admonishes you that you should not return to the like of it ever again if you are believers.

18 And Allah makes clear to you the communications; and Allah is Knowing, Wise.

19 Surely (as for) those who love that scandal should circulate respecting those who believe, they shall have a grievous chastisement in this world and the hereafter; and Allah knows, while you do not know.

20 And were it not for Allah's grace on you and His mercy, and that Allah is Compassionate, Merciful.

وَلَوْلَا فَضْلُ اللّٰهِ عَلَيْكُمْ وَرَحْمَتُهٗ
وَاَنَّ اللّٰهَ رَءُوْفٌ رَّحِيْمٌ ۝

1743 Severe as the punishment of adultery is in Islam, the evidence of four witnesses is required to establish the guilt. See v. 4. The allegation of a Christian annotator that this requirement of the law was simply to shield 'Ayesha is a base attack on the Holy Prophet's good faith. All the reports unanimously show that the slander against 'Ayesha was utterly unfounded, and at least this much is clear, that in her case there was not a single witness. Why should the Prophet then have required four witnesses? If it was to shield 'Ayesha, the requirement of a single witness would have better suited his purpose. But the fact is that while the Qur-án takes, on the one hand, a very serious view of the crimes against chastity, it disallows the circulation of all reports affecting a woman's chastity, except those based on the surest evidence. Thus even a lighter accusation in connection with the misconduct of women required the evidence of four witnesses. See 4 : 14, which was admittedly revealed long before. This only shows how great a respect Islam has for the virtue of woman.

SECTION 3

Slanderers of Women

21, 22. Slanderers of 'Ayesha to be forgiven. 23–26. Slanderers of women condemned.

21 O you who believe! do not follow the footsteps of the devil; and whoever follows the footsteps of the devil, then surely he bids the doing of indecency and evil; and were it not for Allah's grace upon you and His mercy, not one of you would have ever been pure, but Allah purifies whom He pleases; and Allah is Hearing, Knowing.[1744]

23 Surely those who accuse chaste believing women, unaware (of the evil), are cursed in this world and the hereafter, and they shall have a grievous chastisement,[1746]

24 On the day when their tongues and their hands and their feet shall bear witness against them as to what they did.[1747]

يوم تشهد عليهم ألسنتهم وأيديهم وأرجلهم بما كانوا يعملون ○

1744 This passage shows that the companions of the Holy Prophet were purified from sins by Allah's grace, which He manifested through His Prophet.

1745 This is a very important passage. It is agreed on the basis of most trustworthy reports that this verse was revealed in connection with the action of Abu Bakr, who had sworn not to allow maintenance to one of his relatives named Mistah, who had taken a part in spreading the false reports against 'Ayesha (Bkh). It shows in the first place the broad-mindedness of the Prophet, who after inflicting the legal punishment upon the culprits was required to bear them no ill-will, and hid no rancour in his breast even towards the slanderers of his own wife; revelation even required his companions to be kind and forgiving to them. Secondly, it mentions Abu Bakr, not by name, but as one possessing grace and abundance, the former of these words referring to his moral and spiritual superiority and the latter to abundance in wealth.

1746 This refers to those who continue to spread evil reports concerning chaste women, the gossip-mongers in every society. The slanderers of 'Ayesha, it may be noted, were forgiven, as the previous verse shows.

1747 The evidence of the members of the body is sometimes witnessed in this very life against the doers of evil, in the consequences of the evil done. On the resurrection day the 25 On that day Allah will pay back to them in full their just reward, and they shall know that Allah is the evident Truth.

26 Unclean things are for unclean ones and unclean ones are for unclean things, and the good things are for good ones and the good ones are for good things; these are free from what they say; they shall have forgiveness and an honourable sustenance.[1748] consequences of the evil deeds will assume a palpable form, as is also indicated in the paying back in full of the just rewards in the next verse, and thus bear witness to the evil done. This highly developed idea of the resurrection did not exist before the Holy Qur-án.

1748 The meaning of this whole passage is made clear by the concluding words, i.e. nothing impure can be attributed to the pure ones, and they are free from what the impure ones say.

1749 The Arabs entered houses without permission (Rz). This savage custom was abolished, and the law revealed in this verse laid down the basis of domestic peace and security needed for an advanced society. The law is a clear testimony of the great trust which Muslims have in their womenfolk. It is also a preventive measure against slander.

30 Say to the believing men that they cast down their looks and guard their private parts; that is purer for them; surely Allah is Aware of what they do.[1750]

31 And say to the believing women that they cast down their looks and guard their private parts and not display their ornaments except what appears thereof,[1751] and let

قُلْ لِّلْمُؤْمِنِيْنَ يَغُضُّوْا مِنْ اَبْصَارِهِمْ

وَقُلْ لِّلْمُؤْمِنٰتِ يَغْضُضْنَ مِنْ اَبْصَارِهِنَّ
وَيَحْفَظْنَ فُرُوْجَهُنَّ وَلَا يُبْدِيْنَ
زِيْنَتَهُنَّ اِلَّا مَا ظَهَرَ مِنْهَا

1750 The men are enjoined to keep their eyes cast down, just as the women are enjoined to do in the next verse. This injunction is given as a preventive against an evil which deals a deathblow to all pure social relations, viz. the evil of fornication. The Qur-án does not only forbid evil, but also points out the way by walking in which man may be able to eschew it. From this injunction it appears further that there is no restriction as to women going out when they think it necessary, for if women were totally forbidden to go out of their houses, men would not have been required to cast down their eyes. In fact, the Holy Qur-án requires both men and women to keep their eyes cast down, so that when they meet each other, neither should men stare at women nor women at men. In a society in which women never appeared in public, the injunction to men to have their looks cast down would be meaningless, and the similar injunction to women given in the next verse, if they never left the compounds of their houses, would be equally absurd. As for the limits of the pardah or the veil, see the next foot-note and also 1989.

1751 To guard the relations between males and females and to check a too free intermingling of men and women, the Qur-án now lays down another injunction in addition to that which requires both sexes to go abroad with their looks cast down. One part of the injunction is common to both sexes: both must keep their looks cast down and both must guard their private parts. But women must observe some further directions. The injunction which relates to women in particular is to keep their ornaments concealed. There is a difference of opinion as to what zínat or ornament means. According to some it includes the beauty of the body, while according to others it is exclusively applied to external ornaments and adornments (Rz). The use of the same word in the concluding portion of the verse, let them not strike their feet so that what they hide of their ornaments may be known, clearly supports the latter view, as the only ornaments that can be known by the striking of the feet are external ornaments. But even according to those who include the beauty of the body in the significance of zínat, it is permissible for a woman to have her hands and face uncovered (Rz), as being allowed under the exception what appears thereof, as without uncovering these it would be impossible for women to take part in any business; the rest of the body and the ornaments upon it, whether in the form of tight clothes or of gold and silver ornaments, are to be kept concealed by a long head-covering or, say, an overcoat. According to Kf الا ما ظهر منها except what appears thereof means الا ما جرت العادة والجبلة على ظهوره except that which it is customary and natural to uncover. The customs of different societies would therefore allow a variation, and one rule cannot be laid down for all. According to Qaffál the meaning of the words is i.e. except that which a person discloses usually, and in the case of women this means the face and the two hands (Rz). Thus a woman when going out should have herself covered over by an external wrapper or an overcoat, it being permissible to leave the hands and the face uncovered. The exposure of such parts as the neck, the bosom, or the arms is forbidden, them wear their head-coverings over their bosoms,[1751A] and not display their ornaments except to their husbands or their fathers, or the fathers of their husbands, or their sons, or the sons of their husbands, or their brothers, or their brother's sons, or their sister's sons, or their women, or those whom their right hands possess,[1752] or the male servants not having need (of women), or the children who have not attained knowledge of what is hidden of women; and let them not strike their feet so that what they hide of their ornaments may be known; and turn to Allah all of you, O believers! so that you may be successful.

32 And marry those among you who are single and those who are fit among your male slaves and your female slaves; if they are needy, Allah will make them free from want out of His grace; and Allah is Amply-giving, Knowing.[1753]

33 And let those who do not find a match keep chaste until Allah makes them free from as also the display of decorations, whether in the form of ornaments or dress. The display of ornaments is allowed only before certain relatives and dependents named in this verse.

1751A I have already explained what is meant by the wearing of head-coverings over the bosom. The head-covering as worn in the East conceals the arms, the neck, and the bosom, as also the ornaments worn in the ears or on the neck or over the bosom, and the covering over of these parts is what is required here by the addition of the words over the bosoms.

1753 The Holy Qur-án looks upon the married state as the normal state, and hence it enjoins that so far as possible those who are single should be married. It also requires both male and female slaves to be kept in a state of marriage. The keeping of concubines or unmarried slave-girls is clearly inconsistent with this. As a religion Islam is against celibacy, and considers parenthood to be the duty of every human being. In the civilized society of to-day most persons refuse to accept the responsibilities of parenthood, offering as an excuse the insufficiency of means to support a family. The Qur-án disposes of this false excuse in the simple words, if they are needy, Allah will make them free from want out of His grace.

want out of His grace.[1754] And (as for) those who ask for a writing from among those whom your right hands possess, give them the writing if you know any good in them, and give them of the wealth of Allah which He has given you;[1755] and do not compel your slave girls to prostitution, when they desire to keep chaste, in order to seek the frail good of this world's life; and whoever compels them, then surely after their compulsion Allah is Forgiving, Merciful.[1756]

34 And certainly We have sent to you clear communications and a description of those who have passed away before you, and an admonition to those who guard (against evil).

1754 Marriage thus becomes an obligatory institution in Islam, only those being excused who do not find a match or who lack the means to marry. Not only does this injunction uproot idleness, but it also affords the surest guarantee for the betterment of the moral tone of society. In this respect, too, Islam has proved a blessing for the world. No vow of celibacy has a legal sanction in Islam.

1755 The word kitāb, translated writing, as used here, stands for mukātabah, which is an infinitive noun of kātaba, signifying he (a slave) made a written (or other) contract with him (his master), that he (the former) should pay a certain sum as the price of himself, and on the payment thereof be free (Q-LL); also he (a master) made such a contract with him (his slave). According to Rz, it was called a kitāb (or writing), because of the obligation which the master imposed on himself, and the money was paid in two or more instalments. Thus every possible facility was afforded to the slave to earn his freedom. Though the practice of the master making such a contract with the slave prevailed before the advent of Islam, the important reform was introduced by Islam that when a slave desired such a contract to be made the master should not refuse it. Twelve centuries before any attempt was made by any individual or community to legislate for the liberty of slaves, a dweller of the Arabian desert had laid down this noble institution, that if a slave asked for a writing of freedom, he was not only to be given that writing by the owner, but he was also to be provided with money to purchase his freedom, the only condition being if you know any good in them, i.e. if he is fit for work and able to earn his livelihood. Is there any other religious leader in the world who laid down a similar law for the liberty of slaves? And, in addition, the duty was imposed upon the state of spending a part of the collections of the poor-rate upon this object, as stated in 9:60.

1756 It is related that Abdulla bin Ubayy, the leader of the hypocrites, kept six slave-girls for prostitution (Rz). This practice, which seems to have prevailed before the advent of Islam in Arabia, is condemned here. But this most mischievous curse of society, i.e. prostitution, has obtained an incredible prevalence in the whole of Christendom, and is legalized in many countries of Europe as a necessary evil, while in others it is openly connived at.

SECTION 5

Manifestation of Divine Light in Islam

35–38. Perfection of Divine light in Islam. 39. Opposition to truth gives false hopes like a mirage. 40. Comparison of unbelief to darkness.

35 Allah is the light of the heavens and the earth; a likeness of His light is as a pillar on which is a lamp, the lamp is in a glass, (and) the glass is as it were a brightly shining star, lit from a blessed olive-tree, neither eastern nor western, the oil whereof almost gives light though fire touch it not—light upon light—Allah guides to His light whom He pleases, and Allah sets forth parables for men, and Allah is Cognizant of all things:[1757]

Or, niche in.

36 In houses which Allah has permitted to be exalted and that His name may be remembered in them;[1758] there glorify Him therein in the mornings and the evenings,

اَللّٰهُ نُوْرُ السَّمٰوٰتِ وَالْاَرْضِ ؕ مَثَلُ نُوْرِهٖ
كَمِشْكٰوةٍ فِيْهَا مِصْبَاحٌ ؕ اَلْمِصْبَاحُ فِيْ
زُجَاجَةٍ ؕ اَلزُّجَاجَةُ كَاَنَّهَا كَوْكَبٌ
دُرِّيٌّ يُّوْقَدُ مِنْ شَجَرَةٍ مُّبٰرَكَةٍ زَيْتُوْنَةٍ
لَّا شَرْقِيَّةٍ وَّلَا غَرْبِيَّةٍ ۙ يَّكَادُ زَيْتُهَا يُضِيْٓءُ
وَلَوْ لَمْ تَمْسَسْهُ نَارٌ ؕ نُوْرٌ عَلٰى نُوْرٍ ؕ يَهْدِى
اللّٰهُ لِنُوْرِهٖ مَنْ يَّشَآءُ ؕ وَيَضْرِبُ اللّٰهُ
الْاَمْثَالَ لِلنَّاسِ ؕ وَاللّٰهُ بِكُلِّ شَيْءٍ عَلِيْمٌ ۙ ﴿٣٥﴾
فِيْ بُيُوْتٍ اَذِنَ اللّٰهُ اَنْ تُرْفَعَ وَيُذْكَرَ فِيْهَا
اسْمُهٗ ۙ يُسَبِّحُ لَهٗ فِيْهَا بِالْغُدُوِّ وَالْاٰصَالِ ۙ ﴿٣٦﴾

1757 Núr, or light, is that which manifests hidden things, and Allah is called here the light of the heavens and the earth, because He has manifested them and brought them into existence. This statement is followed by an example of His light, which, if read along with the connecting verses that follow, makes its own meaning clear, though it has been made a riddle by neglecting that connection.

In the parable that follows, Islam is represented as a likeness of the Divine light, a light placed high on a pillar so as to illumine the whole world; a light guarded by being placed in a glass, so that no puff of wind can put it out; a light so resplendent that the glass itself in which it is placed is as a brilliant star. It should be noted that the religion of Islam is repeatedly spoken of as the Divine light in the Holy Qur-án: "They desire to put out the light of Allah with their mouths, but Allah will not consent save to perfect His light, though the unbelievers are averse" (9:32, 61:8). Hence it is of Islam that the parable of Divine light speaks. The blessed olive, from which that light is lit, stands here for a symbol of Islam, as the fig stands for a symbol of Judaism (see 2766). The blessed olive, which stands for a symbol of Islam, belongs neither to the East nor to the West. Even so is Islam, which must give light to both the East and the West, and which, therefore, does not specially belong to any one of them. The reference seems to be to the welding together of the East and the West in Islam, a prophecy which is now approaching its fulfilment in the awakening of the West to the truth of the principles of Islam.

1758 The Divine light spoken of in the last verse is here stated as being met with in certain houses, the distinctive mark of those houses being that the name of Allah is remembered in them, thus showing that these houses are the houses of the Muslims, and the light is therefore the light of Islam. These houses, we are further told, though humble now, shall be exalted one day, as Allah has so ordained. And the exaltation of the humble huts of the Arab dwellers of the desert to royal palaces is too clear to need any comment as to the truth of this wonderful prophecy.

37 Men whom neither merchandise nor selling diverts from the remembrance of Allah and the keeping up of prayer and the giving of poor-rate;[1759] they fear a day in which the hearts and the eyes shall turn about;

38 That Allah may give them the best reward of what they have done, and give them more out of His grace; and Allah gives sustenance to whom He pleases without measure.

39 And (as for) those who disbelieve, their deeds are like the mirage in a desert, which the thirsty man deems to be water; until when he comes to it he finds it to be naught, and there he finds Allah, so He pays back to him his reckoning in full; and Allah is quick in reckoning:

40 Or like utter darkness in the deep sea: there covers it a wave above which is another wave, above which is a cloud, (layers of) utter darkness one above another; when he holds out his hand, he is almost unable to see it; and to whomsoever Allah does not give light, he has no light.[1760]

فَضْلِهٖ وَاللّٰهُ يَرْزُقُ مَنْ يَّشَآءُ بِغَيْرِ حِسَابٍ ۝
وَالَّذِيْنَ كَفَرُوْا اَعْمَالُهُمْ كَسَرَابٍ بِقِيْعَةٍ
يَّحْسَبُهُ الظَّمْاٰنُ مَآءً حَتّٰى اِذَا جَآءَهٗ
لَمْ يَجِدْهُ شَيْـًٔا وَّوَجَدَ اللّٰهَ عِنْدَهٗ فَوَفّٰىهُ
حِسَابَهٗ وَاللّٰهُ سَرِيْعُ الْحِسَابِ ۝

لَمْ يَكَدْ يَرٰىهَا وَمَنْ لَّمْ يَجْعَلِ اللّٰهُ لَهٗ
نُوْرًا فَمَا لَهٗ مِنْ نُّوْرٍ ۝

1759 A further description of these houses makes the reference still more clear. In these houses Allah is glorified in the morning and the evening, and therefore these can be the houses of no other than Muslims, because the keeping up of prayer and the giving of poor-rate is the distinguishing characteristic of Islam. In these houses there are men whose business is trading, because it is stated that merchandise does not divert them from remembering Allah, and hence these are the companions who fled from Mecca with the Holy Prophet, because it was they who carried on trade. The opposition to this light, and the end of that opposition, are described in the two concluding verses of the section.

1760 As the first part of the section gives a picture of the brilliant and dazzling Divine light which is given to the believers, the last part describes the utter darkness of doubts and ignorance in which the unbelievers are. Their apparent hopes of success are compared to a mirage, and when they are undeceived of these they will find themselves in a darkness in which they will not be able to see anything.

44 Allah turns over the night and the day; most surely there is a lesson in this for those who have sight.

45 And Allah has created from water every living creature:[b] so of them is that which walks upon its belly, and of them is that which walks upon two feet, and of them is that which walks upon four; Allah creates what He pleases; surely Allah has power over all things.

1761 This and the previous verse indicate the establishment of the kingdom of Islam.

1762 This verse calls attention to the slow and gradual progress that Islam was making, and some of the disasters which the unbelievers had already witnessed, in which they could see clear signs of the final triumph of Islam.

1763 This verse not only prophesies the establishment of the kingdom of Islam, but also its permanence, so that successors will be raised to the Holy Prophet and the Muslims made a ruling nation on earth. By those before them are meant in particular the followers of Moses (Bḍ). Islam at the time of the revelation of this chapter, or these verses, was still surrounded by enemies on all sides; there was still fear for the believers, as the verse clearly shows, and idol-worship still had the upper hand in Arabia. The triumph of Islam which is prophesied in the parable of the Divine light first, and the gradual advent of which is referred to afterwards, is here predicted in the clearest and most emphatic terms: the believers shall be made rulers in the promised land, or rulers of the country; their religion shall be firmly established; security shall be given to them in place of fear; Divine Unity shall rule supreme, no other gods being worshipped with the true God. All these favours shall be bestowed upon the Muslims, for which they should be thankful; but if they are ungrateful after that they shall be dealt with as transgressors. Rz explains kufr here as meaning جحد حق النعم i.e. the denial of what is due to these favours; or ungratefulness, because when conveying the meaning of disbelief it is generally followed by a bá and the object of disbelief. But even if the ordinary meaning of kufr be retained, as given in the margin, the denial means the denial of the Divine blessings and not the denial of the rulers or the successors.

Though the promise contained in this verse refers clearly to the establishment of the kingdom of Islam and to the Muslims being made successors to the Israelites, as regards the promised Holy Land, there may also be a reference here to the Divine promise to raise reformers among the Muslims as prophets were raised among the Israelites. Such is the clear promise contained in a saying of the Holy Prophet: "Surely Allah will raise up for this people (i.e. the Muslims) in the beginning of every century one who shall reform their religion." The promise given in the verse may therefore refer not only to the temporal successors of the Holy Prophet, but also to his spiritual successors or reformers. The analogy of the Israelites, to which the verse refers, points to the appearance of a Messiah among the Muslims as a Messiah was raised among the Israelites, and it was on this verse that the claim of the late Mirza Ghulam,

Respect for each other's Privacy

58, 59. Personal privacy. 60. Aged women need not remain in seclusion. 61. Familiar intercourse in case of close relationship and friendship.

58 O you who believe! let those whom your right hands possess and those of you who have not attained to puberty ask permission of you three times: before the morning prayer, and when you put off your clothes at midday in summer, and after the prayer of the nightfall; these are three times of privacy for you; neither is it a sin for you nor for them besides these; some of you must go round about (waiting) upon others; thus does Allah make clear to you the communications, and Allah is Knowing, Wise.[1764]

59 And when the children among you have attained to puberty, let them seek permission as those before them sought permission; thus does Allah make clear to you His communications, and Allah is Knowing, Wise.

60 And (as for) women advanced in years[1765] who do not hope for a marriage, it is no sin for them if they put off their clothes without displaying their ornaments; and if they restrain themselves it is better for them; and Allah is Hearing, Knowing.

lays down a middle rule, and allows the individual a great latitude in this respect. A man may eat alone or with others, he may eat with the maimed, etc., or he may eat from the houses of near relations and friends. Cut-and-dried rules on these points, like those which prevailed before Islam, or which prevail in Christian society to this day, are unacceptable to Islam. Or the negation of blame on the blind and the lame and the sick has reference to the doctrine which ascribes these defects to the sins of a previous birth, for Islam rejects the doctrine of the transmigration of souls. It also lays down a rule which permits familiar intercourse in certain cases.

1767 The significance of this verse has been misunderstood by both Palmer and Rodwell. It does not indicate how the Prophet is to be addressed, but in what manner his call is to be responded to. The context makes it clear. The previous verse states that none is to leave without the Prophet's permission when they are gathered together for some important affair requiring their presence, and the words that follow this passage are to the same effect. Hence what is stated here is that the Prophet's call to the believers is to be respected, and not to be treated as their calling to one another; because the Prophet's call must relate to some important affair affecting the welfare of the community, while their mutual calling to each other relates to their own private affairs of an ordinary type.

1768 ما انتم عليه signifies the state of mind and conduct to which you conform yourselves, i.e. whether you are sincere or hypocritical.

CHAPTER XXV

THE DISTINCTION

(Al-Furqán)

REVEALED AT MECCA

(6 sections and 77 verses)

Abstract:

Sec. 1. A warner for all nations.
Sec. 2. Truth of the warning.
Sec. 3. The day of distinction.
Sec. 4. A lesson in the fate of former people.
Sec. 5. A lesson from nature.
Sec. 6. The transformation wrought.

The title, context and date of revelation.

THIS chapter, which is entitled The Distinction, is, in its entirety, one of the earlier Meccan revelations, and it is an error to ascribe vv. 68–70 to Medina, as the context clearly shows. The later prophecies of the last chapter, which clearly promised the establishment of a Muslim kingdom, are followed by an earlier prophecy as to the great day of distinction, when truth and falsehood shall be so clearly separated that even the superficial eye should not fail to observe it. Thus it happened in the battle of Badr, which is called the day of distinction in the Holy Qur-án (8 : 41), and this is the day referred to in v. 25.

Subject-matter.

The chapter opens with the statement that the Holy Prophet's message was for all nations of the world, and, as the last exposition of the doctrine of Divine Unity, it must unite all the nations and uproot all sorts of polytheism; the Unity of God and the unity of humanity must go hand-in-hand. The unbelievers objected to his being a mortal, and to this an answer is given in the concluding words of the second section, which asserts the truth of the warning. The third section points out that a distinction shall be finally made between good and evil, and refers to the day of distinction. These general statements are followed by concrete instances of the fate of previous peoples, some of which are very briefly referred to in the fourth section, and the Meccans are warned against their persistence in error. The fifth section draws attention to some natural phenomena which bear evidence to the law of gradual growth in nature, showing how merciful dealing characterizes all Divine laws: laws of which it often became necessary to remind those who derided punishment in their opposition to truth. The chapter is brought to a close by a description of the righteous servants of the Beneficent God, being, in fact, an indication of the mighty transformation which had already begun to work.

SECTION 1

A Warner for all Nations

1. A message for the whole world. 2, 3. Divine Unity. 4, 5. The Qur-án reveals deep knowledge of the future. 7–9. The Prophet is denied and called a madman.

In the name of Allah, the Beneficent, the Merciful.

1 Blessed is He Who sent down the distinction upon His servant that he may be a warner to the nations;[1769]

2 He, Whose is the kingdom of the heavens and the earth, and Who did not take to Himself a son, and Who has no associate in the kingdom, and Who created every thing, then ordained for it a measure.[1770]

3 And they have taken besides Him gods, who do not create anything while they are themselves created, and they control not for themselves any harm or profit, and they control not death, nor life, nor raising (the dead) to life.

Ar. nor.

4 And those who disbelieve say: This is nothing but a lie which he has forged, and other people have helped him at it; so indeed they have done injustice and (uttered) a falsehood.

5 And they say: The stories of the ancients—he has got them written—so these are read out to him morning and evening.

بِسْمِ اللَّهِ الرَّحْمَٰنِ الرَّحِيمِ

تَبَارَكَ الَّذِي نَزَّلَ الْفُرْقَانَ عَلَىٰ عَبْدِهِ
لِيَكُونَ لِلْعَالَمِينَ نَذِيرًا
الَّذِي لَهُ مُلْكُ السَّمَاوَاتِ وَالْأَرْضِ
وَلَمْ يَتَّخِذْ وَلَدًا وَلَمْ يَكُن لَّهُ شَرِيكٌ فِي الْمُلْكِ
وَخَلَقَ كُلَّ شَيْءٍ فَقَدَّرَهُ تَقْدِيرًا
وَاتَّخَذُوا مِن دُونِهِ آلِهَةً لَّا يَخْلُقُونَ شَيْئًا
وَهُمْ يُخْلَقُونَ وَلَا يَمْلِكُونَ لِأَنفُسِهِمْ
ضَرًّا وَلَا نَفْعًا وَلَا يَمْلِكُونَ مَوْتًا وَ
لَا حَيَاةً وَلَا نُشُورًا
وَقَالَ الَّذِينَ كَفَرُوا إِنْ هَٰذَا إِلَّا إِفْكٌ
افْتَرَاهُ وَأَعَانَهُ عَلَيْهِ قَوْمٌ آخَرُونَ
فَقَدْ جَاءُوا ظُلْمًا وَزُورًا
وَقَالُوا أَسَاطِيرُ الْأَوَّلِينَ اكْتَتَبَهَا فَهِيَ
تُمْلَىٰ عَلَيْهِ بُكْرَةً وَأَصِيلًا

1769 This distinction consisted in the discomfiture of the power of an enemy who, at the time when these prophecies were announced, was so strong as to call these prophecies the ravings of a madman. The earliest occasion on which the power of the Quraish was broken was the battle of Badr, where their nine mischievous leaders fell, while its final overthrow was consummated by the conquest of Mecca. Such a distinct sign of the Holy Prophet's truth, the value of which is in no way diminished by the lapse of time, no doubt entitled him to be a true warner to all the nations of the earth. It should be noted that the universality of the Prophet's message is plainly asserted in this early Meccan revelation.

1770 The mission of the Prophet is universal, for he is the Apostle of a King whose kingdom extends over the entire universe. And by reason of the greatness of His power He will accomplish the fulfilment of the prophecies which had already been pronounced. The verse condemns in very brief words all kinds of polytheism.

6 Say: He has revealed it Who knows the secret in the heavens and the earth; surely He is ever Forgiving, Merciful.[1771]

قُلْ أَنْزَلَهُ الَّذِي يَعْلَمُ السِّرَّ فِي السَّمٰوٰتِ وَالْأَرْضِ ۚ إِنَّهُ كَانَ غَفُورًا رَّحِيمًا ۝

7 And they say: What is the matter with this Apostle that he eats food and goes about in the marts; why has not an angel been sent down to him, so that he should have been a warner with him?[1772]

وَقَالُوا مَالِ هٰذَا الرَّسُولِ يَأْكُلُ الطَّعَامَ وَيَمْشِي فِي الْأَسْوَاقِ ۙ لَوْلَا أُنْزِلَ إِلَيْهِ مَلَكٌ فَيَكُونَ مَعَهُ نَذِيرًا ۝

8 Or (why is not) a treasure sent down to him, or he is made to have a garden from which he should eat?[1773] And the unjust say: You do not follow any but a man deprived of reason.

أَوْ يُلْقٰى إِلَيْهِ كَنْزٌ أَوْ تَكُونُ لَهُ جَنَّةٌ يَأْكُلُ مِنْهَا ۚ وَقَالَ الظّٰلِمُونَ إِنْ تَتَّبِعُونَ إِلَّا رَجُلًا مَّسْحُورًا ۝

Ar. thee.

9 See what likenesses do they apply to you, so they have gone astray, therefore they shall not be able to find a way.[1774]

انْظُرْ كَيْفَ ضَرَبُوا لَكَ الْأَمْثَالَ فَضَلُّوا فَلَا يَسْتَطِيعُونَ سَبِيلًا ۝

SECTION 2

Truth of the Warning

10. Goodness in store for the Prophet. 11–14. Destruction is the end of the wicked. 15, 16. Reward of the faithful. 17–19. False deities. 20. All prophets were mortals.

Ar. thee.
Ar. thee

10 Blessed is He Who, if He please, will give you what is better than this: gardens beneath which rivers flow, and He will give you palaces.[1775]

تَبٰرَكَ الَّذِي إِنْ شَاءَ جَعَلَ لَكَ خَيْرًا مِّنْ ذٰلِكَ جَنّٰتٍ تَجْرِي مِنْ تَحْتِهَا الْأَنْهٰرُ ۙ وَيَجْعَلْ لَّكَ قُصُورًا ۝

1771 Hence the truth of his prophecies will be a sure sign of the truth of this revelation from Allah. This is the reply to the charges contained in the previous verses.

1772 The Prophet's life was one of utmost simplicity. He did all his work himself. "He aided his wives in their household duties, mended his clothes, tied up the goats, and even cobbled his sandals" (Muir). Nay, his kind and genial nature often led him to do others' work. Once a woman, unable to work for herself, asked him to lead her into a certain street; he accompanied her there, only taking leave when her work was accomplished (Mishkát). Therefore unbelievers speak of him as going about in the marts. He was a mortal, and partook of the ordinary food of a simple Arab. Hence they speak of him as eating food. The answer to this is given in v. 20, viz. that all prophets were mortal and subject to the human laws, even as the Holy Prophet. This is a clear proof of the continuity of the subject-matter of the Holy Qur-án.

1773 Treasures were placed at the feet of the companions of the Holy Prophet, and they were made lords of the fertile lands of Mesopotamia and its gardens, but all this was done in accordance with Divine law, which requires the fulfilment of prophecy to be brought about gradually, even as it requires all growth to be gradual in the physical world.

1774 It shall be a proof of their having gone astray that they shall not find a way to success, or a way of escaping from the punishment with which they are threatened.

1775 The gardens of Mesopotamia, the palaces of Persia and of the Cæsars, were given to the followers of the Holy Prophet as proof of the truth of this prophecy. According to 11 But they reject the hour, and We have prepared a burning fire for him who rejects the hour.

12 When it shall come into their sight from a distant place, they shall hear its vehement raging and roaring.

13 And when they are cast into a narrow place in it, bound, they shall there call out for destruction.

14 Call not this day for one destruction, but call for destructions many.

15 Say: Is this better or the abiding garden which those who guard (against evil) are promised? That shall be a reward and a resort for them.

16 They shall have therein what they desire abiding (in it); it is a promise which it is proper to be prayed for from your Lord.[1776]

Ar. thy.

17 And on the day when He shall gather them, and whatever they served besides Allah, He shall say: Was it you who led astray these My servants, or did they themselves go astray from the path?

18 They shall say: Glory be to Thee; it was not beseeming for us that we should take any guardians besides Thee, but Thou didst make them and their fathers to enjoy until they forsook the reminder, and they were a people in perdition.[1777]

19 So they shall indeed give you the lie in what you say, then you shall not be able

Mjd, what is meant is Paradise in the hereafter and palaces in this life—Rz: جنات فى الآخرة وقصورا فى الدنيا

1776 The words signify that this promise shall certainly be fulfilled.

1777 Most of the critics make a mistake on an occasion like this, thinking that the answer is left incomplete, and a superficial glance would no doubt lead to the conclusion that the question has not been really answered. But in all such cases the Qur-án really draws attention to an argument which proves the unreasonableness of the contrary conclusion, while leaving it for the reader to arrive at the correct one. Here, for instance, the argument is stated in the words that "it was not beseeming for us that we should take any guardians besides Thee," and it is left for the reader to draw the conclusion, which is: How could it then be that we should have called upon others to regard us as gods?

Ar. nor. — to ward off or help, and whoever among you is unjust, We will make him taste a great chastisement.

The Day of Distinction

21, 22. Demand of punishment. 23, 24. The wicked and the righteous are separated. 25–29. Signs of the day of distinction. 30, 31. Rejection of the Qur-án and enmity to it. 32. Revelation by portions. 33. A perfect revelation. 34. End of the wicked.

PART XIX

21 And those who do not fear Our meeting, say: Why have not angels been sent down upon us, or (why) do we not see our Lord? Now certainly they are too proud of themselves and have revolted in great revolt.[1779]

22 On the day when they shall see the angels, there shall be no good news on that day for the guilty, and they shall say: It is a forbidden thing totally prohibited.[1780]

23 And We will proceed to what they have done of deeds, so We shall render them as scattered motes.[1781]

Or, hope.

Or, Let there be an inviolable obstruction.

وَقَالَ الَّذِينَ لَا يَرْجُونَ لِقَاءَنَا لَوْلَا

وَقَدِمْنَا إِلٰى مَا عَمِلُوا مِنْ عَمَلٍ فَجَعَلْنٰهُ
هَبَاءً مَّنْثُورًا ۝

1778 This is an injunction to the Muslims to bear the persecutions of their opponents patiently, for these trials will distinguish the bad from the good. The concluding words are a solace to them: Your Lord is Seeing and He will punish the oppressors.

1779 The coming of the angels and the Lord signifies the coming of the threatened punishment in the Holy Qur-án, and the next verse makes it clear. Also see 268.

1780 The words حِجْرًا مَّحْجُورًا may bear different interpretations according as they are taken to be spoken by the angels or by the guilty. In the former case the meaning is that good news will be a forbidden thing to the guilty, which is equivalent to saying that they shall be punished. In the latter case, the words are a kind of prayer for the coming of an obstruction between them and their punishment. The latter significance is given in the margin.

1781 All the exertions of the Quraish were brought to naught in the battle of Badr.

24 The dwellers of the garden shall on that day be in a better abiding-place and a better resting-place.

أَصْحَابُ الْجَنَّةِ يَوْمَئِذٍ خَيْرٌ مُّسْتَقَرًّا وَّ

25 And on the day when the heaven shall burst asunder with the clouds, and the angels shall be sent down a sending.[1782]

وَيَوْمَ تَشَقَّقُ السَّمَاءُ بِالْغَمَامِ وَنُزِّلَ
الْمَلٰئِكَةُ تَنْزِيلًا

26 The kingdom on that day shall rightly belong to the Beneficent God, and a hard day shall it be for the unbelievers.

يَوْمًا عَلَى الْكٰفِرِينَ عَسِيرًا

27 And the day when the unjust one shall bite his hands, saying: O! would that I had taken a way with the Apostle:[1783]

وَيَوْمَ يَعَضُّ الظَّالِمُ عَلٰى يَدَيْهِ يَقُولُ يٰلَيْتَنِي
اتَّخَذْتُ مَعَ الرَّسُولِ سَبِيلًا

28 O woe is me! would that I had not taken such a one for a friend!

يٰوَيْلَتٰى لَيْتَنِي لَمْ أَتَّخِذْ فُلَانًا خَلِيلًا

29 Certainly he led me astray from the reminder after it had come to me; and the devil fails to aid man.

30 And the Apostle cried out: O my Lord! surely my people have treated this Qur-án
Or, irrational talk. as a forsaken thing.

وَقَالَ الرَّسُولُ يٰرَبِّ إِنَّ قَوْمِي اتَّخَذُوا

31 And thus have We made for every prophet an enemy from among the guilty, and
Ar. thy. sufficient is your Lord as a Guide and a Helper.

وَكَذٰلِكَ جَعَلْنَا لِكُلِّ نَبِيٍّ عَدُوًّا
مِّنَ الْمُجْرِمِينَ وَكَفٰى بِرَبِّكَ
هَادِيًا وَّنَصِيرًا

32 And those who disbelieve say: Why has not the Qur-án been revealed to him all at once? Thus, that We may
Ar. thy. establish your heart by it and We have arranged it well in arranging.[1784]

وَقَالَ الَّذِينَ كَفَرُوا لَوْلَا نُزِّلَ عَلَيْهِ
الْقُرْاٰنُ جُمْلَةً وَّاحِدَةً كَذٰلِكَ
لِنُثَبِّتَ بِهٖ فُؤَادَكَ وَرَتَّلْنٰهُ تَرْتِيلًا

1782 This description of the day of Badr is also given in 8 : 11, where the falling of rain is clearly mentioned, and on the same occasion is also mentioned the coming of the angels. The next verse shows that it will be a day of victory for the Muslims, the believers in the Beneficent God, and a hard day for the unbelievers. In fact, the distress and hardship the Quraish experienced in the battle of Badr were not tasted by them in any of their subsequent encounters with the Muslims.

1783 'Aqba is said to be the person particularly meant here. He was one of the Quraish chiefs who, to please a friend, spat in the Prophet's face (Rz). At Badr he was the only prisoner to be put to death. After the battle, as the dead bodies of the Quraish chiefs who fell were being conveyed to a pit to be buried, the Prophet exclaimed, as he named the chiefs against whom he had prayed on account of their severe persecution of the Muslims: "Have you now found that which your Lord promised true? Surely I have found what my Lord promised me to be true." The reference was no doubt to these clear and forcible prophecies declared at so early a date.

33 And they shall not bring to you any argument, but We have brought to you (one) with truth and best in significance.[1785]

A Lesson in the Fate of Former People

35-39. Various people destroyed before. 40. The Meccans do not take a warning from their fate. 41-44. They mock the Prophet and persist in error.

36 Then We said: Go you both to the people who rejected Our communications; so We destroyed them with utter destruction.

فَقُلْنَا اذْهَبَآ إِلَى الْقَوْمِ الَّذِيْنَ كَذَّبُوْا
بِاٰيٰتِنَا فَدَمَّرْنٰهُمْ تَدْمِيْرًا ۝

37 And the people of Noah, when they rejected the apostles, We drowned them, and made them a sign for men, and We have prepared a painful chastisement for the unjust;

وَقَوْمَ نُوْحٍ لَّمَّا كَذَّبُوا الرُّسُلَ أَغْرَقْنٰهُمْ
وَجَعَلْنٰهُمْ لِلنَّاسِ اٰيَةً وَّأَعْتَدْنَا
لِلظّٰلِمِيْنَ عَذَابًا أَلِيْمًا ۝

1784 رتّل الكلام means he put together and arranged well the component parts of the speech (LL). Hence the meaning is that the Qur-án was revealed piecemeal, so that under the varying circumstances through which the Prophet passed the Divine revelation might be a source of strength to his heart; and then, as it were to refute any suggestion that the revelation might remain a disorderly collection of fragments revealed under different circumstances, having no connection with each other, it is added that the entire arrangement was also Divinely accomplished. The verse contradicts in the clearest terms the false opinion that the Qur-án was arranged by Abú Bakr or 'Usmán, for its arrangement according to this verse was a part of the Divine scheme, brought about in the lifetime of the Holy Prophet who was the recipient of the Divine revelation.

1785 Masal signifies a description, state, or case, and is metaphorically applied to a state or condition that is strange or wonderful (LL), or it means hujjat, i.e. an argument (TA). The meaning is that they would not bring any strange question (Kf: سوال عجيب) or strange objection (JB: شئ عجيب فى القدح) which has not been answered in the Holy Qur-án with truth, and of which the best significance is not given therein. The verse lays down the basis of an important principle, viz. that the Holy Qur-án not only contains answers to all objections against it, but also adduces arguments of the truth of the assertions made. It is sufficient to remark that no other religious book of the world satisfies this requirement, which circumstance alone places the Qur-án above all scriptures, and points to it as a unique revelation capable of satisfying the spiritual requirements of all men in all times.

40 And certainly they have (often) passed by the town on which was rained an evil rain;[1788] did they not then see it? Nay! they did not hope to be raised again.

41 And when they see you, they do not take you for aught but a mockery: Is this he whom Allah has raised to be an apostle?

1786 According to Zj, Rass was a country in which a part of the tribe of Samood resided; others say that Rass is the name of a town in Yamama (TA). The word Rass has several other meanings, as, for instance, a well, and it is said that they were a people who threw their prophet into a well (JB). Hence the reference may be to Joseph's brothers, who threw him into a well.

1787 The meaning is that every one of these generations was warned of its doom by means of the stories and examples of those who had previously perished, but, not heeding the warning, was destroyed as the others had been.

1788 This town is Sodom, which was situated on the way to Syria.

1789 This verse shows how broad is the idea of shirk or polytheism according to the Holy Qur-án. It is not simply worship of idols that is condemned, but blindly following one's desires is equally condemned. Many men who consider themselves the servants of the One God really bow in submission before the greatest of their idols, i.e. their desires. In no other religion has the monotheistic doctrine been brought to this state of perfection.

SECTION 5

A Lesson from Nature

45–55. Divine mercy and man's ungratefulness. 56–58. The Prophet to trust in Allah. 59, 60. Divine beneficence and idolaters' denial of it.

Ar. hast thou. Ar. thy.

45 Have you not considered (the work of) your Lord, how He extends the shade? And if He had pleased He would certainly have made it stationary; then We have made the sun an indication of it;

Or, a guide to.

46 Then We take it to Ourselves, taking little by little.[1790]

47 And He it is Who made the night a covering for you, and the sleep a rest, and He made the day to rise up again.

48 And He it is Who sends the winds as good news before His mercy; and We send down pure water from the cloud, 49 That We may give life thereby to a dead land[1791] and give it for drink, out of what We have created, to cattle and many people.

50 And certainly We have repeated this to them that they may be mindful, but the greater number of men do not consent to aught except denying.

51 And if We had pleased We would certainly have raised a warner in every town.[1792]

52 So do not follow the unbelievers, and strive against them a mighty striving with it.[1793]

أَلَمْ تَرَ إِلَىٰ رَبِّكَ كَيْفَ مَدَّ الظِّلَّ وَلَوْ شَاءَ لَجَعَلَهُ سَاكِنًا ثُمَّ جَعَلْنَا الشَّمْسَ عَلَيْهِ دَلِيلًا ۝

وَلَوْ شِئْنَا لَبَعَثْنَا فِي كُلِّ قَرْيَةٍ نَذِيرًا ۝
فَلَا تُطِعِ الْكٰفِرِينَ وَجَاهِدْهُمْ بِهِ جِهَادًا كَبِيرًا ۝

1790 This and the previous verse show that Allah deals mercifully with His servants. He would not destroy them all at once. The sun of righteousness had risen, and there were clear indications that the shadows of darkness would disappear, but, as in physical nature, they would not disappear suddenly, but gradually, diminishing little by little.

1791 The mercy of Allah, which appears in the form of rain in physical nature, is spiritual in revelation : as the pure water from the clouds gives life to a dead land, so does the pure water of revelation from Him raise the spiritually dead to life.

1792 The companions of the Holy Prophet no doubt had this in mind when they spread far and wide, taking his message and warning into every distant town. How few Muslims there are to-day who are inspired with that zeal to prove the truth of every word of the Qur-án.

It should, however, be noted that the verse does not contradict the statement in 35:24, and elsewhere, that a prophet was raised among every nation. Warners have not been raised in every town, but they have been raised in every nation. 1793, see next page.

53 And He it is Who has made the two seas to flow freely, (Or, mixed.) the one sweet that subdues thirst by its sweetness, and the other salt that burns by its saltness; and between the two He has made a barrier and inviolable obstruction.[1794]

وَهُوَ الَّذِي مَرَجَ الْبَحْرَيْنِ هَٰذَا عَذْبٌ فُرَاتٌ وَهَٰذَا مِلْحٌ أُجَاجٌ وَجَعَلَ بَيْنَهُمَا بَرْزَخًا وَحِجْرًا مَّحْجُورًا ۝

54 And He it is Who has created man from the water, then He has made for him blood-relationship and marriage-relationship,[1795] and your (Ar. thy.) Lord is powerful.

وَهُوَ الَّذِي خَلَقَ مِنَ الْمَاءِ بَشَرًا فَجَعَلَهُ نَسَبًا وَصِهْرًا ۗ وَكَانَ رَبُّكَ قَدِيرًا ۝

55 And they serve besides Allah that which neither profits them nor causes them harm; and the unbeliever is an aider against his Lord.[1796]

وَيَعْبُدُونَ مِن دُونِ اللَّهِ مَا لَا يَنفَعُهُمْ وَلَا يَضُرُّهُمْ ۗ وَكَانَ الْكَافِرُ عَلَىٰ رَبِّهِ ظَهِيرًا ۝

56 And We have not sent you (Ar. thee.) but as a giver of good news and as a warner.[1797]

وَمَا أَرْسَلْنَاكَ إِلَّا مُبَشِّرًا وَنَذِيرًا ۝

57 Say: I do not ask you aught in return except that he, who will, may take the way to his Lord.

قُلْ مَا أَسْأَلُكُمْ عَلَيْهِ مِنْ أَجْرٍ إِلَّا مَن شَاءَ أَن يَتَّخِذَ إِلَىٰ رَبِّهِ سَبِيلًا ۝

1793 This verse affords a clear proof of the significance of the word jihád, as used in the Holy Qur-án. This chapter, being admittedly Meccan in origin, contains no reference to fighting. Every exertion to spread the truth is, according to this verse, a jihad—nay, it is called جهادا كبيرا or the great jihád, and fighting in defence of religion received the name of jihád, because under the circumstances it became necessary for the truth to live and prosper, and if fighting had not been permitted, truth would surely have been uprooted. The commentators all accept this significance of the word here. See Bd, Rz, AH, etc. It should be noted that the greatest jihád which a Muslim can carry out is one by means of the Qur-án, to which the personal pronoun it at the end of the verse unquestionably refers, and not with the sword.

1794 The two seas undoubtedly refer to the two parties, the believers, who are compared to the sea of sweet water, and the unbelievers, who are compared to the salt-water sea. Both exist in the world side by side, and so they would continue.

1795 The passage seems to me to hint at the flight to Medina. The Prophet was related to the Meccans through his father, and to the Medina people through his mother. As his blood relations had persecuted him and were bent upon killing him, he is now reminded of his relationship through marriage to another people. This chapter is an early revelation, and it was no doubt due to some such hint in the Divine revelation that the Prophet later on began, on the occasion of the pilgrimage, to search for adherents among the people of Medina.

1796 The unbeliever aided the cause of untruth, as against his Lord, Who had sent truth into the world, but he is reminded that his deities would do him no good.

1797 It should be noted that good news given through the Holy Prophet, being a manifestation of Divine mercy, always takes precedence of the warning of punishment, which is a manifestation of Divine wrath. It also points to the Prophet as being more concerned with mercy than with the desire to exact vengeance. He gave his enemies practical proof of this in every field of battle.

58 And rely on the Everliving Who dies not, and celebrate His praise; and Sufficient is He as being aware of the faults of His servants,[1798]

وَتَوَكَّلْ عَلَى الْحَيِّ الَّذِي لَا يَمُوتُ وَسَبِّحْ بِحَمْدِهِ ۚ وَكَفَىٰ بِهِ بِذُنُوبِ عِبَادِهِ خَبِيرًا ۚ

CHAPTER XXVI

THE POETS

(Ash-shu'ará)

REVEALED AT MECCA

(11 sections and 227 verses)

Abstract:

Sec. 1. The Prophet is consoled.
Sec. 2-4. History of Moses.
Sec. 5. History of Abraham.
Sec. 6-10. Histories of Noah, Húd, Ṣáliḥ, Lot, and Shu'aib.
Sec. 11. The Meccans are warned.

The Title.

THE title of this chapter, The Poets, is taken from a reference to the poets in v. 224, where it is clearly suggested that the Holy Qur-án is not the work of a poet, because it in no way resembles the work of poets. It should be noted that one of the frequent charges which its bewildered opponents brought against the Holy Qur-án was that it was a poet's work. The Qur-án has often rebutted this charge. This has been effectively accomplished here by showing that the Holy Prophet's work and preaching were similar in detail to the work and preaching of preceding prophets, bearing no resemblance whatever to the work of poets.

Subject-matter.

While the prophets mentioned herein are identical with those in the 7th chapter, where they appear chronologically, their order in this chapter is quite different. The reason of according precedence to the narrative of Moses is given below, the object being to draw attention to a repetition of the history of Moses in the history of Muhammad, may peace and the blessings of Allah be upon him! In the opening section of the chapter the Holy Prophet is given a consolation, and told not to grieve too much on account of the unbelief of the Meccans, nor yet to despair of their reformation, because human nature must eventually revolt against the worship of objects lower than, or like, itself (see 1807). The history of Moses is taken up in the next three sections from the time of his message to Pharaoh to that of the monarch's ill-fated end, together with his hosts, in the Red Sea. The fifth section takes us back to Abraham, because that patriarch gives us the connecting link between the houses of Israel and Ishmael, or between the two great prophets, Moses and Muhammad, may peace and the blessings of Allah be upon them! The next five sections are devoted to the narratives of Noah, Húd, Ṣáliḥ, Lot, and Shu'aib in chronological order; the fate of the opponents of each of these prophets being, as it were, a warning to the opponents of the Holy Prophet: this is clearly indicated in the concluding section of the chapter.

Context and date of revelation.

The three chapters, 26th, 27th, and 28th, form a group not only connected in subject, but also belonging to the same period. All three belong to the middle Meccan period, and were undoubtedly revealed at Mecca. The chief point in each is the story of Moses, with which they all begin, although the 27th chapter makes only a brief allusion to it. In each case that story begins with Moses being called to prophethood at Mount Sinai with a special message for Pharaoh, ending with Pharaoh being drowned in the Red Sea; the later wanderings of the Israelites are not referred to in any of them. This common thread of the narrative in all three chapters gives us a clue to the subject-matter and to their connection with what has gone before. It will be noted that the 25th chapter spoke of the furqán, or the great distinctive sign that was given to the Holy Prophet, and these three chapters really supply the furqán or distinctive sign given to Moses, which, as shown in 84, was the drowning of the Egyptians in the Red Sea; hence the narrative is in all cases brought to an end with that incident. Moses is the prophet who is again and again referred to in the Holy Qur-án as a prototype of the great Arabian Prophet, because of his remarkable prophecy contained in Deut. 18 : 15–18, whose fulfilment was claimed by no prophet in the world other than the Holy Prophet Muhammad, may peace and the blessings of Allah be upon him! Attention is drawn to this point in the last chapter of this group. Thus, while the 25th chapter promises a furqán, or a sign, that should finally distinguish truth from falsehood in the case of the Holy Prophet, the three chapters that follow show that such a sign was granted to Moses, in whose likeness the Holy Prophet had come, and that the history of the great Israelite prophet must be repeated in the great Ishmaelite Prophet. This group of three chapters may therefore be called an illustration of the chapter which they follow. Another point of connection between this chapter and the one preceding it is that it rebuts the charge mentioned in the previous chapter that the Holy Prophet was a poet, it being here shown, as already pointed out, that his lifework was not the lifework of a poet.

The four concluding verses of the chapter are supposed by some to have been revealed at Medina, but no reason is given for this assertion. On the other hand, it clearly concludes with a rebuttal of the two most prominent charges against the Holy Qur-án. The Qur-án aimed at the purification of the lives of its followers, and therefore it could be neither the work of the devil, as were the utterances of the soothsayers, nor the work of a poet; because soothsayers and poets never attempted the noble object of effecting a transformation in the lives of men. Thus the concluding verses, relating to poets, are an essential part of the chapter, and the thread of reasoning is incomplete without them. Moreover, as these verses furnish the title, it is highly improbable that they should have been separated from the main part of the chapter by about ten or twelve years.

1802 The meaning of these letters is not explained by early authorities, and the interpretation that I adopt is based on the remark, which is traceable to the earliest authorities, that these letters generally signify some attribute of the Divine Being. Hence I take ṭá as standing for laṭíf, meaning Benignant, sín as standing for samí', meaning Hearing, and mím as standing for 'alím, meaning Knowing. I may, however, suggest another interpretation. Every one of the three chapters of this group opens with the same letters, only the final mím being omitted in the 27th chapter. And as these chapters speak in

5 And there does not come to them a new reminder from the Beneficent God but they turn aside from it.

6 So they have indeed rejected (the truth), therefore the news of that which they mock shall soon come to them.[1806]

7 Do they not see the earth, how many of every noble kind We have caused to grow in it?[1807] particular of the calling up of Moses at Mount Sinai, ṭá sín may stand for Túr-i-Síná, or the Mount Sinai, and mím may stand for Moses; attention is thus called in these letters to the revelation granted to Moses at Mount Sinai, which is such a clear proof of the revelation of the Qur-án. This is corroborated by the plain statement made in the last chapter of this group, that the unbelievers called the revelations of Moses and Muhammad—may peace and the blessings of Allah be upon them!—two acts of deception. 28 : 46-49 may be specially noted as showing that the Mosaic revelation was an evidence of the truth of the revelation of the Holy Prophet.

1803 الكتاب المبين is variously interpreted as meaning the book that makes manifest all that is required, or the book that makes manifest the truth as distinguished from the falsehood. It is the nominative form from the verb abána, which signifies he spoke distinctly or plainly.

1804 Other prophets may have cursed a generation and warned it of the doom awaiting it, but none was ever anxious on account of its fate to the same extent as the Holy Prophet Muhammad, may peace and the blessings of Allah be upon him! He had been informed by Divine revelation of the doom of an evil generation, but instead of cursing it, he exerted himself heroically to save his people by bringing about a mighty transformation among them, a transformation for which he was so anxious that he is described here as almost killing himself with grief. It was the utmost limit of sympathy for the sufferings of humanity, the practical sympathy of a true reformer, not the wild or sentimental talk of a dreamer.

1805 Such a sign was sent at Badr and upon the conquest of Mecca. In the former place their chiefs were laid low and in the latter they accepted submission.

1806 It was the prophecies of their own punishment and of the predominance of Islam which they mocked. By the news of these is meant the reality or truth, which will be made manifest in their fulfilment.

1807 Will not then men, who are the noblest of the creation of Allah, turn to noble aspirations, and cease to bow before objects of their own invention or those which they are meant to rule? But alas for men, that even when they see their folly in bowing down before inanimate objects they think it wise to bow before human beings like themselves, and when rid of that delusion, still bow before their own desires and the passions which they were made to rule like all things in nature.

Ar. and. 8 Most surely there is a sign in that, but most of them will not believe.

Ar. thy. 9 And most surely your Lord is the Mighty, the Merciful.

فَأْتِيَا فِرْعَوْنَ فَقُولَا إِنَّا رَسُولُ رَبِّ الْعَالَمِينَ ۝

1808 The reference is to the killing of the Egyptian in 28 : 15. It should be noted that Moses only says that the people of Pharaoh charged him with a crime, not that he was actually guilty or that he was sinful in the sight of Allah. As shown in 1811 and 1875, Moses could not in justice be charged with a crime, but the unjust people of Pharaoh wanted to lay their hands on him under some pretext.

1809 Objection has been taken to the use of the word rasúl in انا رسول رب العلمين in the singular, whereas there were two. The commentators explain rasúl here as meaning risálat, or message, and then consider the word as being equivalent to zú-risálat, i.e. bearer of the message (Kf). But as LL observes, on the authority of Mgh and TA, rasúl, as meaning a messenger, is like 'aduww (foe) and ṣiddíq (friend), and is used alike as masculine and feminine, and singular and dual and plural. And it is so used in Arabic literature, in support of which the following verse of Abú Zu'aib is quoted: الكنى اليها و خير الرسول ∴ اعلمهم بنواحى الخبر i.e. Be thou my messenger to her, and the best of messengers is the most knowing of them in respect of the bounds or limits of the tidings (M-LL): here the singular word rasúl is used for the plural rusul, and is so translated.

17 That send with us the children of Israel.

18 (Pharaoh) said:[1810] Did we not bring you up as a child among us, and you tarried among us for (many) years of your life:

19 And you did (that) deed of yours which you did, and you are one of the ungrateful.

20 He said: I did it then while I was of those unable to see the right course:[1811]

21 So I fled from you when I feared you, then my Lord granted me wisdom and made me of the apostles:

22 And is it a favour of which you remind me that you have enslaved the children of Israel?[1812]

23 Pharaoh said: And what is the Lord of the worlds?

24 He said: The Lord of the heavens and the earth and what is between them, if you would be sure.

25 (Pharaoh) said to those around him: Do you not hear?

26 He said: Your Lord and the Lord of your fathers of old.

27 Said he: Most surely your Apostle who is sent to you is mad.

28 He said: The Lord of the east and the west and what is between them, if you understand.

29 Said he: If you will take a god besides me, I will most certainly make you one of the imprisoned.[1813]

مِنَ الْمَسْجُونِينَ ۝

1810 The Qur-án usually omits large portions of the details of stories which do not serve its purpose.

1811 One of the significances of dalla is he was perplexed, or confused, and unable to see his right course. Rz's explanation of the word dáll here is, perplexed, being unable to know what was incumbent on him. See also 2766. Moses' taking the law into his own hands to punish a guilty man was owing to his being confused at the moment as to the step which he should take, so he struck him with his fist (28:15). Death was really accidental, not intentional; striking with the fist not being ordinarily sufficient to cause the death of a person.

1812 Pharaoh had reminded Moses of bringing him up as a child, and Moses puts him to shame by pointing to the enslavement of the whole nation of the Israelites, thus keeping them under such a debasing form of subjugation that all the higher aspirations had entirely disappeared. Being only employed in menial work by Pharaoh and the Egyptians, they were not permitted to rise to any dignity in the land. It is this subjection which is here called enslavement.

1813 The gods of the Egyptians were innumerable. There were the abstract gods, the cosmic gods, the human gods, and animal gods; their god-cult may be summed up briefly in the words of the En. Br. (vol. ix. p. 51): "Truly it might have been said in ancient Egypt, Of the making of gods there is no end." Pharaoh's claim to divinity among a people who were willing to deify any one was therefore only a natural result of existing conditions. The statement in the Qur-án does not imply that Pharaoh was really one of the gods of Egypt, but only that he asked Moses to regard him as a god.

44 So they cast down their cords and their rods[a] and said: By Pharaoh's power, we shall most surely be victorious.

and treasures was given to the Israelites in the land of Canaan, the promised land flowing with milk and honey.

1815 The expression اضرب بعصاك البحر is similar to اضرب بعصاك الحجر and for the various explanations of it see 96. Elsewhere the same idea is expressed by saying فاضرب لهم طريقا في البحر يبسا meaning "then make for them a dry path in the sea" (20:77), where the same word, idrib, is used for seeking a way. See 82, 1593.

1816 The sea had cloven asunder and gone back, thus leaving a dry way (20:77) for the Israelites. The كل فرق, or each party, may either refer to the Egyptians and the Israelites or to the several parties into which the large number of Israelites may have necessarily been divided. Or, the meaning may be that each wave as it receded was like a huge mountain. There is nothing to show that the sea was divided into several parts. The word taud, it may be noted, means a mountain, as well as an elevated or overlooking tract of land (TA-LL), and is even applied by a poet to a camel's hump (LA-LL).

1817 The prophets, being always conscious of their weaknesses, seek Allah's protection. Expressions like this invariably indicate human weakness before Divine perfection, and are not evidences of sinfulness. Compare Jesus' confession of weakness in a similar strain: "Why callest thou me good? there is none good but One, that is, God" (Matt. 19:17). It does not mean that Jesus was a bad man, but before God, Who is the source of all good, he naturally thought that a mortal had no right to be called good.

1819 The word áyat, literally a sign, is used here to indicate the lofty building that should acquire a renown as a sign of greatness. These lofty buildings were, no doubt, used to terrorize others, as v. 130 shows that acts of cruelty and violence were committed by 'Ád while they considered themselves safe in their fortresses.

1821 Samood are described in v. 149 as hewing houses out of mountains, and, as it appears from here and 54:28, the springs of water seem to have been few, and access to these was probably specially guarded, so that they were open only at particular times. Sáliḥ seems to have demanded that the she-camel should be allowed a drink at such times. See note on 54:28, where the words كل شرب محتضر occur, meaning that every share of the water shall be attended by the she-camel, or that she shall have access to water at all times when a drink is allowed to others. A similar demand as regards her pasture is contained in 11:64 in the words, "leave her to pasture on Allah's earth," followed by the same words as those following this demand for drink: "And do not touch her with evil."

The word shirb signifies either an act of drinking, or a share, or portion that falls to one's 156 And do not touch her with evil, lest the chastisement of a grievous day should overtake you.

1824 The word jibillat means nature, quality, or property, and is here considered as being equivalent to ذوى الجبلة, i.e. the created things (Kf, Bd, JB). But jibillat is also synonymous with jibill, and the lexicologists recognize the two words as conveying the same meaning, viz. a great company of men, or nation, or people (Q-LL).

SECTION 11

The Meccans are warned

192–195. The Prophet warns Meccans. 196–199. Prophecies in earlier revelations. 200–209. They hasten for punishment. 210–223. Invitation to righteousness and truth cannot be the devil's work. 224–227. It is not the work of a poet.

192 And most surely this is a revelation from the Lord of the worlds.

وَإِنَّهُ لَتَنزِيلُ رَبِّ الْعَالَمِينَ ۝

193 The Faithful Spirit has descended with it,[1828]

نَزَلَ بِهِ الرُّوحُ الْأَمِينُ ۝

194 Upon your heart that you may be of the warners,[1829]

Ar. thy.
Ar. thou mayest.

1825 Kisaf means a portion (Rgh), and a portion of the heaven signifies a punishment from heaven, such as the Midianites thought they were threatened with by Shu'aib. According to JB, kisaf means punishment.

1826 It should be noted that the demand for the threatened punishment is always met with expressions signifying that the matter rests in the hands of Allah. This is as much true as regards the demands of the opponents of the previous prophets as those of the Quraish. Such statements are really equivalent to saying that the thing will certainly be accomplished.

1827 Ẓullah signifies a shade, or a covering, and the day of punishment is called the day of covering because it covered them with punishment.

1828 The Faithful Spirit is the angel Gabriel, who brought the Divine revelation to the Holy Prophet; thus Al-Amín received the Rúḥ-ul-Amín from on high.

1829 The addition of the words upon your heart is to indicate that the Prophet's heart, being the receptacle of the mighty revelation, was no doubt truly responsive to the great truths contained in it. The high morals and the broad humanitarian truths which the Qur-án contains give us a true picture of the great mind and of the high morals which are referred to in one of the earliest revelations in the words: "And most surely you conform yourself to sublime morality" (68:4). The pithy but most beautiful statement of that intelligent lady, 'Ayesha, than whom none was more familiar with the recipient of the Quranic revelation, remains unsurpassed in depicting the character of the Holy Prophet; when asked about it she replied: كان خلقه القرآن, i.e. his character is the Qur-án. She thus intimated in 195 In plain Arabic language.

196 And most surely the same is in the scriptures of the ancients.[1830]

197 Is it not a sign to them that the learned men of the Israelites know it?

198 And if We had revealed it to any of the foreigners,

199 So that he should have recited it to them, they would not have believed therein.[1831]

200 Thus have We caused it to enter into the hearts of the guilty.[1832]

201 They will not believe in it until they see the painful chastisement;

202 And it shall come to them all of a sudden, while they shall not perceive;

203 Then they will say: Shall we be respited?

204 What! do they still seek to hasten on Our chastisement?

Ar. hast thou.

205 Have you then considered if We let them enjoy themselves for years,

206 Then there comes to them that with which they are threatened,

207 That which they were made to enjoy shall not avail them?

brief words that all those wonderful pictures of moral sublimity drawn in the Holy Qur-án were pictures of the noble mind to which the Qur-án was revealed.

1830 The prophecies of the earlier books, especially of the scriptures of the Israelites, are clearly referred to here. Some of these prophecies have been quoted in these foot-notes. We may, however, add one more that is met with in Isa. 54, where "the children of the desolate" are given preference above "the children of the married wife." References to the Jews and the Christians constantly occur in the Meccan revelations, and there is not the least ground for the statement of Sayooti and others that the verse, because of the mention of "the learned men of the Israelites," must have been revealed at Medina.

1831 Because prophecy plainly showed that the Arabs were to be the recipients of the revelation; see Isa. 42:11: "Let the wilderness and the cities thereof lift up their voice, the villages that Kedar doth inhabit." In the Old Testament, Kedar, the son of Ishmael, stands for the Arab nation. Hence earlier prophecy required that the final revelation should be granted to an Arab.

1832 The meaning is that the Qur-án was made to enter into their hearts by reason of the convincing proof of its truth, but they rejected it, as the next verse shows. It appealed to their hearts and convinced them very often of its truth, as is plainly stated elsewhere in the Holy Qur-án, but they would not submit until they saw a sign like that granted to the former prophets.

220 Surely He is the Hearing, the Knowing.

إِنَّهُۥ هُوَ ٱلسَّمِيعُ ٱلْعَلِيمُ ۝

1833 The argument here is similar to that advanced by Jesus Christ when he said: "And if Satan cast out Satan, he is divided against himself" (Matt. 12:26). The evil one cannot be the source of the Qur-án, for the Qur-án calls to righteousness, and the evil-doers do not even hear its call, whereas, if it were the devil's work, none would have accepted it more greedily than the doers of evil. See also vv. 221–223 and 1836.

1834 When this verse was revealed, the Holy Prophet, standing on the Mount Ṣafá, invited every tribe by name, and when the representatives of all the tribes had gathered together—among those assembled being also the Quraish and that inveterate enemy of the Holy Prophet, Abú Lahab—the Holy Prophet thus addressed them: "Tell me, if I inform you that a great army in the valley lies in wait to make a raid upon you, would you believe me?" "Aye!" was the reply in one voice, "for we have never found anything but truth emanating from your lips." "Then," said the Prophet, "know that I am a warner to you of an approaching doom." "May you perish!" cried out the ill-tempered Abú Lahab; "was it for this that you called us together?" (Bkh). It, however, does not mean that the Holy Prophet had not previously warned them. Long before the revelation of this chapter he had been declared a warner to all the nations (25:1).

1835 The Prophet is here told to rely on the Mighty, the Merciful, the very words that are repeated at the end of almost every section of this chapter, thus showing that the fate of the opponents of former prophets was spoken of simply to warn his own opponents. The attribute of mightiness is used to indicate the power to punish the wicked, while mercy indicates the deliverance and triumph of the righteous.

221 Shall I inform you (of him) upon whom the devils descend?

222 They descend upon every lying, sinful one,

223 They incline their ears, and most of them are liars.[1836]

224 And as to the poets, those who go astray follow them.

225 Do you not see that they wander about bewildered in every valley?[1837]

Ar. dost thou.

226 And that they say that which they do not do,[1838]

227 Except those who believe and do good and remember Allah much, and defend themselves after they are oppressed;[1839] and they who act unjustly shall know to what final place of turning they shall turn back.

1836 The subject of v. 212 is reverted to here, and it corroborates what is said in 1833.

1837 That is, they pursue an aimless course.

1838 The first suggestion of the unbelievers was that the Qur-án is the work of the devil. That being shown to be inconsistent with its very nature and with the righteousness it preaches, they make another suggestion, viz. that it is the work of a poet. As against this they are told that none of the characteristics of a poet's work are to be met with in the Qur-án. The poet pursues an aimless course, while the Qur-án has a set purpose before it, viz. a pure transformation in the lives of those who follow it. In the second place, the poets say the things they do not perform, whereas the Prophet is not only a preacher of righteousness, but also an exemplar who translated into practice what he taught in theory. And the weightiest consideration of all is that the poets cannot utter prophecies like those which are met with in the Qur-án. It is to this that attention is called in the next verse.

1839 The passage gives a description of the true believers in general, a new statement being introduced with illá (or except); or it may refer particularly to the poets from among the believers.

CHAPTER XXVII

THE NAML

(An-Naml)

REVEALED AT MECCA

(7 sections and 93 verses)

Abstract:

Sec. 1. The Prophet is called as Moses was called.
Sec. 2, 3. History of Solomon.
Sec. 4. Ṣáliḥ and Lot.
Sec. 5. The faithful shall be exalted.
Sec. 6. The spiritual resurrection.
Sec. 7. Passing away of the great opponents.

The Title.

THE title of this chapter is taken from the mention of a tribe known as the Naml in v. 18, in connection with Solomon's march against the Queen of Sheba. By the Naml is meant a tribe of that name, and not ants, as shown in 1590.

Subject-matter.

As regards the date of the revelation of this chapter and its place in the Qur-án, see head-note to the preceding chapter. The subject-matter, as there pointed out, is almost the same as the subject-matter of the last chapter. The Qur-án is the word of Allah which the Holy Prophet received from on high, just as Moses received a call at Mount Sinai, and the enemies of the former would be dealt with even as those of the latter. This is the substance of the first section. The second and third are devoted to Solomon's history, wherein the Holy Prophet's future greatness is indicated. It is really a part of the Mosaic history, for the Israelite kingdom attained its full glory under Solomon, and, as is well known, Moses passed away before any Israelite kingdom was established. On the other hand, the Holy Prophet Muhammad was destined to combine prophetic greatness with kingship, the glory of Solomon with the prophetic meekness of Moses. In his lifetime he was recognized as the king of Arabia, yet, notwithstanding his being crowned with kingly glory, he led a life of marked simplicity which even Moses did not practise, though he passed his life as the head of a nation wandering in the wilderness. The rest of the chapter is taken up with a brief reference, in the fourth section, to the histories of Ṣáliḥ and Lot, whose opponents were destroyed, and the fifth may be regarded as the natural sequel of it, viz. that the faithful shall be exalted. The sixth section states, however, that the Prophet's triumph was not to be marked by the utter destruction of his enemies, as in the case of these prophets, but by the ultimate spiritual resurrection of those who seemed to be quite deaf, dumb, and dead. That none but the great opponents would pass away is shown in the last section.

SECTION 1

The Prophet is called as Moses was called

1–3. Qur-án a guidance. 4, 5. Warning for evil doers. 7–12. Moses called. 13–14. Consequences of his rejection.

In the name of Allah, the Beneficent, the Merciful.

2 A guidance and good news for the believers,

3 Who keep up prayer and pay the poor-rate, and of the hereafter they are sure.

4 As to those who do not believe in the hereafter, We have surely made their deeds fairseeming to them, but they blindly wander on.[1840]

5 These are they who shall have an evil chastisement, and in the hereafter they shall be the greatest losers.[1841]

> Ar. thou art.

6 And most surely you are made to receive the Qur-án from the Wise, the Knowing God.

7 When Moses said to his family: Surely I see fire: I will bring to you from it some news, or I will bring to you therefrom a burning firebrand so that you may warm yourselves.

8 So when he came to it a voice was uttered, saying: Blessed is he who is after the fire and whatever is about it; and glory be to Allah, the Lord of the worlds:[1842]

> Or, whatever is in.

1840 By their deeds are meant the deeds which they ought to perform, not the mischievous deeds which they were performing. For as to the latter we find it plainly stated elsewhere: "And the devil made what they did fairseeming to them" (6:43), where instead of their deeds we have what they did. Thus it is clear that mischievous deeds are made fairseeming to evil-doers by the devil, while Allah commends good deeds. In support of the same we may quote 49:7, where we find: "But Allah has endeared the faith to you and has made it seemly in your hearts, and He has made hateful to you unbelief and transgression and disobedience."

1841 The latter part of the verse shows that the evil punishment spoken of here is the punishment which should overtake them in this life: a greater loss being in store for them in the hereafter.

1842 The words من في النار have been explained in a number of ways. The best explanation is that in which the word fí (lit. in) may be rendered as meaning after or in search of. Thus one of the explanations of the phrase given by AH is he who is in the place or follows the direction in which the fire appears to him to be burning. Rz says Moses may be said to be fin-nár, because of his nearness to the fire, for he says that one who is very near a thing is spoken of as being in it. The Táj-ut-Tafásír puts this explanation in very lucid terms, saying من في طلبها و قصدها, i.e. he who is in search of it and after it. Another explanation is that by man is not meant here who but what, and the place where fire was seen by Moses to be burning is meant (AH, Rz, Bd). By من حولها, or whatever is about it, is meant the blessed land of promise, on account of its being the place where many prophets rose (Bd).

1843 The word illá here is equivalent to wao (i.e. and) according to Mughni, who quotes Akhfash, Farra, and Abú 'Ubaida in support of illá being a simple conjunction. But as the negative lá in the previous passage, to which the latter is conjoined, would be regarded as understood after wao, hence the correct translation of illá here is and not or neither. Others consider illá here as introducing a new statement (Bd). Or illá is equivalent to lákin, i.e. but (Rz), the meaning being: But as to him who has been unjust, then does good after evil, then surely I am the Forgiving, the Merciful.

15 And certainly We gave knowledge to David and Solomon, and they both said: Praise be to Allah, Who has made us to excel many of His believing servants.

16 And Solomon was David's heir, and he said: O men! we have been taught (the significance of) the voices of birds,[1844] and we have been granted abundance:[1845] most surely this is manifest grace.

Ar. of every thing.

17 And his hosts of the jinn and the men and the birds were gathered to him, and they were formed into groups.[1846]

Or, horses.

1844 The root word nutq, from which the word manṭiq is derived, signifies originally articulate speech or jointed voices uttered by the tongue and kept by the ears (Rgh). Its use with regard to other than human beings is looked upon as a kind of metaphor, and the use of the word is allowable when one understands the significance, though it may not be articulate speech (Rgh). Solomon's understanding the significance of the voices of birds may imply the use he might have made of birds in conveying messages from one place to another, so that these messages may metaphorically be called the speech of the birds. Or, it may signify any other means of communication. See also 1846, where the meaning of the word ṭair, occurring in v. 17, is explained. The grant of abundance spoken of immediately afterwards shows clearly that, whatever significance may be taken, the reference is here to the great resources of Solomon's kingdom in his victorious marches against near and distant enemies.

1845 من كل شئ is here explained by the commentators as meaning كثرة ما اوتى i.e. the abundance of what was given to him, the use of kull or all, for kasrah or abundance, being looked upon as a metaphor (Rz). JB gives a similar explanation, for he says: You say فلان يعلم كل شئ lit. such a one knows everything, the significance being that he has a vast or abundant knowledge. Or the meaning may be, of everything pertaining to kingdom.

1846 The hosts of Solomon are here divided into three classes, the jinn, the men, and the ṭair. As regards the jinn, it has been shown in 1647 that these were men belonging to certain mountain tribes whom Solomon had subjugated. The question now is what is meant by ṭair. The gathering together of all three classes and their division into groups shows that all three were human beings. The word ṭair, or ṭâir, is derived from ṭâra, which indicates it flew, and is applied not only to birds, but "is also said of other things than those which have wings" (LL). Ṭâir signifies a flying thing, and as the root word applies to other than winged beings, ṭâir, of which ṭair (the word used here) is a plural, may also be applied to swift animals such as horses. Thus ṭayyâr, which is an intensive form of ṭâir, signifies, when standing alone, a sharp, spirited, vigorous horse that is almost made to fly by reason of the vehemence of its running (TA-LL). It also means a company of men (O-LL). Ṭayyâr, which is another intensive form of the nominative ṭâir, signifies a man who is sharp and quick, as in the proverb هو طيور فيور meaning he is sharp and quick in returning (Q-LL). Thus the context taken in the light of these explanations would justify 18 Until when they came to the valley of the Naml,[1847] a Namlite said: O Naml! enter your houses, (that) Solomon and his hosts may not crush you while they do not know.

19 So he smiled, wondering[1848] at her word, and said: My Lord! grant me that I should be grateful for Thy favour which Thou hast bestowed on me and on my parents, and that I should do good such as Thou art pleased with, and make me enter, by Thy mercy, into Thy servants, the good ones.

20 And he reviewed the birds, then said: How is it I see not Hudhud, or is it that he is of the absentees?[1849] the conclusion that ṭair here means horse, i.e. cavalry, because it could be moved quickly. This is corroborated by the statement regarding Solomon's love of horses in 38:31–33. For those who would take the words literally, it may be added that the use of birds in conveying messages, particularly in time of war, made the birds a necessary adjunct to a military expedition, while for the birds following a victorious army see 1387.

1847 Many of the fables regarding Solomon have been due to a misconception of the word naml, or namlat-un. It should be noted that وادی النمل cannot be properly translated as the valley of the ants, for it is a proper noun, and according to TA (see under the root wady) وادی النمل بین جبرین و عسقلان i.e. the valley of the Naml is situated between Jibrín and 'Asqalán. And Namla is the name of a tribe, like Mázin, which literally signifies the eggs of the ants (Tabrizi on Hamasa under the verse لو کنت من مازن i.e. were I one of the Mázin); and namil means رجل حاذق i.e. a clever man (TA). The name Namlah used also to be given to a child in whose hands an ant was placed at its birth, because it was said such a child would be wise and intelligent (TA). And the Namlah are plainly spoken of as a tribe in the Qámús, which says under the word barq والابرقة من میاه نملة i.e. and Abriqa is of the waters of Namlah.

1848 Dáḥik means wondering, for according to Rgh the word ḍiḥk is used as well for simple joy as for simple wonder. See also LL, which says ḍaḥaka, said of a man, signifies also he wondered, synonym 'ajiba (TA).

1849 By Hudhud is not to be understood the lapwing, but a person of that name. Even if ṭair be taken as meaning birds, the mention of a person named Hudhud may have been due to a similarity of the name. In every language many of the proper names given to men will be found to be identical with the names of animals. The Arab writers speak of a king of Himyar as Hudad (LA), which is almost identical with Hudhud mentioned in the Qur-án. This shows that there is nothing strange in such a name being given to man. The verses that follow show clearly that Solomon was speaking of one of his own officers: the infliction of severe punishment on a small bird by such a mighty monarch as Solomon, and the exposition of the great religious doctrine of Unity by the lapwing, are quite incomprehensible.

21 I will most certainly chastise him with a severe chastisement, or kill him, or he shall bring to me a clear plea.

1850 Saba is the same as the Sheba of the Bible. That the story as given here is not met with in the Bible, though known to Jewish rabbis, is no argument against its truth. The Bible speaks of the coming of the queen of Sheba to Solomon with large presents to test him. See 1 Kings 10 and 2 Chron. 9. And later on it speaks of many strange women as Solomon's wives (1 Kings 11).

SECTION 3

History of Solomon

32-44. The queen's submission to Solomon.

32 She said: O chiefs! give me advice respecting my affair: I never decide an affair until you are in my presence.

قَالَتْ يٰۤاَيُّهَا الْمَلَؤُا اَفْتُوْنِيْ فِيْۤ اَمْرِيْ ۚ مَا
كُنْتُ قَاطِعَةً اَمْرًا حَتّٰى تَشْهَدُوْنِ ۝

33 They said: We are possessors of strength and possessors of mighty prowess,
Ar. thine. and the command is yours,
Ar. thou wilt. therefore see what you will command.

قَالُوْا نَحْنُ اُولُوْا قُوَّةٍ وَّاُولُوْا بَاْسٍ شَدِيْدٍ ۙ
وَّالْاَمْرُ اِلَيْكِ فَانْظُرِيْ مَاذَا تَاْمُرِيْنَ ۝

34 She said: Surely the kings, when they enter a town, ruin it and make the noblest of its people to be low, and thus they (always) do:

قَالَتْ اِنَّ الْمُلُوْكَ اِذَا دَخَلُوْا قَرْيَةً اَفْسَدُوْهَا
وَجَعَلُوْۤا اَعِزَّةَ اَهْلِهَاۤ اَذِلَّةً ۚ وَكَذٰلِكَ

35 And surely I am going to send a present to them, and shall wait to see what (answer) do the messengers bring back.

36 So when he came to Solomon, he said: What! will you help me with wealth? But what Allah has given me is better than what He has given you. Nay, you are exultant because of your present:

فَلَمَّا جَآءَ سُلَيْمٰنَ قَالَ اَتُمِدُّوْنَنِ بِمَالٍ

قَالَ يٰۤاَيُّهَا الْمَلَؤُا اَيُّكُمْ يَاْتِيْنِيْ

1851 As usual, the narrative here omits the return of the messengers to the queen, and her willingness to submit to Solomon on receiving the threat mentioned in the last verse, but continues at the point where Solomon makes preparations to receive her. 'Arsha-hâ signifies a throne for her, being the throne that was prepared for her by Solomon, not her own throne in Sheba.

1852 The rising up from the place does not signify his standing up from the sitting posture, but his marching away from the place where he was at the time. The reference to being 40 One who had the knowledge of the Book said: I will bring it to you in the twinkling of an eye.[1853] Then when he saw it settled beside him,[1854] he said: This is of the grace of my Lord that He may try me whether I am grateful or ungrateful; and whoever is grateful, he is grateful only for his own soul, and whoever is ungrateful, then surely my Lord is Self-sufficient, Honoured.

Ar. thee.
Ar. before thy eye returns to thee.

41 He said: Alter her throne for her; we will see whether she follows the right way or is of those who do not go aright.

42 So when she came, it was said: Is your throne like this? She said: It is as it were the same, and we were given the knowledge before it, and we were submissive.

Ar. thy.

43 And what she worshipped besides Allah prevented her, surely she was of an unbelieving people.

trusty shows that the execution of the work required an honest worker. The audacious jinn is apparently one of the Amalekites, who were men of large stature.

1853 The word ṭarf means an eye as well as a man generous or noble in respect of ancestry (TA-LL). Adopting the first significance, the returning of the eye would mean the twinkling of an eye, the idea conveyed being that he could do it without delay. Taking the other significance, the words may be translated as meaning, before your noble (messenger) returns to you. One having the knowledge of the Book is an Israelite.

1854 Strange and curious legends are introduced into the simple words of the Qur-án on the supposition that the events narrated took place in immediate succession. The words so when he saw it settled beside him do not indicate that he saw it settled in the course of the conversation given in the previous passage. It is an altogether different incident.

1855 The use of the word sáq to signify difficulty or distress in many phrases is a commonplace of Arabic literature, and only crass ignorance of the Arabic language would make any one adopt the too literal significance of the word sáq (i.e. shank) in the face of the recognized idiomatic uses of the word. الكشف عن الساق is a well-known idiomatic usage of the word, and refers to a man "when difficulty befalls him . . . ; meaning he prepared himself for the difficulty, so says I'Amb; and hence, he says (TA, in which a similar explanation is cited from Isd also), they mention the sáq when they mean to express the difficulty of a case or an event, and to tell of the terror occasioned thereby (Q, TA)" (LL). Thus the statement in 68:42 يوم يكشف عن ساق means on a day when difficulty or calamity shall be disclosed (I'Ab, Mjd). And similarly قامت الحرب على ساق signifies the battle became vehement (Msb-LL), and Jal explains كشفت الحرب عن ساق similarly (LL). And والتفت الساق بالساق in 75 : 29 means and the affliction of the present state of existence shall be combined with that of the final state (TA-LL). And likewise قامت القوم على ساق signifies the people became in a state of distress (TA-LL). There are many other instances of this metaphorical use of the word sáq, but the few cited above will suffice to explain the translation of كشفت عن ساقيها which I have adopted. See also 2546, where it is shown that the commentators attach the same significance to these words.

1856 The Holy Qur-án's description of the palace, and the purpose which it served, show Solomon's wisdom in affording an illustration of the working of the Divine hand in nature. He had built a palace of glass, the floor of which was also of glass, and under it ran water. The queen of Sheba mistook the glass for the water which ran beneath, and when Solomon drew her attention to it, she at once realized her own error in worshipping outward objects, such as the sun, while the real force or the source of life was Allah, whose hand worked in these objects. It is for this purpose that the story is given.

1857 In this the Qur-án contradicts the Bible, the latter holding that Solomon had gone over to idol-worship on account of his non-Israelite wives, while the Qur-án states that his wives were converts to his religion and believers in Divine Unity. Recent investigation has shown the correctness of the statement made in the Qur-án; see 147.

48 And there were in the city nine persons who made mischief in the land and did not act aright.[1858]

49 They said: Swear to each other by Allah that we will certainly make a sudden attack on him and his family by night, then we will say to his heir: We did not witness the destruction of his family, and we are most surely truthful.[1859]

50 And they planned a plan, and We planned a plan while they perceived not.

51 See, then, how was the end of their plan that We destroyed them and their people, all (of them).

52 So those are their houses fallen down because they were unjust; most surely there is a sign in this for a people who know.

53 And We delivered those who believed and who guarded (against evil).

a 917. 54 And (We sent) Lot,[a] when he said to his people: What! do you commit indecency while you see?

55 What! do you indeed approach men lustfully rather than women? Nay, you are a people who act ignorantly.

56 But the answer of his people was no other except that they said: Turn out Lot's followers from your town; surely they are a people who would keep pure!

1858 There is no doubt a reference here to the enemies of the Holy Prophet, the chief of them being nine in number, eight of whom were slain at Badr (the exception being Abú Lahab, who died at Mecca on hearing the news of the defeat at Badr). Their names were Abú Jahl, Mut'im bin 'Adiyy, Shaiba bin Rabi'a, 'Utba bin Rabi'a, Walíd bin 'Utbà, Umayya bin Khalf, Nadar bin Al-Ḥarṣ, 'Aqba bin Abi Mu'ait, and Abú Lahab.

1859 There seems to be a prophetical reference here to the plot against the Holy Prophet, for the same plan was ultimately agreed upon by the Quraish to do away with him. It should be borne in mind that the revelation of this chapter belongs to an early period; the plot against the Prophet's life was to have been executed in the following manner: one man from every tribe of the Quraish was selected, who should take the Prophet unawares. They were to thrust their swords into his body simultaneously, so that no particular tribe could be held guilty; this was agreed upon immediately before the Prophet's flight to Medina, and thus the incident as relating to Ṣáliḥ is meant as a prophecy.

57 But We delivered him and his followers except his wife; We ordained her to be of those who remained behind.

58 And we rained on them a 918. a rain,[a] and evil was the rain of those who had been warned.

1860A Or the words may be translated thus: Nay, has their knowledge continued unbroken so as to extend to the hereafter?

1861 ردف لكم, according to IAr, means دنا لكم, and Farra gives the same significance when he says that the introduction of lám, as silah, makes the meaning to be قرب لكم, i.e. drawn near to you. Others say that the meaning is that it will come to you after I am gone away from you (LL).

Ar. thy. 73 And surely your Lord is the Lord of grace to men, but most of them are not grateful.

75 And there is nothing concealed in the heaven and the earth but it is in a clear book.

76 Surely this Qur-án declares to the children of Israel most of what they differ in.

77 And most surely it is a guidance and a mercy for the believers.

Ar. thy. 78 Surely your Lord will judge between them by His judgment, and He is the Mighty, the Knowing.

Ar. thou art. 79 Therefore rely on Allah; surely you are on the clear truth.

Ar. thou dost. Ar. thou dost. 80 Surely you do not make the dead to hear, and you do not make the deaf to hear the call when they go back retreating.[1862]

Ar. canst thou. Ar. thou canst. 81 Nor can you be a guide to the blind out of their error; you can not make to hear (any one) except those who believe in Our communications, so they submit.

82 And when the word shall come to pass against them, We shall bring forth for them a creature from the earth that shall wound them, because people did not believe in Our communications.[1863]

1862 This verse is a clear testimony to what is meant by the Prophet's raising the dead; for here we are told that if the dead go back retreating, the Prophet cannot make them hear. Evidently this verse and the opening words of the following one speak of the reprobates who shut their eyes and close their ears to all truth.

1863 The creature from the earth that wounds men when they disbelieve stands for the calamities which overtake men, such as wars, famines, plagues, etc., and particularly the last of these, whose bacilli literally wound men by entering into their bodies. The reference here is to the punishment which is sometimes dealt out to the opponents of truth in this very life, because they would not allow the truth to live and prosper, or to the transgressors when their iniquities exceed all limits and virtue is almost entirely swept away. In such cases the evil-doers are made to taste of some punishment in this life. It is for this reason that while many of the prophecies met with in the sayings of the Holy Prophet clearly speak of wars, famines, plagues, and earthquakes in the latter days, one prophecy speaks of punishment being inflicted by means of dábbat-ul-arḍ, or a creature of the earth. Or, dábbat-ul-arḍ may stand for a people bent low upon the earth.

83 And on the day when We will gather from every nation a party from among those who rejected Our communications, then they shall be formed into groups.

84 Until when they come, He will say: Did you reject My communications while you had no comprehensive knowledge of them? Or what was it that you did?

85 And the word shall come to pass against them because they were unjust, so they shall not speak.

86 Do they not consider that We have made the night that they may rest therein, and the day to give light? Most surely there are signs in this for a people who believe.

87 And on the day when the trumpet shall be blown,[a] then those who are in the heavens and those who are in the earth shall be terrified except such as Allah please, and all shall come to Him abased.[1864]

1864 To show that it shall be so in the life after death, the prophecy was also brought to fulfilment in this life. The whole of Arabia recognized the Holy Prophet as its temporal and spiritual head, and the proud opponents were abased.

1865 That jabal signifies a great man has been shown in 1280. That in the passing away of the mountains there is a clear reference to the removal of the mighty men who opposed the Prophet's preaching is also shown by the concluding words of the verse, which clearly speak of the punishment of the evil deeds by One who is aware of what they do. The mountains or the mighty men were considered at the time of the utterance of the prophecy to be too great for removal, but the prophecy declared that they would pass away as vapour passes away.

89 Whoever brings good, he shall have better than it; and they shall be secure from terror on that day.

90 And whoever brings evil, these shall be thrown down on their faces into the fire; shall you be rewarded (for) aught except what you did?

91 I am commanded only that I should serve the Lord of this city, Who has made it sacred, and His are all things:[1866] and I am commanded that I should be of those who submit:

92 And that I should recite the Qur-án. Therefore whoever goes aright, he goes aright for his own soul, and whoever goes astray, then say: I am only one of the warners.

93 And say: Praise be to Allah, He will show you His signs so that you shall recognize them; nor is your Lord heedless of what you do.[1867]

1866 The statement here that the Prophet is commanded to serve the Lord of the city of Mecca contains an allusion that the servant of the Lord shall be the lord of that city, because all things are His, and so shall also be the city which is made sacred, inasmuch as sacred things cannot remain in impure hands.

1867 Mark the firmness of the tone in which the showing of signs is asserted.

CHAPTER XXVIII

THE NARRATIVE

(Al-Qaṣaṣ)

REVEALED AT MECCA

(9 sections and 88 verses)

Abstract:

Sec. 1-4. History of Moses.
Sec. 5. A prophet like Moses.
Sec. 6. The truth of revelation.
Sec. 7. Opponents shall be brought low.
Sec. 8. Korah's wealth leads him to ruin.
Sec. 9. The Prophet's ultimate triumph.

Date of revelation.

THIS chapter is said by some to have been revealed to the Holy Prophet when fleeing from Mecca on his way to Medina, at a place known as Jahfa (I'AB-AH). According to others, however, only v. 85, which predicted a triumphal return of the Holy Prophet to Mecca, was revealed there (I-Salam-AH). The latter seems to be the correct view. See introductory note on the 26th chapter.

Subject-matter.

The likeness to Moses is the chief theme of this chapter, and the revelation of Moses is here spoken of as a clear evidence of the truth of the revelation of the Holy Prophet Muhammad. The first four sections of the chapter are taken up with a recital of the chief incidents of the life of Moses from the time of his birth to the time that he successfully led the Israelites out of Egypt, together with the drowning of the hosts of Egypt. Many of the details of this period are to be met with here that are not given elsewhere. Moses' narrative is followed by showing that a prophet like him had now appeared, to whose truth the revelation of Moses bore a clear testimony. The sixth section upholds the truth of the revelation of the Qur-án, while the seventh shows that its opponents shall be humbled. The eighth instances Korah, whose very wealth led to his ruin, and is a warning to the Quraish against placing too great store upon earthly possessions, or it may be a warning to the Muslims against the time when they shall grow rich and powerful. The chapter ends with a declaration of the ultimate triumph of the Holy Prophet, and of his triumphal entry into the very city from whence he was now being expelled.

4 Surely Pharaoh exalted himself in the land and made its people into parties, weakening one party from among them :[1868] he slaughtered their sons and let their women live; surely he was one of the mischief-makers.
5 And We desired to bestow a favour upon those who were deemed weak in the land, and to make them the leaders, and to make them the heirs,[1869]
6 And to grant them power in the land, and to make Pharaoh and Haman and their hosts see from them what they feared.[1870]

1868 The two parties were the Israelites and the Egyptians, the latter being made the task-masters of the former. This refers no doubt to the persecutions of the Muslims. The Quraish, the stronger party, wanted to crush the weaker party of the Muslims.

1869 By making them heirs is not meant that they would be made heirs to Pharaoh's possessions, but heirs to a kingdom in the promised land of Canaan. And this refers also to the establishment of the kingdom of Islam and the vanquishment of its persecutors.

1870 Pharaoh and his counsellors feared that the Israelites, who were aliens in the land of Egypt, might one day become powerful and supreme in the land. Hence they oppressed and persecuted them in various ways. Yet the Divine intention was to bring about what Pharaoh feared, and to make the Israelites hold in subjugation a powerful and ruling nation. Even such was the Divine intention with regard to the persecuted Muslims. That Abasuerus, a king of Persia, had a favourite named Haman, combined with the fact that the Bible does not mention a minister of Pharaoh bearing that name, is considered to be a valid reason why the Holy Prophet confused Pharaoh with that Persian king. It is certainly a curious mode of reasoning. An Egyptian could as well bear the name Haman as a Persian.

7 And We revealed to Moses' mother, saying:[a] Give him suck, then when you fear for him, cast him into the river and do not fear nor grieve; surely We will bring him back to you and make him one of the apostles.

8 And Pharaoh's followers took him up that he might be an enemy and a grief for them;[1871] surely Pharaoh and Haman and their hosts were wrong-doers.

فَالْتَقَطَهُ آلُ فِرْعَوْنَ لِيَكُونَ لَهُمْ عَدُوًّا وَحَزَنًا إِنَّ فِرْعَوْنَ وَهَامَانَ وَجُنُودَهُمَا كَانُوا خَاطِئِينَ ۝

9 And Pharaoh's wife said: A refreshment of the eye to me and to you: do not slay him: maybe he will be useful to us, or we may take him for a son; and they did not perceive.

Ar. thee.

10 And the heart of Moses' mother was free (from anxiety);[1872] she would have almost disclosed it had We not strengthened her heart so that she might be of the believers.

وَأَصْبَحَ فُؤَادُ أُمِّ مُوسَىٰ فَارِغًا إِنْ كَادَتْ لَتُبْدِي بِهِ لَوْلَا أَنْ رَبَطْنَا عَلَىٰ قَلْبِهَا لِتَكُونَ مِنَ الْمُؤْمِنِينَ ۝

11 And she said to his sister: Follow him up. So she watched him from a distance while they did not perceive,

12 And We did not allow him to suck before, so she said: Shall I point out to you the people of a house who will take care of him for you, and they will be benevolent to him?[1873]

Ar. forbade sucking to him.

وَحَرَّمْنَا عَلَيْهِ الْمَرَاضِعَ مِنْ قَبْلُ فَقَالَتْ هَلْ أَدُلُّكُمْ عَلَىٰ أَهْلِ بَيْتٍ يَكْفُلُونَهُ لَكُمْ وَهُمْ لَهُ نَاصِحُونَ ۝

13 So We gave him back to his mother that her eye might be refreshed, and that she might not grieve, and that she might know that the promise of Allah is true, but most of them do not know.[1874]

فَرَدَدْنَاهُ إِلَىٰ أُمِّهِ كَيْ تَقَرَّ عَيْنُهَا وَلَا تَحْزَنَ وَلِتَعْلَمَ أَنَّ وَعْدَ اللَّهِ حَقٌّ وَلَٰكِنَّ أَكْثَرَهُمْ لَا يَعْلَمُونَ ۝

1871 This is a very clear instance of the lám-al-'áqibah, i.e. the lám used to denote the end or consequence. It was not the object of Pharaoh's people that the child should be their enemy, but this ultimately happened.

1872 Her heart became free from anxiety on account of the assurance which she had received through Divine revelation; the words that follow show that her heart had been strengthened with patience, so it cannot be said to have become devoid of patience. In fact, fárigh often, used elliptically, signifies free from care or anxiety or disquietude (LL).

1873 Náṣiḥ signifies one who gives advice sincerely, as well as one who desires good for another or one benevolent (Q-LL).

1874 The reference is clearly to the opponents of the Holy Prophet, who did not know that the promise of Allah as given to the faithful would prove true.

SECTION 2

History of Moses

14–21. Moses kills an Egyptian and is warned of danger.

14 And when he attained his maturity and became full-grown, We granted him wisdom and knowledge; and thus do We reward those who do good (to others).

15 And he went into the city at a time of unvigilance on the part of its people, so he found therein two men fighting, one (Ar. this.) being of his party and the other (Ar. this.) of his foes, and he who was of his party cried out to him for help against him who was of his enemies, so Moses struck him with his fist and dispatched him. He said: This is on account of the devil's doing; surely he is an enemy, openly leading astray.[1875]

16 He said: My Lord! surely I have done harm to myself, so do Thou protect[a] me. So He protected him; surely He is the Forgiving, the Merciful.[1876]

1875 The word "this," in Moses' statement, refers to the punishment which he had given to the Egyptian, the meaning being that it was on account of his devilish deed that the Egyptian had been so punished. The Rabbinical explanation of Exod. 2 : 12, which mentions Moses' slaying the Egyptian, is that the Egyptian merited death "because he had forced an Israelitish woman to commit adultery with him" (Jewish En., vol. ix. p. 48). The Qur-án does not name the offence, but there is no doubt that it calls his offence a devilish deed. The allegation that Moses calls his assault on the Egyptian with his fist a devilish deed is untrue: v. 17 shows clearly that Moses did not consider himself as one who had done an unjust deed or helped a guilty person. See also 1808.

1876 Moses' prayer is not evidence of his being guilty, for the words ظلمت نفسي mean, I have caused detriment to myself, the primary significance of ẓulm being naqṣ (TA), or making to suffer loss or detriment (LL), and this is the meaning adopted in 7 : 160 and 18 : 33. Ẓalama-hú also signifies he imposed upon him a burden that was above his power or ability. The meaning here is that he had risked his own life in giving help to another.

25 Then one of the two women came to him walking bashfully.[1877] She said: My father invites you that he may give you the reward of your having watered for us. So when he came to him and gave to him the account, he said: Fear not: you are secure from the unjust people.

1877 Compare Exod. 2 : 15–21. The Qur-án does not state how many daughters the man had; it only speaks of two of them being in charge of their father's flock. Hence the alleged confusion of this story with that of Laban's two daughters is itself due to a confusion.

1878 Christian critical opinion discovers here another confusion. Because Jacob had made an agreement with Laban to serve him for seven years as a condition of marrying one of his daughters (Gen. 29 : 18), it is alleged that this fact in the trustworthy Bible history must have been present to the Prophet's mind in a confused state, giving rise to the story relating to Moses' marriage. The slightest similarity in incidents, like similarity of names, gives rise—in the mind of the Christian critic—to a conclusion of confusion and anachronism where the Qur-án is concerned. According to Rabbinical accounts Moses lived with Jethro for ten years, which corroborates the Quranic story in substance (see Jewish En.), and there is nothing improbable in the circumstance that he may have served him during that period in consideration of marrying one of his daughters.

37 And Moses said : My Lord knows best who comes with guidance from Him, and whose shall be the good end of the abode ; surely the unjust shall not be successful.

38 And Pharaoh said : O chiefs! I do not know of any god for you besides myself ; therefore kindle a fire for me, O Haman, on dust, then prepare for me a lofty building so that I may obtain knowledge of Moses' God, and most surely I think him to be one of the liars.[1880]

39 And he was unjustly proud in the land, he and his hosts, and they deemed that they will not be brought back to Us.

40 So We caught hold of him and his hosts, then We cast them into the sea, and see how was the end of the unjust.

41 And We made them leaders who call to the fire, and on the day of resurrection they shall not be assisted.[1881]

1880 Pharaoh mocks at the idea of the Lord of the heavens and the earth, and derisively commands one of his ministers to prepare bricks (such being the significance of kindling a fire on dust) and to erect a lofty building so that he may have a peep into the heavens to discover the Lord of the heavens and the earth.

1881 Pharaoh is thus made a prototype of evil, and the opponents of the Holy Prophet are warned that walking in Pharaoh's footsteps they will meet a similar fate.

SECTION 5

A Prophet like Moses

43–46. Moses foretold of the Prophet by Divine revelation. 47–50. Prophet comes in truth.

48 But (now) when the truth has come to them from Us, they say: Why is he not given the like of what was given to قَالُوْا لَوْلَآ اُوْتِيَ مِثْلَ مَآ اُوْتِيَ

1882 How was it then that Moses spoke so clearly of the advent of the Holy Prophet? Were it not by Divine revelation, Moses could not have spoken so clearly of the Holy Prophet two thousand years before his advent. The repetition of the phrase you were not at such and such a place in this and the following two verses is simply to lay stress upon the clear fulfilment of the prophecy, which is so clear that one should think Moses were speaking of one whose presence at the time made him fully well known to him.

1883 This verse throws light on the purpose of the foregoing verses: You were not there, but it was Divine mercy that put a prophecy into the mouth of Moses regarding you. This is made clear by the words a mercy from your Lord that you may warn . . . . The people to whom no warner had come before were the Arabs. Compare 32:3, 36:4.

Moses? What! did they not disbelieve in what Moses was given before? They say: Two enchantments backing up each other; and they say: Surely we are unbelievers in all.[1884]

مُوسَىٰ ۚ أَوَلَمْ يَكْفُرُوا بِمَا أُوتِيَ مُوسَىٰ مِنْ قَبْلُ ۚ قَالُوا سِحْرَانِ تَظَاهَرَا ۟ وَقَالُوا إِنَّا بِكُلٍّ كَافِرُونَ ۝

49 Say: Then bring some (other) book from Allah which is a better guide than both of them, (that) I may follow it, if you are truthful.[1885]

قُلْ فَأْتُوا بِكِتَابٍ مِّنْ عِنْدِ اللَّهِ هُوَ أَهْدَىٰ مِنْهُمَا أَتَّبِعْهُ إِنْ كُنْتُمْ صَادِقِينَ ۝

50 But if they do not answer you, then know that they only follow their low desires; and who is more erring than he who follows his low desires without any guidance from Allah? Surely Allah does not guide the unjust people.

SECTION 6

The Truth of Revelation

51–53. Connection with previous revelation established. 54–57. Believers must be patient under trials. 58–60. Towns already destroyed afford warning.

51 And certainly We have made the Word to have many connections on account of them so that they may be mindful.[1886]

وَلَقَدْ وَصَّلْنَا لَهُمُ الْقَوْلَ لَعَلَّهُمْ يَتَذَكَّرُونَ ۝

1884 The unbelievers did not adopt any one firm position against the Holy Prophet, and whenever one objection was shown to be erroneous they took refuge in another. At the advent of the Prophet they said that he should have received a revelation like the revelation of Moses, but when the likeness was pointed out to them, and they were told that their fate was to be like the fate of the opponents of Moses, they are found saying that both, i.e. Moses and Muhammad—may peace and the blessings of Allah be upon them!—were deceivers who enchanted people by their eloquence, the one helping the other, and therefore they believed neither in the one nor in the other.

1885 The meaning is that if you do not admit the truth of either revelation, you should show some other revelation existing in the world which should offer better rules of guidance. This statement only draws attention to the fact that the revelation granted to Moses and that granted to the Holy Prophet both occupy a higher position than any other revelation. And this is in fact true, for among all the sacred books of the world the Bible occupies a position second only to the Holy Qur-án. The words, however, do not signify that the Bible occupies a position equal to the Holy Qur-án. For their comparative merits see 697, 703. See also 152.

1886 The form fa'ala indicates either intensity (mubálagha) or extensiveness (taksír) in the meaning of the verb, and accordingly waṣṣala signifies he joined or connected much or he made (a string) to have many joinings (TA-LL). What is implied here is that the word of Allah, as contained in the Qur-án, is made to have many points of connection with previous revelation, so that it may be the easier for them to be reminded of its truth. Even if they did not believe in previous revelation, the broad points of likeness in the principles of two different prophets appearing at such a distance of time from each other, among entirely different nations, and under totally different circumstances, and the fulfilment of the prophecies uttered by one in the other, afford conclusive evidence of the truth of them both. That the reference is to the connection with the previous revelation is also shown by the verse that follows, where those who have been given the Book are clearly spoken of.

1887 It is not meant that all those who have been previously given the scriptures believe in the Qur-án. The verse only draws attention to the fact that all believe in the truth of revelation from Allah, and they cannot deny the points of connection between the two revelations, the truth of the fundamental principles and the fulfilment of prophecies. But only those would believe who have submitted themselves already to Allah, as the verse that follows shows.

1888 It is not meant that those who believed in the previous scriptures and now believe in the Holy Prophet shall have a double reward for that reason. The reason of a double reward —which only means a greater reward—is given in the words that follow: Because they are steadfast and they repel evil with good and spend out of what we have given them. They had to suffer persecutions, and not only did they remain steadfast in these great trials, but repelled the evil of their persecutors with good, and in addition to all this made great sacrifices in the cause of truth. See also 1653A on 33:31 and 2458.

1889 It is related that when Abú Ṭálib was on his death-bed the Holy Prophet asked him to believe in Divine Unity. Abú Jahl, being by him at the time, dissuaded him from doing so, saying that he should not desert the religion of his fathers. Abú Ṭálib died an unbeliever, and the words you cannot guide whom you love were a comfort to the Prophet (Bkh).

1890 The verse speaks first of the unfounded fears of those who thought that the weakness of the Muslims would result in the seizure, death, or expulsion of those who accepted the 1892 There are two parties spoken of here: the Prophet and his followers, who have received a goodly promise from Allah, though weak and oppressed at the time, and the powerful enemy, who has all the provisions of life in his possession, but who will one day be called upon to receive the judgment.

1893 All commentators agree that by those against whom the sentence has been confirmed are meant the leaders in unbelief (JB, Kf). Hence their saying they never served or worshipped us shows that these very leaders are spoken of as the gods whom their followers worship.

1894 They shall not be able to offer an excuse, for the vanity of the false excuses which satisfied them here would then become manifest to them. Nor shall they ask each other, for each shall know the falsity of the excuses of the others.

Korah's Wealth leads him to Ruin

76–80. Korah rebels against Moses and exults in his wealth. 81, 82. His ruin.

76 Surely Korah was of the people of Moses, but he rebelled against them, and We had given him of the treasures, so much so that his hoards of wealth would certainly weigh down a company of men possessed of great strength. When his people said to him: Do not exult, surely Allah does not love the exultant:[1895]

إِنَّ قَارُوْنَ كَانَ مِنْ قَوْمِ مُوْسٰى فَبَغٰى

1895 The story of Korah or Qárún, his revolt against the leadership of Moses and Aaron, and his being swallowed up by the earth, is given in Num. 16. The only addition of any importance to the story as given in the Qur-án is the mention of his wealth, a fact noticed in Rabbinical literature (Jewish En.), according to which the fabulous renown of his wealth is so great that the keys of his treasures formed a load for three hundred mules. The word mafátiḥ as occurring in the Qur-án is plural of maftaḥ, which means a hoard, or treasure, or buried property (TA-LL). It is also plural of miftaḥ, meaning a key, but kunúz (meaning treasures, singular kanz) being in the plural, the personal pronoun in mafátiḥa-hú does not refer to kunúz but to Korah; accordingly mafátiḥ denotes the treasures.

77 And seek by means of what Allah has given you the future abode, and do not neglect your portion of this world, and do good (to others) as Allah has done good to you, and do not seek to make mischief in the land: surely Allah does not love the mischief-makers.

78 He said: I have been given this only on account of the knowledge I have. Did he not know that Allah had destroyed before him of the generations those who were mightier in strength than he and greater in assemblage? And the guilty shall not be asked about their faults.[1896]

قَالَ إِنَّمَا أُوتِيتُهُ عَلَىٰ عِلْمٍ عِندِي أَوَلَمْ يَعْلَمْ أَنَّ اللَّهَ قَدْ أَهْلَكَ مِن قَبْلِهِ مِنَ الْقُرُونِ مَنْ هُوَ أَشَدُّ مِنْهُ قُوَّةً وَأَكْثَرُ جَمْعًا وَلَا يُسْأَلُ عَن ذُنُوبِهِمُ الْمُجْرِمُونَ

79 So he went forth to his people in his finery. Those who desire this world's life said: O would that we had the like of what Korah is given; most surely he is possessed of mighty good fortune.

فَخَرَجَ عَلَىٰ قَوْمِهِ فِي زِينَتِهِ قَالَ الَّذِينَ يُرِيدُونَ الْحَيَاةَ الدُّنْيَا يَا لَيْتَ لَنَا مِثْلَ مَا أُوتِيَ قَارُونُ إِنَّهُ لَذُو حَظٍّ عَظِيمٍ

80 And those who were given the knowledge said: Woe to you! Allah's reward is better for him who believes and does good, and none is made to receive this except the patient.

وَقَالَ الَّذِينَ أُوتُوا الْعِلْمَ وَيْلَكُمْ ثَوَابُ اللَّهِ خَيْرٌ لِّمَنْ آمَنَ وَعَمِلَ صَالِحًا وَلَا يُلَقَّاهَا إِلَّا الصَّابِرُونَ

81 Thus We made the earth to swallow up him and his abode; so he had no body of helpers to assist him against Allah, nor was he of those who can defend themselves.[1897]

فَخَسَفْنَا بِهِ وَبِدَارِهِ الْأَرْضَ فَمَا كَانَ لَهُ مِن فِئَةٍ يَنصُرُونَهُ مِن دُونِ اللَّهِ وَمَا كَانَ مِنَ الْمُنتَصِرِينَ

82 And those who yearned for his place only the day before began to say: Ah! (know) that Allah amplifies and straitens the means of subsistence for whom He pleases of His servants; had not Allah been gracious to us, He would most surely have abased us; ah! (know) that the ungrateful are never successful.

وَأَصْبَحَ الَّذِينَ تَمَنَّوْا مَكَانَهُ بِالْأَمْسِ يَقُولُونَ وَيْكَأَنَّ اللَّهَ يَبْسُطُ الرِّزْقَ لِمَن يَشَاءُ مِنْ عِبَادِهِ وَيَقْدِرُ لَوْلَا أَن مَّنَّ اللَّهُ عَلَيْنَا لَخَسَفَ بِنَا وَيْكَأَنَّهُ لَا يُفْلِحُ الْكَافِرُونَ

1896 They shall not be asked to give explanations for their sins, as Allah is All-knowing.

1897 The meaning conveyed is that he perished. Khasf also signifies abasing, humbling, or lowering another, and the verb is khasafa in this case (LL on the authority of Ham, Q, and TA). I adopt this significance in the next verse in translating لخسف بنا

1898 The word ma'ád means the ultimate place of one's returning (from 'áda, meaning he returned) (LL). The word ma'ád in لرادك الى معاد has been taken to mean Mecca, according to an interpretation given by I'Ab, and TA accepts this interpretation, because the conquest of it was promised to the Prophet, so that it was the place to which he would return. O gives another reason for Mecca being called ma'ád, viz. because the pilgrims return to it (LL). According to some this verse was revealed on the Prophet's departure from Mecca, i.e. on his way to Medina. At any rate it contains a clear promise of the Prophet being brought back to Mecca.

1899 The Prophet being the recipient of the revelation containing the commandments in this and the previous verse, the commandments really give us a picture of his mind. It is a distorted imagination which can deduce from commandments like this an inclination to polytheism in the Prophet's mind. So far from showing an inclination of this nature, the commandments show that his heart was entirely free from any such inclination.

CHAPTER XXIX

THE SPIDER

(Al-'Ankabút)

REVEALED AT MECCA

(7 sections and 69 verses)

Abstract :

Sec. 1. Trials purify.
Sec. 2, 3. Histories of Noah, Abraham, and Lot.
Sec. 4. Frailty of false beliefs : a lesson in the fate of earlier nations.
Sec. 5. The Qur-án is a purifier.
Sec. 6. Unbelievers warned and believers comforted.
Sec. 7. Triumph of the faithful.

The Title, context, and date of revelation.

THIS chapter is entitled The Spider from the fact that false, idolatrous, and polytheistic beliefs are here compared to a spider's web : And surely the frailest of the houses is the spider's house (v. 41). The significance is clear : false beliefs will not stand the test of time, and they shall be swept away before the strong current of truth. This chapter and the three following form another group of Meccan revelation, each being headed by the letters alif, lám, Mím. The present chapter deals chiefly with the persecutions of the Muslims and the trials which they underwent, and hence some have thought that some portions of this chapter, particularly the opening verses, were revealed at Medina and refer to the battles which the Muslims fought. But to consider that the persecution and the trials of the Muslims began at Medina and with fighting is to ignore the whole of the earlier history of Islam. The Muslims had a very hard time at Mecca, and even if no account of the cruel persecutions of the early converts to Islam had been left, the earlier flight to Abyssinia and the later one to Medina should be sufficient testimony of the great trials which the Muslims suffered at Mecca. This chapter speaks of the time when persecution was rife and it comforts the converts to Islam. Hence, in all probability the chapter belongs to the close of the early Meccan, or the beginning of the middle Meccan, period.

Connection and subject-matter.

The last chapter predicted in plain words a triumphal return of the Holy Prophet to Mecca, thus indicating the triumph of Islam. Here we are told that the great object of the triumph of truth has never been achieved except by suffering sore afflictions and severe trials in its cause. Hence trials and persecutions were necessary. Starting thus, there is a reference to the persecution of children by their very parents, and the converts to Islam are told that they must yield to their parents in all other matters, but must resolutely reject false doctrines. The second, third, and fourth sections make brief references to the histories of Noah, Abraham, Lot, and other prophets, showing how the righteous had always to undergo trials and how they were subjected to persecutions, but false beliefs had no basis and had always been swept away by truth. At the end of the fourth section, false beliefs are compared to a spider's web, thus illustrating their extreme frailty. The fifth section refers to the purifying effect of the Qur-án, and the repeated demand for more signs is met with the simple answer that the holy word of God was in itself a sufficiently clear sign, because it wrought a transformation in the lives of those who followed it. The sixth section warns the unbelievers of the fate in store for them and of the consequences of their tyrannical persecutions of the Muslims; it also comforts the latter by stating that their sufferings will soon be changed into a state of happiness. The seventh section shows that Allah, who deals mercifully even with the unbelievers, will not allow the exertions of the faithful in the cause of truth to remain unfruitful, and that those who strive hard and earnestly will be guided in the right way, which is the way to success.

1900 By the trials spoken of in these verses is meant the persecution of the believers by the unbelievers at Mecca. This is made clear in v. 10. A misconception as to the nature of these trials has led some critics to think that the first ten verses must have been revealed at Medina.

1901 That is, the persecutors shall not go unpunished.

1902 As has been shown in 1793, the word jihád occurs in Meccan revelation frequently, and carries its proper significance of striving hard in Allah's way. The suffering of persecutions and tortures at the hands of their enemies for the sake of their faith was no less a jihád of the Muslims at Mecca than their fighting in defence of Islam at Medina.

7 And (as for) those who believe and do good, We will most certainly do away their evil deeds and We will most certainly reward them the best of what they did.[1903]

8 And We have enjoined on man goodness to his parents, and if they contend with you that you should associate (others) with Me, of which you have no knowledge, do not obey them; to Me is your return, so I will inform you of what you did.[1904]

9 And (as for) those who believe and do good, We will most surely cause them to enter among the good.

10 And among men is he who says: We believe in Allah; but when he is persecuted in (the way of) Allah he thinks the persecution of men to be as the chastisement of Allah;[1905] and if there come assistance from your Lord, they would most certainly say: Surely we were with you. What! is not Allah the best knower of what is in the breasts of mankind?

1903 The word rendered by do away here is nukaffiranna, from which is derived the kaffārah or atonement of the Christian doctrine. The Qur-án points out that the true kaffārah or atonement for evil deeds is the doing of good deeds, so that the latter, taking the place of the former, change the whole course of a man's life. The atonement of sin by virtue is the true doctrine of nature, while atonement by blood is absolutely unnatural and incomprehensible.

1904 This verse, while signifying the importance of obedience to parents, at the same time warns against attaching over-importance to even the filial duty. It shows that when even an important duty clashes with a still higher one, the former is to be sacrificed to the latter. It is related that when Sa'd ibn-i-Abi-Waqqas became a convert to Islam, his mother swore that she would neither eat nor drink until he reverted to unbelief, and that this verse was revealed on that occasion. If the incident is true, it is a further proof that these verses were revealed at Mecca, because Sa'd was one of the early converts. At any rate Noldeke's argument, that since these verses were revealed at Medina therefore the incident cannot be true, carries no weight. It is quite conceivable that such a verse was more needed for the guidance of early converts at Mecca than the later converts at Medina, for it was at Mecca that children had to leave their parents on account of their conversion to Islam, the parents not allowing them to forsake their old religion.

1905 The meaning is that those who are weak in faith consider the persecution by the unbelievers which was necessary to strengthen and purify their faith as if it were a chastisement from Allah for their change of faith. The latter part of the verse is a prophecy as to what the weak in faith will say when they see the assistance of Allah coming to the Muslims and destroying the unbelievers.

11 And most certainly Allah will know those who believe, and most certainly He will know the hypocrites.[a]

12 And those who disbelieve say to those who believe: Follow our path and we will bear your wrongs. And never shall they be the bearers of any of their wrongs; most surely they are liars.

13 And most certainly they shall carry their own burdens, and other burdens with their own burdens, and most certainly they shall be questioned on the resurrection day as to what they forged.[1906]

Noah and Abraham

14, 15. Noah. 16–18. Abraham. 19–22. New nations take the place of old ones.

14 And certainly We sent Noah to his people, so he remained among them a thousand years save fifty years.[1907] And the deluge overtook them, while they were unjust.[b]

15 So We delivered him and the inmates of the ark, and made it a sign to the nations.

16 And (We sent) Abraham, when he said to his people: Serve Allah and be careful of وَلَقَدْ اَرْسَلْنَا نُوْحًا اِلٰى قَوْمِهٖ فَلَبِثَ

Or, wide-spread death.
b 901, 902.

1906 It should be noted that the Qur-án does not anywhere say that the burden of one shall be taken away by another. Each one is responsible for what he does. The "other burdens" are really their own burdens in misleading others, and thus the two burdens spoken of here are the burden of one's own wrong-doing and the burden of misleading others.

1907 The Christians, of course, have no objection to the statement made here as to Noah having lived for 950 years, for the Bible gives that to be the age of that patriarch. It is not improbable that the span of man's life may have been greater in his earlier history than at present, and Noah may have attained an extraordinary age among his compatriots. But there are indications that the reference here is to the abiding for 950 years of the law preached by Noah, his place being then taken by Abraham, who is for this reason mentioned immediately after Noah. According to the dates given in the Bible, a period of 952 years elapsed between the birth of Noah and that of Abraham, and the reference may be to these 950 years, as the mention of Abraham immediately afterwards shows. It should be noted that the concluding words, and the deluge overtook them, are separated by a full stop from the first part of the verse, and it is for this reason that the words do not signify that the deluge overtook the people after he had dwelt among them 950 years. Or, the ṭúfán may have here the significance given in the margin, and the reference may be not to the deluge, but to some later calamity. For this significance of the word see 934.

(your duty to) Him: this is best for you, if you did but know:
17 You only worship idols besides Allah and you create a lie; surely they whom you serve besides Allah do not control for you any sustenance, therefore seek the sustenance from Allah and serve Him and be grateful to Him: to Him you shall be brought back.
18 And if you reject (the truth), nations before you did indeed reject (the truth); and nothing is incumbent on the Apostle but a plain delivering (of the message).
19 What! do they not consider how Allah originates the creation, then reproduces it? Surely that is easy to Allah.[1908]
20 Say: Travel in the earth and see how He makes the first creation, then Allah creates the latter creation; surely Allah has power over all things.[1909]
21 He chastises whom He pleases and has mercy on whom He pleases, and to Him you shall be turned back.
22 And you shall not escape in the earth nor in the heaven, and you have neither a protector nor a helper besides Allah.

1908 The law of creation and destruction of things which is constantly working in nature finds an expression in the lives of nations: a nation is brought into existence, then it is swept away and a new nation raised in its stead. It is to this law that the verse refers as a warning to the idolatrous Meccans that the time had now come when their place should be taken by another nation. This is made clearer in the verses that follow.

It should be noted that vv. 18–23 are parenthetical, being an address to the opponents of the Holy Prophet. The Qur-án frequently adopts this method of warning in the middle of another narration, for its object is not to relate a story, but to warn those who opposed the spread of the truth as revealed to the Holy Prophet.

1909 Elsewhere, the words travel in the earth are always followed by then see what was the end of the rejecters, instead of which we have here how He makes the first creation, then Allah creates the latter creation. The apparent identity of the significance of these two statements is thus made clearer by the comparison, which shows that what is meant is the disappearance of one nation to give place to another.

SECTION 3

Abraham and Lot

23–25. Abraham is persecuted. 26, 27. He flies and is blessed. 28–30. Lot.

23 And (as to) those who disbelieve in the communications of Allah and His meeting, they have despaired of My mercy, and these it is that shall have a painful chastisement.

24 So naught was the answer of his people except that they said: Slay him or burn him; then Allah delivered a 1641 him from the fire;[a] most surely there are signs in this for a people who believe.[1910]

25 And he said: You have only taken for yourselves idols besides Allah by way of friendship between you in this world's life, then on the resurrection day some of you shall deny others, and some of you shall curse others, and your abode is the fire, and you shall not have any helpers.

26 And Lot believed in him, and he said: I am fleeing to my Lord, surely He is the Mighty, the Wise.[1910A]

27 And We granted him
b 1549. Isaac and Jacob,[b] and caused the prophethood and the book to remain in his seed, and We gave him his reward in this world, and in the hereafter he will most surely be among the good.

لَمِنَ الصَّالِحِينَ ۝

1910 As in 21:69, so here, it is not stated that Abraham was actually cast into the fire. On the one hand, the expression used here, then Allah delivered him from the fire, shows that the opponents were unable to cast him into the fire. On the other hand, the plan was either to slay or to burn him, and therefore the fire may only stand for the opposition which these plans involved.

1910A The words I am fleeing to my Lord indicate his flight to another country whither he was commanded to flee by his Lord (Bd). This is more clearly stated in 19:49: "And I will withdraw from you," being followed by the statement made in 19:50: "So when he withdrew from them." This makes it further clear that his deliverance from the fire was brought about by his flight to another country.

28 And (We sent) Lot when he said to his people: Most surely you are guilty of an indecency which none of the nations has ever done before you:

وَلُوطًا إِذْ قَالَ لِقَوْمِهِ إِنَّكُمْ لَتَأْتُونَ الْفَاحِشَةَ مَا سَبَقَكُم بِهَا مِنْ أَحَدٍ مِّنَ الْعٰلَمِينَ ○

Frailty of False Beliefs: A Lesson in the Fate of Earlier Nations

31–35. Lot's people destroyed. 36, 37. People of Shu'aib. 38. 'Ád and Samood. 39. Pharaoh and others. 40. Punishment in various forms. 41–44. False beliefs likened to spider's web.

31 And when Our messengers came to Abraham with the 33 And when Our messengers came to Lot he was grieved on account of them, and he was lacking of strength in their affair;[1912] and they said: Fear not, nor grieve; surely we will

Ar. thee. deliver you and your followers,
Ar. thy. Ar. thy. except your wife; she shall be of those who remain behind:

وَلَمَّا أَن جَاءَتْ رُسُلُنَا لُوطًا سِيءَ بِهِمْ وَضَاقَ بِهِمْ ذَرْعًا وَقَالُوا لَا تَخَفْ وَلَا تَحْزَنْ إِنَّا مُنَجُّوكَ وَأَهْلَكَ إِلَّا امْرَأَتَكَ كَانَتْ مِنَ الْغٰبِرِينَ ○

1911 Three evils are ascribed to Lot's people—unnatural crime, highway robbery, and openly committing evil deeds in their assemblies. Therefore it is a mistake to explain all incidents in connection with Lot's story only with reference to unnatural crime as the sole evil of which they were guilty. قطع السبيل is, according to Kf, "the work of robbers, killing men and seizing their property." JB adds after the words تقطعون السبيل by way of explaining them, "for they used to murder the passers-by and rob them of their property." Other commentators give similar explanations. 1912, see next page.

34 Surely We will cause to come down upon the people of this town a punishment from heaven, because they transgressed.

35 And certainly We have left a clear sign of it for a people who understand.[1913]

36 And to Midian (We sent) said: O my people! serve Allah and fear the latter day, and do not act corruptly in the land, making mischief.

37 But they rejected him, so a severe earthquake overtook them, and they became motionless bodies in their abode.

38 And (We destroyed) 'Âd

SECTION 5

The Qur-án is a Purifier

45. The Qur-án effects a release from the bondage of sin. 46. Principle of controversy. 47–49. The Qur-án contains all religious truths. 50, 51. Transformation wrought by the Qur-án is a sign of its truth.

PART XXI

45 Recite that which has been revealed to you of the Book and keep up prayer; surely prayer keeps (one) away from indecency and evil, and certainly the remembrance of Allah is the greatest, and Allah knows what you do.[1915]

Ar. thee.

اُتْلُ مَا أُوحِيَ إِلَيْكَ مِنَ الْكِتٰبِ وَأَقِمِ
الصَّلٰوةَ ۖ إِنَّ الصَّلٰوةَ تَنْهٰى عَنِ الْفَحْشَاءِ
وَالْمُنْكَرِ ۗ وَلَذِكْرُ اللّٰهِ أَكْبَرُ ۗ وَاللّٰهُ يَعْلَمُ

1914 A trust in false deities, which really stands for all false beliefs, is here compared to a spider's web to express the nature of its extreme frailty. It may prosper for a time, but no sooner is the light of criticism and research brought to bear upon it than it vanishes and leaves no trace behind. Or, as the spider's web is entirely changed when it is once destroyed, so, like the web, false beliefs do not retain their original form, and every objection causes a new doctrine to spring forth in the place of the old, which is really devoid of solidity and strength.

There may also be a reference here to the plans of the Holy Prophet's opponents, which were destined to be brought to naught by reason of their inability to withstand the overwhelming advance of truth.

1915 This verse invites the followers of the Book to accept the Qur-án on account of its purifying effect upon life, whereas their own scriptures had ceased to effect a release from the bondage of sin, which is the real object of revelation. The verse also lays down the right principle for getting rid of the bondage of sin in the words the remembrance of Allah is the greatest, i.e. the most powerful and effective restraint upon sin. That this is the right principle is borne out by the testimony of all the prophets and righteous men, and reason 46 And do not dispute with the followers of the Book except by what is best,[1916] except those of them who act unjustly,[1917] and say: We believe in that which has been revealed to us and revealed to you, and our God and your God is One, and to Him do we submit.

47 And thus have We revealed the Book to you. So those whom We have given the Book believe in it, and of these there are those who believe

Ar. thee.

وَلَا تُجَادِلُوٓا أَهْلَ الْكِتٰبِ إِلَّا بِالَّتِيْ

وَقُوْلُوٓا اٰمَنَّا بِالَّذِيٓ أُنْزِلَ إِلَيْنَا وَ
أُنْزِلَ إِلَيْكُمْ وَإِلٰهُنَا وَإِلٰهُكُمْ وَاحِدٌ
وَّنَحْنُ لَهٗ مُسْلِمُوْنَ ۝
وَكَذٰلِكَ أَنْزَلْنَآ إِلَيْكَ الْكِتٰبَ ۚ فَالَّذِيْنَ اٰتَيْنٰهُمُ
الْكِتٰبَ يُؤْمِنُوْنَ بِهٖ ۚ وَمِنْ هٰٓؤُلَآءِ مَنْ يُّؤْمِنُ

also leads us to the same conclusion. It is a living belief in Divine power, knowledge, and goodness that restrains man from walking in the ways of His displeasure, and this is what is implied in the remembrance of Allah. A sure and certain knowledge that every evil action leads to an evil consequence, that there is a Supreme Being Who knows what is hid from human eyes and Whose moral law is effective where the moral force of society altogether fails, that He is the source of all goodness and it is through goodness that man can have communion with Him, are the only effective restraints upon evil. These are the principles wherein every fresh revelation inspires a living faith.

It should also be noted that the recitation of the Book, the keeping up of prayer, and the remembrance of Allah are really all identical; for the Qur-án is recited in prayers, and the Qur-án is the best means of the remembrance of Allah: every line of it brings before the mind of the reader the goodness, power, and knowledge of the Divine Being, while there is no other book which fulfils this requirement. The Qur-án is neither a book of law, though it contains the principles of the laws necessary for the guidance of man, nor a book of sacred history, though it contains the necessary sacred history, but it is pre-eminently a Book that manifests the glory, greatness, grandeur, goodness, love, purity, power, and knowledge of the Supreme Being.

1916 It should be noted that this passage deals only with the mode of controversy to be adopted in inviting those who already had scriptures in their hands—which the Arabs had not—to the truth of Islam and the revelation of the Qur-án. The diseased imagination that discovers a recommendation for the use of force altogether fails to understand the meaning of the passage, for it is absurd to speak of a religious controversy being carried on by the use of force. This may be the method which the Christian missionary of the latter day has found most effective, but the Qur-án makes its own meaning quite clear when it explains what it regards as best, and that it is the broad principles of religion that should demand paramount consideration. The two fundamental principles of religion are the existence of the Divine Being and Divine revelation, these being common to all revealed religions. The only difference is that a Muslim's is a purer monotheism, a conception of the Divine Being which gives the most perfect attributes to Him while declaring Him to be free from all imperfections and weaknesses, a conception which cannot reasonably be criticized by any one who admits a belief in a Supreme Being. A Muslim's conception of Divine revelation is wider than that of the follower of any other religion, recognizing, as it does, that Divine revelation is granted in all ages and to all nations. A Muslim, therefore, admits the truth of all the prophets and revelations, and the follower of any other religion has nothing to lose but everything to gain by accepting Islam.

1917 The significance of the words except those who act unjustly is not that controversy is to be carried on with these in a different manner, but that the unjust would not accept this reasonable interpretation of the principles of religion. This is made clear in the verse that follows.

in it, and none deny Our communications except the unbelievers.[1918]

Ar. thou didst. Ar. didst thou. Ar. thy.

48 And you did not recite before it any book, nor did you transcribe one with your right hand, for then could those who say untrue things have doubted.[1919]

Ar. it is.

49 Nay! these are clear communications in the breasts of those who are granted knowledge;[1920] and none deny Our communications except the unjust.

50 And they say: Why are not signs sent down upon him from his Lord? Say: The signs are only with Allah, and I am only a plain warner.[1921]

بِهٖ ۚ وَمَا يَجْحَدُ بِاٰيٰتِنَآ اِلَّا الْكٰفِرُوْنَ ۝

وَقَالُوْا لَوْلَآ اُنْزِلَ عَلَيْهِ اٰيٰتٌ مِّنْ رَّبِّهٖ ۗ قُلْ
اِنَّمَا الْاٰيٰتُ عِنْدَ اللّٰهِ ۗ وَاِنَّمَآ اَنَا نَذِيْرٌ مُّبِيْنٌ ۝

1918 And thus have We revealed the Book; that is, by confirming the truth of all previous revelation. The reference in these is to the Arabs, who possessed no sacred scriptures.

1919 The broad principles of religion and the beautiful moral and spiritual truths which find expression in the Qur-án could not have been collected, if such a collection by human exertion were possible, except by one who had knowledge of all the previous scriptures; but, to say nothing of all the scriptures, the Holy Prophet had not read even a single book. What might have been said against a prophet like Jesus, that he had read the previous scriptures and collected some beautiful truths from them, could not be said against the Holy Prophet, for the latter could neither read nor write, and his inability to do either is thus a confirmation of his truth. Leaving aside all the principles and truths, if we consider the broad principle that Islam taught with regard to the truth of Divine revelation in all ages and to all nations, a truth never taught or recognized by any religion or by any man before the Holy Prophet, it is remarkable that such a broad truth should have been preached in such clear and forcible words by one who had never read the scriptures of any religion and who lived in a country which was almost cut off from all communication with other countries. That an Arab of the desert should proclaim a truth which it was not vouchsafed to any of the great prophets to preach, and which after thirteen centuries of learning and intercommunication of nations is recognized as the essential truth of all religious preaching, is alone sufficient to show that the source from which this teaching was drawn was far above the knowledge possessed by any human being.

1920 While the previous verse asserts that the truths of the religious scriptures, which were never read by the Holy Prophet, were to be found in the Qur-án, this verse goes further, and claims that not only those truths, but also others which are not to be found in any scripture, and which are only in the breasts of the learned ones, or those that shall ever be conceived by the learned ones, are to be seen in the pages of the Holy Qur-án. That what the most progressive religious thought of to-day considers desirable for the basis of a common religion of humanity is met with in Islam is a clear testimony to the truth of this assertion.

1921 As remarked elsewhere, it should be noted that this expression is not a denial of the coming of signs, but an assertion that they shall be shown. The Prophet is a warner, and gives warning in due time that the signs are with Allah, whose power to send these signs they deny. Read also in this connection vv. 53–55, which uphold, in most clear and forcible language, the coming of the punishment—which, however, the unbelievers would have hastened on—leaving no doubt as to the meaning of signs being with Allah.

Ar. thee. 51 Is it not enough for them that We have revealed to you the Book which is recited to them? Most surely there is mercy in this and a reminder for a people who believe.[1922]

Ar. between you. you; He knows what is in the heavens and the earth. And (as for) those who believe in the falsehood and disbelieve in Allah, these it is that are the losers.

وَيَسْتَعْجِلُوْنَكَ بِالْعَذَابِ وَلَوْلَآ اَجَلٌ
مُّسَمًّى لَّجَآءَهُمُ الْعَذَابُ وَلَيَاْتِيَنَّهُمْ

Ar. thee. 54 They ask you to hasten on the chastisement, and most surely hell encompasses the unbelievers;[1923]

لَمُحِيْطَةٌ بِالْكٰفِرِيْنَ ۝

55 On the day when the chastisement shall cover them from above them, and from beneath their feet; and He shall say: Taste what you did.[1924]

يَوْمَ يَغْشٰىهُمُ الْعَذَابُ مِنْ فَوْقِهِمْ وَ
مِنْ تَحْتِ اَرْجُلِهِمْ وَيَقُوْلُ ذُوْقُوْا مَا
كُنْتُمْ تَعْمَلُوْنَ ۝

1922 This is another reply to those who demanded the sign which involved their own destruction. The Qur-án is a mercy: if they would only accept it, and mould their lives according to its directions, they would be dealt with most mercifully. They could see how the believers had benefited by it; how a wonderful transformation had been wrought in their lives. Was it not a sufficient sign for them of the truth of the Holy Qur-án? Indeed, this was direct evidence of the truth of the holy word, for to effect a pure transformation in the lives of those who would follow it was its avowed object, while the overthrow of its enemies was only an indirect testimony.

1923 Even the punishment of this life, which the unbelievers would hasten, is called a hell. But even if this verse is taken as indicating the punishment of the life after death, as some commentators think, it is a transition from the one to the other—from the punishment of this life to the punishment after death—which is of frequent occurrence in the Holy Qur-án, both being spoken of in several places in such conjunction that it is hardly possible to separate the one from the other.

1924 The expression used is simply to indicate the all-encompassing nature of the punishment, which will not leave them a way to escape. Or, the punishment from above is the drought, and punishment from beneath, the battles.

56 O My servants who believe! surely My earth is vast, therefore Me alone should you serve.[1925]

58 And (as for) those who believe and do good, We will certainly give them abode in the high places in gardens beneath which rivers flow, abiding therein; how good the reward of the workers:[1926]

وَالَّذِيْنَ اٰمَنُوْا وَعَمِلُوا الصّٰلِحٰتِ لَنُبَوِّئَنَّهُمْ

59 Those who are patient, and on their Lord do they rely.

الَّذِيْنَ صَبَرُوْا وَعَلٰى رَبِّهِمْ يَتَوَكَّلُوْنَ ۝

60 And how many a living creature that does not carry its sustenance: Allah sustains it and yourselves; and He is the Hearing, the Knowing.[1927]

وَكَاَيِّنْ مِّنْ دَآبَّةٍ لَّا تَحْمِلُ رِزْقَهَا ۖ اَللّٰهُ
يَرْزُقُهَا وَاِيَّاكُمْ ۖ وَهُوَ السَّمِيْعُ الْعَلِيْمُ ۝

Ar. thou.

61 And if you ask them, Who created the heavens and the earth and made the sun and the moon subservient, they will certainly say, Allah. Whence are they then turned away?

وَلَئِنْ سَاَلْتَهُمْ مَّنْ خَلَقَ السَّمٰوٰتِ وَالْاَرْضَ
وَسَخَّرَ الشَّمْسَ وَالْقَمَرَ لَيَقُوْلُنَّ اللّٰهُ ۚ فَاَنّٰى
يُؤْفَكُوْنَ ۝

62 Allah makes abundant the means of subsistence for whom He pleases of His servants, and straitens them for whom (He pleases); surely Allah is Cognizant of all things.

اَللّٰهُ يَبْسُطُ الرِّزْقَ لِمَنْ يَّشَآءُ مِنْ عِبَادِهٖ
وَيَقْدِرُ لَهٗ ؕ اِنَّ اللّٰهَ بِكُلِّ شَيْءٍ عَلِيْمٌ ۝

Ar. thou.

63 And if you ask them Who is it that sends down water from the clouds, then gives life to the earth with it after its death, they will certainly say, Allah. Say: All praise is due to Allah. Nay, most of them do not understand.[1928]

وَلَئِنْ سَاَلْتَهُمْ مَّنْ نَّزَّلَ مِنَ السَّمَآءِ مَآءً
فَاَحْيَا بِهِ الْاَرْضَ مِنْ بَعْدِ مَوْتِهَا
لَيَقُوْلُنَّ اللّٰهُ ۚ قُلِ الْحَمْدُ لِلّٰهِ ۚ بَلْ اَكْثَرُهُمْ
لَا يَعْقِلُوْنَ ۝

1925 This is to comfort the Muslims against the severe persecutions by their enemies. If they are persecuted at Mecca, they shall find a refuge elsewhere, where they shall not find such hindrances.

1926 This promise was abundantly fulfilled in this life when the Muslims were given the grand palaces of the Chosroes and Cæsars to dwell in.

1927 This is a consolation to the Muslims that the giving up of their concerns and business at Mecca will not be productive of distress.

1928 Most of them do not understand that the dead earth of Arabia is now about to be raised to life.

SECTION 7

Triumph of the Faithful

65 So when they ride in the ships they call upon Allah, being sincerely obedient to Him, but when He brings them safe to the land, lo! they associate others (with Him);

1928A The ḥaram includes the city of Mecca and several miles of territory around it. War is forbidden within these limits. The reference in men being carried off by force is to the great insecurity of life and property in Arabia, while no one dare violate the sacredness of Mecca. The inviolability of the ḥaram in such a warlike country and among such ignorant people for long ages was no doubt a wonderful manifestation of Divine power and knowledge.

CHAPTER XXX

THE ROMANS

(Ar-Rûm)

REVEALED AT MECCA

(6 sections and 60 verses)

Abstract:

Sec. 1. A great prophecy.
Sec. 2. The two parties.
Sec. 3. Manifestation of Divine power in nature.
Sec. 4. Islam responds to human nature.
Sec. 5. A transformation.
Sec. 6. Overthrow of opposition.

The Title, context, and date of revelation.

THE chapter receives its name from the important prophecy regarding the victory of the Romans over the Persians, who, at the time of the utterance of this prophecy, had overrun the whole of the Roman Empire and were almost knocking at the gates of Constantinople. But the importance of this chapter does not lie in this prophecy alone, but in another and grander declared along with it. This is the prophecy of the victory of the Muslims over their mighty foe, the Quraish ; a circumstance which, in the light of all events on which human inference could be based, was as clear an impossibility as ever existed in the world. This prophecy saw its fulfilment in the battle of Badr, which took place in the same year as the victory of the Romans over the Persians. Indeed, the one thing common to this group of the four Meccan chapters, 29th, 30th, 31st, and 32nd, which begin with Alif, lám, mím, is the grand and majestic utterance that a great nation was about to be raised from the dead land of Arabia, and this prophecy, though clearly mentioned in all these chapters, finds the clearest expression here. The date of revelation of this chapter, which is unanimously regarded as a Meccan revelation (AH), is put by the best authorities in the sixth or seventh year before the Hejira, and thus in subject-matter as well as in revelation it may be classed with the last chapter, being placed in the early middle period of Meccan revelation.

Subject-matter.

The chapter opens with a reference to the Roman vanquishment, and immediately declares a prophecy of Rome's triumph over her foe, and adds a prophecy of a great Muslim victory over their oppressors at the same time. The second section speaks of the two parties of believers and unbelievers, stating that their respective conditions will soon be reversed, the Muslims getting the upper hand. The third section refers to the manifestation of Divine power in nature as an indication that a manifestation of the same power will bring about the triumph of Islam. The fourth section shows that the spiritual triumph of Islam is a certainty, because, responding as it does to human nature and answering all the requisites of the natural religion of man, it must ultimately appeal to man's nature and be accepted universally. This triumph, it is stated in the next section, was to be accomplished by a great and wonderful transformation in Arabia. Those who doubted the accomplishment of such a revolution, on account of the mighty opposition to the progress of Islam, are told in the concluding section that the overthrow of opposition was absolutely certain.

1929 The people of the empire called themselves Romans, and to them Greek, which was synonymous with heathen, was a term of reproach (Butler's Arab Conquest of Egypt, foot-note, p. 141). Hence the rendering of Rúm into Greeks, generally adopted by English translators, does not convey the correct idea.

1930 The struggle between Persia and the Roman Empire had existed for a long time. The great struggle, in which Persia was victorious, began in 602 of the Christian era, when Chosroes II of Persia began war with Rome to avenge the death of Maurice, who was murdered by Phocas. "His armies plundered Syria and Asia Minor, and in 608 advanced to Chalcedon. In 613 and 614 Damascus and Jerusalem were taken by the general Shahabaraz, and the Holy Cross was carried away in triumph. Soon after, even Egypt was conquered. The Romans could offer but little resistance, as they were torn by internal dissensions and pressed by the Avars and Slavs" (En. Br., Art. "Chosroes II"). When the news of this conquest reached Mecca the Quraish were jubilant, as their sympathies were with the fire-worshipping Persians more than with the Christians, who, being the followers of the scriptures, were classed by them with the Muslims. One reason for their joy seems to have been founded on the belief that this defeat of the Christians foreboded vanquishment for the Muslims, to whom the Qur-án had repeatedly prophesied success and triumph over themselves. It was in the year 615 or 616 that the Qur-án announced this revelation, containing two different prophecies, one about the vanquishment of the victorious Persians, who had reached the very gates of Constantinople, by the Romans, who were by this time quite exhausted, and the other about the vanquishment of the powerful Meccans by the handful of persecuted Muslims.

As to the fulfilment of these two prophecies, which utterly turned the tables against the powerful Persian Empire and the mighty opponents of the helpless and homeless Muslims within the short period of nine years, that being the time-limit given in the prophecy (the word biḍ'-un denoting, according to all authorities, a period from three to nine or ten years), one need only cast a glance at history in and after the year 624. "In 624 he (Heraclius) advanced into northern Media, where he destroyed the great fire-temple of Goudzak" (En. Br., Art. "Chosroes II").

In the same year, 313 Muslims, many of whom were raw, inexperienced youths without any arms, routed a strong force of about a thousand of the Quraish warriors, killing all the leaders and dealing a death-blow to the power of the enemy. The successes of the Muslim army, on the one hand, and of the Romans on the other, continued until the Quraish were utterly crushed by the conquest of Mecca in 630, while "the Persian Empire, from the apparent greatness which it had reached ten years ago, sank into hopeless anarchy" (En. Br.).

I leave it for the unbiased judgment of the reader to consider whether it is possible for mere political forecast to determine such highly improbable events with such exactness, or whether there is a single instance in history in which a political forecast may claim equal rank with the two prophecies contained here. When did forecast have the courage to declare that a mighty conqueror that had laid waste another mighty empire, taking province after province during a long course of years, until its soldiers came to the door of the vanquished enemy's capital, would, within a fixed period—a period too short to either bring about débâcle in the conquering troops or to allow the vanquished and almost annihilated armies to regain sufficient strength and organization—not only recapture its lost territory, but attack the very heart of the victorious country? Or when was forecast ever able to say that a handful of men whose numbers did not exceed a hundred, and who were so persecuted and oppressed that most of them had to take refuge in another country, would within nine years vanquish a whole nation of warriors? The Arabians, too, had the gift of forecast with which Mr. Wherry's "daily newspapers are gifted," and they called these prophecies, as a similar prophecy would be called in our day, the ravings of a madman. And here is Palmer's opinion, which gives the lie to Wherry's note: "The Greeks were so distressed that there appeared little likelihood of their being able to retrieve their fortune, and in the following year the Persians proceeded to lay siege to Constantinople itself."

Rodwell contrives to mitigate the force of the prophecy by saying that the vowel-points were given later, and therefore the prophecy could be read either way, i.e. either as translated above, "And they, after being vanquished, shall overcome," or reading sayughlabún, "And they, after being vanquished, shall be vanquished." Apart from the apparent absurdity of the words becoming quite meaningless, what would be the significance of on that day the believers shall rejoice? for, adopting Rodwell's reading, we should have grieve instead of rejoice, and the vowel-points cannot change yafraḥún into yaḥzanún. But there is no doubt that the actual ignorance of the manner in which the revelation of the Qur-án was propagated is the only excuse we can offer for such an absurd suggestion. Every portion revealed was committed to memory by many men and was repeated over and over in prayers in congregation, and the vowel-points could not be left undecided. Moreover, there is clear evidence that when this verse was revealed Abú Bakr asserted in a public assembly that the Romans would overcome (the correct rendering of sa-yaghlibún) their enemies within three years, and Ubayy bin Khalf, an unbeliever, denied this, and ten camels were betted on the issue. This coming to the Holy Prophet's knowledge, he told Abú Bakr that the time-limit of three years was not correct, for biḍ'-un signified from three to ten years. The time-limit was accordingly extended and the bet raised to a hundred camels. This shows how sure were the companions and the Holy Prophet himself of the fulfilment of the prophecy (Rz).

1931 The help of Allah is the help that was over and over again promised to the believers against the idolatrous Meccans. Thus we have here a clear prophecy of the victory of the Muslims over the Meccans within nine years from the pronouncement of the prophecy. It was fulfilled in the battle of Badr.

6 (This is) Allah's promise! Allah will not fail His promise, but most people do not know.

7 They know the outward of this world's life, but of the hereafter they are absolutely heedless.

8 Do they not reflect within themselves: Allah did not create the heavens and the earth and what is between them two but with truth, and (for) an appointed term? And most surely most of the people are deniers of the meeting of their Lord.

9 Have they not travelled in the earth and seen how was the end of those before them? They were stronger than these in prowess, and dug up the earth,[1932] and built on it in greater abundance than these have built on it, and there came to them their apostles with clear arguments; so it was not beseeming for Allah that He should deal with them unjustly, but they dealt unjustly with their own souls.

10 Then evil was the end of those who did evil,[1933] because they rejected the communications of Allah and used to mock them.

1934 The five times of prayer are clearly indicated in this and the previous verse, the evening prayer comprising both the prayer at sunset and the later evening prayer. The five times of prayer were observed at Mecca, and places at which the Muslims gathered for prayers are mentioned in reports relating to very early days of the Prophet's mission.

1935 The close relation between the male and the female (i.e. husband and wife) is expressed in words which indicate the closeness of the union to such an extent as to have misled many to suppose that the act of the physical creation of the female from the male is implied. But the Qur-án explains itself when it refers to the ties of love and compassion, and to the quietness of mind which a married person finds in his mate. The verse gives us the Islamic ideal of the union of husband and wife.

SECTION 4

Islam responds to Human Nature

28, 29. Unity appeals to human nature. 30–32. Natural religion of man. 33, 34. Allah is called upon in distress. 35–37. No authority for polytheism. 38–40. Charity for man and Unity of Allah are the two principles of natural religion.

28 He sets forth to you a parable relating to yourselves:[1936] Have you among those whom your right hands possess partners in what We have given you for sustenance, so that with respect to it you are alike; you fear them as you fear each other? Thus do We make the communications distinct for a people who understand.

وَلَا تَكُوْنُوْا مِنَ الْمُشْرِكِيْنَ ○

1936 This parable can be very easily understood by everybody, and there can be no doubt as to its appropriateness. If the master and the slave are not equal, how can inanimate objects such as stones from among His creatures be equal to the Creator, Who is the intelligent cause and Controller of all?

1937 Islam according to this verse is the natural religion of man, or a religion to the truth of which human nature bears testimony. Its fundamental principles, the Unity and all-comprehensive providence of Allah, the universality of Divine revelation, and the accountability for all actions in a life after death, are recognized by all religions and all nations, and their universal acceptance is a clear evidence that it is the very nature of man that bears testimony to their truth. Islam removes all limitations upon these three fundamental doctrines of the religion of humanity, and gives them as wide a significance as humanity itself. No other religion in the world has claimed to be the natural religion of man. A saying of the Holy Prophet to the same effect is reported by Abú Huraira: "Every child that is born conforms to the true religion (literally, human nature), then his parents make him a Jew or a Christian or a Magian, as a beast is born entire in all its limbs (or without a defect); do you see one born maimed and mutilated?" Then he repeated (i.e. in support of what he said): "The nature made by Allah in which He has made men; there is no altering of Allah's creation: that is the right religion" (Bkh).

32 Of those who divided their religion and became parties, every sect rejoicing in what they had with them.

33 And when harm afflicts men, they call upon their Lord, turning to Him, then when He makes them taste of mercy from Him, lo! some of them begin to associate (others) with their Lord, 34 So as to be ungrateful for what We have given them; but enjoy yourselves (for a while), for you shall soon come to know.

35 Or, have We sent down upon them an authority so that it speaks of that which they associate with Him?[1938]

36 And when We make people taste of mercy they rejoice in it, and if an evil befall them for what their hands have already wrought, lo! they are in despair.

37 Do they not see that Allah makes ample provision for whom He pleases, or straitens? most surely there are signs in this for a people who believe.

1938 The absence of any authority for associate-gods with the Supreme Being is clear from the fact that no prophet can be shown to have received a revelation from the Divine Being setting up creatures on an equal or co-operative plane with the Creator. Every such doctrine, besides being against the testimony of human nature and reason, stands condemned because of the absence of any revelation in its support.

1939 Charity to man is the practical outcome of the doctrine of the brotherhood of man, which is one of the two principles of the natural religion of man, the other, called the Fatherhood of God (according to the Qur-án, the Lordship of Allah), is referred to in the concluding verse of this section. As Islam has made the doctrine of the brotherhood of man a practical doctrine, therefore it is always referred to in the Qur-án in words enjoining charity on man for his brother-man.

SECTION 5

A Transformation

41, 42. Prevailing corruption. 43–45. Right course to be persevered in. 46–50. Signs of the change that must come. 51–53. The dead shall be raised to life gradually.

41 Corruption has appeared in the land and the sea on account of what the hands of men have wrought, that He may make them taste a part of that which they have done, so that they may return.[1941]

42 Say: Travel in the land, then see how was the end of those before: most of them were polytheists.[1942]

ظهر الفساد في البر والبحر بما كسبت
أيدي الناس ليذيقهم بعض الذي
عملوا لعلهم يرجعون ۝
قل سيروا في الأرض فانظروا كيف كان
عاقبة الذين من قبل كان أكثرهم مشركين ۝

1940 This verse lays stress upon the doctrine of charity to our fellow-man. It says that some men there are who seek to increase their wealth by means of getting interest on money, i.e. they seek an increase of their wealth at the expense of other men's property; but that a Muslim should seek an increase of his wealth by giving it, for the sake of Allah, to help his brother-man.

1941 History bears evidence to the truth of these words. Before the advent of the Holy Prophet corruption prevailed in all countries of the world. The sea may here signify the islands. Darkness prevailed over all countries of the world, affecting the beliefs of men as well as their deeds. Judaism, Hinduism, Buddhism, Confucianism, and Zoroastrianism had long ceased to have any healthy effect on the lives of their votaries, and the followers of these religions had not only ceased to practise virtue, but, worst of all, they had begun to look upon vice as virtue, and many of them attributed indecent and immoral practices to their sages and their gods. Christianity, which was the youngest of the then religions of the world, had lost all its purity. "The Christianity of the seventh century was itself decrepit and corrupt," is Muir's verdict. Such widespread corruption had never previously existed in the world's history. No heavenly light had shone in any corner of the world for six centuries. With the light of Islam, and through the torch of knowledge and civilization lit up in Arabia, a new era dawned not only over Arabia, but also over other countries. Europe remained the longest in darkness, and it was only after the torch of knowledge was lighted in Spain by the Muslims that both the Renaissance and the Reformation came.

1942 The doctrine of Unity had been forgotten by all nations; even the Jews submitted to the decisions of their learned men with a submission which was only due to God. That Christianity had long before forsaken the doctrine of Unity goes without saying.

Ar. thy face.
Or, religion.

43 Then set yourself upright to the right course before there come from Allah the day which cannot be averted : on that day they shall become separated.

Ar. on him is.

44 Whoever disbelieves, he shall be responsible for his disbelief, and whoever does good, they prepare (good) for their own souls,

45 That He may reward those who believe and do good out of His grace; surely He does not love the unbelievers.

46 And one of His signs is that He sends forth the winds bearing good news, and that He may make you taste of His mercy, and that the ships may run by His command, and that you may seek of His grace, and that you may be grateful.[1943]

Ar. thee.

47 And certainly We sent before you apostles to their people, so they came to them with clear arguments, then We gave the punishment to those who were guilty; and helping the believers is ever incumbent on Us.

48 Allah is He Who sends forth the winds so they raise a cloud, then He spreads it forth in the sky as He pleases, and He breaks it up so that you see the rain coming forth from inside it; then when He causes it to fall upon whom He pleases of His servants, lo! they are joyful, 49 Though they were before this, before it was sent down upon them, confounded in sure despair.

50 Look then at the signs of Allah's mercy, how He gives life to the earth after its death, most surely He is the quickener of the dead; and He has power over all things.

1943 The verse calls attention to the change that was already coming over the peninsula; this was a clear indication of the mighty transformation that was ultimately to be brought about.

1944 It, in this verse, refers to the seed-produce, which is meant by the expression "gives life to the earth" in the previous verse; the meaning is, the seed-produce may be rendered yellow or caused to wither away by a blast of the wind. The allusion is to the disasters which would strike a blow at the unbelievers' plans. It also refers to their persistence in unbelief, in spite of the afflictions which they shall experience, such as the great famine, or the evident signs of the weakening of their power, such as they saw at Badr and on other fields of battle.

1945 There is a deeper reference here to the law of the rise, growth, and decay of nations.

58 And certainly We have set forth for men every kind of parable in this Qur-án; and if you should bring them a communication, those who disbelieve would certainly say: You are naught but false claimants.

Ar. thou shouldst.

59 Thus does Allah set a seal on the hearts of those who do not know.[1946]

60 Therefore be patient; surely the promise of Allah is true, and let not those who have no certainty hold you in light estimation.[1947]

Ar. thee.

1946 It is here pointed out in the clearest terms that Allah's setting a seal over the hearts really means their own persistence in unbelief, as the preceding verse shows.

1947 That is, though they mock at you now, a time will come when, the truth of the Divine promise being firmly established, they shall not any more hold you in light estimation.

CHAPTER XXXI

LUQMAN

(Luqmán)

REVEALED AT MECCA

(4 sections and 34 verses)

Abstract:

Sec. 1. Believers shall be successful.
Sec. 2. Luqman's advice to his son.
Sec. 3. Greatness of Divine power.
Sec. 4. The doom comes.

The Title, context, and date of revelation.

THE name of this chapter is taken from that of the sage to whose story it refers. Luqmán was an Ethiopian, and his mention here testifies to the breadth of the fundamental principles of Islam alluded to in the last chapter. The reference to the words of Allah in v. 27, which cannot come to an end though all the trees were made into pens and the seas converted into ink, is also to show that the good and righteous people were not limited to any one age or country or to any individual nation, and that Divine revelation was granted to all nations, that the white Jew and the black Ethiopian could equally be the recipients of Divine favours and Divine revelation. As Jesus was a word of Allah, so was the Ethiopian Luqman, who is generally identified with the Greek Æsop. The aim of this chapter is, like its sister chapters, to ensure the success of the believers. As regards the date of revelation, the subject-matter makes it clear that it belongs, like its two predecessors, to the middle Meccan period, notwithstanding the diversity of opinion as to some of its verses, or even the major portion of it, having been revealed at Medina, for which there is no foundation in fact.

Subject-matter.

The chapter consists only of four sections. The first asserts in unmistakable terms the success of the Muslims; the second refers to the advice of Luqman to his son, which was now meant for the Muslims; the third speaks of the greatness of Divine power, which could bring about such an impossible thing as the triumph of the Muslims over their enemies; and the fourth foretells the doom of the mighty opponents.

SECTION 1

Believers shall be successful

1-5. Who shall be successful. 6, 7. A disgraceful punishment for rejecters. 8-11. Believers shall have bliss.

In the name of Allah, the Beneficent, the Merciful.

1 I am Allah, the best a 11. Knower.[a]
2 These are verses of the Book of Wisdom,
3 A guidance and a mercy for the doers of goodness,
4 Those who keep up prayer and pay the poor-rate and they are certain of the hereafter.
5 These are on a guidance from their Lord, and these are they who are successful.
6 And of men is he who takes instead frivolous discourse to lead astray from Allah's path without knowledge, and to take it for a mockery; these shall have an abasing chastisement.[1948]
7 And when Our communications are recited to him, he turns back proudly, as if he had not heard them, as though in his ears were a heaviness, therefore announce to him a painful chastisement.[1949]
8 (As for) those who believe and do good, they shall surely have gardens of bliss,
9 Abiding in them; the promise of Allah: (a) true (promise), and He is the Mighty, the Wise.

هُوَ الْعَزِيْزُ الْحَكِيْمُ ○

1948 It is a mistake to think that a particular person is meant here. The concluding words of the verse show clearly that the statement is general and applies to all those who take the Qur-án for a mockery. Nadr-ibn-ul-Hars, who is said to have learned certain stories in Persia and recited these in the assemblies of the Quraish to divert their attention from the Holy Qur-án, was only one such person.

1949 This verse makes it clear how a man becomes deaf to truth: he turns back from the truth proudly, as if he had not heard it. It is thus by his own action that he becomes deaf. This verse is of immense importance in explaining those verses in which it is stated that Allah sets a seal upon the ears and hearts of men.

10 He created the heavens without pillars as you see them, and put mountains upon the earth lest it might convulse with you,[a] and He spread in it animals of every kind; and We sent down water from the cloud, then caused to grow therein (vegetation) of every noble kind.

11 This is Allah's creation, but show Me what those besides Him have created. Nay, the unjust are in manifest error.

Or, that you can see.
Or, that they might furnish you with provision.

Luqman's Advice to his Son

12 And certainly We gave wisdom to Luqman,[1950] saying:[b] Be grateful to Allah. And whoever is grateful, he is only grateful for his own soul; and whoever is ungrateful, then surely Allah is Self-sufficient, Praised.

13 And when Luqman said to his son while he admonished him: O my son! do not associate aught with Allah; most surely polytheism is a grievous iniquity—

14 And We have enjoined man in respect of his parents—his mother bears him with faintings upon faintings and his weaning takes two years—saying: Be grateful to Me and to both your parents; to Me is the eventual coming.[1951]

15 And if they contend with you that you should associate with Me what you have no knowledge of, do not obey them,

1950 Any historical fact related by Oriental people is a myth in the terminology of the "broad-minded" European, while the most absurd myths of Europe are considered very reliable history. From what is stated of him, Luqman seems to have been an Ethiopian, and it is a characteristic of the Qur-án that it accepts prophets of all nationalities. It is very probable that the Greek Æsop is a corruption of Ethiopian and is identical with Luqman.

1951 Verses 14 and 15 are parenthetical, enjoining the duty of obedience to parents, because it is a parent who is advising his son. They are not misplaced, as Wahl has hastily supposed them to be.

and keep company with them in this world kindly,[1952] and follow the way of him who turns to Me, then to Me is your return, then will I inform you of what you did—

16 O my son! surely if it is the very weight of the grain of a mustard-seed, even though it is in (the heart of) rock, or (high above) in the heaven or (deep down) in the earth, Allah will bring it (to light); surely Allah is Knower of subtilities, Aware:[1953]

17 O my son! keep up prayer and enjoin the good and forbid the evil, and bear patiently that which befalls you: surely this is one of the affairs earnestly enjoined:

18 And do not turn your face away from people in contempt, nor go about in the land exulting overmuch: surely Allah does not love any self-conceited boaster:

1952 Notwithstanding the great stress that the Holy Qur-án lays here and elsewhere on the duty of obedience to parents, it also warns against attaching undue importance to that duty when the same clashes with a still higher duty, viz. one's duty to one's Maker. In fact any duty, however great, must be sacrificed before a higher duty, and one's duty to one's Maker is the highest of all duties.

1953 This was a warning to the Muslims, but they did not profit by it. They indulged in evil ways and tasted the evil consequences.

1954 Humility and meekness are taught in these verses, and the essence of the whole Sermon on the Mount is given here in a few words to show that Allah has not been partial in blessing only a single nation with high moral teachings. Even an Ethiopian could preach the meekness and humility of which the most materially advanced nations of the day may well feel proud.

SECTION 3

Greatness of Divine Power

20–26. Divine blessings and their rejection. 27. Words of Allah will not come to an end. 28. Arabia to be quickened to life. 29, 30. Falsehood will vanish before truth.

20 Do you not see that Allah has made what is in the heavens and what is in the earth subservient to you, and made complete to you His favours outwardly and inwardly? And among men is he who disputes in respect of Allah though having no knowledge, nor guidance, nor a book giving light.[1955]

1955 The words are meant as well for the Muslims as for the unbelievers. The Muslims occupied themselves too much with Greek philosophy, which gave no light to them, and forsook the Book which gave them light. So long as they adhered to the Book giving light they continued to advance in the world both materially and intellectually, but when other things occupied their attention to the exclusion of the Book of God, they fell from the height to which they had risen.

31, 32. Signs in the smaller afflictions. 33, 34. The day of punishment.

Ar. dost thou.

31 Do you not see that the ships run on in the sea by Allah's favour, that He may show you of His signs? Most surely there are signs in this for every patient endurer, grateful one.[1956A]

اَلَمْ تَرَ اَنَّ الْفُلْكَ تَجْرِيْ فِي الْبَحْرِ بِنِعْمَتِ

لَاٰيٰتٍ لِّكُلِّ صَبَّارٍ شَكُوْرٍ ○

1956 I'Ab thinks this verse and the two that follow belong to Medinian revelation, but there is nothing to show that they were not revealed at Mecca. It is noteworthy that a man who himself could not use the pen and who lived in a country where pen and ink were at any rate scarce, expresses such an idea of the abundance of pens and ink. The words contain an allusion to the abundant use of pens and ink in transcribing the Holy Qur-án. See also 1529, where similar words occur, and where it is shown that the words are also directed against the divinity of Jesus Christ.

1956A The signs for the patient endurer and the grateful one no doubt contain a hint that the suffering but grateful Muslims shall one day be made such a great nation that they shall also have command of the sea.

32 And when a wave like mountains covers them they call upon Allah, being sincere to Him in obedience, but when He brings them safe to the land, some of them follow the middle course; and none denies Our signs but every perfidious, ungrateful one.

33 O people! guard against (the punishment of) your Lord and dread the day when a father shall not make any satisfaction for his son, nor shall the child be the maker of any satisfaction for his father; surely the promise of Allah is true, therefore let not this world's life deceive you, nor let the arch-deceiver deceive you in respect of Allah.[1957]

يٰأَيُّهَا النَّاسُ اتَّقُوا رَبَّكُمْ وَاخْشَوْا يَوْمًا
لَا يَجْزِي وَالِدٌ عَنْ وَلَدِهِ ۖ وَلَا مَوْلُودٌ
هُوَ جَازٍ عَنْ وَالِدِهِ شَيْئًا ۚ إِنَّ وَعْدَ
اللّٰهِ حَقٌّ فَلَا تَغُرَّنَّكُمُ الْحَيٰوةُ الدُّنْيَا ۖ
وَلَا يَغُرَّنَّكُمْ بِاللّٰهِ الْغَرُورُ ۝

34 Surely Allah is He with Whom is the knowledge of the hour, and He sends down the rain and He knows what is in the wombs; and no one knows what he shall earn on the morrow; and no one knows in what land he shall die; surely Allah is Knowing, Aware.[1958]

إِنَّ اللّٰهَ عِنْدَهُ عِلْمُ السَّاعَةِ وَيُنَزِّلُ الْغَيْثَ
وَيَعْلَمُ مَا فِي الْأَرْحَامِ ۖ وَمَا تَدْرِي نَفْسٌ
مَاذَا تَكْسِبُ غَدًا ۖ وَمَا تَدْرِي نَفْسٌ
بِأَيِّ أَرْضٍ تَمُوتُ ۚ إِنَّ اللّٰهَ عَلِيمٌ خَبِيرٌ ۝

1957 Gharúr, which literally means the great deceiver, stands for the devil.

1958 By the hour is meant the hour of the fulfilment of prophecy and of the downfall of the Meccans. The verse refers to the transformation that was to be brought about in Arabia: the sending down of rain signifying the quickening of the spiritually dead; those that were in the wombs were ordained to be Muslims; the opponents of to-day would prove the supporters of to-morrow; and those who turned the Muslims out of their houses would themselves meet death when away from their habitations, even as they did when fighting against the Muslims. In a general sense, the knowledge of those in wombs specially refers to a knowledge whether they shall prove good or evil; that relating to earning to-morrow implies a knowledge of the good or the evil deeds which a person should do, and inability to state where a person shall die indicates inability to guess whether his death shall be with the righteous or with the evil-doers.

Abstract:

Sec. 1. A warning.
Sec. 2. The believers and unbelievers.
Sec. 3. The judgment.

General remarks.

As regards the subject-matter and the date of revelation, this chapter does not differ much from the three that precede it. Suggestions that this or that verse was revealed at Medina are no more than conjectures. This is the last of the group of four chapters beginning with the 29th, and contains as it were their sum and substance, embodying no doubt an allusion to the future history of Islam. The warning is given, the fate of the believers and the unbelievers is compared, and the judgment is announced, and to these three subjects the three sections of this chapter are devoted.

1958A Mecca had not seen a prophet before the advent of the Holy Prophet Muhammad, who was the only prophet raised among the descendants of Ishmael.

4 Allah is He Who created the heavens and the earth and what is between them in six periods, and He is firm in power;[a] you have not besides Him any guardian or any intercessor; will you not then mind?

5 He regulates the affair from the heaven to the earth; then shall it ascend to Him in a day the measure of which is a thousand years of what you count.[1959]

6 This is the Knower of the unseen and the seen, the Mighty, the Merciful,

7 Who made good everything that He has created, and He began the creation of man from dust.[b]

8 Then He made his progeny of an extract, of water held in light estimation.

9 Then He made him complete and breathed into him of His spirit,[1960] and made for you the ears and the eyes and the hearts; little is it that you give thanks.

10 And they say: What! when we have become lost in the earth, shall we then certainly be in a new creation? Nay! they are disbelievers in the meeting of their Lord.

11 Say: The angel of death who is given charge of you shall cause you to die, then to your Lord you shall be brought back.

1959 There seems to be a hint here that the amr (translated here as affair, but which also means commandment, and signifies the kingdom of God as represented by Islam) will be first established firmly on earth, and then it will receive a set-back extending over a period of a thousand years. Compare 1602, 1603.

1960 From this it appears that Allah breathes His spirit into every person whom He intends to make perfect. Really the rūḥ is the word or inspiration of Allah which makes a man perfect. At any rate, the breathing of the spirit into man is here spoken of in a general way and does not refer to any one man in particular. This corroborates what is said in 653, that the rūḥ really stands for Divine inspiration and not for the animal soul.

13 And if We had pleased We would certainly have given to every soul its guidance, but the word (which had gone forth) from Me was just: I will certainly fill hell with the jinn and men together.

14 So taste, because you neglected the meeting of this day of yours: surely We forsake you; and taste the abiding chastisement for what you did.

1961 This is a true description of what the blessings of paradise are: No soul knows what is hidden for them. These blessings are hidden from the physical eye of man, and therefore their description in words which convey to the mind an idea of the blessings of this life is metaphorical. Words cannot reveal to us the real nature of those blessings. The Holy Prophet's own comment on these words shows the truth of this statement, for he is reported to have said: "Allah says: I have prepared for My righteous servants what no eye has seen and no ear has heard, and what the heart of man has not conceived" (Bkh).

19 As for those who believe and do good, the gardens are their abiding-place; an entertainment for what they did.

20 And as for those who transgress, their abode is the fire; whenever they desire to go forth from it, they shall be brought back into it, and it will be said to them: Taste the chastisement of the fire which you called a lie.

21 And most certainly We will make them taste of the nearer chastisement before the greater chastisement, that haply they may turn.[1962]

Ar. besides.

22 And who is more unjust than he who is reminded of the communications of his Lord, then he turns away from them? Surely We will give punishment to the guilty.

1962 By the near chastisement is meant the earthly punishment which might serve as a warning against the greater punishment of the hereafter.

1963 The meaning of this verse is that a book was given to Moses containing a clear prophecy about the Holy Prophet. The book which according to that prophecy was to be given to the Holy Prophet is referred to in the word it. In fact, the Holy Prophet is here comforted by the knowledge that all the circumstances necessary to establish that likeness shall be brought about; the most important points in this likeness being the giving of a law, the deliverance of his people, and raising his followers to the position of a great and conquering nation

THE ALLIES

(Al-Aḥzāb)

REVEALED AT MEDINA

(9 sections and 73 verses)

Abstract:

Sec. 1. Spiritual and physical relationship.
Sec. 2. The allies' attack on Medina.
Sec. 3. Allies' flight: Quraiẓa punished.
Sec. 4. Prophet's domestic simplicity.
Sec. 5. Prophet's marriage with Zainab.
Sec. 6. Objections against the Prophet's domestic life.
Sec. 7. Rules of conduct in domestic relations.
Sec. 8. Those who spread evil reports.
Sec. 9. An exhortation to the faithful.

The Title.

THIS chapter goes under the name of The Allies, by which are meant the Quraish confederated with other idolatrous tribes and the Jews, both those who were expelled and those remaining in Medina. All of these, with the exception of the last-mentioned, marched against Medina to administer to the Muslims a crushing and final defeat. This was surely the most powerful attack directed against the handful of Muslims within that city, and its failure was the most surprising that has ever been recorded in history. Though it cannot be said that the Muslims defeated the combined forces, numbering more than ten times the available Muslim force, yet the flight of the confederated host so disheartened the enemies of Islam, that they never again mustered sufficient courage to take the offensive against the Muslims. The battle, therefore, occupying as it does a most prominent place in the early history of Islam, richly deserves the importance it has been accorded.

Date of revelation.

The date of the revelation of this chapter, which is entirely Medinian, can be easily ascertained, for the battle of the Allies, or the battle of the Ditch, took place in the Shawwāl of the fourth year of Hejira (Bkh). Most of the other subjects treated herein, such as those relating to the Prophet's marriage with Zainab, and to his marriages in general, might be fixed a little later, but they cannot be placed beyond the seventh year of Hejira.

Context.

This chapter deals with the two mightiest weapons which have over and over again been wielded against Islam. The first of these is the employment of brute force to crush the Muslims, and the second is that of advancing objections against the purity of the domestic life of the Holy Prophet. Both these weapons failed in the early history of Islam, and they are destined to fail again. The reason why this chapter occupies this place in the arrangement of the chapters of the Qur-án is quite obvious. The last group of Meccan chapters preceding this announces a series of mighty prophecies foretelling subsequent greatness of the Muslims, and here we are shown how the forces employed to crush Islam were made ineffective, thus paving the way for the Muslims to attain the promised greatness.

Subject-matter.

The internal arrangement of the verses may be explained in a few words. The chapter opens with an injunction requiring perfect obedience to Allah without regard to the wishes or carpings of the hypocrites and unbelievers. The first section deals with the question of physical and spiritual relationships to which the above injunction is a preliminary. Mere verbal allegation of relationship was not to be considered after the manner of the Arabs, who frequently deserted their wives by simply asserting that they were to them as their mothers, whilst they treated those whom they alleged to be sons as real sons in all respects. Both these customs were abolished. Yet there was a relationship far above all physical relationships, and this was the spiritual relationship existing between the Holy Prophet and his followers. It had its own sphere, and was to be respected. Thus what is stated in this section is a preliminary to the matters that are more fully discussed in the chapter. The powerful attack of the Quraish and their allies on the Muslims, spoken of in the second and third sections, was really a resort to brute force made with the object of utterly annihilating Islam. The combined forces, however, as previously stated, took to flight, and the internal enemies, the Jews, were punished for their treachery. The physical force of the enemy being thus broken, the second matter, which relates to the objections advanced against the Holy Prophet, is then introduced. The chief objection against the Holy Prophet which has found expression in our own day was answered by the Holy Qur-án thirteen hundred years ago. Thus all objections against the Prophet's domestic life are really refuted in the fourth section. The Holy Prophet's unrivalled simplicity of life is the key to the refutation of all objections, and that simplicity is shown in his readiness to part with his wives if they insisted on possessing those comforts of life which were being enjoyed by their sisters in the houses of the companions. The condition of the Muslim community was now being changed to one of affluence, and the wives of the Prophet naturally desired to share in the growing prosperity of the community. But this was not to be vouchsafed to them. Not only did the Prophet himself retain the utmost simplicity of life to his last days, no change coming over him though he had risen to be the ruler of the whole of Arabia, but he would not allow even his wives to depart from that high standard of simplicity. To call him a voluptuary is the greatest villainy. The simplicity of life which he retained while actually ruling a country is unparalleled, and is not met with even in the lives of the noblest men. It was within his means to furnish his wives with every material comfort, but instead of pandering to their earthly desires he informed them that if they required such provisions he could not retain them in his household. This abundantly proves the exalted purity of his motives in contracting all these marriages.

The fifth section deals with the Prophet's marriage with Zainab, and refutes the objections advanced against him on that score. The sixth generalizes on the objections raised against his domestic life. The seventh draws the attention of the Muslims to certain rules of conduct in their domestic relations. The eighth speaks of those who spread evil reports, and the ninth closes the chapter with an exhortation to the faithful.

SECTION 1

Spiritual and Physical Relationship

1-3. Hypocrites to be guarded against. 4, 5. Relationship by assertion. 6-8. Believers' relation to the Prophet.

In the name of Allah, the Beneficent, the Merciful.

1 O Prophet! be careful of (your duty to) Allah and do not comply with (the wishes of) the unbelievers and the hypocrites; surely Allah is Knowing, Wise;[1965]

Or, obey.

2 And follow what is revealed to you from your Lord; surely Allah is Aware of what you do;

Ar. thee.
Ar. thy.

3 And rely on Allah; and Allah is sufficient for a Protector.

4 Allah has not made for any man two hearts within him;[1966] nor has He made your wives whose backs you liken to the backs of your mothers as your mothers, nor has He made those whom you assert to be your sons your real sons; these are the words of your mouths; and Allah speaks the truth and He guides to the way.[1967]

بِسْمِ اللّٰهِ الرَّحْمٰنِ الرَّحِيْمِ

اللّٰهَ كَانَ بِمَا تَعْمَلُوْنَ خَبِيْرًا ۙ
وَّتَوَكَّلْ عَلَى اللّٰهِ ۭ وَكَفٰى بِاللّٰهِ وَكِيْلًا

مِنْهُنَّ اُمَّهٰتِكُمْ ۚ وَمَا جَعَلَ اَدْعِيَاۗءَكُمْ
اَبْنَاۗءَكُمْ ۭ ذٰلِكُمْ قَوْلُكُمْ بِاَفْوَاهِكُمْ ۭ وَاللّٰهُ
يَقُوْلُ الْحَقَّ وَهُوَ يَهْدِي السَّبِيْلَ

1965 The Prophet is enjoined to sever all connection with unbelievers and hypocrites and not to comply with their wishes, for iṭā'at signifies complying with or consenting to what is desired of one (LL). The chapter was revealed at a time when the powerful and combined forces of the Arabian tribes threatened Medina from without and the hypocrites assisted them from within to crush the Muslims. It was necessary at such a critical time that the Muslims (who are really meant by the phrase "O Prophet") should not in any way be compliant to their deadly enemies, of whose doings it is elsewhere said: "They do not fall short of inflicting loss upon you: they love what distresses you" (3:117).

If we adopt the ordinary translation of the word tuṭi' which I have given in the margin, the meaning would be that the Holy Prophet should not be troubled by his critics, for their object was only to carp, and one course of action was as well calculated to give them occasion for carping as another.

1966 This passage does not relate to what follows (Rz), but sums up what is said in the previous verse. The Prophet is there told not to be compliant to the unbelievers and the hypocrites, but to trust in Allah alone, because the same heart cannot simultaneously entertain love for Allah and love for His enemies.

1967 This passage abolishes two customs of the days of ignorance. The first of these is what is called ẓihār or muẓāhirah. It was not divorce in the true sense of the word. The word is derived from ẓahr, meaning back, and ظاهر من امرأته signified he said to his wife انت علی کظهر امی i.e. thou art to me as the back of my mother. No sooner were the words pronounced than the relation between husband and wife ended as by a divorce, but the

5 Assert their relationship to their fathers; this is more equitable with Allah; but if you do not know their fathers, then they are your brethren in faith and your friends; and there is no blame on you concerning that in which you made a mistake, but (concerning) that which your hearts do purposely (blame may rest on you), and Allah is Forgiving, Merciful.

6 The Prophet has a greater claim on the faithful than they have on themselves, and his wives are (as) their mothers;[1968] and the possessors of relationship have the better claim in the ordinance of Allah to inheritance, one with respect to another, than (other) believers, and (than) those who have fled (their homes), except that you do some good to your friends;[1969] this is written in the Book.

woman was not at liberty to leave the husband's house. She remained in the same house; she was now treated as a deserted wife, the conjugal relation having ended for ever. The other custom was that of regarding the adopted son as if he were a real son. This passage abolishes both customs on the same ground; a wife cannot be a real mother nor a stranger a real son. Mere assertion cannot establish the close ties of blood-relationship.

The mischievous statement that one of these customs was abolished by the Prophet to legalize his marriage with Zaid's divorced wife is shown to be false by the very combination of the abolition of two customs of a similar nature on similar grounds, no interested motive being possible in either of these cases; nor is there any proof to show that the passage was revealed after circumstances had arisen which led to the Prophet's marrying the divorced wife of Zaid. The separate treatment of the two in the Qur-án, on the other hand, shows that no relation exists between them.

The subject of ẓihár is fully discussed in the first section of the 58th chapter.

1968 The Prophet was indeed much more than a father to the believers. He had raised them to the dignity of manhood from a state of savagery, consequently he had a greater claim on them than their own people, and the tie of love which united the believers to him was stronger than the ordinary ties of love and friendship. The statement made in ازواجه امهاتهم only implies that as the Prophet stood in the spiritual relationship of fatherhood to the believers, his wives were to be respected as mothers, their marriage after the Prophet's death with any of the believers being forbidden further on in v. 53.

1969 When the Muslims first came to Medina a brotherhood was established between those who fled and the helpers, one of the former becoming a brother of one of the latter, and each of the two thus united was entitled to a share of inheritance on the death of the other, according to an old Arab custom. The passage abolishes this custom, maintaining only the brotherhood of Islam in a wider sense, allowing inheritance only to actual relatives. The Islamic brotherhood did not carry the title of inheritance, but a Muslim could assist his brother in Islam by a gift or by making a will in his favour. This is the significance of the words except that you do some good to your friends.

The Allies' Attack on Medina

9-11. A severe attack on all sides. 12-20. The hypocrites and their treachery.

9 O you who believe! call to mind the favour of Allah to you when there came down upon you hosts,[1971] so We sent against them a strong wind[1972] and hosts that you saw not,[1973] and Allah is Seeing what you do.

1970 The covenant referred to here is generally supposed to be in relation to the delivery of the message with which the prophets are entrusted (Bd), the consequence of its delivery in each case being that those who followed the truth were rewarded and those who rejected it were punished. But see 3 : 80, where the making of a covenant with the prophets is spoken of, and that covenant is, with regard to the advent of the Holy Prophet, referred to in Acts 3 : 21 and elsewhere; for a full discussion on which see 458. The only difficulty may appear to be that here a covenant is also spoken of as having been made with the Holy Prophet himself. This evidently refers to the Prophet's verifying all previous revelation, a Muslim's article of faith being expressed clearly thus in the Holy Qur-án: "And who believe in that which has been revealed to you and that which was revealed before you" (2 : 4).

Or the making of the covenant with the prophets may signify raising them to the dignity of prophethood and giving them books for the guidance of their people. Every prophet had followers as well as opponents; and God's way of dealing with these two parties has always been the same: the faithful have been rewarded and the opponents punished. In the same way would the two parties be dealt with now.

1971 The events narrated in this section and a part of the following relate to the siege of Medina by the combined forces of the Quraish and their allies—viz. the Ghatfan, the 'Ashja' and Murra, the Fezara, the Suleim, and the Beni Sa'd and Asad, aided by the Jewish tribe of Bani Nadir and Bani Quraiza, the latter of whom had made a treaty of alliance with the Muslims—the entire forces numbering ten thousand according to some, while the Muslims were only about a tenth of that number. The Prophet decided to remain within the town, and a ditch was dug as a protective measure against the onrush of the powerful force. The battle continued for several days, the enemy eventually taking to flight on a stormy night without being able to inflict any loss upon the Muslims.

1972 The reference is to the great hurricane which caused the enemy to fly. Muir says: "Wearied and damped in spirit, the night set in upon them cold and tempestuous. Wind and rain beat mercilessly on the unprotected camp. The storm rose to a hurricane. Fires were extinguished, tents blown down, cooking vessels and other equipage overthrown."

1973 The hosts which could not be seen were the angelic hosts which disheartened the enemy. The storm alone would not have made an army of 10,000 to fly in such disorder, were it not that they had already been disheartened by the futility of their attacks upon the besieged Muslims. The angelic assistance is promised in 3:124 in the following words, which clearly refer to this headlong attack of the enemy: "Yea! if you remain patient and are on your guard and they come upon you in a headlong manner, your Lord will assist you with five thousand of the havoc-making angels."

1974 The Ghatfan pitched on the east side of the town, on the higher part of the valley, and the Quraish on the west side, on the lower part of the valley (Bḍ).

1975 Becoming dull of the eyes and the rising of the hearts to the throats indicates the Muslim fear, which was only natural when such a large army was advancing against a mere handful of men. The diverse thoughts signify the fears of the weak-hearted and the hypocrites that Allah's promise would not prove true and that the enemy would certainly destroy them. As regards the thoughts of the faithful, see v. 22.

1976 That the prophecies of the Holy Qur-án regarding the ultimate triumph of Islam and the victory of the Muslims were not vague utterances, but clear and emphatic assertion, is shown by what the hypocrites are related to have said. There was an unmistakable promise of victory, but the circumstances were decidedly against the fulfilment of that promise, and hence the weak-hearted said that the promise of victory was given only to deceive them.

It should be noted that the weak-hearted, who did not believe in the ultimate triumph of Islam, are here classed with the hypocrites. How many of those who profess Islam would prove sincere Muslims if judged by that criterion!

1977 Yasrib was the name by which Medina was known before the Prophet's flight to that city.

1978 That is, go back to idolatry to save your lives, or beat a retreat and return to your houses (Bd).

1979 These verses describe the condition of the hypocrites, who advanced excuses for not fighting against the opponents of the Muslims. If an enemy had entered into the city and invited them to join hands with him to fight against the Muslims, they would have been ready to fight. The concluding words show that they would have even left Medina to attack the Muslims and would not then have cared for the protection of their houses.

SECTION 3

Allies' Flight: Quraiza punished

21. The Prophet an exemplar. 22-24. Believers' faith strengthened by prophecy. 25. Enemy returns unsuccessful. 26, 27. Punishment of the Bani Quraiza.

21 Certainly you have in the Apostle of Allah an excellent exemplar for him who hopes in Allah and the latter day and remembers Allah much.[1980]

22 And when the believers saw the allies, they said: This is what Allah and His Apostle promised us, and Allah and His Apostle spoke the truth; and it only increased them in faith and submission.[1981]

لَقَدْ كَانَ لَكُمْ فِي رَسُولِ اللَّهِ أُسْوَةٌ

رَسُولُهُ وَمَا زَادَهُمْ إِلَّا إِيمَانًا وَتَسْلِيمًا ع

1980 This verse points to a most significant truth and a distinguishing characteristic of the Holy Prophet, viz. that he is the best exemplar and the highest model of virtue for the faithful. The very circumstance which is used as a point of objection by his opponents is the real beauty of his life. A sentimentalist would tell us that as a persecuted reformer at Mecca he offered a noble example, but that as the head of a state at Medina he fought battles, contracted marriages, ordered the slaughter of his enemies, and did many acts of a similar nature which were better left undone. But the object of his advent was not to please sentimentalists by giving some moral precepts quite impracticable in the actual lives of men, and by merely offering a noble example of steadfastness under severe persecutions, but rather to give practicable rules of guidance to men living and working in the world and to illustrate them by his noble example. If he had not led armies he could not have served as a model for a general leading armies into battle; if he had not fought personally he could not have been an exemplar to a soldier laying down his life in the cause of truth, justice, and freedom; if he had not made laws for the guidance of his followers he could never have been regarded as an outstanding example to a legislator; if he had not decided cases he could not have served as a light to judges and magistrates; if he had not married he would have left men unguided practically in half of their everyday duties and could not have shown how to be a kind and affectionate husband and a loving father; if he had not taken revenge on tyrants for the wrongs inflicted on innocent persons, if he had not overcome his persecuting enemies and forgiven them, if he had not overlooked the faults of those attached to him, he could not have been an excellent exemplar and a perfect model, as he is here pronounced to be. Indeed, it is the distinguishing characteristic of his life that he not only gave practical rules of guidance in all walks of life, but gave by his life a practical illustration of all those rules.

Two more points are worth noting here. In the first place, the Prophet's being an exemplar is a sufficient answer to all those who carp at him, because the very necessity to guide men under varying mundane circumstances and conditions led him through all those circumstances. Secondly, the moral qualities which are latent within man remain in a dormant condition unless they are called into action. Hence no one can claim the possession of a high moral quality unless he has had occasion to display it, acquitting himself creditably.

The occasion on which the Prophet's being an exemplar to the faithful is pointed out is one on which he showed the greatest firmness in utmost danger, confidence in Divine assistance, and steadfastness in the hardest trials, and the believers are told that they must not lose heart, but follow the example of the Holy Prophet. It is, moreover, a reply to the carpings of the enemies of Islam, which are dealt with further on in this chapter.

23 Of the believers are men who are true to the covenant which they made with Allah: so of them is he who accomplished his vow, and of them is he who yet waits, and they have not changed in the least;[1982]

Ar. with any changing.

24 That Allah may reward the truthful for their truth, and chastise the hypocrites if He please or turn to them (mercifully); surely Allah is Forgiving, Merciful.[1982A]

25 And Allah turned back the unbelievers in their rage; they did not obtain any advantage, and Allah sufficed the believers in fighting; and Allah is Strong, Mighty.

26 And He drove down those of the followers of the Book who backed them from their fortresses and He cast awe into their hearts: some you killed and you took captive another part.[1983]

فَرِيقًا تَقْتُلُونَ وَتَأْسِرُونَ فَرِيقًا ۝

1981 The reference here is to the Divine promise that a time would come when the combined forces of Arabia would be put to flight. This promise was given long before, and at a time when the Holy Prophet and his few followers were being severely persecuted at Mecca. These are the very words of the prophecy: "A mighty host of the allies shall be here put to flight" (38:11). So when the combined forces attacked Medina, the words of the prophecy were before the heart of every true Muslim. They rejoiced because they were certain that the combined forces of the enemy would be put to flight. It was only the hypocrites who had misgivings, as the last section shows. The battle had, in fact, inspired greater faith in the ultimate triumph of Islam, not only by bringing earlier prophecies to fulfilment but also because it was here that, when the Holy Prophet smashed a big stone with a hammer (a stone which had proved an obstacle in the digging of the ditch) and a flash of light followed, he announced the mighty prophecy that that flash of light had revealed to him the palaces of Kisra and Cæsar, and that he had been informed that his followers would be triumphant over both these empires.

1982 Some of the believers had become martyrs in the cause of truth; others yet waited, anxious to lay down their lives in the same cause.

1982A It is clearly stated here, as also in v. 17, that all the hypocrites would not be punished, but that Allah would be merciful to them, punishing only such as deserved to be punished. Thus it happened that most of them became afterwards sincere converts to Islam.

1983 The Bani Quraiza were in alliance with the Holy Prophet, and when the enemy laid siege to Medina they were bound to repel the attack (see 126). Instead of this they sided with the investing army. Muir admits that "it was agreed that the Quraiza would assist the Quraish," and though he doubts whether "they entered on active hostilities," there is the surest testimony that they had made an agreement with the Quraish to attack the Muslims from within. Thus from allies they had turned foes. Therefore, when the besieging army took to flight and the Quraiza returned to their fortress, it was besieged by the Holy Prophet, for to leave such an internal enemy unpunished would have been a source of ever-present danger to the safety of the Muslim community. They remained besieged for twenty-five days, and then expressed their willingness to surrender on condition that they would submit to the sentence of punishment pronounced by Sa'd bin Mu'az. Had they trusted the Prophet, he would probably have given them the same punishment as he gave to the Qainuqa', viz. emigration, but Sa'd was exasperated by their treachery, and his judgment was that the fighting men should be put to death and the rest made captives. Three hundred men suffered death under this sentence, and their lands fell into the hands of the Muslims. To say that the Prophet dealt with them harshly is to ignore facts. Such treachery would meet with a similar punishment to-day.

1984 The land which you have not yet trodden refers to the foreign lands which are here promised to the Muslims and which they conquered later.

1985 The introduction of the subject of the Holy Prophet's simplicity in domestic life is most fitting here. The Muslims were now growing powerful and wealthier. The victory at Badr, and the possession of the lands and property of the Quraiza, had increased their wealth. It was most natural, in the circumstances, that the wives of the Prophet should desire to be furnished with better necessities of life than they had previously enjoyed. But just at this time we find a revelation enjoining the strictest simplicity of life upon them. These strictures could not emanate from an impostor, nor even from a man of the world whose power and wealth were increasing daily. If the Prophet had allowed his wives to share in the general prosperity of the community, there could not have been the least objection. But he received a revelation which deprived him and those most nearly related to him of those material benefits which others could easily acquire. The splendours of this world could be obtained, and were not forbidden to any Muslim, but such transitory vanities were not to be admitted within the household of God's Prophet. As he possessed the means, his wives would be allowed to depart with rich and ample gifts if such was their desire. This passage also throws light on the object of the Prophet's marriages, for if his object were sensual enjoyment, he could not have been ready to sacrifice the ease and comforts attendant upon mere carnal desire to the retention of that Spartan simplicity enjoined upon his household.

30 O wives of the Prophet! whoever of you commits an open indecency, the chastisement shall be increased to her doubly; and this is easy to Allah.[1986]

1986 It should be noted that not only are the Prophet's wives denied the comforts of life which were available to other Muslim ladies, but any indecency on their part brought double the ordinary punishment. Let the Christians ponder. Could this be the work of an impostor? In their case the punishment is increased because, being in the Prophet's house, they had a better chance to be guided aright and to pass their lives in the greatest purity. It should be noted that there is no actual occurrence of the least indecency on the part of any of the Prophet's wives.

1987 The double reward spoken of here means only greater reward, as the words honourable sustenance show. The greater reward is due to their having denied themselves the ordinary comforts of life, which they could elsewhere obtain, by remaining in the Prophet's house. See 1985. See also the last foot-note, where an increased punishment for them is spoken of in case of ordinary indecency. Compare also 1888.

1988 Though the injunction is given in particular to the wives of the Prophet, it is really a rule of life for all Muslim women, and promotes purity of heart and chastity in the relations between the sexes. They are not forbidden to speak to men, but as a safeguard against possible inclination of the heart to evil thoughts they are told not to indulge in soft and amorous conversation with the opposite sex.

1989 The means of purification are suggested in the previous verses: to observe the utmost simplicity of life, to avoid every indecency, and not to display their beauty to others. The uncleanness which Allah will thus take away is the uncleanness of the desire for worldly riches. As the Prophet himself was an exemplar to the faithful, so was his household to be an example of simplicity and purity to Muslim women.

It should also be noted that the Prophet's wives are here addressed as ahl-ul-bait, or the people of the household, they being primarily so, while his children and children's children may also be included. The use of the phrase ahl-ul-bait on the only two other occasions in the Holy Qur-án is to signify the wife, as in the case of Abraham's wife (11 : 73) and Amran's wife or Moses' mother (28 : 12), and this use also shows that it is the wife, who is mistress of the house, that is indicated by the phrase ahl-ul-bait. Thus under this verse the Prophet's children could only claim a sanctity in which his wives also shared.

1990 All commentators agree that this verse was revealed on the occasion when the Holy Prophet demanded Zainab, his cousin through his aunt, in marriage for Zaid, his adopted son.

Both Zainab and her brother were averse to this match, because Zaid was a freedman, and it was in obedience to this revelation that their scruples were overcome and Zainab accepted Zaid for her husband (Rz, Kf, JB). The verse has no connection with the subsequent events which brought about the divorce and Zainab's marriage with the Holy Prophet. It, moreover, shows that it was the Prophet himself who had arranged this marriage between Zainab and Zaid, and were it not in deference to his wishes, the lady would never have consented to the alliance.

1991 This verse consists of two distinct and separate parts, the first dealing with Zaid's divorce of Zainab, and the second, beginning with but when Zaid had accomplished, etc., with the Holy Prophet's marriage with Zainab. As Christian criticism leans in the direction of attaching too much importance to anything derogatory to the reputation of the Holy Prophet, a full explanation of the events in connection with this marriage is necessary. Zaid belonged to the tribe of Kalb, and was taken prisoner in childhood and sold as a slave at Mecca, where he was bought by Khadija's brother, who gave him over to his sister, and she in her turn presented him to the Holy Prophet, who, as was his wont, liberated him; but Zaid was so much attached to the Holy Prophet, that when the Prophet gave him the option to accompany his father to his home or to remain with him, Zaid chose the latter course. On account of his great attachment, Zaid was called the son of Muhammad, and he was one of the early converts to Islam. It is to these events that the opening words of the verse refer when they speak of Zaid as being one to whom Allah as well as the Prophet had shown favour.

Zainab was the daughter of the Prophet's own aunt, Umaima, daughter of Abdul Muttalib; she was one of the early converts to Islam, and the Holy Prophet proposed to her brother that she should be given in marriage to Zaid. Both brother and sister were averse to this match, and only yielded under pressure from the Holy Prophet, for which see the last note. It is related that they both desired that the Holy Prophet himself should marry Zainab (Rz), but the Prophet insisted that she should accept Zaid.

The marriage was, however, not a happy one. Zainab was harsh of temper, and she never liked Zaid on account of the stigma of slavery which attached to his name. Differences arose, and Zaid expressed a desire to the Holy Prophet of divorcing Zainab. The news was grieving for the Prophet, for it was he who had insisted upon the marriage, and he therefore advised Zaid not to divorce her He feared that people would object that a marriage which had been arranged by the Prophet was unsuccessful. It is to this circumstance that the words refer, and, you feared men, and Allah had a greater right that you

38 There is no harm in the Prophet doing that which Allah has ordained for him :[1992] such has been the course of Allah with respect to those who have gone before : and the command of Allah is a decree that is made absolute :

مَا كَانَ عَلَى النَّبِيِّ مِنْ حَرَجٍ فِيمَا فَرَضَ
اللَّهُ لَهُ سُنَّةَ اللَّهِ فِي الَّذِينَ خَلَوْا مِن
قَبْلُ وَكَانَ أَمْرُ اللَّهِ قَدَرًا مَّقْدُورًا ۝

should fear Him. It is also to the same matter that the words and you concealed in your soul what Allah would bring to light refer, for the Prophet did not like that the disagreements between Zainab and Zaid should become generally known. The Prophet's injunction to Zaid not to divorce his wife is contained in unmistakable terms in the Holy Qur-án. But it was all in vain, and Zaid at last divorced Zainab.

After she was divorced the Holy Prophet took her in marriage, that being the wish of the lady and her relatives before her marriage with Zaid, and the Prophet was, now that the marriage arranged by him proved unsuccessful, morally bound to accept the wishes of the lady and her relatives. Moreover, the Qur-án had declared against an adopted son being regarded as if he were a real son, and now there was an opportunity when the Holy Prophet could by his own example deal a death-blow to that custom. This reason is plainly given in the second part of the verse : We gave her to you as a wife, so that there should be no difficulty for the believers in respect of the wives of their adopted sons. The Qur-án does not give any other reason for the marriage.

This simple story is made the basis of a mean attack upon the Holy Prophet. It is stated that the Prophet, having seen Zainab by chance through a half-open door, was fascinated by her beauty, and that Zaid, having come to know of this, divorced her, and then she became the Prophet's wife. That Muir and Arnold, not to mention more prejudiced writers, accept this, only shows how far religious prejudice may carry "criticism." It is admitted that Zainab was the daughter of the Prophet's real aunt ; it is admitted that she was one of the early believers in Islam who fled to Medina ; it is admitted that the Prophet himself had arranged the marriage between Zaid and Zainab ; and finally it is admitted that Zainab desired, as did also her brother, before she was married to Zaid, that she should be taken in marriage by the Holy Prophet. What was it then which prevented the Holy Prophet from marrying her when she was a virgin ? Had he not seen her before ? He was so closely related to her that on the face of it such a supposition is absurd. Then, there was no seclusion of women before Zainab's marriage with the Prophet, a fact the truth of which is attested by Muir himself. Having not only seen the lady when she was a virgin, but knowing her full well on account of her close relationship to him and her early belief in Islam, while both the lady and her relatives were desirous that the Prophet should take her for a wife, what was it that made her beauty so unattractive to him when she was a virgin, while the same beauty seen through a half-open door at a later date so fascinated his heart that he ruthlessly disregarded the close spiritual and friendly relationship existing between Zaid and himself ? The story is so absurd that any man possessing ordinary common sense would unhesitatingly reject it, but Christian prejudice is too strong for even such unblushing calumny.

1992 It being lawful for the Prophet to marry Zainab, he should not have refrained merely for fear that some men might object to it. In fact, the Prophet's insisting at first that Zainab should marry Zaid, and her yielding to it at last only in deference to the Prophet's wishes, followed by disagreement and ultimate divorce, had given such a shock to Zainab that the only way to remove it was that the Prophet himself should yield to that which he had at first rejected, viz. the taking of Zainab in marriage for himself. It was out of sympathy with Zainab's feelings, and not from any desire on his own part, that the Prophet married her, for his own wishes, previous to her marriage with Zaid, were against it. But when she had shown her submission and faithfulness by accepting a match against her own desires, and it was Zaid now who would not retain her, the Prophet could no longer justifiably treat the lady's wishes with indifference.

39 Those who deliver the messages of Allah and fear Him, and do not fear any one but Allah; and Allah is sufficient to take account.[1993]
40 Muhammad is not the father of any of your men, but he is the Apostle of Allah and the seal of the prophets; and Allah is Cognizant of all things.[1994]

وَكَانَ اللّٰهُ بِكُلِّ شَيْءٍ عَلِيمًا ○

1993 The statement that those entrusted with Divine messages do not fear any one but Allah explains the statement of v. 37, where the Prophet is spoken of as fearing men, the significance, as shown in the foot-note, from the circumstances of the case, being that he did not fear men but for them, lest they should fall into an error.

1994 The word Khátam means primarily a seal and secondarily the end or the last part or portion of a thing, the latter being the primary significance of the word khátim. Though the Holy Prophet was admittedly the last of the prophets, and even history shows that no prophet appeared after him in the world, yet the Holy Qur-án has adopted the word khátam, and not khátim, because a deeper significance is carried in the phrase seal of the prophets than mere finality. In fact, it indicates finality combined with the perfection of the attributes of prophethood, along with a continuance among his followers of certain blessings of prophethood. He is the seal of the prophets because with him the object of prophethood, the manifestation of Divine will in laws which should guide humanity, was finally accomplished in the revelation of a perfect law in the Holy Qur-án, and he is also the seal of the prophets because certain favours bestowed on prophets were for ever to continue among his followers. The office of the prophet was only necessary to guide men, either by giving them a law or by removing the imperfections of a previously existing law, or by giving certain new directions to meet the requirements of the times, because the circumstances of earlier human society did not allow the revelation of a perfect law which should suit the requirements of different generations in different places. Hence prophets were constantly raised. But through the Holy Prophet a perfect law was given, suiting the requirements of all ages and all countries, and this law was guarded against all corruption, and the office of the prophet was therefore no more required. But this did not mean that the Divine favours bestowed on His chosen servants were to be denied to the chosen ones in future. Men did not need a new law, because they had a perfect law with them, but they did stand in need of receiving Divine favours. The highest of these favours is Divine inspiration, and it is recognized by Islam that the Divine Being speaks to His chosen ones now as He spoke in the past, just as He hears and sees as He heard and saw in the past. Human requirements may be satisfied in one way or another, but Divine attributes do not cease to work.

What is stated above is corroborated by a saying of the Holy Prophet: لم يبق من النبوة الا المبشرات i.e. nothing has remained of prophethood except the receiving of good news. Prophethood itself has gone, but one of its blessings remains, and shall exist for ever among the followers of the Holy Prophet. Hence also he is called their spiritual father, because he has made them to be for ever heirs to one of the blessings of prophethood. Thus, while prophethood terminated with the Holy Prophet, a phase of prophethood was made to continue for ever among the true followers of the Prophet.

1995 As this section deals with the marriages and divorces of the Holy Prophet, on account of which his opponents had greatly vilified him, it opens with a statement ascribing purity to the Divine Being, giving rise to the inference that no impurity can be ascribed to His Holy Prophet.

1996 This statement suggests another argument of the Holy Prophet's purity. It was by means of the transformation wrought by the Holy Prophet that his companions were led out of the darkness of ignorance. Could it then be that the man who purified others was himself impure? This argument obtains breadth and lucidity in the verses that follow.

1997 The words clearly imply that one who could give light to others and raise them from the depth of vice and immorality to the height of purity and perfection could not himself be in the darkness of impurity.

1998 That the previous verses imply the absurdity of the objections of opponents and critics on the score of his marriages is made clear here, for the Prophet is told not to have any anxiety on account of the annoying talk of his opponents, and to rely on Allah, Who will guard him from the evil consequences of their fault-finding. Compare 3 : 185.

49 O you who believe! when you marry the believing women, then divorce them before you touch them, you have in their case no term which you should reckon;[1999] so make some provision for them and send them forth a goodly sending forth.

1999 The reason for putting this ordinance here, in speaking of the Holy Prophet's marriages, seems to apply to the Holy Prophet's marriage with a woman named Asma, daughter of Numan Kindi; but before he went in to her she asked for a divorce, and the Prophet released her as she had desired. It is related that 'Umar decided against her being regarded as a wife of the Prophet.

2000 The marriages of the Holy Prophet have furnished his critics with the chief implement of attack, and the low-minded missionary has gone so far as to call him a voluptuary, although some of his own revered spiritual leaders were known to possess as many as a hundred wives. Therefore I give below full particulars regarding the Prophet's marriages. His first marriage was contracted while he was twenty-five years of age, and the widow Khadija whom he married was forty years old, i.e. fifteen years his senior. It was with her, and her alone, that he passed all the years of his youth and manhood until she died three years before the Hejira, when he was already an old man of fifty. This circumstance alone is sufficient to give the lie to those mean carpers who call him a voluptuary. After her death, while still at Mecca, he married Sauda and 'Ayesha, the latter of whom was his only virgin wife.

Then followed the flight to Medina, and subsequent to the Flight he had to fight many battles with his enemies, the Quraish, or such tribes as sided with the Quraish and persecuted the Muslims. The result of these battles was a great discrepancy between the number of males and females, and as his favourite followers fell in the field of battle fighting with his enemies, the care of their families devolved upon the Prophet and his surviving companions. In the battle of Badr fell Khunais, son of Huzafa, and the faithful 'Umar's daughter Ḥafṣa was left a widow. 'Umar offered her to 'Usman and Abu Bakr in turn, and she was at last married by the Holy Prophet in the third year of Hejira.

Abdulla, son of Jahsh, fell a martyr at Uhud, and his widow Zainab, daughter of Khuzaima, was taken in marriage by the Prophet in the same year. In the next year Abú Salma died, and his widow, Umm-i-Salma, was taken to wife by the Prophet. The events are narrated in the last section, leading to Zainab's divorce by Zaid; the Prophet married her in the fifth year of Hejira under circumstances already narrated. Umm-i-Habiba was one of his devoted followers who fled to Abyssinia with her husband 'Ubaidulla, who there became a Christian, and when he died his widow found comfort in being taken as a wife by the Holy Prophet in the seventh year of Hejira.

Besides these widows of his faithful followers whom it fell to his lot to take under his protection, the Prophet took three widows of his enemies in marriage, and in each case this step led to the union and pacification of a whole tribe. These three, Juwairiya, Maimoona, and Safiyya, he married in the years six and seven of Hejira. Regarding one of these, it is sufficient to note that when the Prophet took Juwairiya for a wife, over a hundred families of the tribe of Bani Mustalaq, to which tribe she belonged, were at once liberated by the Muslims.

Thus it will be seen that all the marriages of the Holy Prophet were due either to feelings of compassion for the widows of his faithful followers or to put a stop to bloodshed and ensure union with some tribe. Compare also 535, where it is shown that the permission for polygamy was given under similar circumstances; in fact, many of the companions had to follow the example of the Holy Prophet. For another reason see 2007. See also 1985 and 1989.

2001 Two interpretations have been given of these words: according to Abu Hanifa, the meaning is, the taking of a woman in marriage without assigning any dowry, if a woman offers herself in marriage to the Prophet, is a special privilege of the Holy Prophet; according to Shafa'i the meaning is that a woman married by the Holy Prophet shall not be married by any other person (Rz). This, if any, is the only special privilege allowed to the Holy Prophet. But as against this the Prophet was not allowed to divorce his wives, while his followers could divorce theirs if they liked. See 200.

2002 This verse must be read along with vv. 28 and 29, where a choice is given to the Prophet's wives to remain with him or to part. A similar choice is given here to the Prophet. And when his wives preferred to lead simple lives with him rather than seek worldly goods by leaving him, the Prophet was no less considerate for their feelings; for notwithstanding the choice given to him to retain such of his wives as he liked, he did not exercise this choice to the disadvantage of any one of them, but retained them all, as they had chosen to remain with him. A reference is, indeed, contained to vv. 28 and 29 in the words that they should be pleased, all of them, with what you give them, which indicate that this was altogether a new arrangement in which both parties were given free choice and both sacrificed all other considerations to the sanctity of the marriage-tie.

52 It is not allowed to you to take women afterwards,[2003] nor that you should change them for other wives,[2004] though their beauty be pleasing to you, except what your right hand possesses;[2005] and Allah is Watchful over all things.

Rules of Conduct in Domestic Relations

53, 54. Prophet's house and separating of female compartments. 55. Near relations are allowed. 56–58. False charges against the Prophet and believers.

53 O you who believe! do not enter the houses of the Prophet unless permission is given to you for a meal, not waiting for its cooking being finished—but when you are invited, enter, and when you have taken the food, then disperse—not seeking to listen to talk; surely this gives the Prophet trouble, but he forbears from you, and Allah does not forbear from the truth. And when you ask of them any goods, ask of them from behind a curtain;[2006] this is purer for your hearts and (for) their hearts; and it does not behove you that you should give trouble to the Apostle of Allah, nor that you

2003 When the Prophet's wives chose to remain with him, limitation was placed upon the Holy Prophet, viz. that he should not take any other wife. The Prophet did not contract any marriage after the seventh year of Hejira, when this verse was revealed.

2004 This is another limitation, viz. that it was not after this allowed to the Prophet to divorce any one of those who had chosen to remain with him.

2005 By those whom your right hand possesses are indicated the wives of the Prophet whom he had lawfully married.

2006 Christian bigotry discovers personal motives even in these beautiful rules of conduct. It must be borne in mind that any rule of conduct to be observed in relation to the Holy Prophet is really a rule that must be observed by all in social relations. The Qur-án teaches not only high morals, but also good manners, for it is meant for all men. In this verse it disparages the custom of giving trouble to the owner of a house who invites his friends to a dinner by coming before the appointed time or staying after dinner to indulge in idle talk. This is a rule which the Muslims were desired to observe towards one another as well as towards the Holy Prophet. Similarly, the rule relating to strangers speaking to women from behind a curtain applies equally to all, and is not to be observed only towards the Prophet's wives.

should marry his wives after him ever;[2007] surely this is grievous in the sight of Allah.

54 If you do a thing openly or do it in secret, then surely Allah is Cognizant of all things.

55 There is no blame on them in respect of their fathers, nor their sons, nor their brothers, nor their brothers' sons, nor their sisters' sons, nor their own women, nor of what their right hands possess; and be careful of (your duty to) Allah; surely Allah is a witness of all things.[2008]

56 Surely Allah and His angels bless the Prophet; O you who believe! call for (Divine) blessings on him and salute him with a (becoming) salutation.[2009]

57 Surely (as for) those who speak evil things[2010] of Allah and His Apostle, Allah has cursed them in this world and the hereafter, and He has prepared for them a chastisement bringing disgrace.

2007 It is difficult to see what jealous motive on the Prophet's part lies hidden beneath this injunction. With the exception of 'Ayesha, the Prophet's wives were all widows, Zainab alone being divorced. The respect due to the Prophet is alone a sufficient reason for the injunction, but a little consideration will show that the absence of the injunction would have led to difficulties. One of the objects which the Prophet's marriages served was the faithful communication of incidents that play an important part in the life of a man, but whose knowledge is only limited to a man's family circle. The remarriage of any of the Prophet's widows would have surely impaired this object to a great degree, as it would have had a possible effect upon the independence of opinion of the lady who entered into marital obligations with another man. Such incidents would have, moreover, given rise to schisms, which possibility assumes a high probability when the great schism dividing Islam into the Sunni and Shia sects is borne in mind, which was no doubt the result of a partisanship for the offspring of the Prophet's daughter Fatima.

2008 The verb ittaqīna (plural, fem. gen.) shows that the Prophet's wives are addressed.

2009 The invocation of Divine blessings on the Holy Prophet is mentioned in connection with the false imputations against him as regards his marital relations, the implication being that all such imputations would be brought to naught by the blessings which Allah would shower on him, showing that he is pure and holds communion with the fountain-head of purity.

2010 The word yu'zūn occurring here is from the root aza, which occurs in v. 48 in this chapter and in 3 : 185, and means the annoying talk of the unbelievers and the hypocrites in the form of false imputations against the Holy Prophet. This sense of the word is made very clear in the next verse, where the same word is used about the believers, and is explained in the concluding words of the verse as indicating a false accusation against them.

2011 The injunction to wear an over-garment is here given with the object that free women may be distinguished from slaves, so that they may not be annoyed and followed by men inclined to evil, who would come to know by this mark of distinction that these were pure and chaste women who would not tolerate insult or illtreatment (Rz).

2012 This and the following verse relate to hypocrites as well as to certain Jews who spread evil reports concerning the Muslims. Before the Prophet died Medina was cleared of these mischievous elements.

2013 Such has been the fate of the Jews all over the world, and such was also the fate of the hypocrites who were turned out of the mosque.

69 O you who believe! be not like those who spoke evil things of Moses, but Allah cleared him of what they said, and he was worthy of regard with Allah.[2015]
70 O you who believe! be careful of (your duty to) Allah and speak the right word,
71 He will put your deeds into a right state for you, and forgive you your faults; and whoever obeys Allah and His Apostle, he indeed achieves a mighty success.
72 Surely We offered the trust to the heavens and the earth and the mountains, but they refused to be unfaithful to it and feared from it, and man has turned unfaithful to it; surely he is unjust, ignorant;[2016]

يَا أَيُّهَا الَّذِينَ آمَنُوا لَا تَكُونُوا كَالَّذِينَ

2015 For a false imputation against Moses by his own people, and even his own sister; see Num. 12. As this chapter deals with false imputations, the case of a false imputation against the prophet in whose likeness the Holy Prophet came is cited, and attention is drawn to the fate of those who had taken part in the accusation. The false accusations against the Holy Prophet are all forged by his opponents, not by his followers, as in the case of Moses.

2016, see next page.

73 So[2017] Allah will chastise the hypocritical men and the hypocritical women and the polytheistic men and the polytheistic women, and Allah will turn (mercifully) to the believing men and the believing women, and Allah is Forgiving, Merciful.

لِّيُعَذِّبَ اللَّهُ الْمُنٰفِقِيْنَ وَالْمُنٰفِقٰتِ وَالْمُشْرِكِيْنَ وَالْمُشْرِكٰتِ وَيَتُوْبَ اللَّهُ عَلَى الْمُؤْمِنِيْنَ وَالْمُؤْمِنٰتِ وَكَانَ اللَّهُ غَفُوْرًا رَّحِيْمًا ۝

2016 حمل الامانة means he was unfaithful to it (LL). TA explains yaḥmilna-há as meaning takhun-há, i.e. they were unfaithful to it, and حملها الانسان as meaning خانها الانسان i.e. man was unfaithful to it. And the reason is thus given by Az, انها لم تحملها اى ادتها و كل من خان الامانة فقد حملها i.e. not bearing the trust signifies that they paid it back, and everyone who is unfaithful to a trust is said to have borne it (TA). The meaning is that nature is true to its laws which bring about its evolution, but man is not true to the laws on which depends his real happiness.

2017 The lám is the lám-ul-'áqibah, and is hence translated as meaning so or therefore, i.e. the result of being unfaithful to the Divine laws is that men suffer punishment. The hypocrites and the unbelievers are untrue to law and suffer, while the faithful submit to it and are happy.

CHAPTER XXXIV

THE SABA

(As-sabā)

REVEALED AT MECCA

(6 sections and 54 verses)

Abstract:

Sec. 1. Judgment is certain.
Sec. 2. Favours followed by retribution.
Sec. 3. A victory for the Muslims.
Sec. 4. The leaders of evil.
Sec. 5. Helplessness of the gods.
Sec. 6. Truth shall prosper.

The Title and context.

THE title of this chapter is taken from that of a city of the same name, i.e. Saba, which was situated in Yaman and was destroyed by a flood. The warning given in this chapter applies to all nations that are made great and prosperous but fall into luxurious habits. Ease engenders evil, which brings decay and ruin. Hence it was a warning to the Quraish, no doubt, but it was equally a warning to the Muslims, who were made masters of the earth but fell into the ways of ease and luxury and were now suffering the consequences. The warning to the Quraish is placed here appropriately, because the previous chapter deals with their hard struggle, actually carried on later, to destroy Islam.

Date of revelation and subject-matter.

It is a Meccan revelation and belongs to the early Meccan period. The first section asserts the truth of the judgment, a judgment the truth of which shall not be witnessed only in the life after death, but is clearly seen working in this very life. This judgment overtakes individuals as well as nations, and two instances are cited in the second section of how prosperous nations are swept out of existence when they fall into evil ways. Judgment shall therefore overtake the Quraish, and their false deities, we are told in the third section, shall not avail them in the least, and an encounter shall be brought about between the two parties, resulting in a victory for the Muslims. The fourth section describes the plight of the leaders of evil, the leaders and the followers blaming each other. The fifth section states that their very deities shall then be unable to help them, and that they shall be punished as deniers of truth have always been punished. The last section asserts that truth shall prosper and falsehood vanish before it.

SECTION 1

Judgment is certain

In the name of Allah, the Beneficent, the Merciful.

1 (All) praise is due to Allah, Whose is what is in the heavens and what is in the earth, and to Him is due (all) praise in the hereafter; and He is the Wise, the Aware.
2 He knows that which goes down into the earth and that which comes out of it, and that which comes down from the heaven and that which goes up to it; and He is the Merciful, the Forgiving.
3 And those who disbelieve say: The hour shall not come upon us. Say: Yea! by my Lord, the Knower of the unseen, it shall certainly come upon you; not the weight of an atom becomes absent from Him, in the heavens or in the earth, and neither less than that nor greater, but (all) is in a clear book,[2018]
4 That He may reward those who believe and do good; these it is for whom is forgiveness and an honourable sustenance.
5 And (as for) those who strive hard in opposing Our communications,[2019] these it is for whom is a painful chastisement of an evil kind.[2020]
6 And those to whom the knowledge has been given see that which has been revealed to you from your Lord, that is 2018 The verse states the immutable law that every deed is followed by a consequence, and nothing should be looked upon as too small to produce an effect. The two verses that follow are an illustration of this law: good meets with a good reward and evil with an evil punishment.

2019 Mu'ājizīn literally means fighting and contesting with another to render him unable to do a thing (LL).

2021 This is the ever-recurring argument of the Holy Qur-án. The unbelievers deny the last resurrection, the life after death, the sublime principle of the accountability of human actions, which form the only basis of high morals, and they are told that, as a proof of the truth of the resurrection and of their evil deeds producing evil consequences, they shall be punished in this very life for their mischiefs: they will be brought to disgrace in the land of which they are the masters, and they shall be overtaken by a punishment which will cover them so effectively that they will not be able to save themselves from it.

2022 Awwaba literally signifies he returned (LL), and applied to a company of men, it journeyed by day (LL), and metonymically ába or awwaba signifies he returned from disobedience to obedience or repeated the praises of God. The phrase يا جبال اوبى معه is usually interpreted as meaning O mountains, repeat with him the praises of Allah, by which some understand the praising of Allah by the mountains in the sense in which all inanimate objects are stated in the Holy Qur-án to glorify Allah, while others think that the mountains' echoing of David's loud praises is meant. victorious army (see 1387), and iron along with it shows that the reference is to the conquests of David; and the singing of praises by the mountains therefore carries the significance of yielding to David. Or the jibál may here signify mighty men (see 1604), who are thus commanded to march along with him to conquer the enemy.

2023 The making of the iron pliant to him signifies the extensive use of iron by him in his battles, and so do the coats of mail in the next verse.

2024 The subject of the previous verse is continued. David is enjoined to prepare himself and his army for severe battles, hence the necessity of coats of mail to save life. Some think that the commandment signifies that David should not take anything from the treasury for his own livelihood, and that he should earn his livelihood by an industry, such as the making of coats of mail (Kf). Sábighát is the plural of sábighah, which is an adjective meaning ample or vast, and is here considered as standing for the noun which it qualifies, for you say درع سابغة meaning an ample coat of mail. But you also say نعمة سابغة i.e. a complete benefit (TA-LL), and by اعمل سابغات may only be meant do perfect deeds, which I give in the margin. Sard means coats of mail or their rings (LL), and qaddara signifies he made it according to a measure or proportioned for it, and also he assigned a particular time for it (Q-LL). Rz favours the latter interpretation as being meant here, i.e., David is commanded not to employ his whole time in such occupations, for the real object is to do good.

2025 The significance is that Solomon's ships were made to traverse a month's journey in a day by favourable winds. For Solomon's navy, see 1 Kings 9 : 26. But it should be noted that ríḥ means also power or dominance or conquest (S, TA-LL), and therefore the meaning may be that Solomon's kingdom was so large that it was a month's journey in the east and a month's journey in the west.

2026 "Also he made a molten sea of ten cubits from brim to brim" (2 Chron. 4 : 2).

2027 These jinn were no other than the strangers whom Solomon subjected to his rule and forced into service. See 2 Chron. 2 : 12–18: "And he set threescore and ten thousand of them to be bearers of burdens, and fourscore thousand to be hewers in the mountains." Note that the jinn of this verse are the shayáṭín of 38 : 37, where it is said that "We subjected to Solomon the devils, every builder and diver," where the shayáṭín or devils are explained by the Qur-án itself to be no others than the builders and divers whom Solomon had forced into labour. In the first volume, Tabrezi in his commentary on Himasa remarks: "Abu Ula

13 They made for him what he pleased of fortresses and images, and bowls (large) as watering-troughs and cooking-pots that will not move from their place;[2028] give thanks, O family of David! and very few of My servants are grateful.

14 But when We decreed death for him, naught showed them his death but a creature of the earth that ate away his staff; and when it fell down, the jinn came to know plainly that if they had known the unseen, they would not have tarried in abasing torment.[2029]

15 Certainly there was a sign for Saba in their abode: two gardens on the right and the left; eat of the sustenance of your Lord and give thanks to Him: a good land and a Forgiving Lord!

16 But they turned aside, so We sent upon them a torrent of which the rush could not be withstood, and in place of their two gardens We gave to them two gardens yielding bitter fruit and (growing) tamarisk and a few lote-trees.[2030] says the Arabs speak of the jinn frequently, likening a man who is clever in executing affairs to the jinni and the shaitán or devil, and hence they say his jinn is gone when they mean that he became weak and abased." This explanation, along with that which the Qur-án itself affords, settles the question of the jinn and the devils employed by Solomon.

2028 For graving of the cherubims on the walls see 2 Chron. 3 : 7 ; for casting of oxen, 2 Chron. 4 : 3 ; for making of lavers, pots, basins, etc., 2 Chron. 4 : 11, 14.

2029 The reference in the creature of the earth that ate away his staff is to his son's weak rule, under whom the kingdom of Solomon went to pieces. It appears that Solomon's successor, Rehoboam, led a life of luxury and ease, and instead of acting on the advice of the older men, he yielded to the pleasure-seeking wishes of his companions (1 Kings 12 : 13), and it is to his luxurious habits and easy mode of life that the Holy Qur-án refers when it calls him a creature of the earth. The eating away of his staff signifies the disruption of the kingdom. The jinn, as already remarked, mean the rebellious tribes who had been reduced to subjection by Solomon, and who remained in subjection to the Israelites for a time, until the kingdom was shattered. This instance, as well as the one following, contained a warning for the Muslims as to the result of falling into luxury and ease, by which, however, they benefited little; the ultimate fate of the respective kingdoms of Umayyads and Abbasides was the same as that of Solomon's kingdom. See also 2141.

flood are historical facts, and happened in about the first or second century of our era" (Palmer's note).

It is usual to speak of two gardens, for large cultivated areas were bounded by a garden on each side.

2031 The cities were so close to each other that one could be seen from the other, or they were conspicuous from the road. It is an indication of the great prosperity of the country. The blessed towns are the towns of Syria with which they carried on trade.

2032 It is not necessary that they should have thus prayed with their tongues. On the other hand, it may be a description of their actual condition, i.e. they were not grateful for the blessings and fell into evil ways, which resulted in punishment overtaking them.

Some commentators think that the petition was actually made, the object being that they might get advantage from the poor, who would be obliged to remain longer on the road (JB).

Speaking of the trade of Yaman with Syria, Muir says: "The commerce assumed great dimensions and enriched the nation . . . and, which is remarkable, the number of stages of Hadhramant to Ayla, given . . . as seventy, exactly corresponds with the number at the present day." The reference in the previous verse to the appointment of the journey might be to these stages.

2033 It refers to the helplessness of the supposed gods to assist their votaries when distress overtakes them.

2034 The meaning is that as surely as you are in manifest error, as surely we are in the right direction.

2035 This is a prophecy which was fulfilled in the first decisive battle which clearly decided the issue between the Muslims and the unbelievers.

2036 This shows that the unbelievers realized that the above verses contained a prophecy.

2037 A day is equal to a year in prophetic language. The battle of Badr took place after the first year of Flight had passed away. Elsewhere the same question is answered by the words: "Maybe part of that which you hasten on will come to you after I am gone." (See the alternative significance of 27:72 given in the margin.)

2038 They reject not only the Qur-án but also previous revelation, because it contains prophecies about the appearance of the Holy Prophet.

37–39. How is nearness to Allah attained. 40–42. Their gods deny their worship and are unable to help. 43–45. Rejection of truth is always punished.

37 And not your wealth, nor your children, are the things which bring you near Us in station, but whoever believes and does good, these it is for whom is a double reward for what they do, and they shall be secure in the highest places.[2040]

38 And (as for) those who strive in opposing Our communications, they shall be caused to be brought to the chastisement.

39 Say: Surely my Lord amplifies the means of subsistence for whom He pleases of His servants and straitens (them) for whom (He pleases), and whatever thing you spend, He exceeds it in reward,[2041] and He is the best of Sustainers.

40 And on the day when He will gather them all together, then will He say to the angels: Did these worship you?

2039 This expression is always used to signify that Allah intends now to give ample means of subsistence to the poorer party and to strengthen them against the wealthy transgressors. Because they took pride in their wealth, as the previous verse shows, they are told that even this shall be taken away from them.

2040 Not only in the highest places in paradise, but also in the highest places in this life, a truth which finds abundant illustration in the lives of the early Muslims.

2041 Akhlafa is used in the sense of exceeding or surpassing so as to leave another thing behind (from khalf, meaning behind). You say أخلف البازل i.e. he (a camel) exceeded in age the bâzil, which is generally one that has entered his ninth year (LL). Hence yukhlifuhû here signifies that Allah gives him such a great reward as to leave behind what he had spent in His way. What the companions of the Prophet gave in Allah's way was given back to them manifold.

41 They shall say: Glory be to Thee! Thou art our Guardian, not they; nay! they worshipped the jinn; most of them were believers in them.[2042]

2042 Compare this with the last section, and it will be clear that the very persons mentioned there as the proud ones are spoken of here as the jinn.

2043 That is, no book was ever given nor any warner ever raised that should teach polytheism; or the meaning may be that whereas warners appeared all about Arabia, Mecca had not yet seen one.

2044 That is, in power or in material prosperity the Quraish do not stand comparison with many of the early nations.

2045 The truth may stand for the Unity and the falsehood for polytheism, so that it is here declared that the doctrine of the Unity shall be established in Mecca and idol-worship shall never again find access thereto. Or, truth and falsehood carry the ordinary wider significance. The truth of this prophecy shines out in full brilliance during the last thirteen centuries, and affords a certain evidence of the truth of the revelation of the Qur-án. Compare 17:81: "Say: The truth has come and the falsehood vanished, and falsehood is a vanishing thing."

ما يبدی الباطل و ما يعيد is explained variously. Bd says the expression is taken from the annihilation of a people, for when they perish there remains not for them ibda', i.e. originating a thing, nor i'ádah, i.e. reproducing a thing.

2046 They were seized upon at Badr and again at Mecca.

2047 For death shall have then removed them into the other world.

2048 Their conjectures that the Prophet will not be successful have no value, as they have no access to the unseen.

2049 Indeed, no punishment is greater than failure to attain that which a man desires most eagerly. This is the real hell.

Abstract:

Sec. 1. Truth of the Divine promise.
Sec. 2. Truth shall prevail.
Sec. 3. A new generation will be raised.
Sec. 4. Peace and safety promised to the faithful.
Sec. 5. Punishment is due to evil deeds.

The Title and context.

THE title of this chapter is taken from the Divine attribute mentioned in its opening verse, what is stated in the chapter being really a manifestation of this attribute, because the Originator of the heavens and the earth sweeps away the old order and generates a new one. If truth must prosper, as the previous chapter upholds, a new generation must be raised to propagate that truth.

Date of revelation and subject-matter.

The date of the revelation of this chapter is approximately the same as that of the previous one. In the first section it upholds the truth of the Divine promise with which the last chapter ends, and in the second reasserts the promise that truth will prevail. The third section refers to the rising of a new generation, which must take the place of the old generation that has proved itself unfit to promote the cause of truth and justice in the world. The section that follows promises peace, safety, success, and abundance to the believers, while the last section reiterates the law that punishment is due to evil deeds.

2 Whatever Allah grants to men of (His) mercy, there is none to withhold it, and what He withholds there is none to send it forth after that, and He is the Mighty, the Wise.

3 O men! call to mind the favour of Allah on you; is there any Creator besides Allah who gives you sustenance from the heaven and the earth? There is no god but He; whence are you then turned away?

7 (As for) those who disbelieve, they shall have a severe chastisement, and (as for) those who believe and do good, they shall have forgiveness and a great reward.

2050 Angels in the Qur-án as well as in the Bible are the immaterial beings who act as ministers to execute the orders of Providence or to execute His judgment, and malak is derived from the root alaka, meaning he communicated a message. The representation of angels as possessing wings is met with in sacred history, but the janáḥ or wing of an angel by no means indicates the fore-limbs in a bird which fit it for flight. It is a symbol of power enabling these immaterial beings to execute their functions, and in Arabic the word janáḥ stands for power, as you say هو مقصوص الجناح (literally, he has the wing clipped), meaning, he is one who lacks strength or power or ability, or he is impotent (TA-LL).

Truth shall prevail

8. Prophet not to grieve for prevalence of error. 9. Those dead spiritually will be quickened. 10. All plans to destroy truth will perish. 11. Great things have small beginnings. 12. Good and bad doctrines likened to sweet and salt seas. 13. Day of truth follows night of ignorance. 14. False gods will not help.

8 What! is he whose evil deed is made fairseeming to him so much so that he considers it good? Now surely Allah makes err whom He

9 And Allah is He who sends the winds so they raise a cloud, then We drive it on to a dead country, and therewith We give life to the earth after its death; even so is the quickening.

10 Whoever desires honour, then to Allah belongs the honour wholly. To Him do ascend the goodly words; and (as for) the goodly deed, He exalts it; and (as for) those who plan evil deeds, they shall have a severe chastisement; and (as for) their plan, it shall perish.[2051]

11 And Allah created you of 2051 The ultimate triumph of truth and the destruction of falsehood could not be expressed in clearer words than those used in this verse. It begins with the statement that those who wish for honour and not disgrace should turn to Allah; it then asserts that good words or doctrines ascend to Him, i.e. prosper and bear fruit, and that good deeds will be exalted. So far as to the triumph of truth and the success of the faithful. It then states that those who invent evil plans to destroy the truth shall suffer a severe punishment, and then, to expel all doubts, adds that all these plans shall perish and prove ineffectual.

2052 The verse first draws attention to the small beginning from which man is made,

A New Generation will be raised

15–18. The righteous shall be masters. 19–23. Good and evil cannot be treated alike. 24–26. How warners are received.

15 O men! you are they who stand in need of Allah, and Allah is He who is the Self-sufficient, the Praised One.

thus giving a hint that the seed of the truth is sown and generates in a similar manner. The latter portion, relating to Divine knowledge of what is borne or brought forth by a female, and of the lengthening and diminishing of a man's life, seems to suggest that the children of the opponents will be believers in truth, as will be also those from among the opponents themselves whose lives are lengthened. The concluding words, this is easy to Allah, corroborate this interpretation.

2053 The Arabic word qiṭmīr stands for the white point in the back of a date-stone.

2054 This is also a prophecy relating to the eventual helpless state of the unbelievers and their leaders.

16 If He please, He will take you off and bring a new generation.

17 And this is not hard to Allah.

2055 This broad doctrine that a prophet was raised among every nation is taught repeatedly in the Qur-án, and, curiously enough, it is met with in the earlier revelation at Mecca as well as the later revelation at Medina. This great truth, which had remained hidden for thousands of years from the wisest men of the world, had shone upon an unlearned Arabian who could not have even known what nations then existed and what scriptures they possessed. This broad doctrine alone could form the basis of the universality of a Divine message to the 2056 Tijárah literally signifies a buying and selling for gain, hence I render the word here as meaning gain.

2057 Note that as the Holy Qur-án recognizes that prophets were raised in every nation, so it claims that previous revelation contains prophecies which have been fulfilled in the advent of the Holy Prophet. And this is an early Meccan revelation.

2058 Among those who are chosen to convey the message contained in the Divine revelation to others are three kinds of men; firstly, those who in following the Book have to make their souls suffer loss, because their souls are not inclined to it, and they have to go against their inclinations in following the truth; secondly, those who take a middle course; and thirdly, those whose very inclinations lead them to follow the truth.

2059 The promise refers to this life as well as to the next. See 1686, where it is shown that the Caliph 'Umar made Suraqa wear Kisra's bracelets of gold.

2060 Here is drawn a true picture of paradise: Who has made grief to depart from us. This shows that freedom from grief and anxiety is the real bliss of paradise. The repeated promise to the righteous that they shall have no fear nor shall they grieve, as frequently stated in the Holy Qur-án, expresses the same truth.

2061 Note this further description of the Muslim's paradise, a place where there is no grief, and where toil and fatigue no more afflict a man; it is all peace and satisfaction and the highest bliss. The idea of a spiritual paradise is expressed here in the clearest terms.

2062 It is as much true of the unbelievers of Arabia as of the Muslims themselves, who have gradually abandoned the truth as revealed in the Qur-án, and have witnessed their own doom as other nations witnessed theirs before them. But as the Qur-án is there safe and intact, they can once more rise to greatness if they firmly adhere to it.

44 Have they not travelled in the land and seen how was the end of those before them while they were stronger than these in power? And Allah is not such that any thing in the heavens or in the earth should escape Him; surely He is Knowing, Powerful.

45 And were Allah to punish men for what they earn, He would not leave on the back of it any creature,[2063] but He respites them till an appointed term; so when their doom shall come, then surely Allah is Seeing with respect to His servants.

CHAPTER XXXVI

YÁSÍN

REVEALED AT MECCA

(5 sections and 83 verses)

Abstract:

Sec. 1. Truth of the Qur-án.
Sec. 2. Its confirmation.
Sec. 3. Signs of its truth.
Sec. 4. The righteous and the wicked.
Sec. 5. The kingdom of Islam.

The Title, context, and date of revelation.

THE title of this chapter is taken from the initial letters Yá, sín, in which the Holy Prophet is addressed. Like the two preceding chapters and the three that follow, this chapter prophesies that Islam shall be established in the land and triumph over all opposition. The six chapters may be dealt with as forming a single group. The first chapter of this group opens with the words All praise is due to Allah, and the last closes with exactly the same words, thus showing that Allah is praised for the triumph of truth. This chapter was decidedly revealed at Mecca, and belongs, if not to the early, at least to the middle Meccan period; and the opinion of Muir, who considers it to have been revealed about the tenth or the eleventh year of the mission of the Holy Prophet, must be rejected. Some critics are in the habit of assigning this or that verse of a Meccan revelation to Medina, merely because they think that some interpolated or imaginary story must be associated with that verse. Such opinion is often unwarranted, and has no testimony to support it. The practice of referring to Medinian revelation one or two verses of a chapter revealed in the early or middle Meccan period seems to me to be of doubtful accuracy. Similarly, the mere fact that a verse of a Meccan revelation speaks of zakát, i.e. the poor-rate, or of the Jews, does not entitle us to assign it to Medina.

Subject-matter.

This chapter upholds the truth of the Holy Qur-án, which is asserted in the first section. The second speaks in parable of its confirmation in earlier revelation. The third draws attention to certain signs of its truth. The fourth shows that its accepters and rejecters shall be dealt with distinctly, so that their reward and requital shall be an evidence of the truth of the Qur-án. The fifth and the concluding section draws attention first to decrepitude following youth, thus referring to the decay of the powerful nation of opponents, and concludes by laying stress upon the great power of the Almighty, to Whom belongs the kingdom of heaven and earth, and Who could at any moment create the like of what He has already created, the allusion being to the establishment of the kingdom of Islam.

SECTION 1

Truth of the Qur-án

1–6. Qur-án is a revelation giving warning. 7–10. Unbelievers are indifferent. 11–12. Believers and unbelievers.

In the name of Allah, the Beneficent, the Merciful.

بِسْمِ اللّٰهِ الرَّحْمٰنِ الرَّحِيْمِ

1 O man![2064]

يٰسٓ ۚ

a 2099. 2 Consider[a] the Qur-án full of wisdom;

وَالْقُرْاٰنِ الْحَكِيْمِ ۙ

Ar. thou art. 3 Most surely you are one of the apostles,

اِنَّكَ لَمِنَ الْمُرْسَلِيْنَ ۙ

4 On a right way.

عَلٰى صِرَاطٍ مُّسْتَقِيْمٍ ؕ

5 A revelation of the Mighty, the Merciful,

تَنْزِيْلَ الْعَزِيْزِ الرَّحِيْمِ ۙ

Ar. thou mayest. 6 That you may warn a people whose fathers were not warned, so they are heedless.[2065]

لِتُنْذِرَ قَوْمًا مَّآ اُنْذِرَ اٰبَآؤُهُمْ فَهُمْ غٰفِلُوْنَ

7 Certainly the word has proved true of most of them, so they do not believe.[2066]

لَقَدْ حَقَّ الْقَوْلُ عَلٰٓى اَكْثَرِهِمْ فَهُمْ لَا يُؤْمِنُوْنَ

8 Surely We have placed chains on their necks, and these reach up to their chins, so they have their heads raised aloft.[2067]

اِنَّا جَعَلْنَا فِيْٓ اَعْنَاقِهِمْ اَغْلٰلًا فَهِيَ اِلَى الْاَذْقَانِ فَهُمْ مُّقْمَحُوْنَ

9 And We have made before them a barrier and a barrier behind them, then We have covered them over so that they do not see.[2068]

وَجَعَلْنَا مِنْۢ بَيْنِ اَيْدِيْهِمْ سَدًّا وَّمِنْ خَلْفِهِمْ سَدًّا فَاَغْشَيْنٰهُمْ فَهُمْ لَا يُبْصِرُوْنَ

2064 According to I'Ab, the meaning of yásín in the dialect of Tayy is yá-insán-u, i.e. O man! or O perfect man! Kf and AH cite an instance of a similar abbreviation in which one of the two words is retained, while the other is represented by one of its prominent letters, as م الله for ايمن الله meaning an oath by Allah. Thus yá, meaning o, is retained in full, while the word insán is represented by sín. There is almost a consensus of opinion that the reference in this abbreviation is to the Holy Prophet himself; thus we find it generally said: the chapter of Yásín, on whom be peace and blessings.

2065 The first warning of the Prophet was for the Meccans, who had had no prophet among them. That the Prophet was also a warner for other nations is asserted clearly in many places; see, for instance, 25 : 1 : "Blessed is He who sent down the Distinction upon His servant that he may be a warner to the nations."

Ar. thou.
a 20.
Ar. thou canst.

10 And it is alike to them whether you warn them or warn them not: they do not believe.[a]

11 You can only warn him who follows the reminder and fears the Beneficent God in secret; so announce to him forgiveness and an honourable reward.

12 Surely We give life to the dead, and We write down what they have sent before and their footprints, and We have recorded everything in a clear writing.[2069]

وَسَوَآءٌ عَلَيْهِمْ ءَأَنذَرْتَهُمْ أَمْ لَمْ تُنذِرْهُمْ

SECTION 2

Confirmation of the Truth

13–19. A parable of prophets following one another. 20–27. The believer is rewarded. 28–32. Mockers are overtaken with punishment.

13 And set out to them a parable of the people of the town, when the messengers came to it.

14 When We sent to them two, they rejected both of them, then We strengthened (them) with a third, so they said: Surely we are messengers to you.[2070]

15 They said:[2071] You are naught but mortals like ourselves, nor has the Beneficent God revealed any thing: you only lie.[2072]

وَٱضْرِبْ لَهُم مَّثَلًا أَصْحَٰبَ ٱلْقَرْيَةِ
إِذْ جَآءَهَا ٱلْمُرْسَلُونَ ۝
إِذْ أَرْسَلْنَآ إِلَيْهِمُ ٱثْنَيْنِ فَكَذَّبُوهُمَا
فَعَزَّزْنَا بِثَالِثٍ فَقَالُوٓا إِنَّآ إِلَيْكُم
مُّرْسَلُونَ ۝
قَالُوا مَآ أَنتُمْ إِلَّا بَشَرٌ مِّثْلُنَا وَمَآ أَنزَلَ
ٱلرَّحْمَٰنُ مِن شَىْءٍ إِنْ أَنتُمْ إِلَّا تَكْذِبُونَ ۝

2069 What they send before are their deeds, and their footprints are the marks they leave behind for others to follow.

2070 It should be noted that this is called a parable in the previous verse; therefore it is an error to name a particular town and three messengers who should have gone together thereto. The parable is set forth only to point out the truth of the Holy Prophet. The two messengers sent before are Moses and Jesus, both of whom clearly prophesied the advent of the Holy Prophet, and the third, with whom they are strengthened, is no other than the Holy Prophet himself, the fulfilment of prophecy in whose person without doubt strengthened the truth of previous revelation. The conversion of Arabia and its reclamation from idolatry had been tried both by the followers of Moses and Jesus, and both had failed, and a third messenger was now sent.

2071 The message of the prophets to their people is the general message of all prophets, and the reply of the people is the general reply of the people, which is in consonance with the parable.

2072 Note that the people here deny all revelation; they rejected previous revelation as well as the revelation of the Holy Prophet.

16 They said: Our Lord knows that we are most surely messengers to you.

قَالُوْا رَبُّنَا يَعْلَمُ اِنَّآ اِلَيْكُمْ لَمُرْسَلُوْنَ ○

17 And nothing devolves on us but a clear deliverance (of the message).

وَمَا عَلَيْنَآ اِلَّا الْبَلٰغُ الْمُبِيْنُ ○

18 They said: Surely we augur evil from you:[2073] if you do not desist, we will certainly stone you, and there shall certainly afflict you a painful chastisement from us.

Or, revile.

قَالُوْٓا اِنَّا تَطَيَّرْنَا بِكُمْ لَئِنْ لَّمْ تَنْتَهُوْا
لَنَرْجُمَنَّكُمْ وَلَيَمَسَّنَّكُمْ مِّنَّا عَذَابٌ اَلِيْمٌ ○

19 They said: Your evil fortune is with you: what! if you are reminded![2074] Nay, you are an extravagant people.

قَالُوْا طَآئِرُكُمْ مَّعَكُمْ اَئِنْ ذُكِّرْتُمْ بَلْ
اَنْتُمْ قَوْمٌ مُّسْرِفُوْنَ ○

20 And from the remote part of the city there came a man running;[2075] he said: O my people! follow the messengers:

وَجَآءَ مِنْ اَقْصَا الْمَدِيْنَةِ رَجُلٌ يَّسْعٰى
قَالَ يٰقَوْمِ اتَّبِعُوا الْمُرْسَلِيْنَ ○

21 Follow him who does not ask you for reward, and they are the followers of the right course:

اتَّبِعُوْا مَنْ لَّا يَسْـَٔلُكُمْ اَجْرًا وَّهُمْ مُّهْتَدُوْنَ ○

PART XXIII

22 And what reason have I that I should not serve Him Who brought me into existence? and to Him you shall be brought back:

وَمَالِيَ لَآ اَعْبُدُ الَّذِيْ فَطَرَنِيْ وَ
اِلَيْهِ تُرْجَعُوْنَ ○

23 What! shall I take besides Him gods whose intercession, if the Beneficent God should desire to afflict me with a harm, shall not avail me aught, nor shall they be able to deliver me?

ءَاَتَّخِذُ مِنْ دُوْنِهٖٓ اٰلِهَةً اِنْ يُّرِدْنِ الرَّحْمٰنُ
بِضُرٍّ لَّا تُغْنِ عَنِّيْ شَفَاعَتُهُمْ شَيْـًٔا وَّ
لَا يُنْقِذُوْنِ ○

24 In that case I shall most surely be in clear error:

اِنِّيْٓ اِذًا لَّفِيْ ضَلٰلٍ مُّبِيْنٍ ○

2073 Distress in one form or other always overtakes a people when a prophet appears among them. The law is elsewhere stated in the Holy Qur-án thus: "And certainly We sent apostles to nations before you, then We seized them with distress and affliction in order that they might humble themselves" (6 : 42). It is to this distress that the rejecters of apostles refer.

2074 They are told that distress is not due to the Prophet's advent, but is the result of their own evil deeds, and the Prophet does no more than remind them and warn them of the consequences of their evil deeds.

2075 This man represents the believer in the parable. Every prophet has testimony borne to his truth by one from among the people themselves. Thus the Holy Qur-án speaks of a believer from among the people of Pharaoh (40 : 28), and Joseph of Arimathæa believed in and helped Jesus. The Holy Prophet Muhammad had such a follower in Abú Bakr, who was the first to believe, while the others rejected.

25 Surely I believe in your Lord, therefore hear me.
26 It was said: Enter the garden.[2076] He said: O would that my people had known 27 Of that on account of which my Lord has forgiven me and made me of the honoured ones!
28 And We did not send down upon his people after him any hosts from heaven, nor do We ever send down.[2077]
29 It was naught but a single cry, and lo! they were still.[2078]
30 Alas for the servants! there comes not to them an apostle but they mock at him.
31 Do they not consider how many of the generations have We destroyed before them, because they do not turn to them?[2079]
32 And all of them shall surely be brought before Us.

SECTION 3

Signs of its Truth

33–36. The dead earth is quickened. 37–40. Day follows night. 41–45. Opponents are dealt with mercifully. 46–50. But they reject, hence the punishment.

33 And a sign to them is the dead earth: We give life to it and bring forth from it grain so they eat of it.[2080]

وَءَايَةٞ لَّهُمُ ٱلۡأَرۡضُ ٱلۡمَيۡتَةُ ۚ أَحۡيَيۡنَٰهَا وَ
أَخۡرَجۡنَا مِنۡهَا حَبّٗا فَمِنۡهُ يَأۡكُلُونَ ۝

2076 It is a promise to the believer that he shall enjoy bliss and be successful. There is not a word to show that the man is killed. On the other hand, the next verse shows that he is made to possess honour in the world.

2077 This removes a misconception with regard to the coming of punishment. Hosts are not sent down from above to chastise the wicked, but causes are brought into existence on this very earth.

2079 That is, many generations have been destroyed before them because they did not turn to the apostles.

2080 Quickening of the dead earth is again and again compared to the transformation which was to be brought about by the Holy Qur-án. How dead the earth, and particularly

34 And We make therein gardens of palms and grapevines, and We make springs to flow forth in it,

وَجَعَلْنَا فِيهَا جَنّٰتٍ مِّنْ نَّخِيلٍ وَّأَعْنَابٍ وَّفَجَّرْنَا فِيهَا مِنَ الْعُيُونِ ۝

35 That they may eat of the fruit thereof, and their hands did not make it; will they not then be grateful ?

لِيَأْكُلُوا مِنْ ثَمَرِهٖ وَمَا عَمِلَتْهُ أَيْدِيهِمْ أَفَلَا يَشْكُرُونَ ۝

36 Glory be to Him Who created pairs of all things, of what the earth grows, and of their kind and of what they do not know.[2081]

سُبْحٰنَ الَّذِي خَلَقَ الْأَزْوَاجَ كُلَّهَا مِمَّا تُنْبِتُ الْأَرْضُ وَمِنْ أَنْفُسِهِمْ وَمِمَّا لَا يَعْلَمُونَ ۝

37 And a sign to them is the night: We draw forth from it the day, then lo! they are in the dark ;[2082]

وَآيَةٌ لَّهُمُ الَّيْلُ نَسْلَخُ مِنْهُ النَّهَارَ فَإِذَا هُمْ مُّظْلِمُونَ ۝

38 And the sun runs on to a term appointed for it; that is the ordinance of the Mighty, the Knowing.[2083]

Or, the end of its course.

وَالشَّمْسُ تَجْرِي لِمُسْتَقَرٍّ لَّهَا ذٰلِكَ تَقْدِيرُ الْعَزِيزِ الْعَلِيمِ ۝

39 And (as for) the moon, We have ordained for it stages till it becomes again as an old dry palm branch.[2084]

وَالْقَمَرَ قَدَّرْنٰهُ مَنَازِلَ حَتّٰى عَادَ كَالْعُرْجُونِ الْقَدِيمِ ۝

40 Neither is it allowable to the sun that it should overtake the moon, nor can the night outstrip the day; and all float on in a sphere.[2085]

لَا الشَّمْسُ يَنْبَغِي لَهَا أَنْ تُدْرِكَ الْقَمَرَ وَلَا الَّيْلُ سَابِقُ النَّهَارِ وَكُلٌّ فِي فَلَكٍ يَسْبَحُونَ ۝

41 And a sign to them is that We bear their offspring in the laden ship.

وَآيَةٌ لَّهُمْ أَنَّا حَمَلْنَا ذُرِّيَّتَهُمْ فِي الْفُلْكِ الْمَشْحُونِ ۝

42 And We have created for them the like of it, what they will ride on.

وَخَلَقْنَا لَهُمْ مِّنْ مِّثْلِهٖ مَا يَرْكَبُونَ ۝

Arabia, was at the advent of the Holy Prophet, it is impossible to describe within the limits of a foot-note. If, then, the physical world showed the working of the Divine law that life is restored to the earth after its death, why should not the same law work in the spiritual world?

2081 This verse no doubt establishes a great scientific principle that pairs exist in all creation. The Arabs certainly did not know this.

2082 The night of ignorance must now pass away; for as in the physical world night follows day and day follows night, so in the spiritual world light is followed by the darkness of ignorance and the latter again gives place to light.

2083 This statement may refer to the sun's apparent orbit in the heavens, represented on the earth by the ecliptic that is bounded by the tropics of Cancer and Capricorn; or it may refer to the sun's revolution in space, or to the time when it may cease to give light.

2084 These words only picture the apparent resemblance of the moon in its slenderness and curvature to an old dry palm branch. Even such is the case of truth, which seems at first to be insignificant, but soon shines forth like a full moon.

2085 Even truth and falsehood have their courses. As night must disappear with the rise of the day, so falsehood must vanish before the light of truth. The flotation of the heavenly bodies in their spheres was also a statement beyond the ken of an Arabian of 1300 years ago.

43 And if We please, We can drown them, then there Or, succour. shall be no succourer for them, nor shall they be rescued,[2086]

وَإِن نَّشَأْ نُغْرِقْهُمْ فَلَا صَرِيخَ لَهُمْ وَلَا هُمْ يُنقَذُونَ ۝

44 But (by) mercy from Us and for enjoyment till a time.

إِلَّا رَحْمَةً مِّنَّا وَمَتَاعًا إِلَىٰ حِينٍ ۝

45 And when it is said to them: Guard against what is before you and what is behind you, that mercy may be had on you.[2087]

وَإِذَا قِيلَ لَهُمُ اتَّقُوا مَا بَيْنَ أَيْدِيكُمْ وَمَا خَلْفَكُمْ لَعَلَّكُمْ تُرْحَمُونَ ۝

46 And there comes not to them a communication of the communications of their Lord but they turn aside from it.

وَمَا تَأْتِيهِم مِّنْ آيَةٍ مِّنْ آيَاتِ رَبِّهِمْ إِلَّا كَانُوا عَنْهَا مُعْرِضِينَ ۝

47 And when it is said to them, Spend out of what Allah has given you, those who disbelieve say to those who believe: Shall we feed him whom, if Allah please, He could feed? you are in naught but clear error.[2088]

وَإِذَا قِيلَ لَهُمْ أَنفِقُوا مِمَّا رَزَقَكُمُ اللَّهُ قَالَ الَّذِينَ كَفَرُوا لِلَّذِينَ آمَنُوا أَنُطْعِمُ مَن لَّوْ يَشَاءُ اللَّهُ أَطْعَمَهُ إِنْ أَنتُمْ إِلَّا فِي ضَلَالٍ مُّبِينٍ ۝

48 And they say: When will this threat come to pass, if you are truthful?

وَيَقُولُونَ مَتَىٰ هَٰذَا الْوَعْدُ إِن كُنتُمْ صَادِقِينَ ۝

49 They wait not for aught but a single cry which will overtake them while they yet contend with one another.

مَا يَنظُرُونَ إِلَّا صَيْحَةً وَاحِدَةً تَأْخُذُهُمْ وَهُمْ يَخِصِّمُونَ ۝

50 So they shall not be able to make a bequest, nor shall they return to their families.[2089]

فَلَا يَسْتَطِيعُونَ تَوْصِيَةً وَلَا إِلَىٰ أَهْلِهِمْ يَرْجِعُونَ ۝

Reward and Punishment

51–54. The resurrection. 55–58. Reward of the faithful. 59–67. Punishment of unbelievers.

وَنُفِخَ فِي الصُّورِ فَإِذَا هُم مِّنَ الْأَجْدَاثِ إِلَىٰ رَبِّهِمْ يَنسِلُونَ ۝

2086 This is a warning of the impending punishment. Drowning in the sea signifies their destruction wherever it may take place. The word chosen to describe the punishment is one which shows utter helplessness of the sufferers; for nowhere is man so helpless as in the sea, where, notwithstanding all the help that science has brought to man, he is as helpless in the Titanic of to-day as he was in the galley or barge of former days.

2087 What is before you signifies the punishment which must overtake them in this life, and what is behind you means the consequences of evil which they should witness in the hereafter.

2088 So they turned neither to submission to Allah nor to sympathy for fellow-beings.

2089 This is a prophetical description of the happenings at Badr.

52 They shall say: O woe to us! who has raised us up from our sleeping-place?[2090] this is what the Beneficent God promised and the apostles told the truth.

53 There would be naught but a single cry, when lo! they shall all be brought before Us.

54 So this day no soul shall be dealt with unjustly in the least; and you shall not be rewarded aught but that which you did.

55 Surely the dwellers of the garden shall on that day be in an occupation quite happy.

56 They and their wives shall be in shades, reclining on raised couches.

57 They shall have fruits therein, and they shall have whatever they desire.

58 Peace: a word from a Merciful Lord.[2091]

59 And withdraw aside to day, O guilty ones!

60 Did I not charge you, O children of Adam! that you should not serve the devil? surely he is your open enemy,[2092]

61 And that you should serve Me; this is the right way.

62 And certainly he led astray numerous people from among you. What! could you not then understand?

63 This is the hell with which you were threatened.

64 Enter into it this day because you disbelieved.

65 On that day We will set a seal upon their mouths, and their hands shall speak to Us, and their feet shall bear witness of what they earned.

2090 The grave is called a sleeping-place even for the unbelievers, because, as compared with the severer punishment of hell, the grave would be to them a sleeping-place. It should be noted that the grave signifies the condition after life is ended in this world.

2091 Here we have another picture of the Muslim paradise. After describing the various blessings, it sums them up in a single word, peace.

2092 This and the two verses that follow establish conclusively that Allah always invited men to the truth, whereas it is the devil that misleads them.

2093 It is a punishment for their reprobation. They shut their eyes to the truth with such persistence that their eyes become blind; they no longer see even if they would.

2095 It is a general law of nature that every living thing must deteriorate; the application here is to individuals as well as nations.

2096 Its negation as poetry is meant to convey the seriousness of the prophecies of the Qur-án. The following anecdote will show how far off was the Prophet from being a poet. It is related that one of his companions recited to him the verse: كفى الشيب والاسلام بالمرء ناهيا i.e. old age and Islam are sufficient to keep a man back from evil. The Holy Prophet praised the verse, but in reading it changed the order of the words thus: كفى الاسلام والشيب بالمرء ناهيا placing Islam first and old age afterwards. This destroyed the measure. Upon his attention being drawn to it, he repeated it in the same manner, sacrificing the measure to the meaning.

72 And We have subjected them to them, so some of them they have to ride upon, and some of them they eat.

73 And therein they have advantages and drinks; will they not then be grateful?

74 And they have taken gods besides Allah that they may be helped.

75 (But) they shall not be able to assist them, and they shall be a host brought up before them.[2097]

THE RANGERS

REVEALED AT MECCA

Abstract:

- Sec. 1. Unity shall prevail.
- Sec. 2. The judgment.
- Sec. 3. Preaching of Noah and Abraham.
- Sec. 4. Moses, Elias, and Lot.
- Sec. 5. Jonah, and the Holy Prophet's triumph.

The Title and date of revelation.

THE title of this chapter, The Rangers, is taken from its opening, which is devoted to a description of the faithful. The date of its revelation is, without doubt, the early Meccan period. As regards the context and arrangement, see introductory note to the last chapter.

Subject-matter.

The chapter announces in the first section a clear prophecy of the ultimate prevalence of Unity, and asserts the truth of the judgment in the second; calls attention to the preaching of Noah, Abraham, Moses, Elias, Lot, and Jonah in the third, fourth, and fifth sections; and concludes with a clear prediction of the triumph of the Holy Prophet.

2099 I translate wáw (lit. and) as meaning consider. The wáw in such places is generally rendered by, as signifying an oath. It must, however, be borne in mind that the oath in such cases simply draws attention to a certain testimony. Ordinarily when a person swears by Allah, he really calls Allah to witness that he speaks the truth. The real object in taking an oath is to make an assertion more convincing. But in the Qur-án, when such a

3 Then those who recite, being mindful,
4 Most surely your God is One:
5 The Lord of the heavens and the earth and what is between them, and the Lord of the eastern lands.[2100]
Or, easts.
6 Surely We have adorned the nearest heaven with an adornment, the stars,
7 And (there is) a safeguard against every rebellious devil.[2101]

فَالتّٰلِيٰتِ ذِكْرًا ۙ
اِنَّ اِلٰهَكُمْ لَوَاحِدٌ ؕ
رَبُّ السَّمٰوٰتِ وَالْاَرْضِ وَمَا بَيْنَهُمَا
وَرَبُّ الْمَشَارِقِ ؕ
اِنَّا زَيَّنَّا السَّمَآءَ الدُّنْيَا بِزِيْنَةِ ِۨالْكَوَاكِبِ ۙ وَحِفْظًا مِّنْ كُلِّ شَيْطٰنٍ مَّارِدٍ ۚ

form is adopted, the conviction is produced not by mere allegation as in the case of an ordinary oath, but by some clear argument which upholds the truth of the assertion made. Sometimes attention is called in these oaths to obvious laws of nature, as the change of night and day, etc., to infer spiritual laws from them, and on other occasions the oath reveals a kind of prophecy, so that the fulfilment of the prophecy makes the truth of the preaching of the Prophet to be obvious. The latter is the case here.

The description given in the first three verses applies to the believers. The first verse shows them as drawing themselves out in ranks, which the Muslims do five times daily in their prayers in congregation, and may prophetically refer to their subsequent drawing themselves out in ranks in the field of battle against their enemies. The second verse describes them as holding in restraint their passions, so that a people who were ruled by passions were so entirely changed that they became complete masters of their passions. The words, however, also contain a prophetical reference to their holding in restraint a powerful enemy bent upon their extirpation. These two descriptions are followed by another in the third verse which makes it clear that only the Muslims are described here: those who recite, being mindful. It is a special characteristic of the Muslims that even their armies in the field of battle are regular in their prayers and remember Allah.

This description can only apply to the Muslim congregation praying five times a day and holding in restraint their passions and to the Muslim armies fighting against and holding in restraint their persecutors. Each of these two circumstances bears evidence to the truth of the grand message of Islam, the Divine Unity; for as, in the one case, the wonderful change brought about in Arabia by the transformation of a nation deeply immersed in immorality was a clear witness of the purity and Divine source of that message, in the other, the wonderful prophecy of the triumph of the persecuted believers over their powerful enemies was no less a clear proof that some powerful hand was working in support of the Holy Prophet, and this also demonstrated the truth of Divine Unity.

It may also be noted that though the commentators have suggested that the description in the first three verses may apply to angels, they also state that the description is applicable to the Muslim armies fighting against the enemies of Islam (Rz). Another point worth noting is that as the final triumph of the doctrine of Unity is announced in the commencement, the end of the chapter asserts the same again in forcible language (see vv. 171 to the end).

2100 The reference to the eastern lands in rabb-ul-mashâriq is a prophecy of the early spread of Islam in them, while Islam's conquests in the West seem to have been reserved for a later age. Mashâriq is the plural of mashriq, which means the rising-place of the sun, and is, like its English equivalent east, applicable to an eastern land.

2101 The Prophet's preaching was confronted by a twofold opposition from among the Arabs: the opposition of secular classes and the opposition of the priestly class, the diviners and the soothsayers, the class known as kâhin. It is these soothsayers who are called the rebellious devils, because they thought that they could invoke spirits and answer questions put to them relating to the future. This phase of opposition was equally swept away before the forceful tide of Islamic truth, and the profession of the kâhin disappeared from Arabia as Islam

8 They cannot listen to the exalted assembly and they are reproached from every side,[2102]
9 Being driven off,[2103] and for them is a perpetual chastisement,
10 Except him who snatches off but once, then there follows him a brightly shining flame.[2104]
11 Then ask them whether they are stronger in creation or those (others) whom We have created. Surely We created them of firm clay.[2105]
12 Nay! you wonder while they mock,
13 And when they are reminded, they mind not,
14 And when they see a sign they incite one another to scoff,
15 And they say: This is nothing but clear enchantment:

Or, thrown at.

Ar. thou wonderest.

وَقَالُوْٓا اِنْ هٰذَآ اِلَّا سِحْرٌ مُّبِيْنٌ ۝

advanced. This Arab superstition disappeared before the light of Islam (see LA under the word kahn). The mention of heaven and stars in the previous verse refers to the popular superstition that the diviners and soothsayers obtained their knowledge of the future from the stars. The safeguard against every rebellious devil indicates that they have no access to Divine secrets. See further 2365, 2530, and 2582.

2102 The reference here is to the conjectures of the soothsayers regarding the future, by which they maintained their ascendancy over the masses. It is pointed out that they have no access whatever to the source of prophecy. The exalted assembly signifies those angels to whom Divine revelation is first made known. If the other significance of the word yuqzafún given in the margin is adopted, the reference may be to the secular opponents of the Prophet, who, it is here foretold, would be thrown at from every side, so that success should not attend any of their efforts.

2103 This verse and those preceding it describe the state of the soothsayers at the advent of the Prophet. Before the advent of the Holy Prophet the soothsayers may have been able to mislead the people to a certain extent by their guesses regarding future events, but after his advent they were reproached on every side, none of their oracles proving true. Or, as stated in the last foot-note, the reference may be to the overthrow of ordinary opposition.

2104 Khaṭifa signifies he carried off or snatched away, and khaṭfatun signifies a single act of carrying off or snatching away. The meaning is, if a soothsayer gets but one opportunity, there soon follows a flame that pierces through the darkness; in other words, dispels the darkness to which the soothsayer leads men. The flame dispelling darkness signified the mighty prophecies of the Prophet. It should be noted that shihâb means only a flame (see LL, and compare 27 : 7, where Moses goes to bring a shihâb), and sâqib means that pierces through the darkness or brightly shining (LL).

2105 Lázib is derived from lazaba, meaning it was or remained fixed, settled, firm, or constant (LL); hence lázib signifies firm (S, LL), and so I render it. Those created of firm clay are the spiritually perfect men, the prophets. The verse points to the opposition of the soothsayers to the Prophet, and warns the former that the Prophet will be triumphant, because he is made perfect by Allah's hand.

16 What! when we are dead and have become dust and bones, shall we then certainly be raised:
17 Or our fathers of yore?
18 Say: Aye! and you shall be abject.[2106]
Or, cry. 19 So it shall only be a single chiding, when lo! they Or, wait. shall see.
20 And they shall say: O woe to us! this is the day of requital.
21 This is the day of the judgment which you called a lie.

2106 That is, you shall not only be raised after death to taste of your evil deeds, but even here you will be made abject.

2107 Though the description of the helplessness of the unjust given in this and the following verses applies to life after death, it equally describes their condition in this life.

31 So the sentence of our Lord has come to pass against us: (now) we shall surely taste:
32 So we led you astray, for we ourselves were erring.
33 So they shall on that day be sharers in the chastisement one with another.
34 Surely thus do We deal with the guilty.
35 Surely they used to behave proudly when it was said to them: There is no god but Allah:
36 And to say: What! shall we indeed give up our gods for the sake of a mad poet?
37 Nay: he has come with the truth and verified the apostles.[2108]
38 Most surely you will taste the painful chastisement.
39 And you shall not be rewarded except (for) what you did,
40 Save the servants of Allah, the purified ones.
41 For them is a known sustenance,[2109]
42 Fruits, and they shall be highly honoured,
43 In gardens of pleasure,
44 On thrones, facing each other.
45 A bowl shall be made to go round them from water running out of springs,
46 White, delicious to those who drink.
47 There shall be no trouble in it, nor shall they be exhausted therewith.[2109A]

2108 The early revelation of this chapter, which belongs at the latest to the fourth year of the Holy Prophet's mission, is universally admitted, and here too we have a clear statement that the Prophet came in fulfilment of earlier prophecy.

2109 The word m'alúm (known) must be carefully noted, for it shows that the sustenance mentioned in the verses that follow is one that is already known to those servants of Allah who are purified from every pollution. This description of the blessings that follow shows us clearly that all those blessings were spiritually tasted by the righteous in this life. In fact, their brief but important description as fruits in the next verse clearly shows those blessings to be the fruits of their good deeds.

2109A The whole of this description makes it self-evident that the blessings spoken of are not the physical blessings of this world but spiritual blessings. The drinks of this life sometimes give trouble to man, producing exhaustion, but such are not the drinks of the other life. The name is common, but the nature of the one is not the same as the nature of the other.

2110 The description of women given here calls attention to the prominent feature of the character of a good woman. In the first place, they are described as restraining their eyes, and attention is thus called to the fact that the most valuable virtue of woman is that rare chastity which is described here as restraint or freedom of eyes from lust. Then the beauty of their eyes is praised, the suggestion clearly being that the purity of the eye leads to its beauty or that the real beauty of the eye consists in its purity. In the second place, they are described as being eggs carefully protected, which alludes to their pure and unsoiled character. It should, however, be noted that what is apparently a description of women is really a description of the fruits of deeds done in this life, the words adopted being applicable to both (see the word ḥūr in 2356), and these are in fact spiritual blessings manifested physically. The Qur-án nowhere speaks of conjugal relations being maintained in the life after death. The blessings which it promises, whatever they may be, are as much meant for men as for women; the only thing certain about them is that their nature is different from the nature of the physical blessings of this life. See also 2148A.

	62 Is this better as an entertainment or the tree of Zaqqúm?[2111]	أَذَٰلِكَ خَيْرٌ نُّزُلًا أَمْ شَجَرَةُ الزَّقُّومِ
a 1442.	63 Surely We have made it to be a trial to the unjust.[a]	إِنَّا جَعَلْنَاهَا فِتْنَةً لِّلظَّالِمِينَ
	64 Surely it is a tree that grows in the bottom of the hell;	إِنَّهَا شَجَرَةٌ تَخْرُجُ فِي أَصْلِ الْجَحِيمِ
	65 Its produce is as it were the heads of the serpents.[2112]	طَلْعُهَا كَأَنَّهُ رُءُوسُ الشَّيَاطِينِ
	66 Then most surely they shall eat of it and fill (their) bellies with it.	فَإِنَّهُمْ لَآكِلُونَ مِنْهَا فَمَالِئُونَ مِنْهَا الْبُطُونَ
	67 Then most surely they shall have after it to drink of a mixture prepared in boiling water.	ثُمَّ إِنَّ لَهُمْ عَلَيْهَا لَشَوْبًا مِّنْ حَمِيمٍ
	68 Then most surely their return shall be to hell.[2113]	ثُمَّ إِنَّ مَرْجِعَهُمْ لَإِلَى الْجَحِيمِ
	69 Surely they found their fathers going astray,	إِنَّهُمْ أَلْفَوْا آبَاءَهُمْ ضَالِّينَ
	70 So in their footsteps they are being hastened on.	فَهُمْ عَلَىٰ آثَارِهِمْ يُهْرَعُونَ
	71 And certainly most of the ancients went astray before them,	وَلَقَدْ ضَلَّ قَبْلَهُمْ أَكْثَرُ الْأَوَّلِينَ
	72 And certainly We sent among them warners.	وَلَقَدْ أَرْسَلْنَا فِيهِم مُّنذِرِينَ
	73 Then see how was the end of those warned,	فَانظُرْ كَيْفَ كَانَ عَاقِبَةُ الْمُنذَرِينَ
	74 Except the servants of Allah, the purified ones.	إِلَّا عِبَادَ اللَّهِ الْمُخْلَصِينَ

2111 Zaqqúm is, according to Bḍ, a certain tree having small leaves, stinking and bitter, found in Tihama. TA gives a fuller explanation: "AHn says on the authority of an Arab of the desert that the zaqqúm is a dust-coloured tree having small round leaves without thorns. It has a pungent odour and is bitter, and has knots in its stems . . . the heads of its leaves are very foul" (LL). But note that zaqqúm also means any deadly food (TA, TH-LL). Zaqqúm also signifies fresh butter with dates, and Abú Jahl is said to have scoffed at the idea of zaqqúm being the food of those in hell by having prepared a repast of fresh butter with dates for a party of the Quraish chiefs, telling them that, according to the Holy Prophet, such was the food that would be given to those who go to hell. Hence it is called a trial for the unjust in the next verse. But see 1442.

2112 The correct interpretation of رؤس الشياطين is that adopted in the text, for the Arabs apply the name shaiṭán to a sort of serpent having a mane, ugly or foul in the head and face. According to others it is the name of a certain ugly plant (TA-LL).

2113 The words, then . . . their return shall be to hell, are very significant, as if the food and drink described above were to be given to them before they went to hell. This is the reason that it is called an entertainment. It is in fact a description of their evil plight in this life as well as in the hereafter. The explanation given in 1442 is thus corroborated.

SECTION 3

Preaching of Noah and Abraham

75–82. Noah is delivered and his enemies perish. 83–96. Abraham preaches against idolatry. 97–99. He is delivered from his enemies. 100–111. The sacrifice of Ishmael. 112, 113. He is blessed with another son, Isaac.

75 And Noah did certainly call upon Us, and most excellent answerer of prayers are We.
76 And We delivered him and his followers from the mighty distress.[a]
77 And We made his offspring the survivors.
78 And We perpetuated to him (praise) among the later generations.
79 Peace on Noah among the nations.
80 Thus do We surely reward the doers of good.
81 Surely he was of Our believing servants.
82 Then We drowned the others.
83 And most surely of his party was Abraham.
84 When he came to his Lord with a free heart,
85 When he said to his sire and his people: What is it that you worship:
86 A lie—gods besides Allah—do you desire?
87 What is then your idea about the Lord of the worlds?
88 Then he looked at the stars, looking up once,
89 Then he said: Surely I am sick (of your worshipping these).[2114]
90 So they went away from him, turning back.

a 900.

Or, bear spite to.

2114 The people with whom Abraham contended were not only worshippers of idols, but also worshippers of stars. Hence Abraham looked up to the stars and declared that he could not bear their worshipping others than God. LL gives the following as one of the explanations of the words انى سقيم on the authority of TA: I am sick of your worshipping what is not God. But we also speak of a person as being saqim when he bears spite against another. Thus you say هو سقيم الصدر عليه i.e. he is affected with spite against him (TA-LL).

91 Then he turned aside to their gods secretly and said: What! do you not eat?[2115]

فَرَاغَ إِلَىٰ آلِهَتِهِمْ فَقَالَ أَلَا تَأْكُلُونَ

92 What is the matter with you that you do not speak?

مَا لَكُمْ لَا تَنطِقُونَ

93 Then he turned against them secretly, smiting them with the right hand.

فَرَاغَ عَلَيْهِمْ ضَرْبًا بِالْيَمِينِ

94 So they advanced towards him, hastening.

فَأَقْبَلُوا إِلَيْهِ يَزِفُّونَ

95 Said he: What! do you worship what you hew out?

قَالَ أَتَعْبُدُونَ مَا تَنْحِتُونَ

96 And Allah has created you and what you make.

وَاللَّهُ خَلَقَكُمْ وَمَا تَعْمَلُونَ

97 They said: Build for him a building, then cast him into the burning fire.

قَالُوا ابْنُوا لَهُ بُنْيَانًا فَأَلْقُوهُ فِي الْجَحِيمِ a 965. 98 And they desired a war[a] against him, but We brought them low.

فَأَرَادُوا بِهِ كَيْدًا فَجَعَلْنَاهُمُ الْأَسْفَلِينَ

99 And he said: Surely I fly to my Lord: He will guide me:

وَقَالَ إِنِّي ذَاهِبٌ إِلَىٰ رَبِّي سَيَهْدِينِ

100 My Lord! grant me of the doers of good deeds.

رَبِّ هَبْ لِي مِنَ الصَّالِحِينَ

101 So We gave him the good news of a boy, possessing forbearance.

فَبَشَّرْنَاهُ بِغُلَامٍ حَلِيمٍ

102 And when he attained to working with him, he said: O my son! surely I have seen in a dream that I should sacrifice you:[2116] consider then what you see. He said: O my father! do what you are commanded: if Allah please, you will find me of the patient ones.

(Ar. thee. Ar. thou seest. Ar. thou art. Ar. thou wilt.)

فَلَمَّا بَلَغَ مَعَهُ السَّعْيَ قَالَ يَا بُنَيَّ إِنِّي
أَرَىٰ فِي الْمَنَامِ أَنِّي أَذْبَحُكَ فَانظُرْ مَاذَا
تَرَىٰ ۚ قَالَ يَا أَبَتِ افْعَلْ مَا تُؤْمَرُ ۖ سَتَجِدُنِي
إِن شَاءَ اللَّهُ مِنَ الصَّابِرِينَ

103 So when they both submitted and he threw him down upon his forehead,

فَلَمَّا أَسْلَمَا وَتَلَّهُ لِلْجَبِينِ

104 And We called out to him saying, O Abraham!

وَنَادَيْنَاهُ أَنْ يَا إِبْرَاهِيمُ

105 You have indeed shown the truth of the vision; surely thus do We reward the doers of good:

(Ar. thou hast.)

قَدْ صَدَّقْتَ الرُّؤْيَا ۚ إِنَّا كَذَٰلِكَ
نَجْزِي الْمُحْسِنِينَ

2115 The fá does not show that he went to their gods immediately after his people had left him. This incident is quite distinct.

2116 The dream probably meant that Ishmael would have to be sacrificed by being turned out of his home and left in a strange land. That the child spoken of here was Ishmael and not Isaac is made clear by v. 112. This no doubt contradicts the Bible statement, but the fact that Ishmael's descendants kept a memorial of this sacrifice in the annual pilgrimage to Mecca shows clearly that Ishmael, and not Isaac, was the son whom Abraham was commanded to sacrifice; and that sacrifice was in one sense accomplished by Abraham leaving Ishmael in a strange land in accordance with the wishes of his wife, Sarah.

106 Most surely this is a manifest trial.

إِنَّ هٰذَا لَهُوَ الْبَلٰٓؤُا الْمُبِيْنُ ۝

113 And We showered Our blessings on him and on Isaac;[2118] and of their offspring are the doers of good, and (also) those who are clearly unjust to their own souls.

SECTION 4

Moses, Elias, and Lot

114–122. Moses and Aaron are delivered and their enemies perish. 123–132. Elias is delivered. 133–138. Lot is delivered and his enemies perish.

114 And certainly We conferred a favour on Moses and Aaron.

وَلَقَدْ مَنَنَّا عَلٰى مُوْسٰى وَهٰرُوْنَ ۝

115 And We delivered them both and their people from the mighty distress.

116 And We helped them, so they were the vanquishers.

وَنَصَرْنٰهُمْ فَكَانُوْا هُمُ الْغٰلِبِيْنَ ۝

117 And We gave them both the Book that made (things) clear.

وَاٰتَيْنٰهُمَا الْكِتٰبَ الْمُسْتَبِيْنَ ۝

2117 Human sacrifice, which was common among most ancient people, prevailed among the Chaldeans; it also remained in vogue among the Hindoos till a very late date. Abraham's seeing in a vision that he, too, was sacrificing his son, his preparation to fulfil it literally, and lastly the Divine commandment to sacrifice an animal in his stead, marked the abolition of the savage custom of human sacrifice, which may have arisen from some such misunderstanding as would have caused Ishmael to be actually sacrificed if Divine commandment to sacrifice an animal instead had not been communicated to Abraham. And this act of Abraham abolished human sacrifice from among many nations, and to-day more than half the world stands indebted to that righteous patriarch for his noble example in uprooting a savage custom.

2118 Here only Abraham and Isaac and the descendants of these two are spoken of. Ishmael is not mentioned distinctly to show that he and his offspring are meant when the offspring of Abraham is spoken of. The other branch of Abraham's offspring is included in Isaac's offspring.

118 And We guided them both on the right way.

وَهَدَيْنَاهُمَا الصِّرَاطَ الْمُسْتَقِيمَ ۝

119 And We perpetuated (praise) to them among the later generations,

120 Peace be on Moses and Aaron.

سَلَامٌ عَلَىٰ مُوسَىٰ وَهَارُونَ ۝

121 Even thus do We reward the doers of good.

122 Surely they were both of Our believing servants.

123 And Elias was most surely of the apostles.

اللَّهَ رَبَّكُمْ وَرَبَّ آبَائِكُمُ الْأَوَّلِينَ ۝

127 But they called him a liar, therefore they shall most surely be brought up,

فَكَذَّبُوهُ فَإِنَّهُمْ لَمُحْضَرُونَ ۝

128 But not the servants of Allah, the purified ones.

إِلَّا عِبَادَ اللَّهِ الْمُخْلَصِينَ ۝

129 And We perpetuated to him (praise) among the later generations,

132 Surely he was one of Our believing servants.

إِنَّهُ مِنْ عِبَادِنَا الْمُؤْمِنِينَ ۝

133 And Lot was most surely of the apostles.

وَإِنَّ لُوطًا لَمِنَ الْمُرْسَلِينَ ۝

134 When We delivered him and his followers, all—

إِذْ نَجَّيْنَاهُ وَأَهْلَهُ أَجْمَعِينَ ۝

135 Except an old woman (who was) amongst those who tarried.[a]

136 Then We destroyed the others.

ثُمَّ دَمَّرْنَا الْآخَرِينَ ۝

137 And most surely you pass by them in the morning,

وَإِنَّكُمْ لَتَمُرُّونَ عَلَيْهِمْ مُصْبِحِينَ ۝

138 And at night: do you not then understand?

وَبِاللَّيْلِ أَفَلَا تَعْقِلُونَ ۝

[a] 11:81.

2119 Ba'l stands for the sun, or the sun-god.

2120 Ilyásín is only another form of the name of Ilyás, as Idrísín or Idrásín is another form of the name of Idrís (Kf). Elias is mentioned as being one of the prophets in 6:86. Some commentators are of opinion that Idrís and Elias are two different names of the same prophet, but, as I have shown in 1553, Idrís in the Holy Qur-án stands for Enoch, and Elias is the same as the Elijah of the Bible.

SECTION 5

Jonah and the Prophet's Triumph

139–148. Jonah is delivered from distress. 149–163. Idol-worship and demonology of the Meccans are condemned. 164–169. True worshippers of Allah. 170–182. Triumph of messengers declared to be certain.

139 And Jonah was most surely of the apostles.

وَإِنَّ يُونُسَ لَمِنَ الْمُرْسَلِينَ ۝

143 But had it not been that he was of those who glorify (Us),

فَلَوْلَا أَنَّهُ كَانَ مِنَ الْمُسَبِّحِينَ ۝

144 He would certainly have
Or, its belly. tarried in his tribe[2124] to the day when they are raised.

لَلَبِثَ فِي بَطْنِهِ إِلَىٰ يَوْمِ يُبْعَثُونَ ۝

145 Then We cast him on to the vacant surface of the earth while he was sick.

فَنَبَذْنَاهُ بِالْعَرَاءِ وَهُوَ سَقِيمٌ ۝

146 And We caused to grow up for him a gourd-plant.

وَأَنْبَتْنَا عَلَيْهِ شَجَرَةً مِنْ يَقْطِينٍ ۝

147 And We sent him to a hundred thousand, rather they exceeded.

وَأَرْسَلْنَاهُ إِلَىٰ مِائَةِ أَلْفٍ أَوْ يَزِيدُونَ ۝

2121 It is quite meaningless to say that Jonah fled from God. He was a prophet and knew that no one could fly from God, for God's kingdom is unlimited. Nor does the Qur-án say that he fled from God. Even the commentators do not accept this (Rz). It would appear that he fled from his people or from the king. See also 1651 and 1652.

2122 Sáhama, which is generally rendered as meaning he cast lots, also means he shared with another, fi kazá, i.e. in such a thing (LL). All that the Qur-án says about him is that he was afterwards cast off.

2123 The Qur-án does not anywhere state that Jonah was devoured by the fish, for the word iltaqama, which is used here, does not necessarily signify the act of devouring, but simply that of drawing or taking into the mouth. See LL, which illustrates the sense of the word by the saying التقم فاها في التقبيل which it explains as meaning he took her mouth within his lips in kissing. From a saying of the Holy Prophet it appears that only his heel was drawn by the fish into its mouth. This is another circumstance wherein the Qur-án contradicts the Bible.

2124 The word baṭn means both a tribe (LL) and belly. I prefer the former as explaining the meaning of the words that follow, the significance being, had he not been one of those who glorify Allah he would have remained as an ordinary man in his tribe and would not have been made a prophet. Taking the meaning to be belly, the pronoun hi would refer to the fish; but even then it does not lead to the conclusion that he was actually devoured by the fish, the significance being only that he would have been devoured if he had not been one of those who glorify Allah.

148 And they believed, so We gave them provision till a time.

149 Then ask them whether your Lord has daughters and they have sons,

Ar. thy.

150 Or did We create the angels females while they were witnesses?

151 Now surely it is of their own lie that they say:

152 Allah has begotten; and most surely they are liars.

153 Has He chosen daughters in preference to sons?

154 What is the matter with you: how is it that you judge?

155 Will you not then mind?

156 Or have you a clear authority?

157 Then bring your book, if you are truthful.

158 And they assert a relationship between Him and the jinn; and certainly the jinn do know that they shall surely be brought up;

Ar. between the.

159 Glory be to Allah (for freedom) from what they describe;

160 But not so the servants of Allah, the purified ones.

161 So surely you and what you worship,

162 Not against Him can you cause (any) to fall into trial,

163 Save him who will go to hell.

164 And there is none of us but has an assigned place,[2124A]

165 And most surely we are they who draw themselves out in ranks,

166 And we are most surely they who declare the glory (of Allah).

167 And surely they used to say:

168 Had we a reminder from those of yore,

2124A These words are put into the mouths of the believers.

169 We would certainly have been the servants of Allah—the purified ones.

172 Most surely they shall be the assisted ones,

173 And most surely Our host alone shall be the victorious ones.

CHAPTER XXXVIII

ṢĀD

Revealed at Mecca

(5 sections and 88 verses)

Abstract:

Sec. 1. A prophecy of the enemy's discomfiture.
Sec. 2. David's enemies.
Sec. 3. Solomon and his enemies.
Sec. 4. Job and the triumph of the righteous.
Sec. 5. Opposition to prophets.

The Title.

THIS chapter, which is entitled Ṣād from its initial letter, describes the sufferings of prophets at the hands of their enemies. Even prophets like David and Solomon, who ruled mighty kingdoms, and like Job, who had been granted abundance, could not escape opposition and had to suffer at the hands of their enemies, and the Prophet of Arabia could not be an exception. But as the name of the chapter signifies, Allah was a Truthful God, Who at the height of opposition had foretold the discomfiture of the enemy, and the final triumph of truth, and His promise would be fulfilled, even as it was fulfilled in the deliverance of earlier prophets from the hands of their enemies.

Date of revelation and subject-matter.

The date of the revelation of this chapter, about whose Meccan origin no doubt can be entertained, may be fixed at about the same time as that of the preceding one. The opposition had no doubt grown intense, and the earlier emigration may have already taken place, or may have followed it soon. It should be placed about the close of the early Meccan period. The first section clearly speaks of the determined opposition of the enemy and prophesies its discomfiture; the second asserts how even a king-prophet like David had his enemies, and how he was delivered from their hands; the third states that even Solomon with all his glory could not escape the opposition of enemies, yet it was the grace of Allah, not the glory of his kingdom, that delivered him from his enemies. Job's sufferings are spoken of in the fourth section, and the triumph of the righteous is plainly stated; and the typical opposition of the devil to the prophet-man forms the subject-matter of the concluding section.

SECTION 1

A Prophecy of the Enemy's Discomfiture

1–3. A warning. 4–8. Polytheists stick to their gods. 9–11. A prophecy of the defeat of combined forces. 12–14. Opponents of previous prophets were destroyed.

In the name of Allah, the Beneficent, the Merciful.

3 How many did We destroy before them of the generations, then they cried while the time
Ar. was not. of escaping had passed away.[2128]
4 And they wonder that there has come to them a warner from among themselves, and the disbelievers say: This is an enchanter, a liar.
5 What! makes he the gods a single God? A strange thing is this, to be sure!
6 And the chief persons of b 1356. them break forth, saying:[b] Go and steadily adhere to your gods: this is most surely a thing sought after:[2129]
7 We never heard of this in the former faith: this is nothing but a forgery:
8 Has the reminder been revealed to him from among us? Nay! they are in doubt as to My reminder. Nay! they have not yet tasted My chastisement!

2126 Ṣád, which is also the name of this chapter, stands for As-Ṣádiq, meaning Truthful God (JB).

2127 Zikr means eminence here, as in 43:43 (TA-LL). The calling to witness of the Qur-án possessing eminence indicates that the truth of the Qur-án will become manifest by the eminence to which it will raise those who follow it.

2128 That is, they did not heed the warning, but cried for help and deliverance from the punishment when it had actually overtaken them and no time for escaping remained.

2129 By a thing sought after is to be understood either a thing that the Prophet seeks after but to which he cannot attain, or it is meant that the preaching of the Prophet is a thing that is decreed by fate. They think it is a misfortune that must befall them because it is so decreed by fate (Bd).

10 Or is it that theirs is the kingdom of the heavens and the earth and what is between them? Then let them ascend in the means.[2130]

11 A mighty host of the allies shall be here put to flight.[2131] (Ar. what a host.)

12 The people of Noah, and 'Ad, and Pharaoh, the lord of hosts,[2132] rejected (apostles) before them. (Or, a strong dominion.)

13 And Samood and the people of Lot and the dwellers of the thicket:[a] these were the parties.

14 There was none of them but called the apostles liars, so just was My retribution.

a 1347.

2130 As they think themselves to be powerful in the land and to be masters of it, they should find the best means that would make their power permanent, and prove the warning of the Prophet to be false. That they will not be able to do so, they are told in the next verse.

2131 This is a prophecy relating to the absolute discomfiture and overthrow of the opponents of Islam at a time when they shall combine all possible forces against it. The Prophet is thus not only enjoined patience under his present sufferings, but he is further told that the opposition against him will assume yet more formidable proportions. He is comforted at the same time with the knowledge that the combined forces of opposition will be utterly routed and overthrown. This happened in the battle known as ghazwat-ul-Aḥzāb, or the battle of the Allies, for which see 1981.

2132 Autād is the plural of watad, which means literally a peg which is firmly driven into the ground. But it is frequently used metaphorically. Thus اوتاد البلاد signifies the chiefs of the towns, provinces, or countries (LA-LL). Bḍ interprets ذو الاوتاد as meaning ذو الجموع الكثيرة, i.e. lord of many hosts. And generally it is also taken as meaning ذو الملك الثابت, i.e. lord of a strong dominion, and as an authority for this is quoted the verse of Aswad, which says في ظل ملك ثابت الاوتاد i.e. under the protection of a king who is firm in a strong dominion (Kf). And he adds that the word autād is therefore metaphorically used for the firmness of power and kingdom and the stability of affairs.

David's Enemies

15, 16. Judgment impending over the Meccans. 17–20. A great kingdom was given to David. 21–25. A plan against him frustrated. 26. His goodness and wisdom.

15 Nor do these await aught but a single cry, there being no delay in it.[2133]

16 And they say: O our Lord! hasten on to us our portion before the day of reckoning.[2134]

17 Bear patiently what they say, and remember Our servant David, the possessor of power;[2135] surely he was frequent in returning (to Allah).

18 Surely We made the mountains subject to him, to 19 And the birds gathered

20 And We strengthened his kingdom and We gave him wisdom and a clear judgment.

21 And has there come to
Ar. thee. you the story of the adversaries, when they made an entry into the private chamber by ascending over the walls?

22 When they entered in upon David and he was frightened at them, they said: Fear not: two litigants, of whom one has acted wrongfully towards the other, therefore decide between us with justice, and do not act unjustly, and guide us to the right way:

23 Surely this is my brother: he has ninety-nine ewes and I have a single ewe; but he

2134 Here we have in plain words a demand on the part of unbelievers for punishment in this life.

2135 Yad means jāh and quwwat, i.e. dignity and power (TA). According to the same authority yad also means authority, ownership, favour, or benefit.

so judge between men with justice and do not follow desire, those who go astray from the have a severe chastisement because they forgot the day of يَضِلُّونَ عَن سَبِيلِ اللَّهِ لَهُمْ عَذَابٌ

شَدِيدٌ بِمَا نَسُوا يَوْمَ الْحِسَابِ ۝

2136 The absurd story that is added here by the commentators is utterly opposed to what the Qur-án says regarding David. The men who thus attacked David by climbing over the wall were his enemies, as the Qur-án plainly states. They had thought of taking David unawares and putting him to death. But David, though terrified, was ready to meet them, and the two men, finding their plan thus frustrated, made an excuse for coming to him in such an unusual manner. The Qur-án does not anywhere say that these were angels; the suggestion is, moreover, inconsistent with their description as adversaries, and with their climbing over the walls. The story of David committing adultery and two angels having come to him thus to remind him of the sin is a puerile falsehood wherever it may be found. It has been repudiated by the best Muslim opinion. Rz says: "Most of the learned and those who have searched for the truth among them declare this charge false and condemn it as a lie and a mischievous story." And the Caliph, 'Ali, when he heard the false story, said: "Whoever shall relate the story of David as the story-tellers relate it, I will give him 160 stripes, and this is the punishment of those who falsely charge the prophets" (Rz). The words istaghfara and ghafarná occurring in this and the next verse by no means indicate that David had committed a sin, for istighfár really signifies the seeking of protection (see 2194), and David sought Divine protection when he saw that his enemies had grown so bold against him; and by ghafarná in the next verse is meant the rectification of his affair, the reason given there making this significance clear: "Most surely he had a nearness to Us and an excellent resort." This incident in the career of David is narrated to enable the Prophet to realize his own difficulties; for when a great ruler like David could not succeed in keeping his enemies under complete control, the position of the Prophet was much more difficult. It may also be added that a party of the Israelites themselves was opposed to

SECTION 3

Solomon and his Enemies

27–29. The righteous and the mischief-makers are not dealt with alike. 30–33. Solomon's greatness. 34. His successor's worthlessness. 35–40. Solomon's enemies subjected to him.

27 And We did not create the heaven and the earth and what is between them in vain; that is the opinion of those who disbelieve;[2137] then woe to those who disbelieve on account of the fire.

وَمَا خَلَقْنَا السَّمَاءَ وَالْأَرْضَ وَمَا بَيْنَهُمَا بَاطِلًا ذَٰلِكَ ظَنُّ الَّذِينَ كَفَرُوا فَوَيْلٌ لِلَّذِينَ كَفَرُوا مِنَ النَّارِ ○

كِتَابٌ أَنْزَلْنَاهُ إِلَيْكَ مُبَارَكٌ لِيَدَّبَّرُوا آيَاتِهِ وَلِيَتَذَكَّرَ أُولُو الْأَلْبَابِ ○

30 And We gave to David Solomon; most excellent the servant! Surely he was frequent in returning (to Allah).

وَوَهَبْنَا لِدَاوُدَ سُلَيْمَانَ نِعْمَ الْعَبْدُ إِنَّهُ أَوَّابٌ ○

31 When there were brought to him in the evening (horses) still when standing,[2139] swift when running—

إِذْ عُرِضَ عَلَيْهِ بِالْعَشِيِّ الصَّافِنَاتُ الْجِيَادُ ○

32 Then he said: Surely I love the good things on account of the remembrance of my Lord—until they were hidden behind the veil, (he said):

فَقَالَ إِنِّي أَحْبَبْتُ حُبَّ الْخَيْرِ عَنْ ذِكْرِ رَبِّي حَتَّىٰ تَوَارَتْ بِالْحِجَابِ ○

33 Bring them back to me; so he began to stroke (their) legs and necks.[2140]

رُدُّوهَا عَلَيَّ فَطَفِقَ مَسْحًا بِالسُّوقِ وَالْأَعْنَاقِ ○

David and Solomon; and the revolt of the ten tribes against Rehoboam, Solomon's son, is a clear proof of this animosity. Hence many of the false charges against these two prophet-kings.

2137 The believer is guided by the principle of the accountability of human actions and of a significance underlying every thing that exists in heaven or earth. The unbeliever, on the other hand, makes mischief, as he believes that he will not be any the worse for it, and thus ignores the law of cause and effect which prevails in the universe.

2138 Mubárak means blessed, also abounding in good (LL).

2139 Ṣáfinát is plural of ṣáfin, and signifies a horse standing upon three legs and the extremity of the hoof of the fourth leg; hence it means a horse that is still when standing.

2140 These plain words are twisted into the puerile story that Solomon, enraged on account of the horses having detained him from his afternoon prayers, began to cut off their legs and necks, as if it were the fault of the horses and not his own fault. But 34 And certainly We tried Solomon, and We put on his throne a (mere) body,[2141] so he turned (to Allah).

35 He said: My Lord! do Thou forgive me and grant me a kingdom which is not fit for (being inherited by) any one after me;[2142] surely Thou art the great Giver.

36 Then We made the wind subservient to him; it made his command to run gently wherever he desired,

37 And the devils, every builder and diver,

38 And others fettered in chains.[2143]

39 This is Our free gift, therefore give freely or withhold, without reckoning.

40 And most surely he had a nearness to Us and an excellent resort.

the Qur-án does not at all say that Solomon neglected any prayer on seeing the horses, nor does it say that he cut off their legs and necks. مسح شيئا means he wiped a thing with his hand, or passed his hand over it, and horses are always stroked on their legs and necks after a race. It was simply this that Solomon did. The material out of which the strange story is woven is not met with in the Qur-án. The words توارت بالحجاب refer to the horses, which had gone so far in the race that they were hidden from Solomon's eyes. To make the words refer to the sun, of which no mention at all is made here or anywhere else in this chapter, is surely a distortion of plain words.

2141 It appears that Solomon knew that his son Rehoboam, the heir-apparent to the throne, was unfit to rule, and therefore, seeing apparent signs of the disruption of the kingdom, or being informed of it by Divine revelation, he turned to Allah. By the mere body that was put on his throne is meant either his son Rehoboam, who lost the allegiance of all except a single tribe of Israel (1 Kings 12 : 17), or Jeroboam, who led the revolt against the house of David, and on becoming king of ten tribes set up image-worship in Dan and Beth-el, the two calves being supposed to be images of Jehovah (1 Kings 12 : 28), and also began the worship of wooden images (1 Kings 14 : 15). Thus both Rehoboam and Jeroboam answer the description of a body (without real life) thrown on Solomon's throne. See also 2029.

2142 The previous verse speaks of the imbecile heir-apparent to Solomon's throne. Hence we find Solomon praying here for a spiritual kingdom, for that is the only kingdom which is not in danger of being spoiled by an heir. The glory of Solomon's temporal kingdom was not maintained after his death.

2143 The description given here of the devils shows clearly that the designation applies to the men of foreign tribes subjected to Solomon's rule, because it was the latter who were forced into labour by Solomon, and therefore the words every builder and diver make it clear that the jinn and devils who are related to have been subjected to Solomon were only human beings. This is further proved by the words fettered in chains, because the immaterial beings known as devils and jinn are not fettered in chains. The chains are needed to keep in control material beings, such as men. See also 2027.

SECTION 4

Job and the Triumph of the Righteous

41–44. Job rewarded for his patience. 45–54. All righteous servants were rewarded. 55–58. Their opponents meet with evil. 59–64. Mischief-makers reproach each other.

41 And remember Our servant Job, when he called upon his Lord: The devil has afflicted me with toil and torment.[2144]

Ar. thy. 42 Urge with your foot; here is a cool washing-place and a drink.[2145]

Or, followers. 43 And We gave him his family and the like of them with them,[2146] as a mercy from Us, and as a reminder to those possessed of understanding.

وَاذْكُرْ عَبْدَنَآ أَيُّوبَ إِذْ نَادٰى رَبَّهٗٓ أَنِّيْ
مَسَّنِيَ الشَّيْطٰنُ بِنُصْبٍ وَّعَذَابٍ ۝

وَوَهَبْنَا لَهٗٓ أَهْلَهٗ وَمِثْلَهُمْ مَّعَهُمْ
رَحْمَةً مِّنَّا وَذِكْرٰى لِأُولِي الْأَلْبَابِ ۝

2144 The story of Job is given here as well as in the 21st chapter, the reference being more brief there than here. All that the Qur-án states about him is that he was a righteous person who suffered some kind of distress, remained patient under trials, and was ultimately delivered from affliction. All these circumstances of his life are disposed of in the space of a few lines. The dramatic poem of forty-two chapters known as Job's book finds no place in the Holy Qur-án.

The toil and torment of which Job complains seem to relate to some journey of his in a desert, where he finds himself in an evil plight, on account of the fatigue of the journey and the thirst which afflicts him. There are many circumstances which point to this conclusion. The use of the word nuṣb, signifying toil or fatigue, is one of them. Another is that, as a remedy for this, he is led to a place where he finds a cool washing-place and a drink. A third is the mention of the devil (shaiṭán) in connection with his trouble, for, شيطان الفلا lit. the devil of the desert, signifies thirst (Q-LL). The mention of this distressing journey of Job's contains, no doubt, a hint of the Prophet's long journey from Mecca to Medina, which was to be undertaken under particularly distressing circumstances.

2145 اركض برجلك literally signifies urge with thy foot, the significance being urge your horse. The word rakaḍa is used especially in connection with a beast, meaning, as LL says, he struck and hit therewith like as one strikes and hits therewith a beast (IA's). This special use is made clear in all lexicons by further examples of the use of the word. Thus you say ركضت الفرس برجلي i.e. I urged the horse to run with my foot (S, O, Msb-LL). And again ركض الدابة برجل i.e. he struck the beast to urge it with a foot (LL). The meaning is therefore urge your horse to go further, and the result is that there he finds a place where he is able to refresh himself both with drink and washing. He thought that he was in a waterless desert, and he complained that he was troubled with fatigue from the journey and with thirst; in reply he is told to urge his horse or the beast he rode upon to run further on, where he will find rest. It is a lesson not to despair under difficulties.

2146 Ahla-hú may mean either his people or his family. The giving of it to him means that he is brought back to them from the long journey which is referred to in the previous verse. Misla-hum or the like of them may signify either that he was brought back to his followers, to even a larger number than he had left, or that he was given a larger family, being blessed with more children.

2147 This passage contains three different statements, all of which have been generally misunderstood. The commentators follow each other in the story. They say that Job had sworn to inflict a hundred stripes on his wife, and that he ultimately fulfilled this oath by striking her with a bundle of sticks. There is not the slightest vestige of this story in the Holy Qur-án or in any authentic saying of the Holy Prophet. The first statement made in this passage is خذ بيدك ضغثا. Now, although dighs does signify a bundle of twigs, it bears other significances as well, and the duty of the translator is to see which significance suits the context, and to give the most rational meaning to the words without inventing a story to explain words at once clear and simple. We find the same words occurring in a saying of the Holy Prophet, where اخذ الضغث is explained as meaning من نال من الدنيا شيئا i.e. he who attains anything of worldly goods (IAs). The same saying is explained by TA thus: منهم الاخذ الضغث meaning among them is he who attains somewhat of worldly goods. The very words akhz and dighs occur in the Holy Qur-án, and the sentence thus bears a simple meaning that Job is given somewhat of the goods of the world.

The only word to be explained now is لا تحنث. There is not much difficulty about it, as hanasa is plainly given to mean he inclined from what was true to what was false (Q-LL). The meaning of the passage is that Job is told not to incline to an evil course when he is given wealth. Thus v. 41 speaks of his distress, v. 42 of the removal of distress, v. 43 of his finding his family, and v. 44 of his finding worldly goods.

49 This is a reminder; and most surely there is an excellent resort for those who guard (against evil),

هٰذَا ذِكْرٌ وَاِنَّ لِلْمُتَّقِيْنَ لَحُسْنَ مَاٰبٍ

50 The gardens of perpetuity, the doors are opened for them.[2148]

51 Reclining therein, calling therein for many fruits and drink.

مُتَّكِـِٕيْنَ فِيْهَا يَدْعُوْنَ فِيْهَا بِفَاكِهَةٍ

52 And with them shall be equals in age.[2148A]

وَعِنْدَهُمْ قٰصِرٰتُ الطَّرْفِ اَتْرَابٌ

53 This is what you are promised for the day of reckoning.

هٰذَا مَا تُوْعَدُوْنَ لِيَوْمِ الْحِسَابِ

54 Most surely this is Our sustenance: it shall never come to an end;

اِنَّ هٰذَا لَرِزْقُنَا مَا لَهٗ مِنْ نَّفَادٍ

55 This (shall be so); and most surely there is an evil resort for the inordinate ones:

هٰذَا وَاِنَّ لِلطّٰغِيْنَ لَشَرَّ مَاٰبٍ

56 Hell: they shall enter it, so evil is the resting-place.

جَهَنَّمَ يَصْلَوْنَهَا فَبِئْسَ الْمِهَادُ

57 This (shall be so); so let them taste it, boiling and intensely cold (drink).[2149]

هٰذَا فَلْيَذُوْقُوْهُ حَمِيْمٌ وَّغَسَّاقٌ

58 And other (punishment) of the same kind—of various sorts.

وَّاٰخَرُ مِنْ شَكْلِهٖۤ اَزْوَاجٌ

59 This is an army plunging in without consideration along with you; no welcome for them, surely they shall enter fire.

هٰذَا فَوْجٌ مُّقْتَحِمٌ مَّعَكُمْ لَا مَرْحَبًۢا بِهِمْ
اِنَّهُمْ صَالُوا النَّارِ

60 They shall say:[2149A] Nay! you—no welcome to you: you did proffer it to us, so evil is the resting-place.

قَالُوْا بَلْ اَنْتُمْ لَا مَرْحَبًۢا بِكُمْ اَنْتُمْ
قَدَّمْتُمُوْهُ لَنَا فَبِئْسَ الْقَرَارُ

2148 That is, the doors of these gardens are opened for them in this very life; or, they are always open to them.

2149 The word ghassáq, which is generally rendered as ichor, is really a qualification of drink (understood, as in the case of ḥamím, which means boiling), and means intensely cold (I'Ab, I Msd-TA). It also means stinking (S-LL), but being mentioned along with ḥamím, or boiling, the significance adopted suits the context. They shall be made to consume intensely hot and intensely cold drink, because they went to the two extremes and did not follow the mean.

2149A The speakers here are the weak followers, those addressed being the ringleaders. These followers are spoken of in the previous verse as an army plunging in without consideration along with you.

61 They shall say: Our Lord! whoever prepared it first for us, add Thou to him a double chastisement in the fire.

62 And they shall say: What is the matter with us that we do not see men whom we used to count among the vicious?

63 Was it that we (only) took them in scorn, or have our eyes (now) turned aside from them?

64 That most surely is the truth: the contending one with another of the inmates of the fire.

Opposition to Prophets

65–68. The Prophet's warning. 69, 70. A decision on high. 71–85. Devil's opposition to Adam as a typical case of opposition to prophets. 86–88. Truth of the prophecy will be made apparent.

65 Say: I am only a warner, and there is no god but Allah, the One, the Subduer (of all):

66 The Lord of the heavens and the earth and what is between them, the Mighty, the most Forgiving.

67 Say: It is a message of importance,[2150]

إِذْ قَالَ رَبُّكَ لِلْمَلٰٓئِكَةِ إِنِّي خَالِقٌ بَشَرًا مِّنْ طِينٍ ۝

2150 The message of importance is the prophecy of the utter discomfiture of the opponents of the Holy Prophet. But see also 2640.

2152 Note the connection with the previous verse, where the exalted chiefs are spoken of as contending about the appearance of the Holy Prophet, which is, as it were, explained by what follows here. The creation of Adam and the submission of the angels typifies the raising of a prophet and the submission to him of the good and the righteous. The mortal created from dust is the Prophet Muhammad (may peace and the blessings of Allah be upon him!), the angels that make obeisance are his holy companions, the evil spirit who leads people

72 So when I have made him complete and breathed into him of My inspiration, then fall down making obeisance to him.[a]

(Or, spirit. — a 56.)

73 And the angels did obeisance, all of them,

74 But not Iblis;[b] he was proud and he was one o the unbelievers.

(b 57, 58.)

75 He said: O Iblis! what prevented you that you should do obeisance to him whom I created with My two hands? Are you proud or are you of the exalted ones?

(Ar. thee. Ar. thou shouldst. Ar. art thou. Ar. art thou.)

76 He said: I am better than he; Thou hast created me of fire, and him Thou didst create of dust.[2153]

77 He said: Then get out of it, for surely you are driven away:

(Ar. thou art.)

78 And surely My curse is on you to the day of judgment.

(Ar. thee.)

79 He said: My Lord! then respite me to the day that they are raised.[c]

(c 1338.)

80 He said: Surely you are of the respited ones,

(Ar. thou art.)

81 Till the period of the time made known.[d]

(d 1338.)

82 He said: Then by Thy Might I will surely make them live an evil life,[e] all,

(e 1609.)

83 Except Thy servants from among them, the purified ones.

84 He said: The truth then is and the truth do I speak:

85 That I will most certainly fill hell with you and with those among them who follow you, all.

(Ar. thee. Ar. thee.)

86 Say: I do not ask you for any reward for it; nor am I of those who affect:

87 It is nothing but a reminder to the nations:

88 And most certainly you will come to know about it after a time.

CHAPTER XXXIX

THE COMPANIES

(Az-Zumar)

REVEALED AT MECCA

(8 sections and 75 verses)

Abstract:

Sec. 1. Obedience to Allah.
Sec. 2. Believers and unbelievers.
Sec. 3. The Qur-án is a perfect guidance.
Sec. 4. Rejecters shall be abased.
Sec. 5. Evil shall not be averted.
Sec. 6. Divine mercy.
Sec. 7. The final judgment.
Sec. 8. Each party meets with its desert.

The Title.

THE name of this chapter, The Companies, refers to the two classes, the believers and the unbelievers, which receive and reject the truth respectively, and the chapter deals with the fate of each.

Subject-matter.

The internal arrangement is clear. Obedience to Allah is required in the first section. Those who obey are the believers, and those who refuse to obey are the unbelievers, and the two are spoken of in the next section. The third shows that the Qur-án is a perfect guidance, and the fourth that its rejecters shall be punished. While the fifth emphasizes the punishment of rejecters, by stating that evil shall not be averted from those who persist in rejection, the sixth calls attention to Divine mercy, which is ever ready to take those by the hand who repent, and therefore sinners have no reason to despair. The last two sections speak of the coming of the judgment, when each of the two parties shall be made to taste that which it deserves.

Date of revelation.

Although this chapter is considered by both Muir and Rodwell to have been a late Meccan revelation, the opinion is not based on reliable data. The prophetical reference to the flight to Abyssinia contained in v. 10 has been misunderstood as being a reference to the later flight to Medina, and this error has led these critics to assign a late date to this chapter. The absence of reference to any plan against the Holy Prophet's life, while it deals with opposition to his cause, is a conclusive argument of its early revelation, and thus, like the other chapters of this group, it belongs to the early Meccan period.

SECTION 1

Obedience to Allah

1–3. Obedience required. 4. Allah has no son. 5, 6. His manifestation in His creation. 7. He loves gratefulness in man. 8. Man calls upon Allah alone in adversity. 9. Believers and unbelievers are not equal.

In the name of Allah, the Beneficent, the Merciful.

1 The revelation of the Book is from Allah, the Mighty, the Wise.

2 Surely We have revealed to you the Book with the truth, therefore serve Allah, being sincere to Him in obedience.

Ar. thee.

3 Now, surely, sincere obedience is due to Allah (alone), and (as for) those who take guardians besides Him, (saying), We do not serve them save that they may make us nearer to Allah,[2154] surely Allah will judge between them in that in which they differ; surely Allah does not guide him aright who is a liar, ungrateful.

4 If Allah desire to take a son to Himself, He will surely choose those He pleases from what He has created.[2155] Glory be to Him: He is Allah, the One, the Subduer (of all).

5 He has created the heavens and the earth with the truth; He makes the night cover

2154 The Arabs believed that they could only approach the Divine Being through the mediation of their idols, and they asserted that they worshipped idols only to attain nearness to the Divine Being. This is condemned by the Holy Qur-án as a polytheistic doctrine. But how many Muslims hold the same belief with respect to their pirs (spiritual leaders) and yet consider themselves to be monotheists!

2155 The Christian commentators think that the Qur-án does not refer to the doctrine of Jesus' sonship here. But that is a mistake. We find the Christian doctrine referred to and refuted in very early Meccan chapters, such as the 19th chapter, which was recited by the Muslim refugees in Abyssinia before the Negus, in or about the fifth year of the Prophet's mission. The Qur-án refers to the error of attributing a son to the Divine Being almost as frequently as to the doctrine of setting up idols with Allah. What is pointed out here is that no one holds a relation of peculiar sonship to Allah, but that it is His chosen servants, chosen above others from among His creation, that are metaphorically called His sons; because in being manifestations of the Divine attributes they stand to Allah in the same relation as a son stands to a father, being images of those attributes as a son is an image of a father. This is entirely in accordance with what is taught in the Bible, absolutely uprooting the Christian doctrine of the sonship of Jesus, who is regarded, not as a creature, but as the Creator.

2156 The word anzala (infinitive noun inzāl) is not applied only to the actual sending down of a thing, but also to making it accessible to men. Thus TA says:

انزال الشی قد یکون بنفسه و قد یکون بانزال اسبابه والهدایة الیه

i.e. the sending down of a thing is sometimes its actual sending down, and sometimes the procuring of its means and the attainment of it. It is in this sense that the cattle are spoken of here as being sent down for men. The eight of the cattle are the four pairs spoken of in 6:144. The four animals are mentioned particularly as being most useful for man.

9 What! he who is obedient during hours of the night, prostrating himself and standing, takes care of the hereafter and hopes for the mercy of his Lord! Say: Are those who know and those who do not know alike? Only the men of understanding are mindful.

Believers and Unbelievers

10. Good for doers of good. 11–14. Prophet a sincere believer. 15–16. Loss for unbelievers. 17–20. The pious shall be elevated. 21. A lesson in the growth and decay witnessed in physical nature.

10 Say: O my servants who believe! be careful of (your duty to) your Lord: for those who do good in this world is good, and Allah's earth is spacious;[2157] only the patient will be paid back their reward in full without measure.

2157 The words are a comfort for the Muslims, who were subjected to sufferings in their own land, and contain, no doubt, a prophetical allusion to the first flight, i.e. the flight to Abyssinia.

17 And (as for) those who keep off from the worship of the idols and turn to Allah, they shall have good news, therefore give good news to My servants,

18 Those who listen to the word, then follow the best of it;[2158] those are they whom Allah has guided, and those it is who are the men of understanding.

19 What! as for him then against whom the sentence of chastisement is due: What! can you save him who is in the fire?

Ar. word.

Ar. canst thou.

20 But (as for) those who are careful of (their duty to) their Lord, they shall have high places, above them higher places,[2159] built (for them), beneath which flow rivers; (this is) the promise of Allah: Allah will not fail in (His) promise.

21 Do you not see that Allah sends down water from the cloud, then makes it go along in the earth in springs, then brings forth therewith herbage of various sorts, then it withers so that you see it becoming yellow, then He makes it a thing crushed and broken into pieces?[2160] Most surely there is a reminder in this for the men of understanding.

Ar. dost thou.

Or, colours

2158 Attention is here drawn to the teachings of the Qur-án by describing them as the best words to which a man can listen. Or, since the Qur-án is meant for the whole of mankind, and therefore contains teachings for men in every grade of society or state of civilization, the faithful are enjoined to follow the best.

2159 This shows that there is an unceasing progress in the life after death, for the high places to which the righteous shall attain shall have places still higher above them. Thus the Muslim paradise is not a place for enjoyment, but for an unceasing advancement.

2160 The allusion is to the fate of nations; they are brought into existence, made to rise, then decay and are swept out of existence. This is also a solace to the Muslims that their opponents shall not retain their power for ever.

SECTION 3

The Qur-án is a Perfect Guidance

22, 23. The Qur-án is a light. 24–26. Its rejecters shall meet with disgrace. 27, 28. The Qur-án a perfect book. 29–31. Absolute submission to Allah necessary.

Ar. breast.

22 What! is he whose heart Allah has opened for Islam so that he is in a light from his Lord (like the hard-hearted)? Nay, woe to those whose hearts are hard against the remembrance of Allah; those are in clear error.

23 Allah has revealed the best announcement, a book conformable in its various parts,[2161] repeating, whereat do shudder the skins of those who fear their Lord, then their skins and their hearts become pliant to the remembrance of Allah; this is Allah's guidance, He guides with it whom He pleases; and (as for) him whom Allah makes err,[a] there is no guide for him.

a 44.

24 Is he then who has to guard himself with his own person against the evil chastisement on the resurrection day? And it will be said to the unjust: Taste what you earned.

25 Those before them rejected (prophets), therefore there came to them the chastisement from whence they perceived not.

26 So Allah made them taste the disgrace in this world's life, and certainly the chastisement of the hereafter is greater: did they but know!

2161 The Qur-án is here called كتابا متشابها i.e. a book conformable in its various parts. This claim is by no means insignificant. The Qur-án was revealed by portions during a period of twenty-three years, and during this period the circumstances under which the Holy Prophet lived were of such a nature that the history of no other man offers a similar combination of varying circumstances, and yet, through all these vicissitudes, the Qur-án shows a strict uniformity. The conformability of its various parts, however, signifies more than a mere uniformity; it signifies that some parts explain other parts. Mutashábih, it should be noted, signifies, according to the best authorities, that some parts of it verify other parts. Again, it is called masání, because it repeats over and over again the most important subjects, especially the doctrine of the Unity of the Divine Being. See also 387.

27 And certainly We have set forth to men in this Qur-án similitudes of every sort that they may mind.[2162]

28 An Arabic Qur-án without any crookedness, that they may guard (against evil).

29 Allah sets forth a parable: there is a man in whom are (several) partners differing with one another, and there is another man (devoted) wholly to a man. Are the two alike in condition? (All) praise is due to Allah: nay! most of them do not know.

Ar. thou shalt.

30 Surely you shall die and they (too) shall surely die.

31 Then surely on the day of resurrection you will contend one with another before your Lord.

Rejecters shall be abased

32. Rejection of truth. 33-35. Reward of those who accept. 36, 37. Allah is sufficient for His servant. 38-40. An abasing punishment. 41. The Qur-án a true revelation.

PART XXIV

32 Who is then more unjust than he who utters a lie against Allah and (he who) gives the lie to the truth when it comes to him; is there not in hell an abode for the unbelievers?

33 And he who brings the truth and (he who) accepts it as the truth—these are they that guard (against evil).

34 They shall have with their Lord what they please; that is the reward of the doers of good;

35 So that Allah will do away with the worst of what they did and give them their reward for the best of what they do.

2162 The Holy Qur-án repeatedly claims to be a collection of the best teachings for the moral and spiritual welfare of man. It also claims, in these words, to be a perfect book as not only containing all the necessary teachings, but also answering all the objections of its opponents. See also 1467 and 1785.

36 Is not Allah sufficient for His servant? And they seek to frighten you with those besides Him;[2163] and whomsoever Allah makes err,[a] there is no guide for him.

37 And whom Allah guides, there is none that can lead him astray; is not Allah Mighty, the Lord of retribution?

38 And should you ask them, Who created the heavens and the earth? they would most certainly say: Allah. Say: Have you then considered that what you call upon besides Allah, would they, if Allah desire to afflict me with harm, be the removers of His harm, or (would they), if Allah desire to show me mercy, be the withholders of His mercy? Say: Allah is sufficient for me; on Him do the reliant rely.

39 Say: O my people! work in your place, surely I am a worker, so you will come to know

40 Who it is to whom there shall come a chastisement which will disgrace him, and to whom will be due a lasting chastisement.[2164]

41 Surely We have revealed to you the Book with the truth for the sake of men; so whoever follows the right way, it is for his own soul, and whoever errs, he errs only to its detriment; and you are not a custodian over them.

2163 The superstitious Arabs no doubt believed that their idols could work harm to men who did not admit their authority, and it is to this that reference is made. The stories of the breaking of Al-lát and Al-'Uzzá relate to a much later period, while the revelation of this chapter belongs to the early Meccan period.

2164 Two kinds of punishment are plainly spoken of, viz. the punishment that will bring disgrace, which is clearly the punishment of this life, and the lasting punishment that the wicked receive in the life after death. The first of these demonstrates the truth of the other.

SECTION 5

Evil shall not be averted

42. Dead shall not return to life. 43–48. Intercession and redemption would not avail. 49–52. Unbelievers will suffer the evil consequences.

42 Allah takes the souls at the time of their death, and those that die not, during their sleep; then He withholds those on whom He has passed the decree of death[2165] and sends the others back till an appointed term; most surely there are signs in this for a people who reflect.

43 Or, have they taken intercessors besides Allah? Say: What! even though they did not ever have control over anything, nor do they understand.

44 Say: Allah's is the intercession altogether; His is the kingdom of the heavens and the earth, then to Him you shall be brought back.

45 And when Allah alone is mentioned, the hearts of those who do not believe in the hereafter shrink, and when those besides Him are mentioned, lo! they are joyful.[2166]

46 Say: O Allah! Originator of the heavens and the earth, Knower of the unseen and the seen! Thou (only) judgest between Thy servants as to that wherein they differ.

47 And had those who are unjust all that is in the earth and the like of it with it, they 2165 This verse affords a conclusive proof that the Qur-án does not admit the return to life in this world of those who are actually dead. It states that the soul is taken away either in sleep, in which case it is returned, or at death, in which case it is withheld and is not allowed to return. Thus the soul can only be returned if death has not actually occurred. This verse completely refutes all stories of the dead miraculously returning to life. See also 1659 and 1731.

2166 This is true not only of the Meccan unbelievers, but of most of those who call themselves believers. Elsewhere the Holy Qur-án says: "And most of them do not believe in Allah without associating others with Him" (12 : 106). It is quite true that even most of the Muslims are not satisfied if Allah alone is mentioned, and they like that some of their saints should be mentioned along with Allah.

would certainly offer it as ransom (to be saved) from the evil of the chastisement on the day of resurrection; and what they never thought of shall become plain to them from Allah.[2166A]

48 And the evil (consequences) of what they wrought shall become plain to them,[2166B] and the very thing they mocked at shall beset them.

49 So when harm afflicts a man he calls upon Us; then, when We give him a favour from Us, he says: I have been given it only by means of knowledge.[2167] Nay, it is a trial, but most of them do not know.

50 Those before them did say it indeed, but what they earned availed them not.

51 So there befell them the evil (consequences) of what they earned; and (as for) those who are unjust from among these, there shall befall them the evil (consequences) of what they earn, and they shall not escape.[2168]

52 Do they not know that Allah makes ample the means of subsistence to whom He pleases, and He straitens; most surely there are signs in this for a people who believe.

2166A What they never thought of signifies the overthrow of their power in this life and the manifestation of the evil consequences of their deeds in the hereafter.

2166B The fact that the heaven and hell of the next life are only physical manifestations of the spiritual realities of this life is stated here in the most clear and forcible language. The evil consequences of what they do are hidden from the eye in this life, but they shall become plain in the next life.

2167 There is no difficulty about the significance of this passage. When a man is afflicted he calls upon Allah, but when Allah favours him he does not attribute it to Allah, but to his own cleverness and knowledge.

2168 Here is another prophecy, in the clearest words, of the distress that shall overtake the Meccans.

SECTION 6

Divine Mercy

53. Sinners should not despair. 54–59. A warning. 60–63. The law of requital.

53 Say: O My servants! who have acted extravagantly against their own souls, do not despair of the mercy of Allah; surely Allah forgives the faults altogether; surely He is the Forgiving, the Merciful.[2169]

54 And return to your Lord time after time and submit to Him before there comes to you the chastisement, then you shall not be helped.

55 And follow the best[2170] that has been revealed to you from your Lord before there comes to you the chastisement all of a sudden while you do not even perceive;

56 Lest a soul should say: O woe to me! for what I fell short of my duty to Allah, and most surely I was of those who laughed to scorn;

57 Or it should say: Had Allah guided me, I would certainly have been of those who guard (against evil);

58 Or it should say when it sees the chastisement: Were there only a returning for me, I should be of the doers of good.

59 Aye! My communications came to you, but you rejected them, and you were proud and you were one of the unbelievers.

2169 The mercy and love of Allah, which are much talked of in other religions, find their true and practical expression in Islam. No religion gives the solace and comfort which we find in this verse. It discloses the all-comprehensive mercy of Allah, before which the sins of men become quite insignificant. He is not a mere judge who decides between two parties, but a Master who deals with His servants as He pleases, and therefore He can forgive the guilty without injustice to anybody.

2170 Aḥsan, or best, stands for the revelation of the Qur-án. It is the best revelation, for the manifestations of Divine love and mercy which find expression in it are not to be met with anywhere else.

CHAPTER XL

THE BELIEVER

(Al-mu'min)

REVEALED AT MECCA

(9 sections and 85 verses)

Abstract:

Sec. 1. Protection of the faithful.
Sec. 2. Failure of the opponents.
Sec. 3–5. A warning in Moses' history.
Sec. 6. Apostles are assisted.
Sec. 7. The power of Allah.
Sec. 8, 9. The end of opposition.

The Title, context, and date of revelation.

FROM this, the 40th to the 46th chapter, another group of seven chapters is formed which all begin with Ḥá mím, and are therefore called ẕwát-i-Ḥámím, i.e. the chapters beginning with Ḥá mím. They all belong to the period when opposition to the Holy Prophet was persistent and determined, and active persecution of the Muslims had begun, which culminated in their first flight to Abyssinia; and therefore, like the last group, belong to the close of the early Meccan period. All these chapters are further akin inasmuch as they all offer a solace to the persecuted Muslims, warn the persecutors, and foretell the triumph of truth and the failure of opposition. In fact, the failure of opposing forces is the chief theme of these chapters; this is made plain by a saying of the Holy Prophet, for which see 2171. There is little history of the earlier prophets, with the exception of Moses and Abraham, and bare references to others or the fate of their people. The Unity and the Power of Allah is the constant theme, and there are frequent appeals to the unbelievers to take advantage of Divine mercy.

Subject-matter.

The chapter opens with a statement relating to the Divine plan for the protection of the faithful, who are told that they should not be misled by the power of the opponents, whose power will soon be broken. The second section continues the subject, only laying greater stress upon the failure of the opponents and the approach of their doom, when they should be perfectly helpless. The next three sections repeat the warning with reference to Moses' history. The sixth states that the apostles of God and the believers in them are always assisted against their opponents, while the seventh calls attention to the great power of Allah, with Whom nothing is impossible. The last two sections again deal with the end of opposition, repeatedly warning the unbelievers.

2171 Ḥámím occurs in the beginning of this and the six chapters that follow, which are called the ذوات حم. That the letters signify a name or names of the Divine Being is made certain by a saying of the Holy Prophet: ان بيتم فقولوا حم لا ينصرون meaning, if you are attacked by night, say ḥámím, they shall not be made victorious (Mgh-LL), or the meaning of the latter part is O God! they shall not be made victorious (I As, TA-LL). It is also related that an Arab of the desert questioned the Holy Prophet about ḥá mím, as to what it was. The Prophet's reply was اسماء و فواتح سور, i.e. names and opening words of chapters (AH). Reading it along with the first saying, it would appear that by names are meant names of the Divine Being which are contained as abbreviations in the letters ḥá mím, for ḥámím as one word is not one of the names of the Divine Being. The most probable suggestion seems to be that the ḥá stands for Ḥamíd, i.e. the Praised, and the mím stands for Majíd, i.e. the Glorious, the two names of the Divine Being which often occur together, and the significance of the names is quite in consonance with the significance of the saying quoted above. The two letters may also stand for Ar-Raḥmán and Ar-Raḥím, i.e. the Beneficent, the Merciful One, or for Al-Ḥayy and Al-Qayyúm, i.e. the Living and Self-subsistent God.

2172 It is noteworthy that, of the four attributes, the first two and the last refer to Divine forgiveness, mercy, and bounty, while only one refers to punishment of evil, and thus the attribute of mercy always preponderates even when punishment is spoken of.

2173 The literal significance of akhz is the taking hold of a thing or withholding it. But akhaza also signifies he gained the mastery over a person and killed him (Zj, LA-LL), or he destroyed him or extirpated him (Msb, Mf-LL), or he punished or chastised him (LA-LL).

2174 It is clear that those who bear the 'arsh or the power are not the bearers of any material thing, but the bearers of some responsibility with respect to the Divine power; in other words, the manifestations of the Divine power. These are, in fact, the angels who are charged with the affairs of the world, while those around Him are the angels nearest to Him, through whom the Divine decrees are made known to those entrusted with the affairs of the world. For a full discussion on this word see 2555. The istighfár of angels is really their asking of protection for the righteous, so that the physical as well as the spiritual laws prevailing in the world contribute to their protection against their opponents. See 2194 for this significance. Bḍ explains 'arsh as meaning the original of the material universe.

2175 Here we are told that Divine mercy is as comprehensive as Divine knowledge, and they both extend over all things. No other religion takes such a broad view of the mercy of the Divine Being.

2176 The wives and the offspring of the faithful are here mentioned as entering paradise along with them. So far as the promise relates to this life, the gardens which the faithful were made to inherit, the fertile lands of Mesopotamia, were given them for a perpetual inheritance, and they settled in those lands.

SECTION 2

Failure of the Opponents

10, 11. Unbelievers regret their doings. 12-14. God's kingdom shall be established. 15-20. Their doom is decreed justly.

10 Surely those who disbelieve shall be cried out to: Certainly Allah's hatred (of you) when you were called upon to the faith and you rejected, is much greater than your hatred of yourselves.[2177]

11 They shall say: Our Lord! twice didst Thou make us subject to death, and twice hast Thou given us life,[2178] so we do confess our faults: is there then a way to get out?

12 That is because when Allah alone was called upon, you disbelieved, and when associates were given to Him, you believed;[2179] so judgment belongs to Allah, the High, the Great.

13 He it is Who shows you His signs and sends down for you sustenance from heaven,[2180] and none minds but he who turns (to Him) again and again.

14 Therefore call upon Allah, being sincere to Him in obedience, though the unbelievers are averse:

إِنَّ الَّذِينَ كَفَرُوا يُنَادَوْنَ لَمَقْتُ اللَّهِ
أَكْبَرُ مِن مَّقْتِكُمْ أَنفُسَكُمْ إِذْ تُدْعَوْنَ

فَادْعُوا اللَّهَ مُخْلِصِينَ لَهُ الدِّينَ
وَلَوْ كَرِهَ الْكَافِرُونَ ○

2177 The violent hatred referred to is the hatred of the evil-doers for themselves, when the evil consequences of their evil deeds become manifest to them. If those who loved evil so violently hate themselves, how much greater must be the hatred of Allah, the Fountain-head of purity, for them when they committed those deeds. How Forbearing and Merciful was He not to visit them with immediate punishment!

2178 The first death is that which marks the end of life in this world, and the second death is the spiritual death which is the hell of the next life. The two lives are the natural life of man and his being raised to taste of the consequences of his deeds. Generally however, the first state of death is considered to be the state of nothingness from which man is brought into existence.

2179 And yet how strange it is that a man should not believe in the pure Unity of Allah, and that he should believe that there are associates with Him.

2180 The passage shows what is the significance of sending down a thing from heaven. The meaning is simply that He provides the means of sustenance, and that sustenance is not provided by the idols or their associate-gods. Or, the sustenance from heaven means the spiritual sustenance.

15 Exalter of the degrees, Lord of power :[a] He makes the inspiration to light by His command upon whom He pleases of His servants,[2181] that he may warn (men) of the day of meeting, 16 (Of) the day when they shall come forth; nothing concerning them remains hidden to Allah.[2182] To whom belongs the kingdom this day? To Allah, the One, the Subduer (of all).

17 This day every soul shall be rewarded for what it has earned; no injustice (shall be done) this day: surely Allah is quick in reckoning.

18 And warn them of the day that draws near,[2183] when hearts shall rise up to the throats, grieving inwardly;[2184] the unjust shall not have any compassionate friend nor any intercessor who should be obeyed.

19 He knows the stealthy looks and that which the breasts conceal.

20 And Allah judges with the truth; and those whom they call upon besides Him cannot judge aught; surely Allah is the Hearing, the Seeing.

2181 That the word rúḥ as used in the Holy Qur-án conveys the meaning of inspiration or revelation is settled conclusively by this verse, because the soul is given to every one, while the rúḥ is here spoken of as being only granted to the elect, and the object of it is to warn men; hence it is the Divine revelation.

2182 It is implied that the hidden consequences of the deeds shall be made manifest on that day, for from Allah nothing is hidden. This is made clearer in the next verse.

2184 The verse clearly depicts the state of the hearts of the unbelievers on the day of the conquest of Mecca by the Holy Prophet.

A Warning in Moses' History

21, 22. How nations met their doom previously. 23, 24. Moses' warning to Pharaoh and Korah. 25–27. Pharaoh persecutes the Israelites.

21 Have they not travelled in the earth and seen how was the end of those who were before them? Mightier than these were they in strength and in fortifications[2185] in the land, but Allah destroyed them for their sins; and there was not for them any defender against Allah.

22 That was because there came to them their apostles with clear arguments, but they rejected (them), therefore Allah destroyed them; surely He is Strong, Severe in retribution.

23 And certainly We sent Moses with Our communications and clear authority,

25 So when he brought to them the truth from Us, they said:[2187] Slay the sons of those who believe with him and keep their women alive; and the struggle of the unbelievers will only come to a state of perdition.

26 And Pharaoh said: Let me alone that I may slay Moses and let him call upon his Lord; surely I fear that he will change your religion or that he will make mischief to appear in the land.

2185 Āsār is plural of asar, which means a mark, and also a monument or memorial of antiquity. Here it is considered to signify the great buildings and fortifications (JB).

2186 The words do not indicate that the message to Pharaoh and Haman and Korah was given at one and the same time. All that is meant is that these three were the chief men who did not accept his message and were destroyed. Of these Korah was an Israelite who rejected Moses' prophethood. See 1895.

2187 It is not meant that all the three persons mentioned in the previous verse met Moses with this reply. A perusal of the verses that follow will show that the speaker here is only Pharaoh, as advised by his chiefs, both he and Haman being mentioned by name, the latter in v. 36, while no mention is made of Korah.

27 And Moses said: Surely I take refuge with my Lord and your Lord from every proud one who does not believe in the day of reckoning.

A Warning in Moses' History

28 And a believing man of Pharaoh's people who hid his faith said: What! will you slay a man because he says, My Lord is Allah, and indeed he has brought to you clear arguments from your Lord? and if he be a liar, on him will be his lie, and if he be truthful, there will befall you some of that which he threatens you (with): surely Allah does not guide him who is extravagant, a liar:[2188]

29 O my people! yours is the kingdom this day, being masters in the land, but who will help us against the punishment of Allah if it come to us? Pharaoh said: I do not show you aught but that which I see (myself), and I do not make you follow any but the right way.

30 And he who believed said: O my people! surely I fear for you the like of what befell the parties:[2189]

31 The like of what befell the people of Noah and 'Ad

2188 He says that some of that with which they are threatened will befall them, because the mercy of Allah wards off some of the deserved punishment. Compare the believer's argument with that advanced by Gamaliel to deal leniently with the apostles of Christ: "Refrain from these men, and let them alone; for if this counsel or this work be of men, it will come to naught: but if it be of God, ye cannot overthrow it; lest haply ye be found even to fight against God" (Acts 5: 38, 39).

2189 يوم الاحزاب signifies وقائع الامم الماضية i.e. the events which befell the people of yore (Bd). By the parties are meant the parties who organized opposition to the prophets. The word yaum is used in Arabic, as its equivalent day is used in English, to signify a contest or a fight (LL), and in the phrase ايام العرب lit. the days of the Arabs, it signifies accidents or struggles. Hence I render it as what befell. There is nothing extraordinary in an Egyptian knowing how certain people on the borders of Arabia perished.

33 The day on which you will turn back retreating; there shall be no saviour for you from Allah, and whomsoever Allah causes to err,[a] there is no guide for him:[2191]

34 And certainly Joseph came to you before with clear arguments, but you ever remained in doubt as to what he brought; until when he died, you said: Allah will never raise an apostle after him. Thus does Allah cause him to err who is extravagant, a doubter, 35 Those who dispute concerning the communications of Allah without any authority that He has given them: greatly hated is it by Allah and by those who believe. Thus does Allah set a seal over the heart of every proud, haughty one.

36 And Pharaoh said: O Haman! build for me a tower that I may attain the means of access,

37 The means of access to the heavens, then reach the God of Moses, and I surely think him to be a liar.[2192] And thus the evil of his deed was made fairseeming to Pharaoh, and he was turned away from the way; and the struggle of Pharaoh was not (to end) in aught but destruction.

2190 يوم التناد means the day of calling out to one another, i.e. the day of distress on which one will call out to the other for help, none being able to help himself or another. Every day of distress is the day of calling out, and the description need not be limited to the day of judgment. On the other hand, the day meant here, as the next verse also shows, is clearly the day of the doom which overtook these people in this life.

2191 Who it is whom Allah causes to err is explained in the very next verse: "Thus does Allah cause him to err who is extravagant, a doubter: those who dispute concerning the communications of Allah without any authority that He has given them."

A Warning in Moses' History

38–44. The believer reasserts his warning. 45. Doom overtakes Pharaoh. 46–50. The leaders of evil and those who follow them reproach each other.

39 O my people! this life of the world is only a (passing) enjoyment, and surely the hereafter is the abode to settle:

41 And, O my people! how is it that I call you to salvation and you call me to the fire?

44 So you shall remember what I say to you, and I entrust my affair to Allah: surely Allah sees the servants.

45 So Allah protected him from the evil (consequences) of what they planned, and the most evil chastisement overtook Pharaoh's people:

2193 There is a most emphatic promise here that the apostles are assisted in this life, and however greatly they may be persecuted, they shall be made to triumph over their enemies in the end.

Ar. thy. Ar. thy.	your fault[2194] and celebrate the praise of your Lord in the evening and the morning.	لِذَنْبِكَ وَسَبِّحْ بِحَمْدِ رَبِّكَ بِالْعَشِيِّ وَالْإِبْكَارِ

2194 The words استغفر لذنبك occurring here and repeated in 47 : 19 are considered by a Christian to be the chief reason for rejecting the message of the Holy Prophet, for the words, it is asserted, show that the Holy Prophet was not sinless, and being himself a sinful man, he could not purify others from sin. Such is briefly the Christian contention against Islam. The first thing to be borne in mind in this connection is, that fully five times the Holy Prophet is described in the Holy Qur-án as being one who purified others from sin, in 2 : 129, 151 ; 3 : 163 ; 9 : 103 ; and 62 : 2, and hence, if consistency is any requirement in the interpretation of a book, no word of the Holy Qur-án can be so interpreted in such a manner as to contain a significance opposed to these plain statements. In fact, if we turn over the pages of the sacred books of all the religions, we do not find any prophet or reformer so plainly described as a purifier of others as the Holy Prophet Muhammad. It is also worth noting that the description of the Holy Prophet as being a purifier of sins is not in the nature of a mere assertion, for it occurs only in the Medina suras, when the Holy Prophet had practically shown himself to be a purifier of sins. He had already purified many members of a nation that had for centuries been immersed in the grossest immoralities. Hence, consistency requires us not to attach a significance to any words of the Holy Qur-án opposed to these plain statements.

Again, the Holy Prophet is repeatedly spoken of in the Holy Qur-án as walking in the way of perfect righteousness and entire submission to Allah. Obedience to the Apostle is obedience to Allah (4 : 80) ; if you love Allah, then follow me, Allah will love you (3 : 30) ; these and a hundred other statements of a similar nature clearly prove that the Qur-án does not allow us to attribute sin to the Holy Prophet. And a perusal of the Holy Book further proves that the Qur-án does not allow us to attribute sin to any prophet: "They do not precede Him in speech, and only according to His commandment do they act" (21 : 27). And the doctrine of the sinlessness of all the prophets, with very slight differences, is held by all the followers of the Holy Qur-án.

Now we take the words under discussion. The two words occurring in the phrase واستغفر لذنبك are istighfár and zanb. The latter of these words has been fully explained in 393, where it is shown that the word does not actually mean sin, the exact word for which in the Arabic language is ism. The word zanb, in fact, includes, as there shown, all shortcomings resulting from inattention or incapacity, and also defects or imperfections of which the result may be disagreeable. Then we come to istighfár. It is of the measure of istif'ál, and signifies the asking of ghafr or maghfirah. According to Rgh ghafr means الباس ما يصونه عن الدنس i.e. the covering of a thing with that which will protect it from dirt. Hence the words ghufrán and maghfirah on the part of Allah signify, according to the same authority, His granting protection to His servants against chastisement. And istaghfara is clearly explained as meaning he sought of God covering or forgiveness or pardon (TA-LL). It will thus be seen that the idea of protection is the dominant idea in the word ghafr and its derivatives, and the word not only signifies the forgiveness of sin, but also the covering of sin, which is really the granting of protection against sin. And LL quotes several authorities showing that the phrase غفر الامر بغفرته (lit. he covered the affair with its covering) means he rectified the affair with that wherewith it was requisite that it should be rectified. Thus ghafr clearly includes two cases : (1) as against a fault that has been committed, protection from punishment, and (2) as against a fault that may be committed or to which man is liable, protection from the commission of it, which corresponds really to rectification. And istighfár therefore includes both covering and forgiveness, i.e. the seeking of protection against the commission of a fault to which a man is liable and the seeking of protection against the punishment of a fault that has been committed.

56 Surely (as for) those who dispute about the communications of Allah without any إِنَّ الَّذِينَ يُجَادِلُونَ فِي آيَاتِ اللَّهِ بِغَيْرِ

Let us see now how the word is used in the Holy Qur-án. Its use in connection with some of the prophets may be disputed. But there are occasions where the word clearly carries a wider significance. For instance, when Moses finds his people guilty of the worship of a calf and accepts the excuse of his brother Aaron showing that he had no part in making the calf, he prays to Allah, saying, رب اغفرلی و لاخی i.e. My Lord! grant protection to me and my brother (7 : 151), this being the correct significance, for no sin was committed by him or his brother, and therefore it was a prayer to be protected from committing a sin. Again, in connection with prohibited foods, where permission is given to use prohibited food when compelled by necessity, it is contained in the following words: "But whoever is driven to necessity, not desiring, nor exceeding the limit, no sin shall be upon him: surely Allah is Forgiving (Ghafúr), Merciful" (2 : 173). It will be noted that though it is expressly stated here that no sin rests upon a person in such a case, yet the Divine attribute following it is ghafúr, i.e. One granting protection, ordinarily rendered as Forgiving.

The following instances of the use of ghafr and its derivatives make the sense still clearer. At the end of the second chapter is taught a prayer in which occur the words واعف عنا واغفرلنا و ارحمنا meaning, And pardon us and grant us protection and have mercy on us (2 : 286). The word ighfir can here be rendered only as meaning grant protection, for if we render it as forgive the word becomes redundant, there being already the word pardon. Three distinct things are here prayed for, viz. (1) pardon for the sins already committed; (2) protection from sins to which one is liable; (3) mercy or favour from God. And the three supplications are well-arranged, for mercy or favour is shown only when a man is protected from the commission of sins, and this requires that if any fault has already been committed its evil consequences may not overtake a man. Again, we have in 17 : 25 ان تكونوا صلحين فانه كان للاوابين غفورا i.e. If you are the doers of good deeds, then He is surely the Granter of protection to those who turn to Him frequently. Here I render Ghafúr not as the Forgiving, but as the Granter of protection, for there is no mention of sinners or sins here, and consequently no forgiveness of sins. For God to be Ghafúr here, the condition is, if you are ṣáliḥín. Now, ṣáliḥ is one who does good deeds (ṣáliḥát being the word which is throughout the Holy Qur-án used to signify good deeds, which are again and again commended), and it is for the doers of good deeds that Allah is said to be ghafúr, the sense being made still clearer by the concluding word awwábín, i.e. those who turn to Him again and again, a word always used in connection with the righteous servants. Hence, Ghafúr, in this case, is clearly the Granter of protection against the commission of sins to which a man is liable.

Another very clear instance of this use of the word is met with in 40 : 7, where the angels are shown as praying for the righteous in the following words: Grant protection to those who turn to Thee and follow Thy way; where in the original the word ighfir is used, which cannot here be translated as meaning forgive, for not forgiveness of sins but protection from sins is the thing required for those who follow the way of Allah. And what follows there shows this to be the correct significance, for 40 : 9, as it were, explains the meaning when it says: And keep them from evil deeds. The use of the word ighfir in 66 : 8 is conclusive on this point, for there those who have entered paradise are made to say: "Our Lord! make perfect for us our light, and grant us protection," the words in the original being ighfir laná, a prayer for the forgiveness of sins being quite out of question after entry into paradise.

The meaning of استغفر لذنبك therefore is ask protection for your fault, i.e. against the imperfections of human nature which make a man liable to sin unless he is protected by Allah. This is the only significance which is in consonance with the character of the prophets of God as depicted in the Holy Qur-án. Another thing to be borne in mind, however, is that it is a mistake to consider the person addressed when in the authority that has come to them, there is naught in their breasts but (a desire) to become great which they shall never attain to; therefore seek refuge in Allah, surely He is the Hearing, the Seeing.

57 Certainly the creation of the heavens and the earth is greater than the creation of the men, but most people do not know.[2195]

58 And the blind and the seeing are not alike, nor those who believe and do good and the evil-doer; little is it that you are mindful.

Ar. and.
Ar. nor.

59 Most surely the hour is coming, there is no doubt therein, but most people do not believe.

60 And your Lord says: Call upon Me, I will answer you; surely those who are proud for My service shall soon enter hell abased.

SECTION 7

The Power of Allah

61-64. Allah is the Maker of all things. 65, 66. He alone deserves to be worshipped. 67, 68. Creator of man.

61 Allah is He Who made for you the night that you may rest therein and the day to see; most surely Allah is Gracious to men, but most men do not give thanks.

62 That is Allah, your Lord, the Creator of every thing; there is no God but He; whence are you then turned away?

63 Thus were turned away those who denied the communications of Allah.

اَللّٰهُ الَّذِيْ جَعَلَ لَكُمُ الَّيْلَ لِتَسْكُنُوْا فِيْهِ

singular to be always the Holy Prophet himself. Very often in the Qur-án it is the reader or any and every person that is addressed, and there is nothing to show that the Holy Prophet Muhammad is the person addressed here or in 47 : 19, where the same phrase occurs again. For another explanation see 2307.

2195 By an-nás, or the men, some understand that ad-dajjál, or the Antichrist, is meant (Ma'alim ut Tanzil), another indication that Antichrist is not the name of a person. The same authority adduces the following saying of the Holy Prophet: "Hishám bin Amir relates

The End of Opposition

69–71. The rejecters' plight. 72–76. Their helplessness. 77. Truth of Divine promise. 78. Opposition to apostles has always failed.

75 That is because you exulted in the land unjustly and because you behaved insolently.

77 So be patient, surely the promise of Allah is true. So should We make you (Ar. thee.) see part of what We threaten them with, or should We cause you (Ar. thee.) to die, to Us shall they be returned.[2197]
78 And certainly We sent apostles before you (Ar. thee.): there are some of them that We have mentioned to you (Ar. thee.) and there are others (Ar. some of them.) whom We have not mentioned to you (Ar. thee.); and it was not meet for an apostle that he should bring a sign except with Allah's permission, but when the command of Allah came, judgment was given with truth, and those who treated (it) as a lie were lost.

having heard the Apostle of Allah saying that from the creation of man to the coming of the Hour there is no creation greater in temptation than that of the Antichrist." And the temptations of the present age bear testimony to the truth of these words. But the meaning is clear if we give an-nás its ordinary significance.

2196 A party of the Quraish were brought with fetters on their necks after the battle of Badr, while another party, who fell on the field, were dragged into their graves to taste of the punishment of their evil deeds in the life after death.

2197 The statement is made only to impress that they must suffer the evil consequences of their deeds, whether the Prophet lives to see their punishment or dies before they are punished.

SECTION 9

The End of Opposition

79, 80. Allah's favours. 81–84. A lesson in the fate of previous nations. 85. Punishment is not averted when it comes.

79 Allah is He who made the cattle for you that you may ride on some of them, and some of them you eat.

80 And there are advantages for you in them, and that you may attain thereon a want which is in your breasts,[2197A] and upon them and upon the ships you are borne.

81 And He shows you His signs: which then of Allah's signs will you deny?

82 Have they not then journeyed in the land and seen how was the end of those before them? They were more (in numbers) than these and greater in strength and in fortifications in the land, but what they earned did not avail them.

83 Then when their apostles came to them with clear arguments, they exulted in what they had with them of knowledge, and there beset them that which they used to mock.

84 But when they saw Our punishment, they said: We believe in Allah alone and we deny what we used to associate with Him.

85 But their belief was not going to profit them when they had seen Our punishment; (this is) Allah's law, which has indeed obtained in the matter of His servants, and there the unbelievers are lost.

Abstract :

Sec. 1. Invitation to the truth.
Sec. 2. The warning.
Sec. 3. Man's evidence against himself.
Sec. 4. Believers strengthened.
Sec. 5. Effect of the revelation.
Sec. 6. Gradual spread of truth.

General remarks.

THIS chapter bears the name of its initial letters, but the word fuṣṣilat, i.e. made plain, is added to distinguish it from other chapters of the same group. It is the second chapter of the Ḥá mím group. As regards its subject-matter, date of revelation, and its connection with the preceding chapter, the introductory note to the last chapter is sufficient. The first section contains an invitation to the acceptance of the truth ; the second gives a warning in case of persistence in rejection ; the third refers to the evidence of man's own faculties against the rejection of truth ; the fourth shows that believers are strengthened by inspiration ; the fifth points to the effect of revelation, which gives life to those who are morally and spiritually dead and heals the spiritual diseases of man. But if all these warnings and arguments are not heeded, the doom is inevitable, the signs of which could be witnessed in the gradual spread of truth.

4 A herald of good news and a warner, but most of them turn aside so they hear not.

5 And they say: Our hearts are under coverings from that to which you call us, and there is a heaviness in our ears, and a veil hangs between us and you,[2198] so work, we too are working.

7 (To) those who do not give alms and they are unbelievers in the hereafter.

8 (As for) those who believe and do good, they shall surely have a reward never to be cut off.

SECTION 2

The Warning

9–12. Disbelief in the Creator. 13. Warning like that of 'Ád and Samood. 14–18. How those people were dealt with.

9 Say: What! do you indeed disbelieve in Him who created the earth in two periods, and do you set up equals with Him: that is the Lord of the worlds?

10 And He made in it mountains above its surface, and He blessed therein and made therein its foods, in four periods:[2199] alike for the seekers.[2200]

قُلْ أَئِنَّكُمْ لَتَكْفُرُونَ بِالَّذِي خَلَقَ الْأَرْضَ فِي يَوْمَيْنِ وَتَجْعَلُونَ لَهُ أَندَادًا ۚ ذَٰلِكَ رَبُّ الْعَالَمِينَ ○
وَجَعَلَ فِيهَا رَوَاسِيَ مِن فَوْقِهَا وَبَارَكَ فِيهَا وَقَدَّرَ فِيهَا أَقْوَاتَهَا فِي أَرْبَعَةِ أَيَّامٍ سَوَاءً لِّلسَّائِلِينَ ○

2198 Note that the coverings of the hearts, the heaviness of the ears, and the hanging of the veils are used simply to indicate their own determined rejection of the truth; they resolved neither to open their hearts, lest the truth should enter them, nor to lend their ears so that they may even hear the preaching of the Prophet. This being their first attitude towards the truth, it was only natural that seals should have been set on their hearts and their ears. In fact, it was their own act which brought about that consequence.

2199 Most of the commentators regard the four periods here as including the first two, so as to make the whole (including the two periods of v. 12) to be six periods, to make the statement tally with the description repeatedly given elsewhere in the Qur-án to the effect that the heavens and the earth were created in six periods. But I regard these passages in a different light. That the creation in six periods or days does not refer to the time actually taken in making the heavens and the earth is noted even by the earlier commentators; for, in the first place, the day is a particular period of time, the extent of which depends on certain circumstances relating to the earth and the sun, and it is those very things that are referred to as being created in so many days; and, secondly, because time itself is a created thing (JB). In fact, the six periods, or the two or four periods spoken of here, refer to so many stages in the creation of those things; and accordingly the creation of the heavens and the earth in six periods signifies the six stages through which they have passed; the same six stages are spoken of here with regard to the earth, the two periods of v. 12 being quite distinct from it.

2200 The meaning of this passage is that the foods which are made in the earth are equally accessible to all seekers.

2201 The reference here is to the Divine laws working throughout the universe and the whole of nature being subject to laws.

2202 The first thirteen verses of this chapter were recited by the Holy Prophet when 'Utba bin Rabi'a came to him with a message from the Quraish. The message was to the effect that the Prophet should discontinue speaking ill of their gods and condemning their ways, and then they would be willing to make him their chief, or give him the most beautiful woman in marriage, or collect wealth for him.

When 'Utba had delivered his message the Holy Prophet read these verses, but when he reached v. 13, warning the Meccans of the fate of 'Ád and Samood, 'Utba entreated him to speak no more, and went back to the Quraish to make known to them the Prophet's reply (Rz).

16 So We sent on them a furious wind in unlucky days, that We may make them taste the chastisement of abasement in this world's life; and certainly the chastisement of the hereafter is much more abasing, and they shall not be helped.[2204]

فَأَرْسَلْنَا عَلَيْهِمْ رِيحًا صَرْصَرًا فِي أَيَّامٍ نَحِسَاتٍ

21 And they shall say to their skins: Why have you borne witness against us? They shall say: Allah Who makes everything speak has made us speak, and He created you at first, and to Him you shall be brought back.

2203 The coming of the prophets from before and behind signifies their impressing the truth of their message upon their people in every possible way. Some understand the coming of the prophets from near and from far (JB).

2204 The Quraish are warned in these words of an abasing punishment in this life, and a still more abasing punishment in the hereafter. By unlucky days are meant the days of drought.

2205 'Amy is metaphorically used in relation to the mind, as meaning an erring; the connection between the two meanings being the not finding or not taking the right way (MSb), or the being blind in respect of the mind (LL).

2206 The bearing of witness by the ears and the eyes and the skins shows the truth of the law that the consequences of evil deeds shall become manifest in the very parts and faculties which were employed in their performance. As in the material world we see that every

Believers strengthened

29 And those who disbelieve will say: Our Lord! show us those who led us astray from among the jinn and the men that we may trample them under our feet so that they may be of the lowest.

Effect of the Revelation

33–36. Evil to be repelled with good. 37–39. It brings light and gives life. 40–43. Falsehood has no access to it. 44. It is a healing.

35 And none are made to receive it but those who are patient, and none are made to receive it but those who have a mighty good fortune.

2208 This verse and the one before it clearly show that it is in this life that the angels descend upon the faithful, giving them the joyful news that they should not have any fear. It is an error to think that this coming of the angels relates to the next life. It is here, when the faithful are persecuted and oppressed, and when the powers of evil are apparently in the act of overwhelming the believer, that those assurances are most needed, and the words نحن اولياءكم في الحيوة الدنيا clearly show that it was here that they received these assurances. The angels' telling them in the life after death that they protected them from their enemies in a previous life is meaningless.

36 And if an interference of
Ar. thee. the devil should cause you mischief, seek refuge in Allah;[2209] surely He is the Hearing, the Knowing.

42 Falsehood shall not come to it from before it nor from behind it: a revelation from the Wise, the Praised One.

لا يأتيه الباطل من بين يديه ولا
من خلفه تنزيل من حكيم حميد ○

2209 The previous verse teaches the repelling of evil with good. This verse suggests another remedy for evil. Nazgh is according to Rgh دخول فى الامر لافساده, i.e. intrusion on or interference in an affair for the purpose of causing mischief in it, and the word is used in this sense in 12:100. The Prophet is here told that if his work is interfered with by the evil-doers he should seek a refuge in Allah, and Divine help, which always comes to the righteous, would remove the interference and make truth triumphant.

2210 The still earth signifies land dried up and without herbage: its stirring indicates its moving with life, and its swelling, the producing of herbage. This is entirely metaphorical. It indicates that when Divine revelation comes to men it fills dead hearts with life. Attention is called to this in the words that follow. The effect of rain upon earth is likened to the effect of the Qur-án upon the hearts of men, and thus attention is drawn to an evidence of the truth of the Qur-án. The word dead, in the "Giver of life to the dead," signifies those who were spiritually dead.

Ar. thee. 43 Naught is said to you but what was said indeed to
Ar. thee. the apostles before you; surely
Ar. thy. your Lord is the Lord of forgiveness and the Lord of painful retribution.

44 And if We had made it a Qur-án in a foreign tongue, they would certainly have said: Why have not its communications been made clear? What! a foreign (tongue) and an Arabian![2211] Say: It is to those who believe a guidance and a healing;[2212] and (as for) those who do not believe, there is a heaviness in their ears and it is obscure to them; these shall be called to from a far-off place.

وَلَوْ جَعَلْنَاهُ قُرْآنًا أَعْجَمِيًّا لَقَالُوا لَوْلَا فُصِّلَتْ آيَاتُهُ ۖ ءَأَعْجَمِيٌّ وَعَرَبِيٌّ ۗ قُلْ هُوَ لِلَّذِينَ آمَنُوا هُدًى وَشِفَاءٌ ۖ وَالَّذِينَ لَا يُؤْمِنُونَ فِي آذَانِهِمْ وَقْرٌ وَهُوَ عَلَيْهِمْ عَمًى ۚ أُولَٰئِكَ يُنَادَوْنَ مِنْ مَكَانٍ بَعِيدٍ ۝

Gradual spread of Truth

45–47. Certainty of the doom. 48. False gods will not help. 49. They despair when evil afflicts them. 50. Denial of the hour. 51. Prayer for its removal. 52–54. Truth gaining ground.

45 And certainly We gave the Book to Moses, but it has been differed about; and had not a word already gone forth
Ar. thy. from your Lord, judgment would certainly have been given between them; and most surely they are in a disquieting doubt about it.

وَلَقَدْ آتَيْنَا مُوسَى الْكِتَابَ فَاخْتُلِفَ فِيهِ ۗ وَلَوْلَا كَلِمَةٌ سَبَقَتْ مِنْ رَبِّكَ لَقُضِيَ بَيْنَهُمْ ۚ وَإِنَّهُمْ لَفِي شَكٍّ مِنْهُ مُرِيبٍ ۝

46 Whoever does good, it is for his own soul, and whoever does evil, it is against it; and your Lord is not in the least unjust to the servants.

مَنْ عَمِلَ صَالِحًا فَلِنَفْسِهِ ۖ وَمَنْ أَسَاءَ فَعَلَيْهَا ۗ وَمَا رَبُّكَ بِظَلَّامٍ لِلْعَبِيدِ ۝

2211 There seems to be a reference here to the prophecies which spoke of the coming of an Ishmaelite or an Arabian prophet. The reference to Moses in the next verse confirms this, because Moses spoke plainly of a prophet like himself appearing from among the brethren of the Israelites, who are no others than the Ishmaelites.

2212 The Qur-án is here called a healing because it was a remedy for the spiritual diseases which prevailed in the world. It is the book which proved itself to be a healing, because it found a nation affected with the worst possible spiritual and moral diseases, and within less than a quarter of a century cleansed a whole country and a whole nation of all those diseases. Its healing effect, however, has not been limited to Arabia, and to-day there is no people on the surface of the earth that does not bear witness to the great healing power of the Qur-án, which is so far-reaching in its effect that non-Muslims have benefited by it equally with, rather, in some cases, more than, the Muslims.

PART XXV

47 To Him is referred the knowledge of the hour. And there come not forth any of the fruits from their coverings, nor does a female bear, nor does she give birth, but with His knowledge; and on the day when He shall call out to them, Where are (those whom you called) My associates? they shall say: We declare to Thee, none of us is a witness.[2213]

48 And away from them shall go what they called upon before, and they shall know for certain that there is no escape for them.

49 Man is never tired of praying for good, and if evil touch him, then he is despairing, hopeless.

50 And if We make him taste mercy from Us after distress that has touched him, he would most certainly say: This is of me,[2214] and I do not think the hour will come to pass, and if I am sent back to my Lord, I shall have with Him sure good: but We will most certainly inform those who disbelieved of what they did, and We will most certainly make them taste of hard chastisement.

51 And when We show favour to man, he turns aside and withdraws himself; and when evil touches him, he makes lengthy supplications.

52 Say: Tell me, if it is from Allah, then you disbelieve in it, who is in greater error than he who is in a prolonged opposition?

2214 The words indicate man's ungratefulness for Divine blessings. He does not recognize Divine goodness in those gifts, but says "this is of me," i.e. I have obtained it by my own exertion and I deserved it. And then he denies the judgment.

2215 People were being drawn to Islam from the borders of Arabia as well as from among the Meccans themselves. This was a clear sign that truth was advancing, notwithstanding the severest opposition, and that an unseen hand was working in support of the Holy Prophet; for, had it not been so, the strong and determined opposition it encountered would have utterly annihilated Islam. That was a sign for the Meccans. But the word āfāq, meaning borders or extremities of the earth, or its remote sides, shows the meaning to be that Islam shall spread to the most distant regions of the earth, while anfusi-him denotes their own people, or the Arabians. What is stated here is thus that Islam will quickly spread, not only in Arabia but in the remote regions of the earth, and this prophecy is contained in a chapter revealed early at Mecca, when the few Muslims were being severely persecuted and the message of Islam had apparently little hope of finding acceptance anywhere.

CHAPTER XLII

THE COUNSEL

(Ash-Shúrá)

REVEALED AT MECCA

(5 sections and 53 verses)

Abstract:

Sec. 1. Divine mercy in giving a warning.
Sec. 2. A judgment shall be given.
Sec. 3. Allah's dealing is just.
Sec. 4. Believers should be patient.
Sec. 5. Revelation guides aright.

The Title.

THIS is the third chapter of the Ḥá mím group, and is known as The Counsel. The title is taken from v. 38, which enjoins the Muslims to make it a rule to take counsel in all affairs of importance. The injunction lays down the basis of government by council or parliamentary government.

Context and subject-matter.

As regards the date of revelation and the context, see the introductory note to chapter 40. Having spoken of the consequences of the rejection of truth in the last chapter, we are here told that Divine mercy is predominant over all other Divine attributes, and accordingly the first section tells us that even the act of warning is a merciful act on the part of the Divine Being, for He reveals His will through His prophets, while His angels solicit forgiveness for men. Thus Allah is the true Protector, and it is through warning that a party is drawn into the merciful protection of Allah. The second section states that the Divine judgment must be given to settle differences. The third shows that Allah's dealing with men is just and none is destroyed unjustly. The fourth section calls attention to the fact that even the unjust are not suddenly punished for their shortcomings, but Allah, being their Creator, forbears with them and even removes their afflictions; therefore the believers must wait patiently, and meanwhile do good in accordance with the directions given them. The last section states that the Qur-án, being a revelation from the Divine Being, guides aright, hence those who do not follow its directions will find themselves in an evil plight.

SECTION 1

Divine Mercy in giving a Warning

1-4. Allah ever reveals His will to Prophets. 5. Angels ask forgiveness for all on earth. 6. Allah watches all. 7. The Prophet warns. 8, 9. Allah is the true Protector.

In the name of Allah, the Beneficent, the Merciful.

a 2171. 1 Praised, Glorious,[a]

2 Knowing, Hearing, Powerful God.[2216]

3 Thus does Allah, the Mighty, the Wise, reveal to
Ar. thee. you, and (thus He revealed)
Ar. thee. to those before you.

4 His is what is in the heavens and what is in the earth, and He is the High, the Great.

5 The heavens may almost rend asunder from above them and the angels celebrate the praise of their Lord and ask forgiveness for those on earth;[2217] now surely Allah is the Forgiving, the Merciful.

6 And (as for) those who take guardians besides Him, Allah watches over them, and
Ar. thou hast. you have not charge over them.

7 And thus have We revealed
Ar. thee. to you an Arabic Qur-án, that
Ar. thou mayest. you may warn the mother city and those around it, and that
Ar. thou mayest. you may give warning of the day of gathering together wherein is no doubt;[2218] a party shall be in the garden and (another) party in the burning fire.

الۡجَنَّةِ وَفَرِيۡقٌ فِى السَّعِيۡرِ ۝

2216 The first two letters are the same as at the commencement of chapter 40. In the latter three 'ain stands for 'alîm or Knowing, sin for samî' or Hearing, qâf for qadîr or Powerful.

2217 The significance is that the wickedness of man calls for immediate punishment, but the mercy of Allah withholds it. The rending asunder of the heaven is elsewhere used to signify Divine displeasure at the Christian doctrine of the divinity of Jesus. The Divine displeasure at the wickedness of man is very great, but the quality of His mercy supersedes all, so that the angels seek man's forgiveness. The angels' request for forgiveness to man shows that it is Allah Himself who desires to forgive man. The deeds of men do not merit forgiveness, but forgiveness is the attribute of the Divine Being, and that Divine attribute is exercised through the solicitude of the angels. The attributes with which the verse concludes corroborate this.

2218 The day of the gathering together, the yaum-ul-jam', seems to refer here to the first conflict between the Muslims, who are here called the party in the garden, or the successful

SECTION 2

A Judgment shall be given

10-12. Allah judges all differences. 13. True religion of the prophets. 14. A term is appointed. 15. A conflict must take place. 16. Punishment of the unbelievers. 17, 18. The hour is near. 19. Power and Might of Allah.

10 And in whatever thing you disagree, the judgment thereof is (in) Allah's (hand); that is Allah, my Lord, on Him do I rely and to Him do I turn time after time.

12 His are the treasures of the heavens and the earth; He makes ample and straitens the means of subsistence for whom He pleases; surely He is Cognizant of all things.

13 He has made plain to you of the religion what he enjoined upon Noah and that which We have revealed to you, and that which We enjoined party, and the unbelieving Meccans, or the party in the burning fire, or the party that shall witness failure; thus prophesying success for the former and defeat for the latter. The next verse makes it clearer by suggesting that the faithful shall be made to enter into Divine mercy, which stands for the garden, and that the unjust Meccans shall be left helpless and without protection, which condition represents the burning fire.

2219 So transcendent is the Divine Being, and so far above all materia conceptions, that a likeness of Him cannot be imagined, even metaphorically, for not only is nothing like Him, but, as stated here, nothing is like a likeness of Him. Such is the transcendently pure conception of the Divine Being in Islam. He is not only above all material limitations, but even above the limitation of metaphor.

2220 Even so early did the Qur-án announce that the religion preached by the Prophet was not a new religion, but, so far as its basic principles were concerned, it was the same religion as was preached by Noah and Abraham and Moses and Jesus. In fact, it is a very conclusive evidence of the truth of Islam that its basic principles are the basic principles of the common religion of humanity.

2221 The persons spoken of here are those to whom the Prophet now delivered his message. The judgment in their case is postponed. The personal pronoun them in those who were made to inherit the Book after them refers to the prophets.

2222 These words point to the time when the Prophet found them absolutely unwilling to listen to his preaching, so he now gives them a warning that they will soon witness the evil consequences of their deeds on a day when the two parties shall gather, the words clearly implying a separation first. It is to this separation that the words no plea need there be now between us and you refer. Hence it is clear that even in this early revelation there is an obvious prophecy of the Holy Prophet's Flight.

2223 The reference in those who dispute about Allah after that obedience has been rendered to Him may be to the followers of earlier revelation, because their books required obedience to a prophet who should appear after them. Or the meaning may be, after people have begun to enter Islam (Bd).

2225 The word of judgment indicates a judgment already pronounced, that a respite shall be given to the unjust so that they may have an opportunity to reform themselves.

Ar. thou wilt.

22 You will see the unjust fearing on account of what they have earned, and it must befall them; and those who believe and do good shall be in the meadows of the gardens; they shall have what they please with their Lord: that is the great grace.

23 That is of which Allah gives the good news to His servants, (to) those who believe and do good deeds. Say: I do not ask of you any reward for it but love for relatives;[2226] and whoever earns good, We give him more of good therein; surely Allah is Forgiving, Grateful.

26 And He answers those who believe and do good deeds, and gives them more out of His grace; and (as for) the unbelievers, they shall have a severe chastisement.

2226 Commentators generally think that the love enjoined here in respect of relationship signifies loving the relatives of the Prophet, but there is nothing in the words which entitles us to place that limitation upon the words, and the meaning is rejected by I'Ab (Bkh). The misunderstanding is due to a misconception of the meaning of illá (see 59). The meaning is not that love for relatives is a reward which the Prophet asks for himself. The correct significance of the words is that I do not ask of you any reward at all; what I ask you is to love your own relatives. The Arabs, closely related as they were to each other, were in a state of constant warfare. They are told to give up mutual warfare and to love each other. Or the meaning may be that the Prophet asked them to cease their persecution of him and to regard him with the love of a relative, as all the tribes were related to each other (I'Ab-Bkh).

2227 The sealing of the Prophet's heart does not imply its being sealed against the truth which was revealed to him, but the making of it secure against their abuses, for they abused the Prophet and called him an impostor (Bd). This significance is, moreover, in accordance with the context, for by blotting out the falsehood and confirming the truth, the abuses would be stopped, and thus his heart would be made secure against them.

2228 The words here imply the prophecies whose fulfilment would firmly establish the truth.

27 And if Allah should amplify the provision for His servants they would certainly revolt in the earth; but He sends it down according to a measure as He pleases; surely He is Aware of, Seeing, His servants.

28 And He it is Who sends down the rain after they have despaired, and He unfolds His mercy; and He is the Guardian, the Praised One.

29 And one of His signs is the creation of the heavens and the earth and what He has spread forth in both of them of living beings; and when He pleases He is all-powerful to gather them together.

SECTION 4

Believers should be Patient

30–36. Divine dealing with men is characterized by mercy. 37, 38. Believers should avoid evil and be guided by counsel. 39–43. They have a right to defend themselves, but patience is better.

30 And whatever affliction befalls you, it is on account of what your hands have wrought, and (yet) He pardons most (of your faults).

31 And you cannot escape in the earth, and you shall not have a Guardian or a Helper besides Allah.

32 And among His signs are the ships in the sea like mountains.

33 If He pleases, He causes the wind to become still so that they lie motionless on its back; most surely there are signs in this for every patient, grateful one,

34 Or He may make them founder for what they have earned, and (even then) pardon most;[2229]

وَمَآ اَصَابَكُمْ مِّنْ مُّصِيْبَةٍ فَبِمَا كَسَبَتْ

صَبَّارٍ شَكُوْرٍ ۝
اَوْ يُوْبِقْهُنَّ بِمَا كَسَبُوْا وَيَعْفُ عَنْ كَثِيْرٍ ۝

2229 The ship in these two verses is the ship of the affairs of the unbelieving Meccans, which is ultimately to be wrecked, yet Allah deals with them mercifully by pardoning most of the wicked things that they do. The next verse makes this significance clear by drawing attention to the fact that the statement is a warning to those who dispute about the communications of Allah, i.e. the Meccans, that they shall find no refuge when their ship is wrecked.

35 And (that) those who dispute about Our communications may know; there is no place of refuge for them.

36 So whatever thing you are given, that is only a provision of this world's life, and what is with Allah is better and more lasting for those who believe and rely on their Lord.

37 And those who shun the great sins and indecencies, and whenever they are angry they forgive.

38 And those who respond to their Lord and keep up prayer, and their rule is to take counsel among themselves, and who spend out of what We have given them.[2230]

Or, government is by.

39 And those who, when great wrong afflicts them, defend themselves.[2231]

40 And the recompense of evil is punishment like it, but whoever forgives and amends, he shall have his reward from Allah; surely He does not love the unjust.[2232]

Ar. evil.

2230 The occurrence in an early Meccan revelation of the words their rule is to take counsel among themselves is very significant. It should be noted that these early revelations contain the clearest prophecies of a conflict between the mighty forces of the Quraish and the few Muslims, and of the kingdom of Islam being established as a result of that conflict. This is one of the verses affording clear testimony of the latter statement. The Muslims are here enjoined as usual to observe prayer and to spend from what Allah has given them. Yet between these two injunctions, which always go together in the Holy Qur-án, is placed a third: And their rule is to take counsel among themselves. It is clear that at this early period the Muslims had no important matters to decide for which they might have stood in need of counsel, yet between two injunctions which are the basis of a true Islamic life a third is inserted enjoining that, as a rule, counsel should be taken. The injunction is clearly meant to prepare them for transacting the momentous affairs of state and all matters connected with national weal or woe. In fact, the word amr, which I have translated as rule, means command; and amr-ul-Allah, or Allah's command, often signifies the establishment of the kingdom of God, which stands for an Islamic kingdom. The use of the word amr therefore here refers to the Islamic kingdom, the affairs of which must be transacted by counsel. The words mean that the Muslims shall be governed by counsel, because they are told that that which should be taken by them as a command should be a matter that has been settled by counsel. In this Islam has laid the basis of government by parliaments, and the idea found a clear practical expression in the early days of the Caliphate, when the Khalífa had to refer every important affair to a Majlas-i-Shúra (council), and it is strange indeed that government by parliament is now looked upon by Europeans as an institution which is quite foreign to Islam and unsuited for the Muslim people.

2231 Intaṣara alone signifies he defended himself against his injurer (TA-LL); followed by min, it signifies the taking of revenge. The first meaning is applicable here, as it is not followed by min.

41 And whoever defends himself after his being oppressed, these it is against whom there is no way (to blame).

42 The way (to blame) is only against those who oppress men and revolt in the earth unjustly; these shall have a painful chastisement.

43 And whoever is patient and forgiving, that most surely is of the affairs the doing of which should be determined upon.

2232 A golden rule relating to forgiveness of evil is given here. The rule laid down is that evil must be requited by punishment proportionate thereto. Note here that punishment which is meted out for an evil is called a sayyiah or an evil, because the Arabs speak of the requital of an evil in terms of that evil (see 27). Also note that the punishment must be proportionate to the evil. A very just and necessary restriction. And this beautiful maxim is given by a man whose people were in the habit of slaughtering whole tribes for the most trifling fault of one member. Again, forgiveness is not neglected, nor preached in such a manner as to make it impracticable. There is in Islam neither the one extreme of tooth for tooth nor the opposite one of turning the left cheek when the right is smitten or giving away the cloak to one who has already wrongfully taken the coat of his brother; it is the golden and beautiful mean that forgiveness may be exercised if forgiveness will mend the matter and do good to the wrong-doer himself. The object to be kept in view is to amend, whether it may be attained by giving proportionate punishment or by exercising forgiveness.

2233 Note that abasement is again and again identified with the punishment of hell.

46 And they shall have no friends to help them besides Allah; and whomsoever Allah a 44. makes err,[a] he shall have no way.

47 Hearken to your Lord before there comes the day from Allah for which there shall be no averting; you shall have no refuge on that day, nor shall it be yours to make a denial.

48 But if they turn aside,
Ar. thee. We have not sent you as a
Ar. thee. watcher over them; on you is only to deliver (the message); and surely when We make man taste mercy from Us, he rejoices thereat; and if an evil afflicts them on account of what their hands have already done, then surely man is ungrateful.

Ar. males. He pleases sons,

50 Or He makes them of both sorts, male and female; and He makes whom He pleases barren; surely He is the Knowing, the Powerful.[2234]

51 And it is not for any mortal that Allah should speak to him except by revelation or from behind a veil, or by sending a messenger and revealing by His permission what He pleases;[2235] surely He is High, Wise.

2234 The birth of a daughter was looked upon by the Arabs as a calamity, this being due to the low position which women held in their society. The wonderful change brought about by Islam in the status of woman is clearly foreshadowed in this early Meccan revelation, where the daughter has the precedence over the son—the mention of daughters before the sons clearly implying that the grant of a daughter was as great a Divine favour as that of a son, if not greater. Contrast this with the condition of Arabia before the Holy Prophet: "And when a daughter is announced to one of them, his face becomes black and he is full of wrath. He hides himself from the people because of the evil of that which is announced to him. Shall he keep it alive with disgrace or bury it alive in the dust?" (16 : 58, 59).

2235 This verse shows how Allah speaks to a person or makes known His will to him. Three modes of this are stated. (1) By waḥy, which word is generally translated as meaning revelation. The primary significance of the word waḥy is, however, الاشارة السريعة i.e. a hasty suggestion (Rgh), and since the different kinds of revelation are spoken of here, the meaning intended must be the primary significance of the word. Hence the inspired word

Ar. thee.
Ar. thou didst.
Ar. thou showest.

52 And thus[2236] did We reveal to you an inspired book[2236A] by Our command. You did not know what the Book was, nor (what) the faith (was), but We made it a light, guiding thereby whom We please of Our servants; and most surely you show the way to the right path:

53 The path of Allah, Whose is whatsoever is in the heavens and whatsoever is in the earth; now surely to Allah do all affairs eventually come.

which enters the hearts of the prophets and of the righteous is called waḥy or revelation, because it is like a hasty suggestion made directly to the heart of the inspired one (Rgh: القاء فى الروع). It is in this sense that a revelation is spoken of as being granted to the mother of Moses (28:7) and to the apostles of Jesus who were not prophets (5:111). Visions may be included in this. (2) The second mode of Allah's speaking to His servants is that He speaks from behind a veil, i.e. the words are heard by the person spoken to as from behind a veil. A voice is heard, but the utterer of the voice is not seen. (3) The third form of revelation is that in which an apostle—an angel—is chosen by the Almighty to deliver His message to the person to whom He wishes to speak. This is the surest and clearest form of revelation, and such is the revelation of the Qur-án as granted to the Holy Prophet, being recited by Gabriel. This is called وحى متلو or revelation that is recited. This revelation is granted only to prophets, while the other two may also be granted to the righteous who are not raised to the dignity of prophethood. It should, however, be borne in mind that in all these cases the recipient of the revelation is granted certain other senses. He observes what others do not see and he hears words which others do not hear. It is, therefore, with what may be called the spiritual senses that he hears and sees and feels things which others do not hear, see, or feel.

2236 Thus refers to the last mode of granting revelation, because the Holy Qur-án is repeatedly spoken of as having been brought by the faithful spirit or the Angel Gabriel (2:97, 26:193).

2236A The use of the word rúḥ as meaning inspiration, and not the soul, is conclusive here. The rúḥ here is the Qur-án. Compare with this 17:85, and the use of the words amr-i-rabbí (by the command of my Lord) there with amr-i-ná (by Our command) here, and there remains not the shadow of a doubt that rúḥ in 17:85 means the Qur-án.

CHAPTER XLIII

THE EMBELLISHMENT

(Az-Zukhruf)

REVEALED AT MECCA

(7 sections and 89 verses)

Abstract:

Sec. 1. Divine Unity.
Sec. 2. Polytheism condemned.
Sec. 3. Allah's choice of a prophet.
Sec. 4. A means of raising to eminence.
Sec. 5. Pharaoh's opposition to Moses.
Sec. 6. Jesus as a prophet.
Sec. 7. The two parties.

The Title.

"THE EMBELLISHMENT" is the fourth chapter of the Ḥá mím group, and is so named from the mention of zukhruf in v. 35, where it is stated that the embellishments of lower life keep men back from the truth. The subject-matter and the date of revelation have been discussed in the introductory note to chapter 40.

Subject-matter.

The chapter opens with a declaration of the revelation of the Holy Qur-án from the Almighty God, as do all the chapters of this group. It then states that notwithstanding the "extravagance" of the Arabs the reminder is not withheld from them. Divine Unity is then declared, because it is the chief object which Divine revelation must establish. The second section is devoted to a condemnation of the various sorts of polytheism. The third begins with a mention of Abraham, the father of many a chosen one of God, and after referring to the Prophet's rejection, answers the objection as to why an influential man was not chosen to convey the Divine message. The fourth follows, stating that the Qur-án will make the nation rise to greatness, and, therefore, those who, being misled by evil companions, deny it, shall regret their deeds. The fifth shows how a great ruler like Pharaoh was destroyed when he opposed Moses, and the sixth refers to Jesus' prophethood and the idolaters' objection to it, and they are told that Jesus was only a prophet and his position affords no justification for their idolatry. The last section contrasts the fate of the two parties, the believers and the unbelievers.

SECTION 1

Divine Unity

1–4. An Arabic Qur-án. 5. Reminder is not withheld from an extravagant people. 6–8. Former nations mocked their apostles and were destroyed. 9–15. Unity of Allah inferred from His creation and His favours on man.

In the name of Allah, the Beneficent, the Merciful.

a 2171. 1 Praised, Glorious God,[a] b 2099. 2 Consider[b] the Book that makes manifest:

3 Surely We have made it an Arabic Qur-án that you may understand.

4 And surely it is in the original of the Book with Us, truly elevated, full of wisdom.[2237]

Or, eminence. 5 What! shall We then turn away the reminder from you altogether because you are an extravagant people?[2238]

6 And how many a prophet have We sent among the ancients.

7 And there came not to them a prophet but they mocked at him.

Ar. example. Or, has gone before. 8 Then We destroyed those who were stronger than these in prowess, and the case of the ancients is effectual.[2239]

Ar. thou shouldst. 9 And if you should ask them, Who created the heavens and the earth? they would most certainly say: The Mighty, the Knowing One, has created them:

بِسْمِ اللّٰهِ الرَّحْمٰنِ الرَّحِيْمِ

حٰمٓ ۝

وَالْكِتٰبِ الْمُبِيْنِ ۝

اِنَّا جَعَلْنٰهُ قُرْءٰنًا عَرَبِيًّا لَّعَلَّكُمْ تَعْقِلُوْنَ ۝

وَاِنَّهٗ فِيْٓ اُمِّ الْكِتٰبِ لَدَيْنَا لَعَلِيٌّ حَكِيْمٌ ۝

اَفَنَضْرِبُ عَنْكُمُ الذِّكْرَ صَفْحًا اَنْ كُنْتُمْ

قَوْمًا مُّسْرِفِيْنَ ۝

وَكَمْ اَرْسَلْنَا مِنْ نَّبِيٍّ فِي الْاَوَّلِيْنَ ۝

وَمَا يَاْتِيْهِمْ مِّنْ نَّبِيٍّ اِلَّا كَانُوْا بِهٖ

فَاَهْلَكْنَآ اَشَدَّ مِنْهُمْ بَطْشًا وَّمَضٰى

مَثَلُ الْاَوَّلِيْنَ ۝

وَلَئِنْ سَاَلْتَهُمْ مَّنْ خَلَقَ السَّمٰوٰتِ وَالْاَرْضَ

لَيَقُوْلُنَّ خَلَقَهُنَّ الْعَزِيْزُ الْعَلِيْمُ ۝

2237 Umm-ul-kitáb literally signifies mother or original of the Book, and the opening chapter of the Qur-án is also known by this name, because, in its essence, it contains the whole of the Qur-án. But here it signifies the original source from which the Qur-án comes, and the meaning is that the Qur-án cannot be destroyed because it exists in Divine Knowledge. The words, in fact, contain a prophecy, uttered at a time when the Prophet was alone and helpless, that the Qur-án shall be exalted in the world, for that is its position in Divine Knowledge. Another explanation of the words is that they refer to the clear prophecies of the advent of the Holy Prophet as stated in the Bible—for instance, Deut. 18 : 15–18, which indicates the advent of the Holy Prophet, to whom alone it applies.

2238 Zikr may be translated here as meaning either the reminder or eminence. The meaning in the first case is that Allah would not refrain from admonishing a people who have become extravagant, and in the second case that He intends to raise a people to eminence who are so "extravagant" that there is no hope for their regeneration.

2239 مضى القول means the saying was effectual (LL). The ordinary significance is given in the margin.

10 He Who made the earth a resting-place for you, and made in it ways for you that you may go aright:

11 And He Who sends down water from the cloud according to a measure, then We raise to life thereby a dead country: even thus shall you be brought forth:[2240]

12 And He Who created pairs of all things, and made for you of the ships and the cattle what you ride on,

13 That you may firmly sit on their backs, then remember the favour of your Lord when you are firmly seated thereon, and say: Glory be to Him Who made this subservient to us and we were not able to do it,

14 And surely to our Lord we must return.

15 And they assign to Him a part of His servants; man, to be sure, is clearly ungrateful.

SECTION 2

Polytheism condemned

16–19. They ascribe daughters to Allah. 20–23. Following their forefathers. 24, 25. Fate of those who reject the truth.

16 What! has He taken daughters to Himself of what He Himself creates and chosen a 1376. you to have sons?[a]

17 And when one of them is given news of that of which he sets up a likeness for the Beneficent God, his face becomes black and he is full of rage.

18 What! that which is made in ornaments and which in contention is unable to make plain speech![2241]

أَوَمَنْ يُنَشَّأُ فِي الْحِلْيَةِ وَهُوَ فِي
الْخِصَامِ غَيْرُ مُبِينٍ ۝

2240 Attention is called here to the laws prevailing in the physical world to impress the need of similar laws in the spiritual world. As rain descending from heaven quickens a dead earth, so Divine revelation would regenerate or raise to life the Arabians, who, sunk in ignorance and superstitions, were spiritually, morally, and intellectually a dead people.

2241 The reference in this verse is to the idols which were bedecked with ornaments. The inability of the idols to speak is adduced by Abraham as an argument against their divinity (21 : 63), and the same inability of the idols to answer the prayers of their devotees is advanced as an argument against the divinity of the golden calf (20 : 89).

19 And they make the angels —them who are the servants of the Beneficent God—female 20 And they say: If the Beneficent God had pleased, we should never have worshipped them. They have no knowledge of this; they only lie.

21 Or have We given them a book before it so that they hold fast to it?
22 Nay! they say: We found our fathers on a course, and surely we are guided by their footsteps.
23 And thus, We did not
Ar. thee. send before you any warner in a town, but those who led easy lives in it said: Surely we found our fathers on a course, and surely we are followers of their footsteps.
24 (The warner) said: What even if I bring to you a better guide than that on which you found your fathers? They said: Surely we are unbelievers in that with which you are sent.
25 So We inflicted retribution on them, then see how was the end of the rejecters.

SECTION 3

Allah's Choice of a Prophet

26–28. Abraham's preaching. 29, 30. Denial of the Prophet. 31–35. Why choice did not fall upon some renowned leader.

26 And when Abraham said to his sire and his people: Surely I am clear of what you worship, 27 Save Him Who created me, for surely He will guide me.
28 And he made it a word to continue in his posterity that they may return.[2242]

وَاِذْ قَالَ اِبْرٰهِيْمُ لِاَبِيْهِ وَقَوْمِهٖٓ اِنَّنِيْ

لَعَلَّهُمْ يَرْجِعُوْنَ ○

2242 This shows that the Arabs possessed enduring traditions that their great ancestor Abraham was a preacher of Unity.

29 Nay! I gave them and their fathers to enjoy until there came to them the truth and an Apostle making manifest (the truth).

30 And when there came to them the truth they said: This is enchantment, and surely we are disbelievers in it.

31 And they say: Why was not this Qur-án revealed to a man of importance in the two towns?[2243]

32 Will they distribute the mercy of your Lord? We distribute among them their livelihood in the life of this world, and We have exalted some of them above others in degrees, that some of them may take others in subjection; and the mercy of your Lord is better than what they amass.[2244]

Ar. thy. / Ar. thy.

33 And were it not that all people had been a single nation, We would certainly have assigned to those who disbelieve in the Beneficent God (to make) of silver the roofs of their houses and the stairs by which they ascend,[2245]

34 And the doors of their houses and the couches on which they recline,

35 And (other) embellishments; and all this is naught but provision of this world's life, and the hereafter is with your Lord only for those who guard (against evil).

Or, the lower. / Ar. thy.

2243 The two towns referred to are Mecca and Táif (Bḍ). They would not follow any but an important man of the world. They could bow before men of the world, but not before a man of God. So low and earthly were their desires that moral greatness possessed no value in their eyes.

2244 That is, as there are differences in the external conditions of men, so there are differences in their spiritual and moral qualifications, and Allah's choice for prophethood does not depend on wealth, but on internal worth. Their criterion of greatness was wealth, but God's criterion was moral worth.

2245 Gold and silver have no worth or value in the sight of Allah, and He would grant these things only to unbelievers in full abundance, were it not that most people would be misled by these worldly temptations.

SECTION 4

A Means of raising to Eminence

36, 37. Evil associates. 38, 39. Their regret. 40. They are deaf and blind. 41, 42. The evil consequences. 43. The Prophet to hold fast to revelation. 44. It shall raise the Arabs to eminence. 45. All prophets preached Unity.

36 And whoever turns himself away from the remembrance of the Beneficent God, We appoint for him a devil, so he becomes his associate.[2246]

37 And most surely they turn them away from the path, and they think that they are guided aright :

38 Until when he comes to Us, he says: O would that between me and you there were the distance of the East and the West;[2247] so evil is the associate!

Ar. between thee.

39 And since you were unjust, it will not profit you this day that you are sharers in the chastisement.

40 What! can you then make the deaf to hear or guide the blind and him who is in clear error?

Ar. canst thou.

41 But if We should take you away, still We shall inflict retribution on them ;

Ar. thee.

42 Rather We will certainly show you that which We have promised[2248] them ; for surely We are the possessors of full power over them.

Ar. thee.

43 Therefore hold fast to that which has been revealed to you; surely you are on the right path.

Ar. thee. Ar. thou art.

2246 As the words that follow show, the devil here is no other than the evil companion of man who leads him to evil.

2247 The word which I translate the East and the West is mashriqain, which would literally signify the two Easts. But the dual number in such cases often denotes the thing mentioned with its opposite. Thus mashriqain means the place of sunrise and the place of sunset (M, O-LL).

2248 The clear promise of punishment overtaking the opponents of the Holy Prophet in his lifetime is here asserted in forcible language. The first verse only describes the general law of the punishment of the wicked ; even if the Prophet dies, the wicked shall meet their doom. But that the general statement should not give rise to any misconception, we are immediately told that the Prophet would see the discomfiture of his enemies with his own eyes. I translate au, in the commencement of this verse, as meaning rather, for au is equivalent to bal in a case of amplification of speech (T, S, Mughnee, Q). See LL.

Or, a reminder.
Ar. thee.
Ar. thy.

44 And most surely it is an eminence for you and your people,[2249] and you shall soon be questioned.

45 And ask those of Our apostles whom We sent before you : Did We ever appoint gods to be worshipped besides the Beneficent God ?

Ar. thee.

SECTION 5

Pharaoh's Opposition to Moses

46, 47. Pharaoh and his people mock Moses' message. 48–54. Signs are shown, but in vain. 55, 56. They are drowned.

46 And certainly We sent Moses with Our communications to Pharaoh and his chiefs, so he said: Surely I am the apostle of the Lord of the worlds.

47 But when he came to them with Our signs, lo! they laughed at them.

48 And We did not show them a sign but it was greater[2250] than its like, and We overtook them with chastisement that they may turn.

49 And they said: O enchanter! call on your Lord for our sake, as He has made the covenant with you ; we shall surely be the followers of the right way.[2251]

Ar. thy.
Ar. thee.

50 But when We removed from them the chastisement, lo! they broke the pledge.

51 And Pharaoh proclaimed amongst his people: O my people! is not the kingdom of Egypt mine? And these rivers flow beneath me; do you not then see?

وَلَقَدْ أَرْسَلْنَا مُوسَىٰ بِـَٔايَٰتِنَآ إِلَىٰ فِرْعَوْنَ

وَقَالُوا۟ يَٰٓأَيُّهَ ٱلسَّاحِرُ ٱدْعُ لَنَا رَبَّكَ بِمَا

مِن تَحْتِىٓ أَفَلَا تُبْصِرُونَ ۝

2249 The meaning is that the Qur-án shall raise the Prophet's people to a state of eminence; for zikr means eminence (LL).

2250 The meaning is that great signs were shown, each sign being greater than the one which preceded it.

2251 The covenant made was that punishment would only be inflicted if the truth was rejected. See Exod. ch. 8, from which it appears that every time a sign was shown Pharaoh entreated Moses to pray for the removal of the punishment, promising that he would not in that case oppose him.

52 Nay! I am better than this fellow, who is contemptible, and who can hardly speak distinctly :

53 But why have not bracelets of gold been put upon him,[2252] or why have there not come with him angels as companions ?[2253]

54 So he incited his people to levity and they obeyed him : surely they were a transgressing people.

55 Then when they displeased Us, We inflicted retribution on them, so We drowned them all together, 56 And We made them a precedent and example to the later generations.

2252 Pharaoh's suggestion is that if Moses were the apostle of an Almighty God he should have been made a king, for bracelets of gold signify abundance of wealth. It is shown here that Pharaoh's objection to Moses was similar to the objection of the Quraish against the Holy Prophet.

2253 That is, Moses should have come with angels, as a king comes with his armies.

2254 The Qur-án condemns the doctrine of attributing children to the Almighty in many places. Such a condemnation is contained in this very chapter in the section preceding the last. But when the case of Jesus was cited, the unbelievers objected to the respect shown to him when their own idols were condemned. This is the meaning of the words occurring in the next verse: Are our gods better, or is he? Why should not the same honour be shown to their national gods as was shown to the god of another nation—for was not Jesus accepted as God by the Christians?

60 And if We please, We could make among you angels to be successors in the land.

61 And most surely it is a knowledge of the hour,[2256] therefore have no doubt about it and follow me: this is the right path.

62 And let not the devil prevent you; surely he is your open enemy.

63 And when Jesus came with clear arguments, he said: I have come to you indeed with wisdom, and that I may make clear to you part of what you differ in; so be careful of (your duty to) Allah and obey me:

64 Surely Allah is my Lord and your Lord, therefore serve

65 But parties from among them differed, so woe to those who were unjust because of the chastisement of a painful day.

66 Do they wait for aught but the hour,[2257] that it should come upon them all of a sudden while they do not perceive?

67 The friends shall on that day be enemies one to another, except those who guard (against evil).

2255 This verse contains the answer to the objection of the Quraish. Jesus was not honoured for being the god of a people, but because he was a righteous servant of Allah on whom He had bestowed favours. Not only was Jesus the recipient of Divine favours, but he was also an example of virtue for the Israelites to whom he was sent as a prophet, a model whom they could imitate in righteousness. The idol-worshippers, on the other hand, represented even their great men as sunk in immorality. As an instance, one may cast a cursory glance at the Puranas of the Hindus, and it will be found that even such Hindu gods as Shiva are represented as so deeply sunk in immorality as to cause the ordinary man to shudder in disgust.

2256 The hour signifies the hour of the departure of prophethood from the house of Israel. Such is the clear significance of the parable of the vineyard in Matt. 21 : 33, Mark 12 : 1, and Luke 20 : 9, which ends with these remarkable words : "Therefore I say unto you, The kingdom of God shall be taken from you and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof" (Matt. 21 : 43). Prophethood had long remained in the house of Israel, and, as history shows, Jesus was the last prophet of the Mosaic dispensation. Is it not strange that a nation in which prophet after prophet had appeared should witness such an entire change with the advent of Jesus, after whom no single prophet appeared? It is in this sense that Jesus is a knowledge of the hour, for the hour signifies the doom of a people, and in this case it was the doom of the Israelites.

2257 This hour signifies the doom of the Quraish.

2258 It is with their wives that the faithful are told to enter paradise, and yet Islam is said to deny a soul to woman. The word zauj also signifies a like, a fellow, an associate, or a comrade (LL).

2259 The companions were made to inherit gardens in this life as a proof that the promise of gardens in the next life was true.

2260 Mālik means literally Master. Here it signifies the angel appointed over those in hell.

80 Or do they think that We do not hear what they conceal and their secret discourses? Aye! and Our messengers with them write down.[2262]

82 Glory to the Lord of the heavens and the earth, the Lord of power, from what they describe.

83 So leave them plunging into false discourses and sporting until they meet their day which they are threatened with.

84 And He it is Who is God in the heavens and God in the earth; and He is the Wise, the Knowing.

85 And blessed is He Whose is the kingdom of the heavens and the earth and what is between them, and with Him is the knowledge of the hour, and to Him shall you be brought back.

86 And those whom they call upon besides Him have no authority for intercession, but he who bears witness of the truth and they know (him).[2264]

2261 The unbelievers are told that they should not think that they have settled the affair of the Holy Prophet by their plans to kill him, for it is Allah who really settles all affairs.

2262 The words contain a clear reference to the plots against the Holy Prophet.

2263 The significance of this verse has been much misunderstood. It does not mean that if God had a son the Prophet would be the foremost of those who serve that son. It states that when a man serves God he is metaphorically called a son of God, and therefore the Holy Prophet, being the foremost of those who serve, would be a son in that sense. This verse should in fact be read along with 39 : 4, where it is said: "If Allah desire to take a son to Himself, He should surely choose those He pleases from what He has created." Thus the relation of sonship to God is really the relation of a chosen servant to the master. If therefore God had a son, the Prophet had the foremost claim to that dignity. In a literal sense, or in the sense in which the Christians and others attributed a son to God, God had no son, but metaphorically a chosen servant of God could be called His son. See also 2155. Or, the in may be here náfiyah, the meaning being: "The Beneficent God has no son, so I am . . ." Thus the very use of the word Raḥmán here negatives His having a son, for which see 1571.

2264 The bearer of the witness of truth is no other than the Holy Prophet, and they know him well, for he was the Ameen who had never told a lie. They had seen also the fulfilment of his prophecies.

The verse tells us that a clear proof of the intercession of the Holy Prophet shall be given

Ar. thou shouldst.

87 And if you should ask them who created them, they would certainly say: Allah. Whence are they then turned back?

a 2099.

88 Consider[a] his cry: O my Lord! surely they are a people who do not believe.[2265]

لَا يُؤْمِنُونَ ۝
فَاصْفَحْ عَنْهُمْ وَقُلْ سَلَامٌ ۚ فَسَوْفَ يَعْلَمُونَ

by raising his followers to dignity while his enemies are discomfited, their idols being unable to intercede on their behalf. It affirms in clear words the intercession of the Holy Prophet on behalf of his followers. For the meaning of intercession and its object see 79, 339, and 705.

2265 After years of hard work among them and after being subjected to every kind of persecution, and lastly finding them planning against his very life, the Holy Prophet still prays to Allah not to inflict punishment upon his opponents. He, however, unburdens his mind in the mildest possible terms: "O my Lord! surely they are a people who do not believe." One would in vain search for another such example of heroic fortitude under trials and loving sympathy for fellow-men.

2266 The turning away from them and saying "Peace" are clear prophecies of the Flight. It should be noted that early Meccan revelation contains undeniable prophecies of all the important later events in the life of the Holy Prophet; the fact that a particular event is prophesied in a certain revelation does not settle the date of that revelation. It may even be that this turning away did not mean actually departing from Mecca, but leaving the opponents in the condition they were in.

Abstract:

Sec. 1. Lighter punishment followed by severer.

Sec. 2, 3. Good and evil rewarded.

General remarks.

THIS is the fifth chapter of the Há mím group. It is known as The Drought, from the prophecy of the drought contained in v. 10. This prophecy is followed by another indicating that a severer punishment would follow if the unbelievers did not repent. The case of Pharaoh, who was drowned because he hardened his heart, is then cited. The remaining two sections of the chapter are devoted to a description of the condition of the righteous and the wicked, wherein we find it stated that each is rewarded as he deserves. The chapter is, as it were, an explanation of what was meant by the doom of the Quraish, which was spoken of at the close of the last chapter. The famine was the lighter punishment, while the most violent seizing of v. 16 was a prophecy relating to the utter discomfiture of the Quraish to be accomplished during the conflicts which followed the Flight to Medina.

2267 The revelation of the Holy Qur-án on a blessed night has a deeper meaning beneath it than the mere fact that the revelation began on the blessed night which is elsewhere called lailat-ul-qadr (97 : 1)—one of the last ten nights in the month of Ramaḍán. The night stands for a time of darkness, and hence a time of ignorance, when true knowledge had

8 There is no god but He; He gives life and causes death, your Lord and the Lord of your fathers of yore.

9 Nay, they are in doubt, they sport.

10 Therefore keep waiting for the day when the heaven shall bring a clear drought,[2269]

11 That shall overtake men; this is a painful chastisement.

12 Our Lord! remove from us the chastisement; surely we are believers.

disappeared from the world. A prophet's advent is always preceded by such darkness, and when the Holy Prophet Muhammad (may peace and the blessings of Allah be upon him!) made his appearance, such darkness prevailed in all countries. This night is called a blessed night because in it the world received the greatest manifestation of Divine light.

2268 Because Divine revelation distinguishes truth from falsehood and reveals the treasures of wisdom to men. According to some, lailat-ul-qadr signifies the whole period during which a prophet is engaged in preaching the truth revealed to him by Allah. See 2778.

2269 Dukhān has other meanings than smoke, and the commentators agree on the basis of highly trustworthy reports that its meaning here is drought. According to TA, dukhān means al-jadab, i.e. dearth or drought, and al-jū' or hunger, for (the drought brought on such misery that) the hungry man beheld smoke between him and the sky, superinduced by the severity of hunger. Others, however, say the real reason why hunger is called dukhān is that because of the dry earth in a drought dust rises, creating a dusty atmosphere which is likened to smoke, and for this reason a year of hunger or drought is called a dusty year or dusty hunger. See also LL, where, however, the words "the hungry once saw a smoke between him and the sky" are a wrong translation of the original words. The chapter, as the whole tenor of it shows, belongs to the early Meccan period. The suggestion that this verse and those that follow, up to the 16th, or according to some only vv. 15 and 16, belong to Medina, is entirely without a foundation. The statements made in these verses are all prophetical, and such is also the statement of v. 15, We will remove the punishment a little, because the removal of the drought was followed by the "violent seizing" which brought on the conquest of Mecca. Bkh has the following reference to it: "When the Quraish opposed the Holy Prophet (may peace and the blessings of Allah be upon him!) he prayed that they might be overtaken by years of drought like the years of Joseph (i.e. seven years); so famine and distress overtook them until they ate bones and dead bodies, and a man used to look to heaven, and he saw between him and it something like smoke on account of hard affliction."

13 How shall they be reminded, and there came to them an Apostle making clear (the truth), 14 Yet they turned their backs on him and said: One taught (by others), a madman.

15 Surely We will remove the chastisement a little, (but) you will surely return (to evil).

16 On the day when We will seize (them) with the most violent seizing: surely We will inflict retribution.[2270]

17 And certainly We tried before them the people of Pharaoh, and there came to them a noble apostle, a 1356. 18 Saying:[a] Deliver to me the servants of Allah,[2271] surely I am a faithful apostle to you,

19 And that do not exalt yourselves against Allah, surely I will bring to you a clear authority:

20 And surely I take refuge with my Lord and your Lord that you should slay me: (Or, revile.)

21 And if you do not believe in me, then leave me alone.

22 Then he called upon his Lord: These are a guilty people.

23 So go forth with My servants by night: surely you will be pursued:

24 And leave the sea intervening;[2272] surely they are a host that shall be drowned. (Or, calm.)

أَنَّىٰ لَهُمُ الذِّكْرَىٰ وَقَدْ جَاءَهُمْ رَسُولٌ

يَوْمَ نَبْطِشُ الْبَطْشَةَ الْكُبْرَىٰ إِنَّا مُنتَقِمُونَ

وَاتْرُكِ الْبَحْرَ رَهْوًا إِنَّهُمْ جُندٌ مُّغْرَقُونَ

2270 The prophecy here seems to refer to the constant defeats in battle that were to be suffered by the Quraish, beginning with the battle of Badr, and resulting in the final overthrow of their power by the seizure of Mecca. Ibn-i-Mas'ud says that by violent seizing is meant the day of Badr (Bkh). It is true that the discomfiture of the power of the Quraish began with Badr, and that power was utterly broken with the conquest of Mecca.

2271 Note that according to the Qur-án the first message of Moses to Pharaoh was to allow the Israelites to leave Egypt with him. But a prophet could not remain indifferent to the sad moral condition of the Egyptians, hence Moses' invitation to them to give up their superstitious beliefs and to accept the one true God.

2272 Rahwa has several significances. It means an intervening space between two things (TA), the sea or the river in this case being an intervening space between the Israelites and the Egyptians. It also means calm (TA), it being implied that there was no storm in the sea when it was left by the Israelites, so that the Egyptians, finding it calm and motionless, followed the Israelites. Or rahwa may signify moving along easily, referring to the Israelites going along without fear of being overtaken.

38 And We did not create the heavens and the earth and what is between them in sport.

وَمَا خَلَقْنَا السَّمٰوٰتِ وَالْأَرْضَ وَمَا بَيْنَهُمَا لٰعِبِينَ

2273 The weeping for a dead man signifies the remembering of his good qualities or actions, which often bring tears to the eyes. The meaning of the heaven and the earth not weeping for them is that they neither had relations with the Divine Being nor had they done anything for the good of men, so that their good qualities should have been remembered either in heaven or on earth.

2274 The kings of the Hamyarites bore the title Tubba' (Kf, JB).

39 We did not create them both but with the truth, but most of them do not know.

40 Surely the day of separation is their appointed term, of all of them;

41 The day on which a friend shall not avail (his) friend aught, nor shall they be helped,

42 Save those on whom Allah shall have mercy; surely He is the Mighty, the Merciful.

Abstract:

Sec. 1. Denial of revelation.

Sec. 2. Truth of the revelation of the Qur-án.

Sec. 3. Denial of judgment.

Sec. 4. The doom.

General remarks.

This is the sixth chapter of the Ḥá mím group. Its title is taken from v. 28, which speaks of every nation being brought to its knees before the mighty power of God, according to its deserving. The first two sections speak of revelation. The revelation is from a Mighty, Wise God, and there are many signs of its truth, but the unbelievers still reject it. The signs of its truth are mentioned in the second section, among these being the promise of conquests to those who would follow it and the fulfilment of earlier prophecy respecting it. The third section refers to judgment and the unbelievers' denial of it, because of the hardness of their hearts. The fourth speaks of the doom of the unbelievers and of the substitution of the believers in their places.

5 And (in) the variation of the night and the day, and (in) what Allah sends down of sustenance from the cloud, then gives life thereby to the earth after its death, and (in) the changing of the winds, there are signs for a people who a 203. understand.[a]

6 These are the communications of Allah which We recite to you with truth; then in what announcement would they believe after Allah and His communications?

7 Woe to every sinful liar,

8 Who hears the communications of Allah recited to him, then persists proudly as though he had not heard them; so an-b 402. nounce[b] to him a painful chastisement.

9 And when he comes to know of any of Our communications, he takes it for a jest; these it is that shall have abasing chastisement.

10 Before them is hell, and there shall not avail them aught of what they earned, nor those whom they took for guardians besides Allah, and they shall have a grievous chastisement.

11 This is guidance; and (as for) those who disbelieve in the communications of their Lord, they shall have a painful chastisement on account of uncleanness.

SECTION 2

Truth of the Revelation of the Qur-án

12-15. Conquests promised to believers. 16, 17. Prophecies of the Prophet's advent. 18-21. The Qur-án is a true guidance.

12 Allah is He who made subservient to you the sea that the ships may run therein by His command, and that you may seek of His grace, and that you may give thanks.

13 And He has made subservient to you whatsoever is in the heavens and whatsoever

اَللّٰهُ الَّذِيْ سَخَّرَ لَكُمُ الْبَحْرَ لِتَجْرِيَ الْفُلْكُ

وَسَخَّرَ لَكُمْ مَّا فِي السَّمٰوٰتِ وَمَا

is in the earth, all, from Himself; most surely there are signs in this for a people who reflect.
14 Say to those who believe (that) they forgive those who do not fear the days of Allah[2276] that He may reward a people for what they earn.
15 Whoever does good, it is for his own soul, and whoever does evil, it is against himself; then you shall be brought back to your Lord.
16 And certainly We gave the Book and the wisdom and the prophecy to the children of Israel, and We gave them of the goodly things, and We a 77. made them excel the nations.[a]
17 And We gave them clear arguments in the affair,[2277] but they did not differ until after knowledge had come to them
Or, revolting. b 132 Ar. thy. out of envy[b] among themselves; surely your Lord will judge between them on the day of resurrection concerning that wherein they differed.
Ar. thee. 18 Then We have made you follow a course in the affair, therefore follow it, and do not follow the low desires of those who do not know.
19 Surely they shall not avail
Ar. thee. you in the least against Allah; and surely the unjust are friends of each other, and Allah is the guardian of those who guard (against evil).
20 These are clear proofs for men, and a guidance and a mercy for a people who are sure.

2276 The days of Allah are the contests in which the righteous shall be made successful (see 1298). These words make it clear that there is an assurance given to the faithful in the two previous verses that they shall be triumphant in this world, and rule the land as well as the sea.

2277 The affair or amr here signifies the prophethood of Muhammad, regarding which the Israelites were given the most direct prophecies (Bd). See the next verse, where the Holy Prophet Muhammad (may peace and the blessings of Allah be upon him!) is plainly addressed as having been given this affair, where the law given to him is called شريعة من الامر

21 Nay! do those who have wrought evil deeds think that We will make them like those who believe and do good—that their life and their death shall be equal?[2278] Evil it is that they judge.

SECTION 3

Denial of Judgment

22. Justice prevails in the universe. 23. The reprobate. 24–26. Denial of judgment.

22 And Allah created the heavens and the earth with truth and that every soul may be rewarded for what it has earned and they shall not be wronged.

23 Have you then considered him who takes his low desire for his god, and Allah has made him err[a] having knowledge[2279] and has set a seal upon his ear and his heart and put a covering upon his eye.[b] Who can then guide him after Allah? Will you not then be mindful?

Ar. hast thou.

a 44.

b 21.

24 And they say: There is nothing but our life in this world; we live and die and nothing destroys us but time, and they have no knowledge of that; they only conjecture.

25 And when Our clear communications are recited to them, their argument is no other than that they say: Bring our fathers (back) if you are truthful.

26 Say: Allah gives you life, then He makes you die, then will He gather you to the day of resurrection wherein is no doubt, but most people do not know.

قل الله يحييكم ثم يميتكم ثم يجمعكم
إلى يوم القيامة لا ريب فيه ولكن
أكثر الناس لا يعلمون ○

2278 The meaning may be, either that the righteous are not like the wicked in their life or in their death; or, that the wicked shall not find themselves in death (after death) in a state of ease resembling that which they enjoy in this life (Bḍ). Or, belief and the doing of good is here compared to life, and the doing of evil to death, because good deeds give life to man and evil deeds cause his spiritual death; therefore the meaning is, that the performance of good or evil cannot receive similar treatment, inasmuch as there is no resemblance between life and death.

2279 The words having knowledge imply that Allah knows the heart and mental attitude of men of low desires, and the consequence of their evil deeds is that they go astray.

SECTION 4

The Doom

27–29. Every nation has a doom. 30. Believers shall be made successful. 31–35. Unbelievers shall meet their doom. 36, 37. Divine glory shall be established.

27 And Allah's is the kingdom of the heavens and the earth; and on the day when the hour shall come to pass, on that day shall they perish who say false things.

وَلِلّٰهِ مُلْكُ السَّمٰوٰتِ وَالْاَرْضِ ۚ وَيَوْمَ تَقُوْمُ السَّاعَةُ يَوْمَئِذٍ يَّخْسَرُ الْمُبْطِلُوْنَ ○

28 And you shall see every nation kneeling down; every nation shall be called to its book:[2280] to-day you shall be rewarded for what you did.

Ar. thou shalt.

وَتَرٰى كُلَّ اُمَّةٍ جَاثِيَةً ۚ كُلُّ اُمَّةٍ تُدْعٰۤى اِلٰى كِتٰبِهَا ۚ اَلْيَوْمَ تُجْزَوْنَ مَا كُنْتُمْ تَعْمَلُوْنَ ○

29 This is Our Book that speaks against you with justice; surely We wrote what you did.

هٰذَا كِتٰبُنَا يَنْطِقُ عَلَيْكُمْ بِالْحَقِّ ۚ اِنَّا كُنَّا نَسْتَنْسِخُ مَا كُنْتُمْ تَعْمَلُوْنَ ○

30 Then as to those who believed and did good, their Lord will make them enter into His mercy; that is the manifest achievement.

فَاَمَّا الَّذِيْنَ اٰمَنُوْا وَعَمِلُوا الصّٰلِحٰتِ فَيُدْخِلُهُمْ رَبُّهُمْ فِيْ رَحْمَتِهٖ ۚ ذٰلِكَ هُوَ الْفَوْزُ الْمُبِيْنُ ○

31 As to those who disbelieved: What! were not My communications recited to you? but you were proud and you were a guilty people.

وَاَمَّا الَّذِيْنَ كَفَرُوْا ۚ اَفَلَمْ تَكُنْ اٰيٰتِيْ تُتْلٰى عَلَيْكُمْ فَاسْتَكْبَرْتُمْ وَكُنْتُمْ قَوْمًا مُّجْرِمِيْنَ ○

32 And when it was said, Surely the promise of Allah is true and as for the hour, there is no doubt about it, you said: We do not know what the hour is; we do not think (that it will come to pass) save a passing thought, and we are not at all sure.

وَاِذَا قِيْلَ اِنَّ وَعْدَ اللّٰهِ حَقٌّ وَّالسَّاعَةُ لَا رَيْبَ فِيْهَا قُلْتُمْ مَّا نَدْرِيْ مَا السَّاعَةُ ۙ اِنْ نَّظُنُّ اِلَّا ظَنًّا وَّمَا نَحْنُ بِمُسْتَيْقِنِيْنَ ○

33 And the evil (consequences) of what they did shall become manifest to them and that which they mocked shall encompass them.

وَبَدَا لَهُمْ سَيِّاٰتُ مَا عَمِلُوْا وَحَاقَ بِهِمْ مَّا كَانُوْا بِهٖ يَسْتَهْزِءُوْنَ ○

34 And it shall be said: To-day We forsake you as you neglected the meeting of this day of yours and your abode is the fire, and there are not for you any helpers:

وَقِيْلَ الْيَوْمَ نَنْسٰىكُمْ كَمَا نَسِيْتُمْ لِقَآءَ يَوْمِكُمْ هٰذَا وَمَاْوٰىكُمُ النَّارُ وَمَا لَكُمْ مِّنْ نّٰصِرِيْنَ ○

2280 The book signifies the book of deeds. That every nation shall have a book shows that nations are also judged according to their deeds; the law that applies to the case of individuals also applies to nations. Nations are judged in this life, therefore the day on which every nation is called to its book is the day of its doom.

35 That is because you took the communications of Allah for a jest and the life of this world deceived you. So on that day they shall not be brought forth from it, nor shall they be granted goodwill.

36 Therefore to Allah is due (all) praise, the Lord of the heavens and the Lord of the earth, the Lord of the worlds.

37 And to Him belongs greatness in the heavens and the earth, and He is the Mighty, the Wise.

Abstract:

Sec. 1. Truth of revelation.
Sec. 2. Witness of truth.
Sec. 3. The fate of 'Ád.
Sec. 4. A warning.

General remarks.

THIS is the last chapter of the Há mím group, and is entitled the Sandhills, the title being taken from the tracts of sand which contributed to the destruction of the tribe of 'Ád (v. 21). The fact is mentioned to warn the Arabs that when the fate of a nation is sealed, it may be brought about by sea, as in the case of Pharaoh and his hosts, or in sand, as in the case of the tribe of 'Ád.

The chapter continues the subject-matter of the last chapter, dealing with the truth of revelation in the first section and with the witness of truth in the second. The last two sections, after referring to the fate of 'Ad, contain a warning for those who reject the truth.

2281, see next page.

4 Say: Have you considered what you call upon besides Allah? Show me what they have created of the earth, or have they a share in the heavens? Bring me a book before this or traces of knowledge, if you are truthful.

5 And who is in greater error than he who calls besides Allah upon those that will not answer him till the day of resurrection and they are heedless of their call?

6 And when men are gathered together they shall be their enemies, and shall be deniers of their worshipping (them).

7 And when Our clear communications are recited to them, those who disbelieve say with regard to the truth when it comes to them: This is clear enchantment.

8 Nay! they say: He has forged it. Say: If I have forged it, you do not control anything for me from Allah;[2282] He knows best what you utter concerning it: He is enough as a witness between me and you, and He is the Forgiving, the Merciful.[2283]

2281 According to the Holy Qur-án the universe had a beginning and it will also have an end.

2282 That is, you cannot avert the punishment that Allah sends upon one who forges a revelation (Bḍ, JB).

2283 It is noteworthy that whenever the punishment of the opponents is alluded to, as in the statement He is enough as a witness between me and you, the Divine attribute of mercy and forgiveness is also mentioned to indicate that mercy always predominates in the Divine nature.

2284 Bid'un signifies a novelty, or a thing existing for the first time (Q-LL). And you say فلان بدع فى هذا الامر meaning such a one is the first doer in this affair; the first who has done it (Msb-LL). The words, that he was not the first of the apostles, are put into the Holy Prophet's mouth to direct attention to the fact that he must be judged in the manner in which the truth of the previous prophets was recognized. 2285, see next page.

10 Say: Have you considered if it is from Allah, and you disbelieve in it, and a witness from among the children of Israel has borne witness of one like him,[2286] so he believed, while you are big with pride: surely Allah does not guide the unjust people.

Witness of Truth

11, 12. Moses' testimony. 13–20. Believers and unbelievers shall witness truth in their lives.

11 And those who disbelieve say concerning those who believe: If it had been a good, they would not have gone ahead of us therein. And as they do not seek to be rightly directed thereby, they say: It is an old lie.

12 And before it the Book of Moses was a guide and a mercy; and this is a Book verifying[a] (it) in the Arabic language[2287] that it may warn those who are unjust and as good news for the doers of good.

13 Surely those who say, Our Lord is Allah, then they continue on the right way, they shall have no fear nor shall they grieve.

14 These are the dwellers of the garden, abiding therein: a reward for what they did.

جَزَآءًۢ بِمَا كَانُوا۟ يَعْمَلُونَ ۝

2285 While on the one hand the Prophet is made to deny any knowledge as to the ultimate end of one or the other party, he is made to assert, on the other, his being a plain warner. Hence, not knowing simply signifies not having the knowledge of the details only.

2286 The witness from among the children of Israel who bore witness of one like him is Moses: "I will raise them up a prophet from among their brethren, like unto thee. . . . And it shall come to pass that whosoever will not hearken unto My Word which he shall speak in My Name, I will require it of him" (Deut. 18 : 18, 19). It is to the concluding statement in the above quotation that attention is called in the words: have you considered if it is from Allah and you disbelieve in it.

2287 The words refer to the subject-matter of v. 10, which speaks of Moses' prophecy. The Qur-án is here declared as fulfilling that prophecy, and the reference to its being in the Arabic language signifies the coming of the Prophet from among the Ishmaelites, who spoke that language—a fact mentioned in Moses' prophecy.

15 And We have enjoined on man the doing of good to his parents; with trouble did his mother bear him and with trouble did she bring him forth; and the bearing of him and the weaning of him was thirty months; until when he attains his maturity and reaches forty years,[2287A] he says: My Lord! grant me that I may give thanks for Thy favour which Thou hast bestowed on me and on my parents, and that I may do good which pleases Thee and do good to me in respect of my offspring: surely I turn to Thee, and surely I am of those who submit.

16 These are they from whom We accept the best of what they have done and pass over their evil deeds, among the dwellers of the garden: the promise of truth which they were promised.

17 And he who says to his parents: Fie on you! do you threaten me that I shall be brought forth when generations have already passed away before me? And they both call for Allah's aid: Woe to you! believe, surely the promise of Allah is true. But he says: This is nothing but stories of the ancients.

Ar. thee.

18 These are they against whom the word has proved true among nations of the jinn and the men that have already passed away before them; surely they are losers.

19 And for all are degrees according to what they did, and that He may pay them back fully their deeds and they shall not be wronged.

20 And on the day when those who disbelieve shall be 2287A It would appear from this that the spiritual maturity of man usually takes place at the age of forty. Evidence of this is also found in the fact that the Holy Prophet Muhammad, may peace and the blessings of Allah be upon him, received the Divine message for the regeneration of mankind at the age of forty.

Rodwell and Muir locate the Adites in the country round about Táif; others in Hadramaut. The latter opinion is the correct one, as maps of Arabia plainly show Al-Aḥqáf to be situated in Hadramaut.

29 And when We turned towards you (Ar. thee) a party of the jinn[2290] who listened to the Qur-án; so when they came to it, they said: Be silent; then when it was finished, they turned back to their people warning (them).

30 They said: O our people, we have listened to a Book revealed after Moses verifying that which is before it,[a] guiding to the truth and to a right path:

Shall then any be destroyed save the transgressing people?

CHAPTER XLVII

MUHAMMAD

Revealed at Medina

(4 sections and 38 verses)

Abstract:

Sec. 1. Opponents shall perish in wars.
Sec. 2. Oppressors shall be brought low.
Sec. 3. The weak-hearted ones.
Sec. 4. An exhortation.

The Title and context.

This chapter is entitled Muhammad, and also Qitāl or war. The first title is due to the fact that this chapter foretells the material improvement in the condition of those who believe in the Holy Prophet Muhammad. They were in a very helpless condition at the time of its revelation, having fled from their homes for the safety of their lives, and being threatened by a powerful enemy in their new home. The other title is due to the fact that this chapter shows that the punishment with which the unbelievers were threatened would be brought about by wars in which their ringleaders would perish; others will be made prisoners, or vanquished and brought low. This very circumstance gives us the key to the connection of this chapter with the concluding one of the last group. In that chapter we have only a repeated warning of the impending doom of the opponents, while we are clearly told herein what form that punishment will take.

Subject-matter.

The chapter is divided into four sections. Opening with the statement that the exertions of those who prevent people from accepting the truth shall be utterly fruitless, while the believers shall soon enjoy an improvement in their condition, it then states that this altered condition shall be accomplished by wars, and proceeds to give a direction regarding prisoners of war. The second section is mainly devoted to the same subject, and further states that Mecca shall be subjugated, the unbelievers shall be brought low, and the believers shall be triumphant. The third section refers to those who regarded this, the most righteous war in history, as a calamity, and who therefore, assuming an attitude of hypocrisy, slowly returned to unbelief. The fourth section states that a separation shall occur between the truly faithful and the hypocrites. In concluding, it also exhorts the Muslims to exert themselves to their utmost in the cause of truth, for if they failed, another people would be raised to supplant them.

The date of revelation.

The revelation of this chapter undoubtedly belongs to a period when war with the Quraish had not yet begun, but when circumstances had arisen which showed war to be inevitable. Therefore, some of the earlier authorities have considered it a Meccan revelation (Dk, IJubair, Sudy-AH), but this view is certainly erroneous, for v. 13 clearly speaks of the Meccans having already expelled the Prophet from Mecca; and moreover, though the permission to fight is no doubt met with in a Meccan revelation (ch. 22), the plain injunctions given here, and the mention of those who showed weakness of heart and went back to unbelief (became hypocrites)

SECTION I

Opponents shall perish in Wars.

1–3. Exertions of opponents shall be fruitless, and condition of believers shall be bettered. 4. Unbelievers shall be vanquished in battles. 5–7. Help and success for believers. 8–11. Destruction awaiting unbelievers.

In the name of Allah, the Beneficent, the Merciful.

1 (As for) those who disbelieve and turn away from Allah's way, He shall render their works ineffective.[2291]

2 And (as for) those who believe and do good, and believe in what has been revealed to Muhammad, and it is the very truth from their Lord, He will remove their evil from them and improve their condition.[2292]

3 That is because those who disbelieve follow falsehood, and those who believe follow the truth from their Lord; thus does Allah set forth to men their examples.

كَذٰلِكَ يَضْرِبُ اللّٰهُ لِلنَّاسِ اَمْثَالَهُمْ ○

(sec. 3), is clear testimony of its being an early Medina revelation; and such it is considered to be by the majority of the Muslim authorities. Portions of the chapter may have been revealed during the Holy Prophet's flight from Mecca, as held by some authorities, but as a whole, it may be assigned to the first year of the Flight, and therefore it is to be placed before the battle of Badr. This is also the time assigned to it by Muir.

2291 Adalla-hû is synonymous with ahlaka-hû (TA) or adâ'ahû (S, TA), the first meaning he destroyed him or caused him to perish, and the second he wasted it or made it ineffective. The works which this verse foretells will be made ineffective are hinted at in the description: who disbelieve and turn men from Allah's way, i.e. their works of disbelief, such as asking help from their idols and their exertions to turn men away from Islam. Thus the verse contains a clear prediction that while the unbelievers themselves shall be left helpless, Islam and the Muslims will prosper and the exertions of the unbelievers against the truth shall be brought to naught. As this chapter was revealed at a time when the enemies of Islam were at the height of their power, and had apparently uprooted Islam from Mecca, and were preparing to give it a death-blow at Medina, the verse contains one of the most wonderful prophecies.

2292 This is another prophecy, a counterpart of the one contained in the previous verse. The Muslims, whose condition, it is here announced, will be bettered, were in a most helpless condition at the time. The majority of them had just fled from their homes, almost penniless, to save their lives and to settle down at Medina, where, however, they were not left alone, the enemy being determined to crush them by force. They are told that not only will the exertions of their opponents be brought to naught, but also that their own condition would soon be greatly improved.

4 So when you meet in battle[2293] those who disbelieve, then smite the necks until when you have overcome them, then make (them) prisoners, and afterwards either set them free as a favour or let them ransom (themselves) until the war terminates.[2294] That (shall be so); and if Allah had pleased He would certainly have inflicted retribution on them, but that He may try some of you by means of others;[2295] and (as for) those who are slain in the way of Allah, He will by no means allow their deeds to perish.

5 He will guide them and improve their condition.

6 And cause them to enter the garden which He has made known to them.[2296]

2293 The word used is laqitum, which is from liqá, and signifies, according to Kf, harb, i.e. meeting in battle.

2294 The word askhana occurring in this passage has been fully explained in 1024. This passage mentions the only case in which prisoners of war can be taken, and thus condemns the practice of slavery, according to which men could be seized everywhere and sold into slavery. Here we are told that prisoners of war can only be taken after meeting an enemy in regular battle, and even in that case they must be set free, either as a favour or after taking ransom. It was the former of these alternatives that the Holy Prophet adopted in most cases; for instance, in the case of the prisoners of the Bani Mustaliq, in which a hundred families were set at liberty, and in the case of Hawazin, in which fully six thousand prisoners of war were released merely as an act of favour. In the case of the seventy prisoners taken at Badr alone there is mention of redemption having been taken, but this was when Islam was very weak and the powerful enemy was determined to crush it. Even in this case the taking of slaves was to cease when war terminated, which shows clearly that the injunction given in the beginning of the verse was due to the fact that a state of warfare existed when this injunction was given, though no encounter had yet taken place, and that it was to apply only so long as war lasted.

2295 Intasara min-hu signifies he inflicted retribution on him (LA), or he exacted his due completely from him (TA-LL). The meaning in the first case is that if Allah had pleased He would have punished the enemies of Islam otherwise than by wars, but as He means to punish them by the hands of the Muslims, therefore battles must be fought. If the meaning given in the margin is adopted, the reference may be to the injunction to release prisoners; because, if the Muslims had given them the punishment which they deserved on account of the cruelties to which they subjected the Muslims, they could have justly slain them. But Allah wanted, because of His great mercy, to show a favour to the unbelievers, and that from the hands of the Muslims.

2296 The garden of the next life is made known to the righteous in this life by granting them a triumph over their enemies, thus making them taste the fruit of their deeds even here. It has already been noted that the promise of gardens in this life stands for success, while the garden of the next life is the fruit of the good deeds done here.

7 O you who believe! if you help (the cause of) Allah, He will help you and make firm your feet.

8 And (as for) those who disbelieve, for them is destruction, and He has made their deeds ineffective.

9 That is because they hated what Allah revealed, so He rendered their deeds null.

10 Have they not then journeyed in the land and seen how was the end of those before them: Allah brought down destruction upon them, and the unbelievers shall have the like of it.

11 That is because Allah is the Protector of those who believe, and because the unbelievers shall have no protector for them.

2297 The town which had driven away the Holy Prophet was Mecca, and the overthrow of its power is here foretold in the clearest words. It will be seen that the Meccans were not destroyed when their final overthrow came, nor did the Holy Prophet punish them for their crimes and tyrannies against the Muslims; they were dealt with very mercifully—so mercifully, indeed, that the history of the world does not present another instance of such merciful treatment of a conquered nation of oppressors where the oppressed were the conquerors. Nevertheless, the Meccans did not go unpunished; their overthrow at the hand of the Muslims brought about the fulfilment of the earlier prophecies.

2298 Note that the description given does not mention the actual blessings of paradise, for they are blessings "which no eye has seen, nor has any ear heard, nor has it entered into the heart of man to conceive of them," but it is only a parable, and an example which shows what they are like. The parable not only describes to them the blessings of the life after death, but also gives them a description of the fertile land which they were to inherit in this very life—the garden of Eden of Gen. 2 : 8, where there is abundance of all things, so that the Muslims were promised the Holy Land in addition to Mecca.

2298A Here is another instance of the use of the word maghfirat in the Holy Qur-án, showing that it does not mean forgiveness of sins, but protection against the frailties of human nature. Among the various blessings of paradise, which its inmates shall find after admission is maghfirat, and it is clear that this maghfirat cannot be forgiveness, for forgiveness would require that there should be sinning in paradise, an idea diametrically opposed to the description of paradise as given in the Holy Qur-án. The fact, as repeatedly stated, is that there is no sinning in paradise, and hence maghfirat in paradise signifies protection from sins.

2300 Since a conquest is promised here to the Muslims, and conquests are necessarily attended with difficulties, the Prophet is told to ask Divine protection for his shortcomings and those of his companions. See 2194 for further explanation. Or the meaning is as pointed out in 2307.

2301 Allah's knowing the returning place and the abiding place of the faithful is an allusion to their new abode and their re-entry into Mecca; or, the Mutaqallab refers to the going to and fro of the unbelievers in their plans to destroy Islam.

2302 The Muslims had been persecuted beyond all measure; they had been oppressed, slain, and turned out of their houses. Hence they naturally desired that they should be allowed to defend themselves. By a chapter is meant a revelation allowing them to fight.

2303 Unbelievers are addressed here.

2304 Note that Allah blinds the eyes of and makes deaf those who would not turn to the right way. The next verse makes it clear by saying that they do not reflect on the Qur-án, as if there were locks on their hearts.

2305 Laḥn signifies the meaning of speech, its intended sense or import, intent (TA, LL). The Prophet is here told that he can easily recognize the hypocrites by their oblique or ambiguous mode of speech, which is a clear indication of their intention.

31 And most certainly We will try you until We have known[a] those among you who exert themselves hard, and the patient, and made your case manifest.

32 Surely those who disbelieve and turn away from Allah's way and oppose the Apostle after that guidance has become clear to them cannot harm Allah in any way, and He will make null their deeds.

33 O you who believe! obey Allah and obey the Apostle, and do not make your deeds of no effect.

34 Surely those who disbelieve and turn away from Allah's way, then they die while they are unbelievers, Allah will by no means forgive them.

35 And be not slack so as to cry for peace and you have the upper hand, and Allah is with you, and He will not bring your deeds to nought.

36 The life of this world is only idle sport and play, and if you believe and guard (against evil) He will give you your rewards, and will not ask of you your possessions.

37 If He should ask you for it and urge you, you will be niggardly, and He will bring forth your malice.

38 Behold! you are those who are called upon to spend in Allah's way, but among you are those who are niggardly, and whoever is niggardly is niggardly against his own soul; and Allah is Self-sufficient and you have need (of Him), and if you turn back He will bring in your place another people, then they will not be like you.

CHAPTER XLVIII

THE VICTORY

(Al-fat-ḥ)

REVEALED AT MEDINA

(4 sections and 29 verses)

Abstract:

Sec. 1. The Hudaibiyya truce was a victory.
Sec. 2. The defaulters.
Sec. 3. More victories for Islam.
Sec. 4. The triumph of Islam over all other religions.

The Title and context.

THIS chapter is entitled The Victory, a very appropriate name, because it deals with the conquests of Islam, from the great moral victory gained at Hudaibiyya (see 2306) mentioned in the opening verse, to the final triumph of Islam over all other religions of the world (v. 28). The word fat-ḥ itself occurs several times in this chapter. It is remarkable that although the Muslims had already been victorious in several battles, not one of those victories but a truce, apparently disadvantageous to the Muslims, is made the basis of the triumphant career of Islam. There is no doubt an indication in this that though war was forced on Islam, and the Muslims had been victorious, yet its real triumph lay in its moral conquests; the first of these after the Flight being the apparent disadvantage, but the real moral conquest, gained at Hudaibiyya. There was no fighting there, but a truce was concluded which, although not allowing the Muslims to retain any Muslim refugee from Mecca, nevertheless opened the way for people, by laying aside hostilities, to reflect on the beauties of Islam. The truce at Hudaibiyya was thus a moral victory, and, regarded, as it is, as the basis of the future conquests of Islam, is a clear indication that moral conquests were looked upon as the real conquests of Islam. Even the importance of the conquest of Mecca lies in the conquest of hearts which the Holy Prophet made by showing an example of forgiveness unparalleled in the history of the human race.

The connection of this chapter with the last is clear. Whilst the last chapter speaks of the overthrow of the opponents of Islam in wars, and of the betterment of the condition of the Muslims, here we are told how that improved condition in Muslim affairs was accomplished. Victory in battle was, no doubt, the immediate cause of the overthrow of an enemy who wished to destroy Islam by physical force, but the real success of Islam lay in its moral conquests.

Date of revelation and subject-matter.

As regards the date of revelation of this chapter, there can be no two opinions. We have 'Umar's testimony on record that the Holy Prophet recited it for the first time when returning from Hudaibiyya (Bkh), and hence its revelation belongs to the sixth year of the Hejira.

The chapter opens by declaring the Hudaibiyya truce to be a real victory, and after referring to the disappointment of the hypocrites and the idolaters, concludes with a reference to the aid and allegiance which the faithful rendered to the Holy Prophet. The second section deals with the false excuses of the hypocrites, and separates them from the faithful by not allowing them to join the Muslims in their expeditions. The third section prophesies more victories in battles—that at Khaibar and the conquest of Mecca being clearly hinted at. The fourth section brings the chapter to a close by making the important announcement that Islam shall be made triumphant over all other religions of the world.

2306 The victory referred to here is no other than that gained by the truce at Hudaibiyya (Bkh). The fact that there was no actual fighting at Hudaibiyya has led many to think that the words contain a prophecy about the conquest of Mecca, which, however, is referred to later on in the third section of this chapter. The truce at Hudaibiyya was surely a real victory for the Muslims, because it opened the way for the propagation of Islam among the unbelievers, and by putting a stop to hostilities gave the opponents an occasion to ponder over the merits of the religion against which they had hitherto struggled in vain in the field of battle. As a result of this truce large numbers came over to Islam, and the words are thus prophetical, and their truth was demonstrated long after their revelation.

It may be added here that 'Umar had some misgivings as to the good of the truce concluded at Hudaibiyya; he thought that the truce was not honourable for the Muslims, for the conditions to which they yielded were disadvantageous to them. Thus one of the conditions of the truce was that if any one from among the Meccans came over to the Holy Prophet he would return him to the Quraish, though he were a Muslim. The Muslims felt it very hard that one of their brethren should be returned to suffer persecution at the hands of the unbelievers; but as the Quraish refused to make a truce unless this condition was included, the Holy Prophet accepted it. Immediately afterwards Divine revelation dispelled all those misgivings, and declared the truce to be a great victory leading to glorious results, as it actually proved to be.

2307 The second verse beginning with a lám, meaning that, enumerates the consequences of the victory which was gained by the Muslims in the truce of Hudaibiyya, and so does the third. The first of these يغفر لك الله ما تقدم من ذنبك و ما تاخر has been much misunderstood. The forgiveness of faults cannot be the result of the gaining of a victory. On the other hand, as explained in the previous note, a state of hostilities having continued for a long time, the people had never had occasion to reflect on the beauties of Islam, and only a dark picture of it was present to their minds. Hence zanbi-ka here signifies

6 And (that) He may chastise the hypocritical men and the hypocritical women, and the polytheistic men and the polytheistic women, the entertainers of evil thoughts about Allah. On them is the evil turn, and Allah is wroth with them and has cursed them and prepared hell for them, and evil is the resort.

the shortcomings and failures which the opponents attributed to the Prophet, to the removal of which the truce at Hudaibiyya had opened the way, for it was after that that the brighter side of the picture was brought before their eyes. For a similar expression see 687, where it has been shown that ismí, literally meaning my sin, really signifies the sin committed against me. The meaning of ghfar has been fully explained in 2194, where it has been shown that غفر الامر means he rectified the affair. A perusal of that footnote is necessary to understand what is said here. The truce opened the way for the removal of all misunderstandings, many of them disappearing immediately by the propagation of Islam, and the rest being swept away by the conquest of Mecca, to which the truce at Hudaibiyya had opened the way. There is also a reference here to that which remains behind. By this is meant the later carpings of the enemies of Islam. As I have stated, this chapter deals not only with the immediate triumph of Islam, but prophesies also its ultimate triumph over the whole world. Hence there is a promise here that not only those misunderstandings will be corrected which already exist, but even those that remain behind, and will be spread at a later date by the enemies of Islam, will also be dispelled, and Islam will thus shine in its full lustre not only in Arabia but in the whole of the world.

2308 The two consequences of the truce made at Hudaibiyya, which are described in the concluding words of the verse, can be easily conceived. The completion of favours was accomplished by the spread of Islam, and the guiding on the right way signified the right way to success.

2309 Large numbers becoming converts to Islam proved a mighty help in its cause. While proceeding to Hudaibiyya the Holy Prophet was accompanied by 1,500 men; two years later, when advancing on Mecca, 10,000 men marched under his banner.

Ar. thee.

8 Surely We have sent you as a witness and as a bearer of good news and as a warner,

9 That you may believe in Allah and His Apostle and may aid him and revere him; and (that) you may declare His glory, morning and evening.

Ar. thee.

10 Surely those who swear allegiance to you do but swear allegiance to Allah; the hand of Allah is above their hands. Therefore whoever breaks (his faith), he breaks it only to the injury of his own soul, and whoever fulfils what he has covenanted with Allah, He will grant him a mighty reward.[2310]

The Defaulters

11–14. Excuses offered by defaulters. 15, 16. They shall not accompany Muslim expeditions till later on. 17. Who may be excused.

Ar. thee.

11 Those of the dwellers of the desert who were left behind will say to you:[2311] Our property and our families kept us busy, so ask forgiveness for us. They say with their tongues what is not in their hearts. Say: Then who can control anything for you from Allah if He intends to do you harm or if He intends to do you good: nay, Allah is Aware of what you do:

سَيَقُولُ لَكَ الْمُخَلَّفُونَ مِنَ الْأَعْرَابِ

بَلْ كَانَ اللَّهُ بِمَا تَعْمَلُونَ خَبِيرًا ۝

2310 The swearing of allegiance referred to here took place before the truce was concluded. The Holy Prophet had started with his men with the object of performing a pilgrimage, but when he reached Hudaibiyya, the Meccans opposed his entry into Mecca. Thereupon the companions of the Holy Prophet swore allegiance to him (under a tree as stated in v. 18), that they would defend him at all costs and die fighting at his side (Bkh). The necessity for this seems to have arisen from the fact that the Quraish advanced to fight the Muslims, who had started unprepared, because they intended only to perform the pilgrimage. It appears that Abú Bakr requested the Holy Prophet to go forth prepared for a war, for the Quraish were likely to oppose him, but the Holy Prophet did not approve of this (Bkh).

It may be noted here that the companions of the Holy Prophet swore allegiance to him on three different occasions; viz. twice at Mecca before the Flight—the swearers being in both cases the citizens of Medina. Both these are known by the name of Bai'at-ul-'Aqaba. In the first of these twelve men only were present, and the swearing of their allegiance implied only their belief in the truth of Islam, the promise given being: "We will not serve any one 15 Those who are left behind will say when you set forth for the gaining of acquisitions: Allow us (that) we may follow you. They desire to change the word of Allah. Say: By no means shall you follow us: thus did Allah say before.[2313] But they will say: Nay! you are jealous of us. Nay! they do not understand but a little.

but Allah; we will not steal, we will not commit adultery, we will not kill our children, we will not slander, and we will not disobey the Prophet in anything that is right." The second pledge at 'Aqaba was given by seventy-three Medinites who undertook to defend the Holy Prophet, "as we defend our own backs." The third occasion on which an oath of allegiance was taken was the Hudaibiyya, and this is known as the Bai'at-i-riḍwán (see v. 18). Women swore allegiance on one occasion, for which see 2493.

2311 The reference is to those who lagged behind in the Hudaibiyya expedition.

2312 Even so late as the sixth year of Hejira the Muslims were so weak, as compared with their enemies, that whenever they had to go into the field, the weak-hearted thought that the Muslims were going into the very mouth of death.

2313 The reference here is not to 9:83, which is a much later revelation. It appears that an order similar to that contained in 9:83 was given by the Holy Prophet to the laggards on the occasion of the Hudaibiyya.

More Victories for Islam

18-20. Victory at Khaibar. 21. Conquest of Mecca. 22, 23. Unbelievers would give back if they fight. 24. Withheld from fighting in the valley of Mecca. 25, 26. They prevent the Muslims from going to the sacred mosque.

18 Certainly Allah was well pleased with the believers when they swore allegiance to you under the tree,[2315] and He knew what was in their hearts, so He sent down tranquility on them and rewarded them with a near victory,[2316]

Ar. thee.

19 And many acquisitions which they will take: and Allah is Mighty, Wise.[2317]

2314 The power of the Meccan enemy was now broken, as was proved by the advance on Mecca two years later. Hence, the defaulters are told that they would be called on to join the forces of Islam against another powerful enemy. This may refer to the expedition to Tabúk, or to the wars against the Roman and Persian empires in the time of the early Caliphs.

2315 It should be noted that the 1,500 men who swore allegiance at Hudaibiyya are here declared to be those with whom Allah is well pleased; these words should set at rest the doubts of the adherents of a great schism in Islam as to the sincerity of the companions of the Holy Prophet.

2316 The near victory prophesied here was obtained at Khaibar, soon after the return from Hudaibiyya.

2317 These many acquisitions predict the later conquests of the Muslims, among which the conquest of Mecca occupies the first place, and is referred to in the next verse.

2318 What was hastened on was the conquest of Mecca. There was no fighting there, and it is to this that the holding back of the hands of men refers.

2319 This reference is to the great Muslim conquests under the successors of the Holy Prophet. The vanquishment of the enemy is plainly spoken of in the next verse.

2320 It is stated that about seventy or eighty men (thirty according to another report) made a raid upon the Muslims, but they were captured and afterwards set free (Muslim, Nasai-JB). The holding back of the hands in the valley of Mecca may refer to the arrangement of the truce between the two parties, or to the conquest of Mecca.

2321 The terms of the truce made at Hudaibiyya were dissatisfying to the Muslims. Authentic reports state clearly that 'Umar openly gave vent to his injured feelings (Bkh). The chief terms of the agreement were: (1) That the Muslims should return without performing a pilgrimage. (2) That they should be allowed to perform a pilgrimage next year, but should not stay for more than three days. (3) That if an unbeliever, being converted, went over to the

The Triumph of Islam over all other Religions

27. A near victory. 28. The final triumph. 29. Gradual growth.

Or, will fulfil.

27 Certainly Allah had shown to His Apostle the vision with truth: you shall most certainly enter the sacred Mosque, if Allah pleases, in security, (some) having their heads shaved and (others) having their hair cut, you shall not fear, but He knows what you do not know, so He brought about a near victory before that.[2322]

لَقَدْ صَدَقَ اللّٰهُ رَسُوْلَهُ الرُّءْيَا بِالْحَقِّ ۚ

لَا تَخَافُوْنَ ۭ فَعَلِمَ مَا لَمْ تَعْلَمُوْا فَجَعَلَ
مِنْ دُوْنِ ذٰلِكَ فَتْحًا قَرِيْبًا ۝

Muslims he should be returned, but if a Muslim went over to the unbelievers he should not be given back to the Muslims. The last term of the agreement was specially dissatisfying to the Muslims; but it shows the strong conviction which the Holy Prophet had in the truth of Islam, for he was confident that none of his companions would go over to unbelief and join the Quraish; and also that those who became converts to Islam would not desert it on account of persecution, or because they were not given shelter by the Muslims. And thus it happened that the converts to Islam from among the Meccans, not being allowed to settle at Medina, formed an independent colony of their own, proving thereby the genuineness of their convictions and the strength of their faith.

One of the reasons given here for the truce was to be found in the fact that the welfare of the Muslims demanded it, inasmuch as there were Muslims at Mecca who were unknown even to their brethren at Medina, and that if a battle had taken place, they would have suffered along with the enemy. This shows how Islam was making silent progress at Mecca itself, even without the guidance of a preacher.

2322 The Holy Prophet's journey to Mecca to perform a pilgrimage with from 1,200 to 1,500 of his companions was undertaken on the basis of the vision stated here. In a vision, he had seen himself and his companions performing a pilgrimage; convinced of the truth of his vision, he set out with the object of performing a pilgrimage. The Meccans, however, opposed him at Hudaibiyya, and a truce was there arranged according to which the Holy Prophet had to return without performing a pilgrimage. The truth of the vision is therefore asserted here. It is made clear that the Prophet's return did not falsify the vision which had to be, and was, fulfilled in the next year. This was the answer which the Holy Prophet gave to 'Umar when he objected to returning without performing a pilgrimage (Bkh).

28 He it is who sent His Apostle with the guidance and the true religion that He may make it prevail over all the religions; and Allah is enough for a witness.[2323]

29 Muhammad is the Apostle of Allah, and those with him are firm of heart against the unbelievers,[2324] compassionate among themselves; you will see them bowing down, prostrating themselves, seeking grace from Allah and pleasure; their marks are in their faces because of the effect of prostration; that is their description in the Torah and their description in the Gospel; like as seed-produce that puts forth its sprout, then strengthens it, so it becomes stout and stands firmly on its stem, delighting the sowers that He may enrage the unbelievers on account of them; Allah has promised those among them who believe and do good, forgiveness and a great reward.

2323 This prophecy of the prevalence of Islam over all other religions is a prophecy which extends into the distant future. Arabia had seen its fulfilment in the lifetime of the Holy Prophet. The meaning of the prevalence of Islam is not, however, to be found in the political supremacy of its adherents at all times, nor does the prophecy signify that other religions would at any time entirely disappear; it only indicates that the superiority of the religion of Islam to all other religions will at last be established, and Islam will be the religion of the majority of the nations of the earth. No other scripture prophesies the triumph of the religion it preaches in such unmistakable terms.

2324 Ashidda is plural of shadid, which means ordinarily firm, strong, powerful (LA-LL), but also brave, firm of heart (LA, Q-LL). Shiddat, the root word, also signifies firmness of heart according to TA. The translation fierce, or vehement, adopted in English translations is not correct here.

CHAPTER XLIX

THE CHAMBERS

(Al-Ḥujurát)

REVEALED AT MEDINA

(2 sections and 18 verses)

Abstract:

Sec. 1. Respect for the Prophet.
Sec. 2. Respect for each other.

The Title.

THE chapter takes its title from v. 4, which enjoins the Muslims not to call out to the Prophet from behind the private chambers. As this chapter was revealed when large masses began to enter Islam and deputation after deputation came to Medina, it was necessary to teach these masses good manners as well as good morals, and herein we find a lesson in respect not only for the privacy of the Holy Prophet, but also for the privacy to be observed among Muslims. The Holy Prophet was not only the spiritual head of a people; he was also a prophet who had to direct his people in their religious and temporal affairs. He had to teach them manners as well as morals; to decide their cases and to make laws for them; to lead them to prayer, to bow before God, and into the field to fight against a powerful enemy; and, therefore, it was necessary that the new converts to Islam should appreciate the value of his time.

Date of revelation, context, and subject-matter.

The chapter was revealed at Medina in the year 9 A.H. The opening verses are unanimously referred to the time of the visit of the deputation of Bani Tamim. As the previous chapter speaks of victories for the Muslims, and as victory brings ease, this chapter denounces the vices of a civilized society living in ease and comfort. The first five verses teach what manners must be observed towards the Holy Prophet, the next three require all matters of importance to be referred to him, and the section is concluded with a statement requiring the Muslims to make peace between two Muslim parties who fight with each other. This last injunction is also based on respect for the Prophet, for all Muslims are spiritually his children; and therefore to make peace between them really shows respectfulness for him who laid the basis of the brotherhood of the different nations and tribes of the world. The second section teaches the Muslims some of the social virtues, and enjoins them to avoid certain vices which are the bane of society, as the evil propensities deal a death-blow to the loving affection which the principle of the common brotherhood of man established by Islam requires: a brotherhood which is not based on the distinctions of tribes and families, but on piety and righteousness, so that the most righteous shall be the most respected. The section concludes with the statement that men do not lay Islam under obligation by joining its brotherhood, but that Islam is a real blessing to them, and in failing to recognize this they cannot reap the advantages attendant upon joining the brotherhood of Islam.

SECTION 1

Respect for the Prophet

1–5. Believers should be respectful to the Prophet. 6–8. All matters of importance to be referred to him. 9, 10. Peace-making between believers.

In the name of Allah, the Beneficent, the Merciful.

Or, do not anticipate (any matter). 1 O you who believe! be not forward in the presence of Allah and His Apostle, and be careful of (your duty to) Allah; surely Allah is Hearing, Knowing.[2325]

2 O you who believe! do not raise your voices above the voice of the Prophet, and do not speak loud to him as you speak loud to one another, lest your deeds become null while you do not perceive.[2326]

3 Surely those who lower their voices before Allah's Apostle are they whose hearts Allah has proved for guarding (against evil); they shall have forgiveness and a great reward.

Ar. thee. 4 (As for) those who call out to you from behind the private chambers, surely most of them do not understand.[2327]

Ar. thou. 5 And if they wait patiently until you come out to them, it would certainly be better for them, and Allah is Forgiving, Merciful.

Ar. a transgressor. 6 O you who believe! if an unrighteous man comes to you with a report, look carefully into it, lest you harm a people in ignorance, then be sorry for what you have done.[2328]

2325 Tuqaddimú is here equivalent to tataqaddamú (Rz). The ordinary rendering is given in the margin, because it requires an understood object, do not anticipate any matter. The presence of Allah means the presence of His commandments. The words imply the utmost obedience.

2326 The Qur-án not only inculcates high morals but also regulates social conduct, because its teachings are intended for all grades of men. When large numbers of men began to enter Islam such directions became necessary, and they will always be needed by the masses in any society. A loud voice is expressive of arrogance or resentment.

2327 As already pointed out, when the masses began to enter Islam many of them were ignorant even of the ordinary social rules, and they called out to the Prophet with loud voices while he was within his house. The practice is deprecated because it meant disrespect to the Holy Prophet. 2328, see next page.

7 And know that among you is Allah's Apostle; should he obey you in many a matter, you would surely fall into distress, but Allah has endeared the faith to you and has made it seemly in your hearts, and He has made hateful to you unbelief and transgression and disobedience; these it is that are the followers of a right way,

8 By grace from Allah and as a favour; and Allah is Knowing, Wise.

9 And if two parties of the believers quarrel, make peace between them; but if one of them acts wrongfully towards the other, fight that which acts wrongfully until it returns to Allah's command; then if it returns, make peace between them with justice and act equitably; surely Allah loves those who act equitably.[2329]

10 The believers are but brethren, therefore make peace between your brethren and be careful of (your duty to) Allah that mercy may be had on you.

2328 Such a direction was expedient when a condition of war necessitated prompt action to be taken against the enemy. But even the exigencies of war were to be carried out with the utmost carefulness, so that uninimical people should not suffer loss.

2329 It is related that the occasion of the revelation of this verse was a quarrel between Aus and Khazraj, the two chief tribes of Medina, which led to some blows being exchanged (Kf); but this does not mean that the verse applied only to that case. The verse, in fact, requires the Muslims not to be indifferent when one party of them quarrels with another. In such cases they must bring every kind of pressure within their reach to bear upon the party in error. Had the Muslims followed this injunction, their power would not have departed nor would the Muslim community have been at the mercy of a few mischief-makers who sowed disunion. An attitude of indifference towards fatwas of kufr, directed against their own brethren by ignorant Mullas, has dealt a fatal blow to the union of the Muslim brotherhood, and if the Muslims do not in one mass raise their voice against these fatwas they must never hope to make any progress towards real union.

2330 This verse and those that follow deal with some of the evils which are most rampant in civilized societies, and which corrupt a society to its core. These evils mostly arise with wealth, for, living in ease, people are most concerned with seeking each other's faults, and thus mutual hatred takes the place of brotherly love and friendly concord.

2331 The principle of the brotherhood of man laid down here is on the broadest basis. The address here is not to believers, as in the two previous verses, but to men in general, who are told that they are all, as it were, members of one family, and their divisions into nations, tribes, and families should not lead to estrangement from, but to a better knowledge of, each other. Superiority of one over another in this vast brotherhood does not depend on nationality, wealth, or rank, but on the careful observance of duty—moral greatness.

REVEALED AT MECCA

SECTION 1

The Resurrection

1–5. The unbelievers wonder. 6–11. Nature testifies to the truth of resurrection. 12–15. A lesson in the fate of former peoples.

In the name of Allah, the Beneficent, the Merciful.

قٓ قف وَالْقُرْاٰنِ الْمَجِيْدِ ۝

Abstract:

Sec. 1–3. The Resurrection.

The Title and subject-matter.

THIS chapter, which is entitled the Qáf, from its initial letter calling attention to the greatness of the power of the Divine Being, deals with the resurrection. The first section draws attention to the testimony of nature, and to there being a lesson in the fate of former peoples; the second shows that every action has a consequence, and these consequences shall be made manifest on the day of judgment; and the third states that the good and the bad must each receive their due, and that the judgment must be brought about in this life as well as in the hereafter. In fact, the judgment of this life is inseparably mingled with the judgment of the next throughout this chapter.

Context and date of revelation.

The last chapter dealt with certain manners and morals which are the necessary concomitants of a state of ease. And, as it is this state of ease that contributes to neglect of the hereafter—and the judgment that overtakes men here as well as hereafter is entirely overlooked when this condition obtains—the connection of this chapter with the one preceding it is clear. The chapter is unanimously regarded as a Meccan revelation, and may be assigned to the early Meccan period.

2333 The letter qáf stands either for the name Qádir, or Qadír, of the Divine Being, meaning Almighty God, or for the phrase قضی الامر, i.e. the affair (meaning the doom) is decreed (Rz).

2334 An expression of wonder at the unbelief of Meccans. The whole of the Qur-án is spoken of as one book even at this early period.

2 Nay! they wonder that there has come to them a warner from among themselves, so the unbelievers say: This is a wonderful thing:

3 What! when we are dead and have become dust? That is a far (from probable) return.

4 We know indeed what the earth diminishes of them, and with Us is a writing that preserves.[2335]

5 Nay, they rejected the truth when it came to them, so they are (now) in a state of confusion.[2336]

6 Do they not then look up to heaven above them how We have made it and adorned it and it has no gaps.

7 And the earth, We have made it plain and cast in it mountains and We have made to grow therein of all beautiful kinds,

8 To give sight and as a reminder to every servant who turns frequently (to Allah).

9 And We send down from the cloud water abounding in good, then We cause to grow thereby gardens and the grain that is reaped,

10 And the tall palm-trees having spadices closely set one above another,

11 A sustenance for the servants, and We give life thereby to a dead land; thus is the rising.[2337]

2335 This refers to a record of the consequences of one's actions, what is necessary for a life after death being preserved in its entirety.

2336 They are said to be in a state of confusion as not knowing how to treat it. They had seen by this time that their first opinion about it was wrong, and the truth of it was becoming clear day by day. But having rejected it once, they found it difficult to admit its truth.

2337 This is a reference to the regeneration to be effected by the Qur-án.

SECTION 2

The Resurrection

16–18. Every word and action of man is preserved. 19–22. Removal of veil. 23–29. The disclosure of hell.

16 And certainly We created man, and We know what his mind suggests to him, and We are nearer to him than his life-vein.

17 When the two receivers receive, sitting on the right and on the left.

18 He utters not a word but there is by him a watcher at hand.[2339]

19 And the stupor of death will come in truth; that is what you shunned. (Ar. thou didst shun.)

20 And the trumpet shall be blown;[c] that is the day of the threatening. (c 789.)

21 And every soul shall come, with it a driver and a witness.[2340]

22 Certainly you were heedless of it, but now We have removed from you your veil, so your sight to-day is sharp.[2341] (Ar. thou wert. Ar. thee. Ar. thy. Ar. thy.)

وَلَقَدْ خَلَقْنَا الْإِنْسَانَ وَنَعْلَمُ مَا تُوَسْوِسُ
بِهٖ نَفْسُهٗ وَنَحْنُ أَقْرَبُ إِلَيْهِ مِنْ حَبْلِ الْوَرِيْدِ ۝
إِذْ يَتَلَقَّى الْمُتَلَقِّيٰنِ عَنِ الْيَمِيْنِ وَعَنِ

مَا يَلْفِظُ مِنْ قَوْلٍ إِلَّا لَدَيْهِ رَقِيْبٌ عَتِيْدٌ ۝
وَجَآءَتْ سَكْرَةُ الْمَوْتِ بِالْحَقِّ ذٰلِكَ

وَنُفِخَ فِي الصُّوْرِ ذٰلِكَ يَوْمُ الْوَعِيْدِ ۝
وَجَآءَتْ كُلُّ نَفْسٍ مَّعَهَا سَآئِقٌ
وَّشَهِيْدٌ ۝
لَقَدْ كُنْتَ فِيْ غَفْلَةٍ مِّنْ هٰذَا فَكَشَفْنَا
عَنْكَ غِطَآءَكَ فَبَصَرُكَ الْيَوْمَ حَدِيْدٌ ۝

2338 The meaning is that Allah did not lack power in dealing with the former generations so that they should doubt His power in dealing with a new one. Or, the first creation is the physical creation of man, and the second creation his spiritual regeneration.

2339 The three verses impress on man that all his deeds and words bear fruit, that nothing is said or done in vain. The yamin, or the right side, represents the good, and the shimál, or the left side, the evil (TA).

2340 The driver signifies the impeller to evil, and the witness the caller to truth. Some other explanations are also given (Bḍ).

2341 This verse shows clearly that the consequences of evil actions which remain hidden from the eye of man in this life shall be made manifest after death. This is the significance of the sight being made sharp, so that he shall then see what he is unable to see here. Such is hell, according to the teachings of the Qur-án, viz. the hidden consequences of evil deeds, when made manifest to a man, become his hell.

23 And his companion shall say: This is what is ready with me.

24 Do cast into hell every ungrateful, rebellious one,[2342]

25 Forbidder of good, exceeder of limits, doubter,

26 Who sets up another god with Allah, so do cast him into severe chastisement.

27 His companion will say: Our Lord! I did not lead him into inordinacy but he himself was in a great error.

Ar. remote.

28 He will say: Do not quarrel in My presence, and indeed I gave you the threatening beforehand:

29 My word shall not be changed, nor am I in the least unjust to the servants.

Ar. the word with Me.

2342 The word in the original which I translate as do cast is alqiyá, the form used being dual, and the same word is repeated in v. 26. Some think that two angels are addressed, but more learned opinion favours a different explanation. Kf, Bd, Rz and others hold that it is allowable to take the person addressed as being only one person, though the form used is dual, because this is allowed by Arab idiom. Kf gives two reasons. The first reason is that given by Mubarrad: the making of the nominative dual, stands for the repetition of the verb, because of their oneness, and thus the dual form may stand for alq-i alq-i (i.e. cast, cast), indicating force. The other reason is that the Arabs have a custom that most often one of them would have two companions on a journey, so that the use of the dual became frequent among them, and one of them would say, my friend and my companion, and stay ye two, and be ye two happy, so that they would use the dual even when addressing one man. Thus of Hajjaj it is reported that he used to say: يا حرسى اضربا عنقه, i.e. O my guard: do strike his neck, using the dual idriba instead of idrib. Bd quotes a verse where the dual forms تزجرانى and تدعانى are used, while only the singular is meant. And the same authority adds that it is permissible that the alif (in alqiyá, which gives the verb a dual form) may stand for the nún of tákíd (i.e. intensiveness), and this explanation, he says, is supported by a reading of Hasan, who read alqiyan instead of alqiyá. It is undisputed that the variety of reading affords an explanation of the meaning of the original word, and hence I think the dual form alqiyá is properly rendered by do cast, which gives an idea of the force of the original.

فان تزجرانى يا بن عفان انزجر ٭ وان تدعانى احم عرضا ممنعا

The Resurrection

30–35. The evil and the good each receive their recompense. 36, 37. A warning. 38. The power of Allah. 39, 40. Patience is necessary. 41–45. The destructive cry.

30 On the day that We will say to hell: Are you filled up? And it will say: Are there any more?

Ar. art thou.

31 And the garden shall be brought near to those who guard (against evil), not far off:

32 This is what you were promised, (it is) for every one who turns frequently (to Allah), keeps (His limits);

33 Who fears the Beneficent God in secret and comes with a penitent heart:

34 Enter it in peace, that is the day of abiding.

35 They have therein what they wish and with Us is more yet.[2343]

36 And how many a generation did We destroy before them who were mightier in prowess than they, so they went about and about in the lands: is there a place of refuge?

37 Most surely there is a reminder in this for him who has a heart or he gives ear and is a witness.

38 And certainly We created the heavens and the earth and what is between them in six periods and there touched Us not any fatigue.[2343A]

39 Therefore be patient of what they say, and celebrate the praise of your Lord before the rising of the sun and before the setting.

Ar. thy.

40 And glorify Him in the night and after the prayers.

2 Then those bearing the load,

فَالْحٰمِلٰتِ وِقْرًا ۙ○

Abstract:

Sec. 1. Falsehood is doomed.

Sec. 2. The fate of previous nations.

Sec. 3. The Meccans shall be judged.

The Title and subject-matter.

THE title of this chapter is taken from the mention of the Scatterers of truth in the first verse. It deals with the fact that the Meccans who reject the truth shall be judged, attention being drawn in the first section to the gradual advancement of truth, which was, quite naturally, daily gaining ground, and the whole section lays stress upon the certainty of the judgment; the second section, opening with the announcement of the birth of a son to Abraham (from whom descended the greatest of the prophets), deals with the fate of some previous nations who were judged because of their evil deeds; and the third again, after an exhortation to seek a refuge in Allah—because the service of Allah is the object of the creation of man—warns the Meccans that their turn of good fortune is about to be ended and they shall be judged even as those before them.

Context and date of revelation.

While the last chapter dealt with the resurrection—the resurrection of the dead in a life after death as well as the resurrection of those who were spiritually dead—the one under consideration states that those who give the lie to this truth shall be judged according to their evil deeds. The chapter is undoubtedly an early Meccan revelation and may without hesitation be assigned to the early Meccan period.

3 Then those running easily,
4 Then those dividing the affair;
5 What you are threatened with is most surely true,
6 And the judgment must most surely come about.[2344]
a 2099. 7 Consider[a] the heaven full of ways,[2345]
8 Most surely you are at variance with each other in what you say,
9 He is turned away from it who would be turned away.[2346]
10 Cursed be the liars
11 Who are in a gulf (of ignorance) neglectful;
12 They ask: When is the day of judgment?
13 (It is) the day on which they shall be tried at the fire.[2347]
14 Taste your persecution! this is what you would hasten on.[2348]

فَالْجٰرِيٰتِ يُسْرًا ۙ
فَالْمُقَسِّمٰتِ اَمْرًا ۙ
اِنَّمَا تُوْعَدُوْنَ لَصَادِقٌ ۙ
وَّاِنَّ الدِّيْنَ لَوَاقِعٌ ؕ
وَالسَّمَآءِ ذَاتِ الْحُبُكِ ۙ
اِنَّكُمْ لَفِيْ قَوْلٍ مُّخْتَلِفٍ ۙ
يُّؤْفَكُ عَنْهُ مَنْ اُفِكَ ؕ
قُتِلَ الْخَرّٰصُوْنَ ۙ
الَّذِيْنَ هُمْ فِيْ غَمْرَةٍ سَاهُوْنَ ۙ
يَسْـَٔلُوْنَ اَيَّانَ يَوْمُ الدِّيْنِ ؕ
يَوْمَ هُمْ عَلَى النَّارِ يُفْتَنُوْنَ
ذُوْقُوْا فِتْنَتَكُمْ هٰذَا الَّذِيْ كُنْتُمْ بِهٖ تَسْتَعْجِلُوْنَ

2344 In the first four verses of this chapter attention is called to certain facts by means of what is generally understood to be an oath, for which see 2099, while the two verses that follow indicate the conclusion to which those facts lead. It is generally considered that by the "broadcast scatterers" are meant the winds that raise up dust before the coming of a cloud. The bearers of the load are the clouds that carry rain; the easy runners are the winds that carry the clouds along, and the dividers are the winds that distribute the rain: attention being drawn in this description to a similar arrangement in the spiritual world by which truth gradually advances. But we may as well say that attention is herein drawn to more manifest facts, to the scattering of truth broadcast through the Holy Prophet and his faithful followers, which led to some bearing the load of it as if they had become pregnant with truth, while others ran easily towards the acceptance of truth. Others there were who were termed the dividers of the affair—those who are elsewhere called muqtasimín, i.e. dividers, because they divided the Qur-án into portions, admitting one part and rejecting another (15:90). In the existence of these three classes, of which the first two increased day by day, while the third was gradually but slowly diminishing, there was a clear sign that the triumph of Islam would soon be established in the land. Or, again, the reference may be to the battles which were ultimately intended to accomplish the overthrow of the Meccans.

2345 The description of heaven as full of ways is one which an ordinary Arab of 1,300 years ago could not give. It is, however, in perfect agreement with the most recent scientific discoveries, which show every star to be the centre about which planets revolve, even as our own sun is the centre around which the earth and several other planets revolve. The ways in the heavens are the orbits of the various planets.

2346 Note the clear statement that only those are turned away from the truth who themselves turn away.

2347 The fire in this world stands for the battles which brought destruction upon them.

2348 Fitnatakum or your persecution signifies their persecution of the Muslims, for which they are threatened with a punishment which they will have to taste.

15 Surely those who guard (against evil) shall be in gardens and fountains, 16 Taking what their Lord gives them; surely they were before that the doers of good.
17 They used to sleep but little in the night.
18 And in the morning they asked forgiveness.
19 And in their property was a portion due to him who begs and to him who is denied (good).[2349]

22 And in the heaven is your sustenance and what you are threatened with.[2351]
23 And by the Lord of the heavens and the earth! it is most surely the truth, just as you do speak.[2352]

The Fate of previous Nations

The Meccans shall be Judged

47–51. Refuge to be sought in Allah. 52–55. A warning given. 56–58. Man created to serve Allah. 59, 60. Their doom will come to pass.

47 And the heaven, We raised it high with power, and most surely We are the makers of things ample.

48 And the earth, We have made it a wide extent: how well have We then spread (it) out.

49 And of every thing We have created pairs that you may be mindful.

50 Therefore fly to Allah, surely I am a plain warner to you from Him.

51 And do not set up with Allah another god: surely I am a plain warner to you from Him.

52 Thus there did not come to those before them an apostle but they said: An enchanter or a mad man.

53 Have they charged each other with this? Nay! they are an inordinate people.

Ar. thou art.

57 I do not desire from them any sustenance and I do not desire that they should feed Me.

مَا أُرِيدُ مِنْهُم مِّن رِّزْقٍ وَمَا أُرِيدُ
أَن يُطْعِمُونِ

2353 Turning the back here upon the unbelievers does not signify departing from them, as the revelation of this chapter belongs to an early period. The words that follow make this clear, for the Prophet is enjoined to continue to remind, for there will be some who will believe, and these will profit by the reminder. The meaning of turning the back is to disregard their reviling, as pointed out in the two previous verses.

58 Surely Allah is the Bestower of sustenance, the Lord of Power, the Strong.

59 So surely those who are unjust shall have a portion like the portion of their companions, therefore let them not ask Me to hasten on.

60 Therefore woe to those who disbelieve because of their day which they are threatened with.

Abstract:

Sec. 1. Success of the Faithful.

Sec. 2. The opponents are doomed.

General remarks.

THIS chapter refers to the Mountain to which Moses was called in its opening verse; thus indicating the similarity between the Holy Prophet and the Israelite lawgiver, because it was also in the cave of a mountain that the Holy Prophet received a call. It contains only two sections; the first speaks of the reward of the faithful, the second of the punishment of those who opposed the preaching of the truth and contrived plans to nip it in the bud. The judgment of the wicked in the last chapter called for an assurance of success for the faithful, which is the real object of this chapter—the destruction of the opponents being necessary for the attainment of that object. The chapter belongs to the same period as the two previous chapters—the early Meccan period.

2354 The first six verses draw attention to a set of parallel facts in the revelations of Moses and Muhammad, may peace and the blessings of Allah be upon them. The mount in the one case is the mount Sinai, and in the other the mount Hira; the Book stands for the 8 There shall be none to avert it;

15 Is it enchantment then or do you not see?
16 Enter into it, then bear (it) patiently, or do not bear (it) patiently, it is the same to you; you shall be requited only (for) what you did.
17 Surely those who guard (against evil) shall be in gardens and bliss,
18 Rejoicing because of what their Lord gave them, and their Lord saved them from the chastisement of the burning fire.

Torah and the Qur-án; the house that is visited and the elevated canopy refer, on the one hand, to the tabernacle raised by Moses for the Israelites as a sacred place where they worshipped God and offered sacrifices, and on the other to the Sacred House at Mecca, which was to be the centre of the Muslims of all nations, all countries, and all ages, and where they were to offer sacrifices. The swollen sea represents the sea which brought destruction to Pharaoh and his hosts, while the Holy Prophet's enemies are told in the next verse that the punishment of their Lord would as surely overtake them on land as it overtook the enemies of Moses in the swollen sea. But note that the word baḥr signifies sea as well as land, and this word occurring in a saying of the Holy Prophet, كتب لهم ببحرهم, is explained by IAṡ as meaning their city and land. The whole passage draws attention to the close similarity of the revelations of Moses and the Holy Prophet, and warns the unbelievers that their power shall be brought to naught, as it was in the case of Pharaoh. Here again we have the Prophet's likeness to Moses indicated in a very early revelation.

2355 The most wonderful change that was to be brought about by the overthrow of a mighty nation, and the raising to the highest dignity of one who was considered a madman, is imaged in the words that the heavens shall move from side to side and the mountains (great men who opposed the Holy Prophet) shall pass away (see 1604 for this significance of the passing away of mountains). The result is that those who rejected the Holy Prophet shall be in woe. Note that the punishment that is promised to the unbelievers in this life and that which they must have hereafter are spoken of in one breath.

2356 The word ḥúr occurs four times in the Holy Qur-án, here and in 44:54, 55:72, and 56:22. It is a plural of aḥwar (applied to a man) and of ḥaurá (applied to a woman), signifying one having eyes characterized by the quality termed ḥawar, which means intense whiteness of the white of the eye and intense blackness of the black thereof. The word is from the same root as ḥawárí, which signifies a thing that is pure or unsullied, and hence denotes a true and a sincere friend. The word aḥwar (singular of ḥúr) also signifies pure or clear intellect (LL). The other word, 'ín, is plural of a'yan (meaning a man wide in the eyes) and of 'ainá (meaning a woman beautiful and wide in the eye). The latter word also signifies a good or beautiful word, or saying (LL). It may be noted that whiteness is also a symbol of perfect and unsullied purity, and hence the two words ḥúr and 'ín really stand for purity and beauty; and therefore, instead of white-eyed and large-eyed ones, which words give a more literal significance of the original words, I adopt the words pure and beautiful ones as being more expressive of the true significance, leaving the other significance for the margin.

What are these pure, beautiful ones or the white-eyed, large-eyed ones? I have already explained in 2110 that the Holy Qur-án does not speak of any conjugal relations being maintained in a physical sense in the life to come. Moreover, it has been shown on various occasions that where the blessings of paradise or the torments of hell are spoken of, these are nothing but physical manifestations of the spiritual blessings which the doers of good enjoy in this life too. There are gardens, trees, rivers, milk, honey, fruits, and numerous other blessings spoken of as being met with in paradise, but that all these are not things of this life has been shown more than once in these footnotes, and a saying of the Holy Prophet already quoted makes it clear that the blessings of paradise are not the things of this life, for the Holy Prophet is reported to have said: Allah says I have prepared for My righteous servants what no eye has seen and no ear has heard and what the heart of man has not conceived (Bkh). The Holy Qur-án also speaks of them in similar words: No soul knows what is hidden for it. These clear statements need no comment, and they establish beyond the shadow of a doubt that whatever blessings are spoken of as existing in paradise, the one thing sure about them is that they are not things of this world. Hence, even the white-eyed, large-eyed ones, or the pure, beautiful ones, the ḥúr and 'ín of this verse, are not actually the beautiful women of this life. These are heavenly blessings which the righteous women shall have along with the righteous men, for v. 17 plainly says that those who guard against evil shall find these blessings, and therefore the pure, beautiful ones are as much a blessing meant for the righteous women as for the righteous men.

The question may still be asked, Why are these blessings described in words which apply to women? The fact is that the reward spoken of here is one having special reference to the purity of character and the beautiful deeds of the righteous, and it is womanhood, not manhood, that stands for a symbol of purity and beauty. Moreover, it should be noted that in Arabic ṣáliḥát and ṭayyibát signify good deeds and pure things as well as good women and pure women, and this is another reason why the reward of good and pure deeds is spoken of in terms which apply to women. But note also that both ḥúr and 'ín are plurals of words applying to men as well as to women, as also to qualities and deeds.

2357 Those who have done great deeds of sacrifice are united with their offspring; because even their children follow their footsteps and do the deeds their fathers did, reaping the benefit of those deeds.

2358 Note the clear doctrine of man's responsibility for his actions.

2359 This cup is therefore entirely of a different nature from what is known in this life.

2360 It should be noted that the boys spoken of as hidden pearls in this verse may either be the offspring of the faithful mentioned in v. 21, or these may be heavenly blessings of a nature similar to what is said of ḥūr in 2356.

2361 This is another clear statement showing that righteous women shall be in paradise along with righteous men. The difference of sex counts for nothing in the sight of Allah.

33 Or do they say: He has forged it. Nay! they do not believe.

34 Then let them bring an announcement like it if they are truthful.[2362]

35 Or were they created without there being any thing, or are they the creators?[2363]

Ar. dost thou.

41 Or have they the unseen so that they write (it) down?[2366]

42 Or do they desire a war? But those who disbelieve shall be the vanquished ones in war.[2367]

أم يريدون كيدا فالذين كفروا هم المكيدون

2362 If their calling it a forgery or the work of a poet or a madman is true, why are they unable to make an announcement like the one that is made by the Holy Prophet? So early did the Qur-án challenge its opponents to produce the like of it. See 36, as to the uniqueness of the Holy Qur-án.

2363 That is, without a cause, or without any purpose, or without there being an author of their existence.

2364 That is, their authority or power in the land would soon be brought to naught.

2365 This verse shows that the Arab astrologers and diviners pretended that they could listen to the secrets of the future, but their conjectures about the future failed to make any impression, as they did not turn out true. The word used here is sullam, which I translate as means. It signifies primarily a ladder, the Arabs believing that their diviners could ascend to the higher regions, and there obtain news of the future (Rgh). This throws light upon the statements made in 15 : 17, 37 : 8, 67 : 5, 72 : 9. From what is said farther on in v. 41, and elsewhere, challenging them to put down their pretended knowledge of the unseen in writing, a challenge repeatedly given but never accepted, it is clear that the diviners themselves knew that what they said was no more than mere conjecture.

2366 Here we have a clear proof that from the very beginning the Qur-án was written down as it was revealed. This chapter is one of the very early revelations, and here we find the opponents challenged to write down prophecies relating to the future, the suggestion clearly being that the prophecies of the Qur-án relating to the future were handed over to them in a written form.

2367 Mark the clear language in which wars are spoken of, and the consequent vanquishment of the unbelievers and the overthrow of their power. For kaid meaning war see LL, 43 Or have they a god other than Allah? Glory be to Allah from what they set up (with Him).

45 Leave them then till they meet that day of theirs wherein they shall be smitten with punishment:

46 The day on which their struggle[b] shall not avail them aught, nor shall they be helped.[2368]

47 And surely those who are unjust shall have a chastisement besides that, but most of them do not know.[2369]

48 And wait patiently for the judgment of your Lord, for surely you are before Our eyes,[2370] and celebrate the praise of your Lord when you rise; which gives this significance of the word on the authority of the best Arabic lexicons, TA, LA, Q, etc., and quotes the saying, غزا فلان فلم يلق كيدا. i.e. such a one went on a hostile expedition and found not war (S,LA), i.e. did not fight (LL). For makīd see JB and Kf, the latter of which interprets the words هم مكيدون thus: They it is to whom the consequences of their war will return and their own plans would destroy them, and this was so, as they were slain on the day of Badr.

2369 The two kinds of punishment with which the opponents were threatened are spoken of distinctly in this verse, viz. a punishment which was to overtake them in this very life in the form of famines, and the wars which were to result in a complete overthrow of their power, and a punishment in the form of spiritual torment in another life.

2370 The judgment of the Lord signifies the punishment of the wicked. The Prophet is not to have any fear, for he is spoken of as being before Our eyes.

THE STAR

Eminence to be attained by the Prophet

Abstract:

Sec. 1. Eminence to be attained by the Prophet.

Sec. 2. Nothing shall avail against truth.

Sec. 3. Allah's power manifested in the destruction of falsehood.

General remarks.

The word Star, which gives its name to this chapter, occurs in the first verse. The last chapter dealt with the success of the faithful, and this speaks of the eminence to which the Holy Prophet must rise—thus the two chapters are connected. The first section states that the Prophet does not err, and therefore, being on the right way, must rise to the highest eminence to which man can rise; it denounces idol worship, which does not allow man to aspire to greatness and rise to the high eminence to which man can rise. The second section states that nothing can avail against truth, while the third refers to Allah's power as manifested in the destruction of falsehood. The date of the revelation of this chapter may be assigned to the fifth year of the call, and therefore it belongs, like the last chapter, to the early Meccan period.

2371 The words والنجم اذا هوى may be interpreted variously, according to the meaning of najm and hawá that is adopted. The best known significance of najm is the star, and when used as a proper noun it signifies the Pleiades, and hawá may signify, according to Rgh, ذهاب فى انحدار, i.e. going down low. Now, the Arabs believed that when An-najm (the Pleiades) rose in the morning, disasters and calamities came to an end. Thus we have the remnant of this belief in a report اذا طلع النجم ارتفعت العاهة or ما طلع النجم و فى الارض من العاهة شئ, meaning that when the najm rises, no disaster remains on the earth; and IAs, who quotes this under the word najm, says that by its ṭulū' is meant its rising at morning. And he adds: "The Arabs believe that between its rising in the morning and its disappearance there are diseases and plagues and calamities for men and camels and fruits." After its disappearance, we are told, it rises in the morning. Therefore its going down at morning time, i.e. its appearance in the west so as to be about to set, is a sign not only of its approaching disappearance, but also of the disappearance of the consequent calamities, and in والنجم اذا هوى attention is clearly called to the disasters which were about to overtake the Arabs. This significance has a very clear connection with the end of the last chapter, in which the following pertinent passage occurs: "That day of theirs wherein they shall be smitten with punishment. . . . And wait patiently for the judgment of your Lord, for surely you are before Our eyes, and celebrate the praise of your Lord when you rise; and in the night, give Him glory too, and at the setting of the stars." In the setting of the star the opponents are warned of the calamities which would soon overtake them, and then we are told that it is not an error on the part of the Prophet, but is a revelation granted by the Mighty One. In fact, it would be equivalent to telling them that their star of fortune was about to set.

Or, does he deviate.	2 Your companion does not err, nor shall he fail;[2372] 3 Nor does he speak out of desire.[2373] 4 It is naught but revelation that is revealed, 5 The Lord of Mighty Power has taught him,[2374]	مَا ضَلَّ صَاحِبُكُمْ وَمَا غَوٰى ۚ وَمَا يَنْطِقُ عَنِ الْهَوٰى ۚ إِنْ هُوَ إِلَّا وَحْيٌ يُّوْحٰى ۙ عَلَّمَهٗ شَدِيْدُ الْقُوٰى ۙ

There is, however, a less known significance of the word najm, which I give in the margin. It sometimes means a portion of the Qur-án (Bd, Rz, Kf). This meaning also suits the context. Attention in this case is drawn to the portions of the Qur-án revealed to the Holy Prophet, which are a clear proof that the Prophet is not erring (v. 2), for they do not contain any erroneous teaching. The 3rd verse and those that follow make this interpretation very clear, for there it is asserted that the Qur-án is a revelation from the Divine Being and the Prophet does not "speak out of desire" (v. 3). Kf and other commentators accept this as a correct interpretation, the former saying: "Or najm indicates one of the portions of the Qur-án, and it was revealed in portions during twenty years. Hawá means when it descends or is revealed." Rgh gives the following interpretation: "And it is said that by this (i.e. najm) is meant the Qur-án as revealed in portions, one part after another. And by His saying hawá is meant its revelation; and the same interpretation must be adopted in His saying بمواقع النجوم." The concluding words occur in 56:75, and, according to Rgh, the interpretation of the word najm adopted here also applies there, the meaning thus being the revelation of the portions of the Qur-án. There is also a third explanation, if hawá is taken to mean rises. The star when it rises is a guide for the wayfarer in a desert country like Arabia, and the spiritual wayfarer is told that he will find a sure guide in the Holy Prophet in his spiritual wanderings.

2372 The verse consists of two parts, the first part containing an assertion that the Prophet does not err, and the second giving, as it were, the argument for this assertion, viz. that he shall not fail to attain the object, for it is clear that if a person errs in starting and takes a wrong course he cannot attain the goal. The doubters are told that if the Prophet attains the object that will be a clear proof that he is not erring. Or, adopting the alternative significance, má ḍalla means he has a true knowledge, and má ghawá, he acts according to that knowledge.

2373 This verse and the one preceding it conclusively establish the sinlessness of the Holy Prophet, for while the first denies that he does anything which is wrong, this verse denies that he says anything which is not an expression of Divine will.

2374 The Lord of Mighty Power that teaches the Holy Prophet, though generally supposed to be Gabriel, is Allah Himself. Compare 55:1, 2: "The Beneficent God taught the Qur-án."

	6 The Lord of Strength; so he attained completion,[2375]	ذُو مِرَّةٍ فَاسْتَوَىٰ ○
	7 And he is in the highest part of the horizon.[2376]	وَهُوَ بِالْأُفُقِ الْأَعْلَىٰ ○
Ar. drew nearer.	8 Then he drew near, then became lowly,[2377]	ثُمَّ دَنَا فَتَدَلَّىٰ ○
	9 So he was the measure of two bows or closer still.[2378]	فَكَانَ قَابَ قَوْسَيْنِ أَوْ أَدْنَىٰ ○

	12 What! do you then dispute with him as to what he saw?[2380]	أَفَتُمَارُونَهُ عَلَىٰ مَا يَرَىٰ ○
	13 And certainly He saw Him in another descent,	وَلَقَدْ رَآهُ نَزْلَةً أُخْرَىٰ ○
	14 At the farthest lote-tree;[2381]	عِندَ سِدْرَةِ الْمُنتَهَىٰ ○

2375 استوى الرجل means بلغ اشده (M, Q), i.e. he became full-grown and mature in body and intellect, or he attained the completion of his make and intellect (LL). As there is no mention of Gabriel in any of the verses, the personal pronoun, therefore, does not refer to him. It is the Holy Prophet that is spoken of here as having attained spiritual completion because the Almighty Himself was his Teacher.

2376 The Prophet's being in the highest part of the horizon is in reference to the resplendence of his light, which was to illuminate all corners of the world: a prophecy, in fact, that he will shine out in the full brilliance of his light as the midday sun. It is to this that the following verse in praise of the Holy Prophet refers:

انت لما ولدت اشرقت الا ر ∴ ض وضاءت بنورك الافق

i.e. when you were born the earth became bright and the horizon shone with your light.

2377 Tadallá signifies he was lowly or humble (LL). The verse draws attention to the twofold perfection of the Holy Prophet, i.e. his nearness to the Divine Being, and his lowliness in his relations with men, and thus establishes his perfection as a man.

2378 The qáb of a qaus is the portion of a bow that is between the part that is grasped by the hand and the curved extremity (Q, Msb-LL). According to Qatada, its meaning is from one extremity of the twig to the other extremity (AH). According to Hasan and Mujáhid the qáb is from the chord to the twig in the middle of the bow near the place grasped by the hand (AH). IAs and LA favour measure (qadr) as the meaning of qáb, and the latter quotes the Arab proverb بينهما قاب قوسين i.e. between them two is the measure of a bow, which is a proverb to indicate close relationship between two persons. There is another proverb رمونا عن قوس واحد i.e. they shot at us from one bow, denoting agreement (LL). Whatever significance of the word qáb may be adopted, the mention of a single qáb for two bows indicates close union. The two bows seem to indicate the Holy Prophet's twofold perfection, i.e. his nearness to the Divine Being and his humility in his relations with men. The commentators generally understand the phrase as only indicating the distance of two bows.

2379 The má (what) in má auḥá (i.e. what He revealed) is according to all commentators for the purpose of tafkhím, i.e. to indicate that a mighty revelation was given to him.

2380 That is, what he saw was a certain truth and not an imaginary picture.

2381 The sidrah, or the lote-tree, is, in Arabia, the tree in the shade of which people alight and rest (LL), or in the shade of which people gather together (Bḍ). The word occurs elsewhere in the Qur-án as indicating a tree in paradise (56:28), and Rgh thus explains the word: "And the shade of it is sought, and thus it is made to serve as a parable for the shade of paradise and its blessings in the words في سدر مخضود on account of the ampleness of its shadow." As for its meaning in this verse, the same authority takes it either as meaning a place in which the Holy Prophet, may peace and the blessings of Allah be upon him, was chosen for Divine favours and great blessings, or as signifying the tree under which the companions of the Holy Prophet took the pledge to defend him with their lives when at Hudaibiyya, the mention in the latter case being prophetical. The qualification of sidrah by the word al-muntahá shows that it is a place beyond which human knowledge does not go, one of the explanations given by Kf being, "the knowledge of angels and the others ends there, and no one knows what is beyond it." Hence the significance conveyed by the words is that the Prophet's knowledge of things Divine was the utmost which could be vouchsafed to man. According to some it conveys the same significance as 'illiyyán in 83:18 (Har-LL), for which see 2695.

2382 Verses 19–21 are made the basis of the false story of what is called the "Lapse of Muhammad," or "Compromise with idolatry," by the Christian writers. Certain reports narrated by Waqidy and Tabri are the sole authority for this charge against that incessant preacher against idolatry, every incident of whose life condemns it as a bare falsehood. Muir's assertion that "pious Muhammadans of after-days, scandalized at the lapse of their Prophet into so flagrant a concession, would reject the whole story," is without a grain of truth. Muhammad bin Isháq, who died as early as 151 A.H., does not mention the incident, while Muir's earliest authority, Waqidy, was born more than forty years later. It is stated in the Bahrain that when questioned about it he called it a fabrication of the Zindeeqs. And the famous Bukharee, the most trustworthy authority on the sayings of the Holy Prophet, was Waqidy's contemporary, and his collection of sayings contains no mention of the story. As regards Waqidy, all competent authorities entertain a very low opinion of his trustworthiness. The Meezán ul I'tidál, a critical work on the lives and characters of the reporters of sayings, speaks of Waqidy as unreliable and even as a fabricator of reports. As regards Tabri, Muir himself represents him as guilty of "indiscriminate reception." As against these two unreliable authorities, "those who reject this story are highly learned men" (Rúḥ-ul Ma'áni). The six collections of reports known as the Sihah Sitta (or the six reliable works) do not mention it at all, and contain instead a report which essentially contradicts the story of the so-called compromise. Internal evidence, too, is wholly against the story. We are told that instead of v. 21 the Prophet read the words: تلك الغرانيق العلى و ان شفاعتهن لترتجى i.e. "These are exalted females whose intercession is to be sought after." But the insertion of these few words in a chapter which is wholly directed against idolatry is quite out of place:

22 This indeed is an unjust division!

23 They are naught but names which you have named, you and your fathers; Allah has not sent for them any authority. They follow naught but conjecture and the low desires which (their) souls incline to; and certainly the guidance has come to them from their Lord.

24 Or shall man have what he wishes?

25 Nay! for Allah is the hereafter and the former (life).

Nothing shall avail against Truth

26–27. Intercession of angels shall not avail. 28–30. Conjectures do not avail against truth. 31, 32. Good and evil rewarded.

26 And how many an angel is there in the heavens whose intercession does not avail at all except after Allah has given permission to whom He pleases and chooses.

27 Most surely they who do not believe in the hereafter name the angels with female names.[2383]

28 And they have no knowledge of it; they do not follow anything but conjecture, and surely conjecture does not avail against the truth at all.

29 Therefore turn aside from him who turns his back upon Our reminder and does not desire anything but this world's life.

v. 23 condemns idols; v. 26 denies their intercession; v. 28 condemns the giving of names of female deities to angels, and so on. It is further asserted that 22:52 was revealed in connection with this change, but it should be noted that a period of at least eight years must have elapsed between the revelation of this verse and that of 22:52. Moreover, if the Prophet had made any such compromise it could not have been a sudden event, and traces of it should have been met with in other chapters revealed about the same time. But a perusal of these shows clearly that the Qur-án's condemnation of idolatry was never marked by the slightest change. See further 2387.

2384 Lamam is, according to Rgh, from ألممت بكذا meaning I alighted at it and approached it without falling into it. Hence I render the word as a passing idea which makes no impression on the mind. Such an idea is forgiven, for a mortal cannot be proof against it. But this by no means amounts to an intention or an attempt to commit a sin.

2387 Here is a command to prostrate oneself, which is literally obeyed by all Muslims when reciting the Qur-án or hearing it recited. This command, which is contained in eleven other chapters of the Holy Qur-án and thirteen times in all, was revealed for the first time in this chapter, and the chapter, when first revealed, was read in a large assembly containing Muslims as well as unbelievers. When the Holy Prophet prostrated himself in obedience to the command, not only did the Muslims prostrate themselves, but even the idolaters were so overawed that they also prostrated themselves, with the exception only of Umayya bin Khalf, who raised some gravel to his forehead. This man was afterwards killed, dying an unbeliever, says the report, evidently implying that all others were gradually converted to Islam (Bkh).

It is this simple incident which is connected with the story of the so-called "lapse" and is adduced as proof of its truth. But it will be seen that the prostration was made in obedience to the direct Divine command, so make obeisance to Allah, and had nothing to do with the worship of idols. The incidents narrated before it, relating to the grandeur and majesty of Allah and to the destruction of the wicked, are so impressive that the idolaters could not resist prostrating themselves. It is possible that the story of the prostration reached the Abyssinian exiles, some of whom might have returned under the impression that the unbelievers no longer opposed the movement.

CHAPTER LIV

THE MOON

(Al-Qamar)

REVEALED AT MECCA

(3 sections and 55 verses)

Abstract:

Sec. 1. Judgment shall overtake the Prophet's opponents as it overtook Noah's people and 'Ád.

Sec. 2. Samood and Lot's people.

Sec. 3. Pharaoh and the Prophet's opponents.

The Title and subject-matter.

THE word Moon, which occurs in the first verse and gives its title to this chapter, was a symbol of the power of the Arabs, and as the chapter deals with the fact that judgment has always overtaken the opponents of prophets, it refers to the overthrow of the power of the Quraish both in its opening and concluding verses. For a fuller explanation see 2388. As the last chapter referred to the eminence to which the Holy Prophet and his faithful companions were to rise, this one deals with the ultimate fate and overthrow of the opposition, even as resulted in the case of those who opposed former prophets. The first section, after clearly warning the opponents of the Holy Prophet, contains further mention of Noah and 'Ád, the second of Samood and Lot's people. The third, after a brief reference to Pharaoh and his hosts, contains a clear prophetical reference to the battle of Badr, which was to humble the power of the Quraish and be the means of elevating an oppressed and helpless community.

Date of revelation.

The date of revelation of this chapter cannot be later than the close of the early Meccan period, and it is simply absurd to assign to it a later date on the ground that it contains an order to the Holy Prophet to turn his back upon the polytheists; for, as I have already said, "turning the back" in this case signifies assuming an attitude of forbearance in reference to their persecutions, which had no doubt taken active shape by the commencement of the fourth year of the Call, at which time it was deemed necessary that the faithful should remove to Arqam's house for prayers, which were prohibited by the Quraish from being performed in public.

SECTION 1

Judgment shall overtake the Prophet's Opponents as it overtook Noah's People and 'Ád.

1, 2. Rending asunder of the moon. 3–8. Meccans reject the Prophet, so they shall meet with a severe day. 9–17. Noah's people destroyed. 18–22. 'Ád overtaken.

In the name of Allah, the Beneficent, the Merciful.

Or, a powerful or continual enchantment.

2388 The "rending asunder of the moon" in the time of the Holy Prophet is an incident related by a number of his companions; and the reports of this incident are classed as Mashhûr (i.e. well-known) (Rz), and are accepted as correct by such well-known Islamic authorities as Bukharee and Muslim. While the main fact is thus undisputed, there are some differences as to details. IMsd says that he saw the peak of the Mount Hira interposing between the two parts. I'Ab informs us that one of the two parts remained, while the other disappeared (Kf). Answering the objection to the possibility of such an unusual incident, Rz concludes from the different versions of the report that it was a kind of lunar eclipse, and the appearance of something in the form of half the moon in the firmament (Rz). The best authorities, however, agree that there is no reason to doubt the trustworthiness of the report, and that the same incident is referred to here. In the whole history of the miracles, this is the only miracle of which a contemporaneous record exists. It thus stands unique even among the miracles of the Holy Prophet.

A very few commentators are, however, of opinion that the verse under discussion refers to the rending asunder of the moon at the approach of the day of judgment. There is also a suggestion that انشق القمر means ظهر الامر i.e. the matter has become manifest, the reason given being that the Arabs used to set forth the example of the moon for an affair becoming manifest, as the morning is spoken of as falaq, literally a split, fissure, or cleft (AH). Rgh explains the phrase under the root shaqq as bearing any of the following three significances: "One explanation of the phrase is that the moon was rent asunder in the Holy Prophet's time; another, that the rending would be brought about at the approach of the Judgment Day; and a third, that the meaning is that the affair became manifest."

The scientific objections to the possibility of the incident may be dismissed in a few words. It may have been a particular kind of lunar eclipse, the moon appearing as if it were cloven into two, a part remaining bright and the other part darkening, this being the meaning of one part disappearing and the other remaining, or some great commotion might have taken place in the moon or some other unusual phenomenon may have occurred. It may be noted that the force of the sign lies in the incident having come to pass at a time prophesied by the Holy Prophet, not in its extraordinary nature.

The rending asunder of the moon, in whatever form it took place, signified the departure of the power of the Meccans. The moon was the motto of the Arabs. Safiyya, who was afterwards married by the Holy Prophet, had seen in a vision that she received the moon in her lap, and the dream was interpreted as meaning that she would marry the king of the Arabians. Hence the moon represented the power of the idolatrous Arabians, and its being cloven into two parts signified the departure of that power through the Holy Prophet's instrumentality.

2389 By calling it transient enchantment, they meant to indicate that it was a magical illusion, not an actual occurrence. But the word mustamir, which is here translated as transient, may bear either of the significances given in the margin.

3 And they call (it) a lie, and follow their low desires; and every affair is settled.[2390]

Or, must draw to an end.

تَجْرِي بِأَعْيُنِنَا جَزَاءً لِمَنْ كَانَ كُفِرَ ○

2390 According to Qatada, the meaning is those who deserve good shall meet with good, and those who deserve evil shall meet with evil; or the meaning is that the truth will be established, and become manifest, and the falsehood pass away (AH). In fact, the words are so clear that they hardly require an explanation; it is the affair of the punishment of the rejectors that is declared to be settled; or, adopting the interpretation given in the margin, the power of the opponents of the Holy Prophet must draw to an end.

2391 The fate of the ancients, of whom narratives are recited, should have prevented the Meccans from following in their footsteps.

2392 The commentators make all verses of this description apply to the life after death, but comparison with the fate of other people whose stories are narrated by way of illustration shows clearly that the punishment of this life is also meant. The hard day of trouble overtakes the opponents of prophets in this life, and the hereafter only brings it in a more palpable, and therefore more terrible, form. The inviter is the Prophet, who invites them to truth, and the graves may signify their homes because they are spiritually dead.

2393 The fate of Noah's people is a sign to the deniers of the Holy Prophet. Compare 51 : 37–46, where a sign is said to be left in the people of Noah, in Moses's enemies, in 'Ád and in Samood. The words "is there any one who will mind" support this conclusion, for the planks of the ark were not left as a sign for the Arabs of the Holy Prophet's time.

28 And inform them that the water is shared between them; every share of the water shall be attended.[2394]

29 But they called their companion, so he took (the sword) and slew (her).

30 How (great) was then My chastisement and My warning!

31 Surely We sent upon them a single cry, so they were like the dry fragments of trees which the maker of an enclosure collects.[2395]

32 And certainly We have made the Qur-án easy for remembrance, but is there any one who will mind?

33 The people of Lot treated the warning as a lie.

34 Surely We sent upon them a stone-storm,[2396] except Lot's followers; We saved them a little before daybreak, 35 A favour from Us; thus do We reward him who gives thanks.

36 And certainly he warned them of Our violent seizure, but they obstinately disputed the warning.

2394 Water is here said to be shared between them, i.e. between the people themselves, as the word baina-hum shows, and not between the people and the she-camel. The concluding statement, كل شرب محتضر signifies that "every share of the water shall be attended" by the she-camel, i.e. the water shall not be withheld from her on account of its division. These words, therefore, do not show that the she-camel had a whole day to herself, during which the people could not have a drink. All that they signify is that, because of a certain division between themselves, the camel was not to suffer from thirst, but that as a beast she should be at liberty to drink water at any time when there was access to water. See also 1821.

2395 The punishment which overtook Samood is called sometimes rajfah, i.e. the earthquake (7 : 78), sometimes ṣá'iqah, i.e. the destructive punishment (41 : 13 ; 51 : 44), sometimes ṣaiḥah as here, i.e. the cry, or the rumbling before an earthquake, and sometimes ṭághiyah (69 : 5), which is synonymous with ṣá'iqah; but its description here, as also in 27 : 52, shows that it was a severe earthquake which destroyed the men and their houses. Muḥtaẓir is the maker of a ḥaẓírah, which signifies an enclosure made of dry canes, etc., to confine and protect sheep or camels, etc. (LL). Hashím signifies the dry fragments of wood. This description also shows that they were destroyed by an earthquake.

2396 Ḥáṣib signifies a thrower or a pelter of stones (TA-LL), that being its primary significance; hence it also comes to signify a storm raining pebbles. As other occasions on which details of the punishment are given show that it was a volcanic eruption, I render the word as meaning stone-storm, because stones mixed with ashes were rained upon them.

37 And certainly they endeavoured to turn him from his guests, but We blinded their eyes; so taste My chastisement and My warning.[2397]

38 And certainly a lasting chastisement overtook them in the morning.

39 So taste My chastisement and My warning.

40 And certainly We have made the Qur-án easy for remembrance, but is there any one who will mind?

Pharaoh and the Prophet's Opponents

41, 42. Pharaoh's people overtaken. 43–53. Forces of Meccan unbelievers shall be routed. 54, 55. The righteous shall be honoured.

41 And certainly the warning came to Pharaoh's people.

42 They rejected all Our communications, so We overtook them after the manner of a Mighty, Powerful One.[2398]

43 Are the unbelievers of yours better than these, or is there an exemption for you in the scriptures?

44 Or do they say: We are a host allied together to help each other?

45 Soon shall the hosts be routed, and they shall turn (their) backs.[2399]

46 Nay, the hour is their promised time, and the hour shall be most grievous and bitter.[2400]

2397 They endeavoured to prevent him taking his guests into his house, but were unable to see their way to it.

2398 Akhz (infinitive noun) signifies a way or manner of life (LA, Q-LL).

2399 An incident of the battle of Badr, narrated by Bukharee in his comment on this verse, explains how the Holy Prophet and his companions understood such clear prophecies of the vanquishment of the Quraish. It is related by Ibn-i-Abbas that the Holy Prophet prayed within his tent on the day of Badr, saying: "O Lord! I beseech Thee according to Thy covenant and Thy promise; O Lord! if such is Thy will, Thou mayest not be served after this day." Abu Bakr took his hand and said: "Allah is sufficient for you, O Apostle of Allah." So he went out and he recited: "Soon shall the hosts be routed, and they shall turn their backs; but the hour is their promised time, and the hour shall be most grievous and bitter."

2400 See the last note, which shows that the Holy Prophet understood the hour to mean the hour or time of the discomfiture of the Quraish, and looked upon the battle of Badr as fulfilling this prophecy.

47 Surely the guilty are in error and distress.

48 On the day when they shall be dragged upon their faces into the fire; taste the touch of hell.[2401]

49 Surely We have created every thing according to a measure.[2402]

50 And Our command is but one, as the twinkling of an eye.

51 And certainly We have already destroyed the likes of you, but is there any one who will mind?

52 And everything they have done is in the writings.

53 And everything small and great is written down.

54 Surely those who guard (against evil) shall be in gardens and amplitude,[2403]

2401 All these verses give a prophetic description of what happened at Badr. The Quraish who were slain at Badr were removed to a pit for burial: this is spoken of as their being dragged upon their faces into the fire. At the same time the Holy Prophet is reported as having addressed them in the following words: "Surely we have found true what our Lord promised us: have you too found true what your Lord promised you?" (Ibn-i-Hisham). The punishment of this life is called here a touch of hell.

2402 So that even nations and people cannot go beyond a certain limit.

2403 As contrasted with the disasters which were to befall the Quraish, the faithful are promised not only mastery over their opponents, but also other lands of gardens with rivers flowing in them.

CHAPTER LV

THE BENEFICENT

(Ar-Raḥmán)

REVEALED AT MECCA

(3 sections and 78 verses)

SECTION 1

Divine Beneficence

1–4. Revelation is an act of Divine beneficence. 5–9. A measure of all things. 10–25. Creation and its provision an act of beneficence.

In the name of Allah the Beneficent, the Merciful.

بِسْمِ اللّٰهِ الرَّحْمٰنِ الرَّحِيْمِ

1 The Beneficent God,
2 Taught the Qur-án.[2404]

Abstract:

Sec. 1. Divine beneficence.
Sec. 2. Judgment of the guilty.
Sec. 3. Reward of the righteous.

The Title.

THIS chapter takes its title from the name of the Divine Being, The Beneficent, with which it begins, and the entire chapter speaks of the beneficence of Allah, repeating the words which then of the bounties of your Lord will you reject?

Subject-matter.

The chapter opens with the statement that the revelation of the Qur-án to the Holy Prophet is an act of Divine beneficence, and then proceeds to speak of the means which Allah has created for the physical sustenance of man, showing that He who made such elaborate arrangements for the material welfare of man could not have neglected his spiritual care; it further enumerates certain bounties of the Divine Being. The second section speaks of the judgment which shall overtake the guilty because they persist in rejecting the benefits which a Beneficent God has provided for them; while the third deals with the reward that shall accrue to the faithful who avail themselves of those benefits. Thus it is shown that if the faithful are rewarded or the guilty visited with punishment, as the last two chapters show, it is not because there is any partiality in Divine nature, or because wrath takes precedence of mercy in Him in some cases, but because the people themselves reject the benefits of a Beneficent God and thus render themselves deserving of punishment.

As regards the date of revelation, like other chapters of this group, it can only be assigned to the early Meccan period.

2404 Ar-Raḥmán is the Beneficent God who brought things into existence for the sustenance of man before his creation. Man has not earned them. The same Beneficent God, we are here told, has taught the Qur-án, which is a necessity of the spiritual life of man, i.e. the Prophet did not produce it by his exertion, but it was a Divine gift for the spiritual sustenance of man, like so many gifts for his physical sustenance.

Or, the Man. Or, that wherein every-thing is made manifest.

3 He created man,[2405]
4 Taught him the mode of expression.
5 The sun and the moon follow a reckoning.
6 And the herbs and the trees do adore (Him).[2406]
7 And the heaven, He raised it high, and He made the measure,[2407]
8 That you may not be inordinate in respect of the measure.
9 And keep up the balance with equity and do not make the measure deficient.
10 And the earth, He has set it for living creatures;
11 Therein is fruit and palms having sheathed clusters,
12 And the grain with (its) husk and fragrance.
13 Which then of the bounties of your Lord will you reject ?[2408]

2405 I translate al-insán as meaning man in a general sense, and accordingly translate al-bayán as meaning the mode of expression, because it is in the faculty of speech that lies man's superiority above other animals. But many commentators interpret Al-insán as meaning the perfect man, i.e. the Prophet, because al-bayán, or that in which everything is made manifest (LL) is an appellation applied to the Holy Qur-án in 3 : 137.

2406 This verse and the one preceding it show how every thing created, from those large orbs in the heavens to the smallest herbs that grow on land, follows a law: is not, then, a law needed for the spiritual perfection of man?

2407 Meezán does not signify in the Holy Qur-án a pair of scales for weighing things, but a measure, as signifying any standard of comparison, estimation, or judgment, and the term is here, as elsewhere, used in this broad sense. This is made plain in 57 : 25, "Certainly We sent Our apostles with clear arguments, and sent with them the book and the measure (Ar. meezán), that men may conduct themselves with equity," where the meezán is that which enables men to be just in their actions. It is in this sense that most of the commentators understand this word. Thus, according to Mjd, Tabri, and most commentators, meezán signifies 'adl, i.e. justice (AH), which is explained by Rz as meaning the giving of their due to those who deserve it.

2408 This verse is repeated several times in this chapter. In the original the dual form is used instead of the plural, and thus we have instead of your Lord, rabbi-kumá, i.e. the Lord of you two, and instead of will you reject ?, tukazzibán, i.e. will you two reject ? The commentators generally take the dual form literally, and suppose that the two kinds of rational beings, i.e. the jinn and the men, are meant. But see 2342 on the meaning of the dual form, where it is shown that the form is sometimes used by the Arabs to give force to the meaning. That here the dual is used for this purpose is shown by the fact that the blessings mentioned are those which serve as means of sustenance for mankind, such as palms and grain, which are not needed for ethereal beings, as the jinn are considered to be. Hence it is mankind only that are addressed; and even if the dual is to be taken literally, the two classes addressed may be taken to be the believers and the unbelievers or the strong and the weak, divisions which are of frequent occurrence in the Holy Qur-án.

14 He created man from dry clay like earthen vessels,
15 And He created the jinn of a flame of fire.[2409]
16 Which then of the bounties of your Lord will you reject?

SECTION 2

Judgment of the Guilty

26–28. Everything in nature is subject to decay except God. 29–34. All are dependent on and subject to Him. 35–45. The guilty shall be punished.

26 Every one on it must pass away.[2413]

كُلُّ مَنْ عَلَيْهَا فَانٍ ۝

The former of these is specially referred to in the concluding words of the last chapter, and hence the personal pronoun kumā may refer to them; the jinn not being mentioned in any previous verse, the personal pronoun cannot be taken as referring to them.

2409 The creation of jinn from fire is also mentioned in 7:12 and 15:27, where it is contrasted with the creation of men from earth, and the meaning is explained in 862 and 1336.

2410 The two Easts and the two Wests signify the different points of the horizon at which the sun rises and sets at the summer and winter solstice.

2411 The two seas are mentioned in 25:53 and 35:12 as the sweet-water sea and the salt-water sea. A note on the first of these shows what the two seas represent. As in v. 22 here, we find that 35:12 also states that from both seas fresh flesh and ornaments are obtained; the significance being that useful men would continue to arise from among both believers and unbelievers. Taken literally, some understand the Red and the Mediterranean Seas to be meant. These seas were separated formerly, but are now united by the Suez Canal, and the verse is considered to contain a prophetical mention of their union.

2412 That is, He will make the Muslims masters of sea as well as of land.

2413 History bears out that, to say nothing of individuals, even the most powerful nations decayed and passed away, making room for others.

27 And there will endure for the Lord of glory and honour.

32 Which then of the bounties

the heavens and the earth, then pass through; you cannot pass through but with authority.[2416]
34 Which then of the bounties

35 The flames of fire and smoke will be sent on you two, then you will not be able to defend yourselves.[2417]

فَإِذَا انْشَقَّتِ السَّمَاءُ فَكَانَتْ وَرْدَةً

2414 LA thus sums up the comments on this verse: "It is His attribute to raise up a mighty one from the lowly and to bring down one who is mighty, and to enrich one who is poor and to impoverish one who is rich."

2415 Saqulán, dual of saql, signifies, literally, things that a man has with him of such things as burden him (Ham-LL), and then the household and kindred and party or domestics or servants (LL). And Ham explains the saying كلا ثقلينا طامع بغنيمة as meaning each of the two armies is longing for spoil (LL). The two armies here are the believers and the unbelievers, and Allah's applying Himself to them signifies the judging of their cases so that each should have its reward or punishment. Ham understood the Arabs and the foreigners (LL), and thus the allusion may be to the conquest of Arabia and the foreign countries. This explanation lends support to what is stated in 2580, that the word jinn in the Holy Qur-án sometimes stands for foreigners.

2416 The jinn and the men of this verse are the great and the small opponents of the Holy Prophet or the foreigners and the Arabs as shown in the previous foot-note. See also 2593. All these opponents are told that they cannot escape the punishment.

2417 The fire and the smoke were sent in this life in the form of battles that brought destruction upon them. Fire was a symbol of war among the Arabs, though the two terms would express modern warfare much better, which is nothing but fire and smoke. According to Az (TA-LL), all interpreters of the Qur-án consider nuhás as meaning smoke here. The smoke may also indicate the famine, as it is called dukhán in 44:10.

38 Which then of the bounties of your Lord will you reject?

39 So on that day neither man nor jinni shall be asked about his sin.

SECTION 3

Reward of the Righteous

46 And for him who fears to stand before his Lord are two gardens.[2419]

47 Which then of the bounties of your Lord will you reject?

48 Having in them various kinds.

49 Which then of the bounties of your Lord will you reject?

وَلِمَنْ خَافَ مَقَامَ رَبِّهٖ جَنَّتٰنِ ۝
فَبِاَيِّ اٰلَآءِ رَبِّكُمَا تُكَذِّبٰنِ ۝
ذَوَاتَآ اَفْنَانٍ ۝
فَبِاَيِّ اٰلَآءِ رَبِّكُمَا تُكَذِّبٰنِ ۝

2418 All these verses depict the evil plight in which the guilty will find themselves in this life as well as after death.

2419 The two gardens which are promised to the faithful followers of the Holy Prophet are the fertile lands watered by the Euphrates and the Tigris. The two gardens are spoken of as a sign of the fertility of the land, as in the case of the two gardens of Saba in 34:15 (see 2030), or the two gardens represent the two tracts of land watered by the Tigris and the Euphrates, which are called the two fountains flowing in v. 50. These two rivers, along with the two chief rivers of Persia, mentioned in v. 66, form the four rivers which, according to a report recorded in the Sahih Muslim, are the four rivers of al-Jannah or the Garden. That four rivers flowing on earth should be called anhár-ul-jannah, or the rivers of the garden, by the Holy Prophet, shows clearly that the promises of al-jannah for the faithful were not limited to the life after death, but that these promises related also to this life. The saying of the Holy Prophet referred to above runs thus:

عن ابی هریرة قال قال رسول الله صلی الله علیه وسلم سیحان وجیحان
والفرات والنیل کل من انهار الجنة

(Muslim, vol. 2, p. 351, ch. ما فی الدنیا من انهار الجنة). It is therefore clearly shown that the lands watered by these four rivers, which form the gardens of this verse and v. 62, were promised to the Muslims.

50 In both of them are two fountains flowing.

2420 The noble ladies of high families who were married by the Muslim conquerors after the conquest of Syria seem to be described here, so far as the promise relates to this life. As to the blessings which shall be granted to the righteous in the next life, the subject has been explained fully elsewhere; see 2356.

2421 These gardens refer to the fertile lands of Persia, so far as the promise relates to this life.

2422 Bd concludes from this description of these two gardens that these gardens will chiefly produce herbs or inferior kinds of vegetables, whereas the former will be planted chiefly with fruit trees. This distinction is a further proof that the fertile lands of Syria are referred to in the first description and those of Persia in the second.

70 In them are goodly things, beautiful ones.[2423]

71 Which then of the bounties of your Lord will you reject?

Or, white-eyed. a 2356.

74 Man has not touched them before them nor jinni.

75 Which then of the bounties of your Lord will you reject?

76 Reclining on green cushions and beautiful carpets.[2424]

77 Which then of the bounties of your Lord will you reject?

Ar. thy.

78 Blessed be the name of your Lord, the Lord of Glory and Honour!

2423 Khairát is plural of khairah, feminine of khair. Now khairah means a good thing of any kind, a good quality, an excellency (LL). The other word, ḥisán, is plural of ḥasaná, which, applied to a woman, signifies comely, beautiful, or pleasing (LL). The significance as regards blessings of a life after death is the same as explained in 2356. As regards the premise of this life, noble ladies of high families and even ladies of royal descent in Persia were married by the Muslim conquerors.

2424 The costly furniture of the Persians fell into the hands of the Muslim conquerors, and thus the prophecy was fulfilled in this life, which serves as a proof and an example of its fulfilment in the hereafter.

CHAPTER LVI

THE GREAT EVENT

(Al-Wáqi'ah)

REVEALED AT MECCA

(3 sections and 96 verses)

SECTION 1

Three Classes of Men

1–12. The coming of judgment and the division of men. 13–26. The foremost. 27–38. The righteous.

In the name of Allah, the Beneficent, the Merciful.

Abstract:

Sec. 1. Three classes of men.
Sec. 2. The guilty.
Sec. 3. Judgment is inevitable.

General remarks.

THE title of this chapter also is taken from its first verse, and the "Great Event" referred to is the time of the meting out of reward and punishment to the faithful and the opponents respectively with which the last chapter deals. This chapter speaks of three classes of men, the foremost among the faithful being indicated as a separate class, while the other two are the believers and their opponents. The first section, after stating that men will be divided into three classes, speaks of the two classes of the faithful; the second refers to the guilty opponents, while the third states that judgment is inevitable and the three classes will receive what they deserve.

As regards the date of revelation, there is no reason to assign it to a period other than that at which the other chapters of this group were revealed. It is a Meccan revelation and belongs to the early Meccan period.

2425 Note that the Holy Qur-án speaks of the hour or the event not only as signifying the resurrection, but also very frequently as signifying the doom of its opponents. In fact, the doom of the opponents of the Holy Prophet in this life was a foretaste of what they would suffer in the life after death.

3 Abasing (one party), exalting (the other),[2426]
4 When the earth shall be shaken with a (severe) shaking,
5 And the mountains shall be made to crumble with (an awful) crumbling,[2427]
6 So that they shall be as scattered dust,
7 And you shall be three sorts.

9 And (as to) the companions of ill luck; how wretched are the companions of ill luck!
10 And the foremost are the foremost,[2428]
11 These are they who are drawn nigh (to Allah),
12 In the gardens of bliss.

لَّا يُصَدَّعُوْنَ عَنْهَا وَلَا يُنْزِفُوْنَ ۝

2426 This description of the great event is a clear testimony that it signifies the time when the opponents of the Holy Prophet will be humbled and the faithful followers exalted and made masters of the country in this life, though its complete manifestation can only be accomplished in the life after death.

2427 The crumbling of the mountains signifies the fall of great men. See 1604.

2428 The meaning is that those foremost in doing good shall be foremost in reaping their reward.

2429 Those who were foremost in accepting the Holy Prophet were raised to high dignities in the land. Those who accepted the Holy Prophet in the earlier stages of his mission, and were compelled to make great sacrifices, were adequately rewarded; but those who waited until Islam was established in the land rarely made any sacrifices. The pioneers were rewarded in this life by being made masters of the land, while a fuller reward is promised to them in the life after death. Compare 57 : 10 and see 2446.

2430 Khallad-a when used transitively signifies he adorned another with ornaments (AA-LL); and mukhalladún therefore either signifies adorned with ornaments (Zj-LL), or that never become decrepit (Q-LL), or never altering in age (Fr-LL), because there is no decay in the life after death.

	31 And water poured forth,	وَمَاءٍ مَّسْكُوبٍ
	32 And abundant fruit,	وَفَاكِهَةٍ كَثِيرَةٍ
	33 Neither intercepted nor forbidden,	لَّا مَقْطُوعَةٍ وَلَا مَمْنُوعَةٍ
Or, resting-places.	34 And exalted houses.	وَفُرُشٍ مَّرْفُوعَةٍ

	37 Loving, equals in age,	عُرُبًا أَتْرَابًا
Or, the right hand.	38 For the sake of the companions of good-luck.[2432]	لِّأَصْحَابِ الْيَمِينِ

2430A This description of the paradise in early revelation does not differ from that of later revelation. After various blessings are enumerated, their true nature is depicted in one word, peace.

2431 These represent another class of believers who, though not foremost, had the "good-luck" not to reject the Prophet. For the blessings promised to them see the last note.

2432 It is noteworthy that the blessings granted to the righteous, the companions of good-luck, are first spoken of as shades, water, fruits, and resting-places; and then, as it were, to dispel all doubts as to what these blessings of the next life are, it is said in v. 35, We have made them to grow into a new growth. These words settle conclusively that, whatever these blessings are, whether shades or trees or water or fruits, they are all the fruits of deeds which have been made to grow into a new growth. The words that follow this statement are no doubt primarily applicable to women, but, as shown in 2356, it is only because womanhood stands as a symbol of purity and beauty. Thus abkár, plural of bikr, means a virgin, and also an action that has not been preceded by its like (Q-LL). Similarly, atráb, or equals in age, as already shown in 2148A, signifies that the growth of those blessings begins with the growth of spiritual life in man; while 'urub is plural of both 'urúb and 'aríb, the former signifying a woman that manifests love to her husband, and the latter, a man who is chaste in speech, and thus conveys the idea of chastity or love. As applying to the conquests of this life, see 2419, 2420, etc.

53 And fill (your) bellies with it;

54 Then drink over it of boiling water;

55 And drink as drinks the thirsty camel.

56 This is their entertainment on the day of requital.

57 We have created you, why do you not then assent?

2433 Vv. 39 and 40 are in reference to what is said at the close of the last section. Note that these verses do not contradict vv. 13 and 14, as imagined by some Christian critics, for the latter speak only of those who were foremost in accepting the Holy Prophet.

2434 These verses draw a picture of the distress and abasement which were in store for the unbelieving Quraish in this life as well as in the hereafter.

2435 That is, the violation of Divine commandments.

58 Have you considered the life-germ?
Ar. what you emit.

60 We have ordained death among you and We are not to be overcome,[2436]

62 And certainly you know the first growth, why do you not then mind?

63 Have you considered what you sow?

64 Is it you that cause it to grow, or are We the causers of growth?

2436 These verses and the one that follows tell them plainly that they were ordained to be overtaken by death, others (the Muslims) taking their place, while they themselves were to be reduced to a state of abjection of which they had no knowledge. It is this state of abjection, that can never be realized by a powerful nation, that is referred to in the words of the next verse, and make you grow into what you know not.

2437 The fire burned at night points out to the desert wayfarer a habitation of men where he will be welcome. It is called "a reminder" because the fire served as a symbol of the wars which were to bring destruction upon the unbelievers; it also represents the reward of evil deeds in another life. The above verses all contain clear prophecies of the failure and final disruption of the power of the Quraish.

SECTION 3

Judgment is inevitable

75–80. The Qur-án is a Divine revelation. 81–87. Death an evidence of judgment. 88–95. Three classes in judgment.

Ar. swear by.
Or, the setting or falling of stars.

75 But nay! I call to witness the revelation of the portions (of the Qur-án);[2438]

76 And most surely it is a very great oath if you only knew;

77 Most surely it is an honoured Qur-án,

78 In a book that is protected;

79 None shall touch it save the purified ones.[2439]

80 A revelation by the Lord of the worlds.

81 Do you then hold this announcement in contempt?[2440]

82 And to give (it) the lie you make your means of subsistence.[2441]

فَلَآ أُقْسِمُ بِمَوَاقِعِ النُّجُومِ ۝
وَإِنَّهُ لَقَسَمٌ لَّوْ تَعْلَمُونَ عَظِيمٌ ۝
إِنَّهُ لَقُرْآنٌ كَرِيمٌ ۝
فِي كِتَٰبٍ مَّكْنُونٍ ۝
لَّا يَمَسُّهُ إِلَّا الْمُطَهَّرُونَ ۝
تَنزِيلٌ مِّن رَّبِّ الْعَٰلَمِينَ ۝
أَفَبِهَٰذَا الْحَدِيثِ أَنتُم مُّدْهِنُونَ ۝
وَتَجْعَلُونَ رِزْقَكُمْ أَنَّكُمْ تُكَذِّبُونَ ۝

2438 The meaning adopted is in consonance with the context. As to nujúm meaning portions of the Qur-án see 2371, where this verse also is explained. Mawáqi' is the plural of mauqa', i.e. the time or place of the coming down of a thing, which is the revelation of the Qur-án in this case. V. 77 makes it clear that it is the revelation of the Qur-án, for it is to this that the personal pronoun it occurring there refers.

As already stated in 2099, the object of an oath in such cases is to draw attention to certain facts, hence I render the word uqsim-u as meaning I call to witness. The use of lá in such cases is explained in 2606.

2439 Vv. 77, 78, and 79 contain three statements regarding the Qur-án: (1) That it shall be an honoured reading; in other words, its reciters shall be honoured and great men; (2) that it shall be protected in all its purity in writing; and (3) that the impure idolaters shall not even touch it, i.e. they shall not derive advantage from it as long as they remain in their impurity. This also shows that an understanding of the Qur-án is granted only to those who are pure in heart. It also shows that the Qur-án should not be touched by one who is impure. Hence the companions were forbidden to carry the Qur-án to an enemy's country. نهينا ان نسافر بالقرآن الى ارض العدو are the words of a report accepted by Bukharee. Both the verses and this report further show that the Qur-án existed in a written form from the first, otherwise such injunctions as not to touch or travel with it to the enemy's country would have been meaningless.

2440 Mudhinún is here equivalent to متهاونون مكذبون i.e. holding in light estimation, rejecting (JB). All interpreters accept this significance. As to how the word came to have this meaning, LL says: "It originally signified the anointing such a thing as a hide with some oil or the like; and as such a thing is rendered soft to the sense of feeling, it was used metaphorically to denote ideal softness, hence the treating with gentleness, soothing, coaxing, beguiling, or deluding . . . and then the word mudáhinah was tropically used as signifying the holding a thing in light estimation or in contempt (Mf, TA)."

2441 The meaning of the passage is quite clear, taking rizq in its ordinary significance of means of subsistence, i.e. you are bent upon giving the lie to the Qur-án to such an extent

83 Why is it not then that when it comes up to the throat,

84 And you at that time look on—

85 And We are nearer to it than you, but you do not see—

86 Then why is it not—if you are not held under authority—

Or, made low.

87 That you send it (not) back—if you are truthful?[2442]

88 Then if he is one of those drawn nigh (to Allah),

89 Then happiness and bounty and a garden of bliss.

90 And if he is one of those on the right hand,

91 Then peace to you from those on the right hand.

Ar. thee.

92 And if he is one of the rejecters, the erring ones,

93 He shall have an entertainment of boiling water,

94 And burning in hell.

95 Most surely this is a certain truth.[2443]

96 Therefore glorify the name of your Lord, the Great.

Ar. thy.

as if to give it the lie were your means of subsistence without which you could not live. But the word has another significance, because you say رزق فلانا meaning he thanked such a one (LL). TA gives another instance of the same significance in the saying فعلت ذالك لما رزقتني i.e. I did that since thou didst thank me. The meaning of the passage would thus be: And you make your thanking to be that you give (it) the lie, i.e. Is this the thanks that you return for the benefit of Divine revelation, that you give it the lie?

2442 Sale and others translate غير مدينين as meaning not to be rewarded or not to be judged, and call the passage obscure. But madînîn means mamlûkîn, i.e. held under authority (Rz). Zj gives the same interpretation, which is accepted by LL, i.e. it means not held under authority. In fact the root word dâna means primarily he became obedient, or he became abased and submissive (IAr, Q, TA-LL). This interpretation makes the meaning quite clear: If you are your own masters and not subject to the authority of a Higher Power, why can you not resist death when it comes to you and prolong your lives?

2443 Mark the force and conviction of the truth of the judgment which is present to the Prophet's mind.

CHAPTER LVII

THE IRON

(Al-Ḥadīd)

REVEALED AT MEDINA

(4 sections and 29 verses)

Abstract:

Sec. 1. Greatness of the Divine kingdom.
Sec. 2. The light of faith.
Sec. 3. Unbelievers' enjoyment is short-lived.
Sec. 4. Divine grace for believers.

The Title, subject-matter and context.

THIS chapter is entitled The Iron, in reference to the punishment which it was necessary should be inflicted upon the opponents who were bent upon extirpating Islam with the sword. It opens with a description of the vastness of the Divine kingdom and of the greatness of the power and knowledge of Allah, thus containing a clear prophecy of the future conquests of Islam, in contrast with the last group of Meccan revelation, which promised eminence and conquests in metaphorical language. They were wonderful prophecies, relating as they did to the eminence of one nation, almost non-existent at the time of their declaration, and the overthrow of another, holding all power in their hand. How were all these prophecies to be accomplished? By the greatness of the power and knowledge of Allah is the answer, and that is the answer given here ; while the Muslims are told that they must spend money and exert themselves to their utmost, and thus sacrifice their own interests to the cause of the truth if they would be heirs to the Divine kingdom. There is also a clear reference to the vastness of the kingdom which was promised to the Muslims, a kingdom by no means to be limited to the confines of Arabia. Yet there were those who, while professing Islam with the lips, did not make the necessary sacrifices. The second section therefore tells us that these hypocrites, not having the light of faith, will ultimately find themselves in darkness, and concludes with an exhortation to the believers. The third section refers to the temporary nature of all those worldly enjoyments which keep a man away from the truth, and it closes with a reference to the punishment of those who take up the sword to annihilate Islam. The last section speaks of the Divine grace which is in store for the believers, the vast kingdom to which they are to be made heirs, again exhorting them that they can obtain that grace not by resorting to such practices as monkery, which Islam does not sanction, but by exerting themselves and thus employing their faculties for the attainment of the object which was set before them. The chapter, in fact, if it contains, on the one hand, a reply to those who object to the Muslims having emerged from a purely religious life and to their having taken up the sword in defence of the truth, is a warning, on the other hand, to the Muslims themselves against following monkish practices. For just as truth would have perished if they had not been allowed to defend it, the greatness to which they attained could not have been maintained had they neglected the cares of this life. Islam, moreover, required a development of all the human faculties, while a purely religious life would have led to a practice resembling monkery, and thus most of the faculties granted to man would have remained quite dormant in him.

SECTION 1

Greatness of Divine Kingdom

1–6. Knowledge and power belong to Allah. 7–10. Muslims shall be given the kingdom, so they must spend.

Date of revelation.

With this chapter is introduced a group of Medinian revelation which is continued to the 66th chapter. That this chapter was revealed at Medina there can be little doubt, the fact being established by the most influential section of Muslim opinion (AH). The dissenting voices are, in fact, quite unworthy of serious consideration. The date assigned to it by Noëldeke is between the battles of Uhud and the Allies; but in face of indisputable statements relating to the conquest of Mecca, this view is absolutely untenable.

2444 The Holy Prophet has thus explained the four attributes of the Divine Being mentioned here: "Thou art al-Awwal, i.e. the First, so that there was nothing before Thee, and Thou art al-Ákhir, i.e. the Last, so that there is nothing after Thee, and Thou art az-Záhir, i.e. the Ascendant over all, so that there is nothing above Thee, and Thou art al-Bátin, i.e. the Knower of the hidden things, so that there is nothing hidden from Thee" (JB). How sublime is the conception of the Divine attributes expressed here!

9 He it is who sends down clear communications upon His servant, that he may bring you forth from utter darkness into light; and most surely Allah is Kind, Merciful to you.

10 And what reason have you that you should not spend in Allah's way? and Allah's is the inheritance of the heavens and the earth; not alike among you are those who spent before the victory[2446] and fought (and those who did not): they are more exalted in rank than those who spent and fought afterwards; and Allah has promised good to all; and Allah is Aware of what you do.

2445 The believers, who are addressed, are exhorted to be true to their belief and make their actions correspond with their doctrines.

2446 The victory means the conquest of Mecca; it is in this sense that the word fat-ḥ is taken ordinarily, when it stands alone (Rz). Prior to the conquest of Mecca the Muslim power was not firmly established, and Islam was surrounded on all sides by enemies, therefore only those who were ready to lay down their lives in the cause of truth could openly join the ranks of Islam. These men had to make great sacrifices, while those who joined the ranks after the Muslim power became predominant in Arabia neither suffered the persecutions to which the earlier converts were subjected nor made those sacrifices in the cause of truth which were the distinctive characteristic of the early believers. It should be noted that the foremost mentioned in 56:10 are here plainly stated to be those who made sacrifices for Islam before the conquest of Mecca; see 2428.

The Light of Faith

13 On the day when the hypocritical men and the hypocritical women will say to those who believe: Wait for us, that we may have light from your light; it shall be said: Turn back and seek a light. Then separation would be brought about between them, with a wall having a door in it; (as for) the inside of it, there shall be mercy in it, and (as for) the outside of it, before it there shall be chastisement.[2448]

14 They will cry out to them: Were we not with you? They shall say: Yea! but you caused yourselves to fall into temptation, and you waited[2449] and doubted, and vain desires deceived you till the threatened punishment[2450] of Allah came, while the arch-deceiver deceived you about Allah.

2447 The light of faith which guided the faithful to the truth will become a manifest light on the day of resurrection.

2448 Although the hypocrites remained mixed with the believers for a time, yet separation was brought about even in this life. As the resurrection will bring hidden things to light, the hypocrites will find themselves devoid of light, because they did not possess the light of faith in this life.

2449 The hypocrites hoped that the Muslims would be annihilated by their powerful opponents.

2451 The fire is here called a maulá, or a friend or guardian, of the unbelievers, thus showing that it is for their good that they will have to undergo the suffering of fire. In fact, hell is elsewhere also represented to be a place or a state which will ultimately lead to the purification of man, as fire purifies gold of dross. Those who do not prepare themselves in this life for a life after death, will have to be purified of their evil deeds and inclinations in the next life, so that they may be fit to make the spiritual progress necessary for a heavenly life. The process of purification, which is in other words hell, is thus a necessary stage in the spiritual perfection of those who do not avail themselves of the opportunity granted to them in this life. The keenness of the torments of that other life are due to the keener perception of the soul, which is the necessary result of its separation from the earthly vessel. Bliss and torment therefore grow equally keener in that life.

SECTION 3

Unbelievers' Enjoyment is short-lived

20. Unbelievers' enjoyment shall be changed into torment. 21. Greatness of the reward of believers. 22–24. They should suffer patiently. 25. Justice required the punishment of the guilty.

20 Know that this world's life is only sport and play and gaiety and boasting among yourselves, and a vying in the multiplication of wealth and children,[2452] like the rain, whose causing the vegetation to grow, pleases the husbandmen;[2452A] then it withers away so that you will see it become yellow, then it becomes dried up and broken down;[2453] and in the hereafter is a severe chastisement and (also) forgiveness from Allah and (His) pleasure;[2454] and this world's life is naught but means of deception.

عَرْضُهَا كَعَرْضِ السَّمَآءِ وَالْاَرْضِ

2452 This world's life in the Holy Qur-án stands for the vanities of life, as this passage clearly shows. The meaning is that life must be taken seriously, not devoted to sport and worldly enjoyment, but turned to good use. The earnestness, the seriousness, of life is a factor which is gradually losing its importance in the daily lives of most men and women in civilized society.

2452A The word kuffár, which by the consensus of the opinion of all interpreters signifies here husbandmen, is the plural of káfir, and has been used throughout the Holy Qur-án to signify unbelievers. But the context here does not allow us to adopt that significance, hence the departure. It will thus be seen how sometimes a well-known significance of a word may be misleading, and how we are compelled at times to give a word a significance other than that which ordinarily obtains.

2453 The fate of the unbelievers, i.e. of those who take life for a sport, is likened to vegetation that will soon decay and be dried up. The parable shows that their power must soon be broken. This is made clear by what follows, and in the hereafter is a severe chastisement. But it is equally a warning to the Muslims that if they do not take life seriously their power will also come to naught.

2454 Note how Divine forgiveness is constantly mentioned when punishment is spoken of, to show that the attribute of mercy is the predominant attribute in Divine nature.

2454A The garden or the paradise is here said to be as extensive as the heavens and the earth, and a similar statement occurs in 3 : 132, where it is said : "And hasten to forgiveness from your Lord, and (to) a garden, the extensiveness of which is as the heavens and the earth." These statements afford us the key to a right conception of the Muslim paradise. It is not limited to one particular place but is as wide as the heavens and the earth. The following incident is related under 3 : 132 : "A messenger of Heracleus asked the Holy Prophet : 'If paradise were as extensive as the heavens and the earth, where would be hell?' The Prophet it is prepared for those who believe in Allah and His apostles; that is the grace of Allah: He gives it to whom He pleases, and Allah is the Lord of mighty grace.

22 No evil befalls on the earth nor in your own souls, but it is in a book before We bring it into existence; surely that is easy to Allah:

23 So that you may not grieve for what has escaped you, nor be exultant at what He has given you; and Allah does not love any arrogant boaster:

24 Those who are niggardly and enjoin niggardliness on men; and whoever turns back, then surely Allah is He who is the Self-sufficient, the Praised.

25 Certainly We sent Our apostles with clear arguments, and sent down with them the Book and the measure,[2455] that men may conduct themselves with equity; and We have made the iron,[2456] wherein is great violence and advantages to men, and that Allah may know who helps Him and His apostles in the secret; surely Allah is Strong, Mighty.

replied: سبحان الله فاين الليل اذا جاء النهار i.e. 'Glory be to Allah, where is the night when the day comes?'" (Rz). The two verses referred to above and this incident show clearly that heaven and hell are not the names of two places, but really two conditions, because if paradise were the name of a particular place, hell could not exist, as paradise would according to those verses extend over the whole of space. This conclusively settles the nature of heaven and hell.

2455 As to what is meant by mízán, or the measure, see 2407. In fact, the statement here is clear enough, for the object of sending down the mízán is stated to be that men may conduct themselves with equity. It therefore stands for rules of justice or principles of equity. Bḍ thus explains the word: "So that rights may be sought thereby equitably and justice may be maintained." For sending it down, see the next note.

2456 Of all the metals none has proved of greater utility than iron, and this metal has played an all-important part in civilization, which, indeed, would have been well-nigh impossible without this factor in its development. The meaning of these words could not have been so clear to the mind of an Arab 1300 years ago as it is to ours to-day. It should be noted that inzál (infinitive noun of anzala) does not only signify the sending down of a thing from above, but it also means causing a thing to grow, or bringing the means of it into existence (Rz). Hence it is that in the Holy Qur-án we find the word used with reference to the clothes that a man wears, and to cattle, etc.

The mention of iron undoubtedly refers to the resistance against the enemy, which as a

Divine Grace for Believers

26, 27. Monkery is not a Divine institution. 28, 29. Great reward in store for believers.

last resource had to be effected with the sword. Rz gives several explanations of the three things mentioned here together, viz. the Book, the measure, and the iron. One of these is that a man's dealings with Allah are judged by the Book (i.e. Divine revelation), his dealings with men in general by the mízán, i.e. the principle of equity, and his dealings with his enemies by the ḥadíd, i.e. the sword or war. Another explanation is that there are three kinds of men (as indicated in ch. 56): (1) the foremost, who deal with men according to the Book, so that they give them their dues without exacting their own; (2) those who take a middle course, giving to others their dues and exacting their own—these act according to the principle of equity; (3) those who are unjust, not giving to men their dues while exacting their own—they must be dealt with by ḥadíd, which stands for severity and punishment.

2457 لا رهبانية في الاسلام i.e. there is no monkery in Islam, is a well-known saying of the Holy Prophet, quite in accordance with this verse, which states that even among the Christians monkery is an institution which was introduced by themselves, not being a Divine ordinance, although it is quite true that their object in adopting this innovation was

2458, see next page.

29 So that the followers of the Book may know that they do not control aught of the grace of Allah, and that grace is in Allah's hand, He gives it to whom He pleases; and Allah is the Lord of mighty grace.[2459] to seek Divine pleasure. The Muslims were now becoming a great nation, and as they were brought up in the utmost simplicity, and were also enjoined to disdain the gaiety of this life, they are told that their greatness as a nation depended upon the development of all their faculties, so that they, while retaining their simplicity of life, should not stoop to practices like that of monkery. Indeed, to stick to a middle course is the most difficult task. People generally go to this or that extreme. The Muslims are, however, told that they must neither lean to the extreme of worldliness nor to the extreme of monkery—evils which are both represented in their worst form in the Christian religion.

2458 By two portions of mercy is meant only a great mercy. The double mercy promised here is indicated in the words that follow, i.e. forgiveness of faults and the granting of a light as a guide for the future. It is not meant, as usually supposed, that believers from among the people of the Book will get a reward the double of that which is given to other believers. And it should be borne in mind that a greater reward is only the result of greater exertion in the cause of truth. See 1888, where the double reward is due to their being steadfast and to their repelling evil with good and spending out of what is given to them.

2459 The great reward which the Muslims would have from Allah, and the light which would guide their steps aright, would convince the followers of the Book that Allah's grace was not to remain with them for ever, and that He had now chosen the Muslims for the manifestation of His grace.

CHAPTER LVIII

THE PLEADING ONE

(Al-Mujádilah)

REVEALED AT MEDINA

(3 sections and 22 verses)

Abstract:

Sec. 1. Safeguarding of women's rights.
Sec. 2. Secret counsels condemned.
Sec. 3. Internal enemy to be guarded against.

The Title and subject-matter.

THE title of this chapter is taken from the circumstances narrated in its first section. There was an old Arab custom of putting away the wife by calling her a mother, but she was not divorced, neither did she continue to hold the status of a wife. A Muslim did the same. The wife complained to the Holy Prophet, and it is by reason of her complaint that she is called one who pleads. The custom was, however, abolished. The whole of the first section is devoted to this matter. The second section condemns secret counsels against the Holy Prophet, which, owing to Islam having gained power, had become very frequent at Medina—the hypocrites, and the Jews especially, taking part in these conspiracies. The third section speaks more plainly of the hypocrites and the Jews, and enjoins the Muslims to be wary of them, and, as they were hidden enemies of Islam, not to befriend them.

Context.

The last chapter having referred to the future conquests of the Muslims, this warns them of the secret plans of the enemies of Islam, which were now being employed against them to encompass their fall. Overt means had failed, and, notwithstanding the severest opposition from outside, Islam was daily gaining ground; therefore, as an internal enemy was now using covert means, this chapter is employed to warn the Muslims of the new danger.

Date of revelation.

As regards the date of revelation, the chapter, which is regarded as Medinian by general consent, may be placed a little before the 33rd chapter, for the custom known as ẓihár is fully dealt with here, while only a reference to it is contained in the 33rd chapter. And as the case of Khaulah shows (see 2460) that the Prophet waited for the Divine revelation before giving a decision, it is evident that the reference to ẓihár contained in 33 : 4 was a later revelation. The subject is thought not to be relevant, but, as already remarked in the second chapter, it was one of the first needs of a progressive society that a period should be put to the cruel treatment of women. The reformation wrought by the Holy Qur-án would have been incomplete had it neglected the rights of half the human race. Hence the subject of the greatness of the Muslim nation is always attended with references to the rights of, and the relations with, women. This chapter, read concurrently with the one preceding it, affords an instance of this.

SECTION 1

Safeguarding of Women's Rights

1-4. Abolition of the custom of ẓihár and atonement for it. 5, 6. The Prophet to be obeyed.

2460 سمع الله قولك signifies Allah knows your saying (LL). The woman referred to was Khaula, wife of Aus bin Ṣamit, who was separated by her husband in an old Arab form, the husband saying to the wife, Thou art to me as the back of my mother, the word ẓihár being derived from ẓahr, meaning back. The result of the pronouncement of these words was a total estrangement of the husband from the wife, but the woman was not free to marry. The Prophet refused to interfere until he received this revelation abolishing this objectionable practice.

2461 For this form of putting away the wife see 1967, under 33 : 4, where the abolition of this practice is also referred to. This revelation, however, seems to be earlier, the reference to it in 33 : 4 being only for the sake of the abolition of another practice.

Nowhere is there a secret counsel between three persons but He is the fourth of them, nor (between) five but He is the sixth of them, nor less than that nor more but He is with them wheresoever they are; then He will inform them of what they did on the day of resurrection: surely Allah is Cognizant of all things.[2462]

2462 The unbelievers and the Jews were always engaged in plots against the Holy Prophet and the Muslims. They are here told that Allah will bring their secret counsels to naught.

2463 All opponents of the Holy Prophet are spoken of.

Ar. thee. come to you they greet you
Ar. thee. with a greeting with which
Ar. thee. Allah does not greet you,[2464] and they say in themselves: Why does not Allah chastise us for what we say? Hell is enough for them; they shall enter it, and evil is the resort.

9 O you who believe! when you confer together in private, do not give to each other counsel of sin and revolt and disobedience to the Apostle, and give to each other counsel of goodness and guarding (against evil); and be careful of (your duty to) Allah, to whom you shall be gathered together.[2465]

10 Secret counsels are only (the work) of the devil that he may cause to grieve[2466] those who believe, and he cannot hurt them in the least except with Allah's permission; and on Allah let the believers rely.

11 O you who believe! when it is said to you, Make room in (your) assemblies, then make ample room, Allah will give you ample; and when it is said, Rise up, then rise up. Allah will exalt those of you who believe, and those who are given knowledge, in high degrees, and Allah is Aware of what you do.[2467]

2464 The meaning is that they invoke death and destruction for you while Allah wishes that you should live and prosper. There is a report that the Jews used to say when they came to the Prophet: السّام عليك, i.e. death overtake you! instead of السّلام عليك i.e. peace be with you, the two phrases sounding nearly alike.

2465 Islam condemns secret societies, whose object is frequently the destruction of law and order. No Muslim should be a member of a secret society.

2466 Ḥazana-hú, the aorist being yaḥzun, signifies the same as aḥzana-hú, i.e. he caused him to be affected with grief, or grieved him or made him sad or unhappy (S, Msb, Q-LL). It is the devil's object to cause the believers to grieve, but that his efforts are unsuccessful is herein shown.

2467 As I have already stated, the progress of Islam brought large numbers of people into its fold who stood in need of being taught manners as well as morals. In their assemblies they crowded and pressed upon each other in order to be able to sit nearest to the Holy Prophet. The injunction to make room in assemblies means, either that room should be made for others, or that the people should not sit close to each other, but leave ample space between one another (Bd).

12 O you who believe! when you consult the Apostle, then offer something in charity before your consultation; that is better for you and purer; but if you do not find, then surely Allah is Forgiving, Merciful.[2468]

يٰٓاَيُّهَا الَّذِيْنَ اٰمَنُوْٓا اِذَا نَاجَيْتُمُ الرَّسُوْلَ

13 Do you fear that you will not (be able to) give in charity before your consultation? So when you do not do it and Allah has turned to you (mercifully), then keep up prayer and pay the poor-rate and obey Allah and His Apostle; and Allah is Aware of what you do.

Internal Enemy to be guarded against 14–19. Those who assure the Muslims of their friendship but are secret enemies. 20, 21. They shall be abased. 22. Muslims should not befriend them.

Ar. hast thou.

14 Have you not seen those who befriend a people with whom Allah is wroth? They are neither of you nor of them, and they swear falsely while they know.[2469]

17 Neither their wealth nor their children shall avail them aught against Allah; they are the inmates of the fire, therein they shall abide.[2470]

هُمْ فِيْهَا خٰلِدُوْنَ ۝

2468 This is an instance of a verse being declared as abrogated without the least possible reason. The verse that follows does not cancel the injunction of the previous verse, but rather shows that the injunction contained in v. 12 is not obligatory but optional; the legal alms called the zakāt being the only obligatory alms, as is shown by the words keep up prayer and pay the poor-rate. It should also be noted that the Prophet and his family derived no benefit whatever from the alms, for to them the alms were totally prohibited.

2469 The Jews were the people on whom Allah had sent down His wrath and the people who befriended them were the hypocrites (JB). The Jews also played a double policy.

2470 This prophecy was abundantly verified in the case of both the Jews and the hypocrites, as Medina was ultimately cleared of both.

18 On the day that Allah will raise them up all, then they will swear to Him as they swear to you, and they think that they have something; now surely they are the liars.[2471]

لا تجد قوما يؤمنون بالله واليوم الاخر يوادون من حاد الله ورسوله ولو كانوا اباءهم او ابناءهم او اخوانهم او عشيرتهم اولئك كتب فى قلوبهم الايمان وايدهم بروح منه ويدخلهم جنت تجرى من تحتها الانهر خلدين فيها رضى الله عنهم ورضوا عنه اولئك حزب الله الا ان حزب الله هم المفلحون ○

2471 By something is meant some excuse which might avail them.

2472 Note the certain conviction of the final triumph of truth which is expressed here. The next verse concludes with similar words: Surely the party of Allah are the successful ones.

2473 Note that the Muslims are described as the people who believe in Allah and the latter day; hence this description applies only to the Muslims.

2474 In a state of war between the two parties, friendly connections with the hostile tribes were prohibited, as these would have resulted in great harm to the weaker community of the Muslims. As to those who were not actually engaged in hostilities against the Muslims, see the express directions contained in 60:8, "Allah does not forbid you respecting those who have not made war against you on account of your religion and have not driven you forth from your homes that you show them kindness and deal with them justly."

Abstract:

Sec. 1. The exiled Jews.
Sec. 2. Hypocrites fail to fulfil their promises to Jews.
Sec. 3. An exhortation.

General remarks.

THIS chapter is appropriately termed the Banishment, as it deals entirely with the banishment of the Jewish tribe called the Baní Naḍir, and matters arising out of it. The last chapter warned the Muslims of the secret plans of the Jews and the hypocrites, and this offers an example. The first section deals with the banishment itself and the property acquired thereby; the second shows how the hypocrites gave the Jews secret promises of help, but failed to fulfil them; and the third ends the chapter with an exhortation to the faithful and an exposition of some of the Divine attributes, indicating the greatness and purity of the Divine Being.

The chapter is undoubtedly a Medinian revelation, and the date of revelation may be placed a little after the banishment which it narrates.

2475 The banishment spoken of here took place six months after the battle of Uhud, when the Baní Naḍír, a Jewish tribe of Medina who had at first entered into a covenant they were certain that their fortresses would defend them against Allah; but Allah came to them whence they did not expect, and cast terror into their hearts; they demolished their houses with their own hands and the hands of the believers; therefore take a lesson, O you who have eyes![2476]

3 And had it not been that Allah had decreed for them the exile, He would certainly have chastised them in this world, and in the hereafter they shall have chastisement of the fire.

4 That is because they acted in opposition to Allah and His Apostle, and whoever acts in opposition to Allah, then surely Allah is severe in retributing (evil).

with the Holy Prophet, showed signs of treachery and were punished with banishment (Bkh). This is called the first banishment, to distinguish it from the second, which took place in the time of 'Umar, when the Jews settled at Khaibar were banished to Syria, and which is prophetically referred to in the words awwal-il-hashr, or the first banishment, to distinguish it from a second or later banishment. The following detailed account is given by Rz: The Baní Naḍír made a treaty with the Holy Prophet to stand neutral between him and his enemies. When he was victorious at Badr, they said that he was the Prophet promised in the Torah, on account of the victory, but when the Muslims suffered a loss on the day of Uhud, they (i.e. the Baní Naḍír) repudiated their vow and broke the agreement. Ka'b, son of Ashraf, went to Mecca with forty horsemen and made an alliance with Abú Sufyán. As a consequence, Ka'b was murdered, and the Holy Prophet told the tribe to leave Medina. They wanted ten days for preparation, but Abdulla bin Ubayy (the head of the hypocrites) advised them not to leave Medina, but remain and fight against the Holy Prophet, promising the help of his own men. He also assured them that if they were compelled to go forth he would depart with them. So they fortified themselves within their strongholds. After having remained besieged for twenty-one days, and having despaired of help from the hypocrites, they surrendered. The Prophet raised the siege on the condition that they would depart from Medina. With the exception of two families that chose to remain at Khaibar, they all went to Syria.

Dr. Prideaux, so notorious for vilifying Islam, says that the Prophet ordered a party of the Muslims to pursue the emigrants, and that thus they were all put to death. Sale has shown in his note on this verse that the incident from which Dr. Prideaux draws this strange conclusion relates really to the murder in cold blood of seventy Muslims, who, being invited to preach Islam, were treacherously put to death by an Arab tribe. Strange are the ways of the learned Christians when they write anything about Islam!

2476 The Baní Naḍír, being granted ten days in which to collect and take with them such of their property as they desired, devoted the time at their disposal to the destruction of their houses, lest they should be a source of strength to the Muslims. What remained of them was demolished by the Muslims.

2477 This verse relates to the third kind of property acquired in war, which is called al-fai, being derived from afá-'a, which occurs in this verse, the other two being mentioned in 8:1 and 8:41, for which see 979 and 1007. Afá'tu-hú means I made it to return (O-LL), and accordingly افاء الله على المسلمين مال الكفار signifies, according to LL, God restored to the Muslims, or gave to them as spoil, the property of the unbelievers (S). Hence fai comes to mean such of the possessions of the unbelievers as accrue to the Muslims without war (TA-LL), or such as are obtained from the believers in a plurality of gods after the laying down of arms (A'Obeid, Mgh, and Msb-LL).

The fai is not distributed among the warriors for the very reason that there has been no fighting. It is described here as being for Allah and for the Apostle, the near of kin, the orphans, the needy, and the wayfarer. From this it will be seen that the whole of it was to be distributed in exactly the same manner as the one-fifth of the ghanímah, for which see 1007. A reference to that note will show that the Prophet's share was for the benefit of the Muslims. Bḍ states that there are three different opinions as to the Prophet's share after his death. According to one it should go to the Imám or the head; according to a second, it should be spent on the army and the fortification of the boundaries; and according to a third, it is for the benefit of the Muslims in general. The lives of the Holy Prophet and his earlier successors—a conqueror like 'Umar, wearing patched clothes, before whom was brought all the hoarded wealth of Persia and Syria—are a sufficient testimony that the Prophet's share was always spent for the benefit of the Muslims. In fact, this share was considered as a part of the Bait-ul-Mál, the public treasury, for when, after the Holy Prophet's death, his daughter Fatima claimed a share of Fidk, which was also a part of fai, Abú Bakr refused it on the ground that it was not the personal property of the Holy Prophet (Rz), and he decided in fact that a prophet does not leave any property to be inherited by his heirs. The feud which thus arose rent the Muslim world into two great schools. The prohibition contained in the words so that it may not be a thing taken by turns among the rich of you is directed against the Prophet's share being inherited at all.

8 (It is) for the poor who fled, those who were driven from their homes and their possessions, seeking grace of Allah and (His) pleasure, and assisting Allah and His Apostle: these it is that are the truthful.[2478]

9 And those who made their abode in the city and in the faith before them love those who have fled to them, and do not find in their hearts a need of what they are given, and prefer (them) before themselves though poverty may afflict them, and whoever is preserved from the niggardliness of his soul, these it is that are the successful ones.[2479]

2478 It should be noted that the Muhājirīn in general did not receive any share of this property: it was only to the poor Refugees that something was given for maintenance, the reason of which is stated clearly in the verse, viz. they had lost everything and had to leave their homes as well as their property. It is necessary to remember, moreover, that one of the important heads of expenditure in the public treasury of the Muslims, which is called the Bait-ul-Māl, was the help of the poor and those who were unable to earn their own livelihood, and thus with all its poor laws and old age pension rules, the English law is yet far behind that early Muslim law. It was under that head that the Refugees who had lost all their wealth and homes and were still so poor that they could not carry on any business of their own were to receive anything from what the Bani Nadir left, all of which became part of the public funds. Sale's note, "wherefore Muhammad distributed those spoils among the Muhājirīn . . . and gave no part thereof to the Anṣārs," is simply a distortion of the facts, borne out by his own admission that three of the Anṣār "who were in necessitous circumstances" also received help. See also next note.

2479 By those who made their abode in the city and in the faith are meant the Anṣār or the Helpers, i.e. the Muslim residents of Medina. Dār means a house or a mansion as well as a country, or a city or a town or village (Mgh, Q-LL), and with the article al, al-madinah or the city of the Prophet (Q-LL). The meaning is that they made an abode in the city of the Prophet and the faith; the faith being likened to a place of abode. Before them signifies before their (i.e. the Refugees') coming to Medina.

When the Muslims fled from Mecca they found a refuge in Medina, where the Muslim inhabitants received them as if they were their brothers, lodging them in their own houses, and many of them were still living in the houses of their benefactors when the banishment of the Bani Nadir took place. On this the Holy Prophet asked the Helpers to consent to either of the two proposals, i.e. to have a share of what was acquired from the Bani Nadir and give part of their houses and wealth to the Refugees, or to let the (poor) Refugees alone have a share in that property, so that with it they might build their houses and make a start in some business or trade. The Anṣār replied that they were willing that the Refugees alone should have a share, and, notwithstanding that, they might continue to lodge in their houses (RZ).

CHAPTER LX

THE EXAMINED ONE

(Al-Mumtaḥanah)

REVEALED AT MEDINA

(2 sections and 13 verses)

Abstract:

Sec. 1. Friendly relations with enemies of Islam forbidden.
Sec. 2. Other friendly and social relations.

General remarks.

THE whole of this chapter deals with the relations between the Muslims and the non-Muslims, and in particular with the undesirability of relations with those enemies who were bent upon extirpating Islam, and who, not being satisfied with expelling the Muslims from their homes, now made war on them. It is in this connection that the Holy Prophet is enjoined to examine the women who came to him from among the idolaters for the purpose of embracing Islam, so that if they are found to be inspired by sincere motives they should be retained. It is this circumstance which gives the title of the Examined One to this chapter, and thus it shows that, notwithstanding enmity, the Muslims were required to be fair in their dealings with the unbelievers. The connection with the last chapter is self-evident. A clear statement was needed regarding the relations of the two communities on account of the hostilities which had sprung up between them.

The first section opens with an injunction against entering into friendly relations with the enemies of Islam, whose hostile attitude had now assumed the gravest aspect, and the example of Abraham is quoted, who was similarly compelled to sever his connection with his opponents when they became hostile to him. The second section, however, adds that every non-Muslim is not to be regarded as an enemy; a distinction is drawn between the conduct which should be observed towards enemies and mere unbelievers. This direction, given as it was at a very late date, furnishes a basic principle in a discussion of the question of friendly relations. It is then stated that women who fled from Mecca to escape persecutions could be given shelter if they were found on examination to be sincere. Marriage relations between Muslim husbands and idolatrous wives, and idolatrous husbands and Muslim wives, were declared to be void, arrangements being made for the compensation of dowries. The chapter closes with a statement as to the pledge which should be demanded from women coming over to Islam, for the pledge in the case of men included the defence of the faith against the enemies, a duty which women could not perform.

The date of the revelation of this chapter may be approximately placed about the year 8 A.H., between the truce made at Hudaibiyya and the conquest of Mecca.

SECTION 1

Friendly Relations with Enemies of Islam forbidden

In the name of Allah, the Beneficent, the Merciful.

1 O you who believe! do not take My enemy and your enemy for friends: would you offer them love while they deny what has come to you of the truth, driving out the Apostle and yourselves because you believe in Allah, your Lord?[2484] If you go forth struggling hard in My path and seeking My pleasure, would you manifest love to them? And I know what you conceal and what you manifest; and whoever of you does this, he indeed has gone astray from the straight path.

2 If they find you, they will be your enemies, and will stretch forth towards you their hands and their tongues with evil,[2485] and they ardently desire that you may disbelieve.

3 Your relationships would not profit you, nor your children, on the day of resurrection; He will decide between you, and Allah sees what you do.

4 Indeed, there is for you a good example in Abraham and those with him when they said to their people: Surely we are clear of you and of what you serve besides Allah; we declare ourselves to be clear of you,[2485A]

2484 It should be noted that the reason given for not befriending the unbelievers is that they are the enemies of Allah and His Apostle, who have driven out the Apostle and the Muslims from their homes. To say that the passage was revealed on account of Hatib ibn Abi Balta', who had sent a letter informing the Meccans of the Holy Prophet's advance on Mecca, is only to give an instance of the harm which may result from friendship with an enemy in a state of war.

2485 That is, they would slay you with their hands and revile you with their tongues.

2485A كفر بكذا also means he declared himself to be clear or quit of such a thing (Msb-LL). As the ordinary significance of the word kufr does not apply here, this significance has been adopted.

Other Friendly and Social Relations

7–9. Relations with unbelievers, not enemies of Islam, allowed. 10, 11. Marriage ties between idolatrous enemies and Muslims to be treated as dissolved. 12. Pledge from female converts to Islam. 13. Friendly relations with Jews forbidden.

Ar. between those.

7 It may be that Allah will bring about friendship between you and those whom you hold to be your enemies among them; and Allah is Powerful; and Allah is Forgiving, Merciful.[2487]

8 Allah does not forbid you respecting those who have not made war against you on account of (your) religion, and have not driven you forth from 2486 As shown in 790, it was not Abraham's father for whom he thus prayed, for ultimately this sire of Abraham proved to be a deadly enemy. Abraham's example is quoted to show how loving and tender he was towards his people, yet when it became clear to him that they were bent upon uprooting the truth, even Abraham could not maintain relations of friendship with them. The Holy Prophet and his companions were in like manner now obliged to renounce all relationships of friendship with a people who were not only the avowed enemies of the Muslims but also in a state of continual war with them. For Abraham's promise to ask forgiveness for his sire, see 19:47.

2487 This verse makes it clear that the prohibition against friendly relations with the unbelievers was only temporary, to be operative only so long as the war continued. The friendship prophetically referred to here was brought about after the conquest of Mecca.

2488 This verse and the one that follows, revealed as they were at a time when the relations between the Muslims and the unbelievers were most strained, on account of the existence of a continual state of war between the two parties, settle conclusively that friendly relations between Muslims and non-Muslims, as such, are not prohibited by the Holy Qur-án. It is in the light of these verses that all the verses forbidding friendly relations with the unbelievers should be read, because here the true principle is revealed in unmistakable language, allowing friendly relations with one kind of unbelievers and prohibiting such relations with those of another kind. It also upsets the oft-repeated libel of Christian writers, wherein the uninformed are led to believe in the existence of a fanatic intolerance of all non-Muslims on the part of the followers of the Holy Prophet.

2489 It appears from the above that, up to this time, not only did people continue to embrace Islam at Mecca, although there was now no preacher of the faith there, but that this gradual conversion to Islam also continued notwithstanding the bitter persecution of the new converts, which still compelled them to flee from their homes. It is an unparalleled example of the deep impression which the Holy Prophet's truth had made upon the Meccans. The example cited here relates to believing women who fled to Medina under these circumstances. But note the broadness of the principles of Islam. These women are not taken unconditionally, for they might have deserted their husbands. The Holy Qur-án requires that they should be examined. In accordance with this injunction we find it related that the Holy Prophet obtained the assurance of such women under oath that they had not left their homes except on account of Islam, and that it was not the desertion of their husbands or the love of any one that had prompted them to flee (JB, Kf). Those women who gave a satisfactory answer to these questions were not returned to the unbelievers. It is an error to suppose that this was a violation of the conditions of the truce made at Hudaibiyya, for had it been so, the Meccans would not have remained silent. There was no doubt a condition in that truce that the Meccans who went over to the Holy Prophet should be returned to Mecca, and that condition, which only related to men, was faithfully observed by the Holy Prophet, who refused to allow the Muslims who fled from the persecutions of the Meccans to remain with him, and these men had therefore to make a colony of their own, having no connection whatever with the Medina Muslims, nor were they subject to the Meccans. The truth of this is further clarified by the incident relating to Umm-i-Kalsum, daughter of Aqaba and wife of Amr bin 'Ás, who was accompanied by her two brothers, Ammara and Walid: both were handed over by the Holy Prophet to the unbelievers, but not their sister (Rz). In fact, the

That is Allah's judgment; He judges between you; and Allah is Knowing, Wise.[2491]

11 And if any thing (out of the dowries) of your wives has passed away from you to the unbelievers, then your turn comes, give to those whose wives have gone away the like of what they have spent, and be careful of (your duty to) Allah in Whom you believe.[2492]

12 O Prophet! when believing women come to you giving you a pledge that they will not associate aught with Allah, and will not steal, and will not commit fornication, and will not kill their children, and will not bring a calumny which they have forged of themselves, and will not disobey you in what is good, accept their pledge, and condition was introduced by the Quraish to guard against the growing strength of the Muslims by permitting the converts to come over to them; and hence they were quite satisfied when the Holy Prophet told them that the condition did not apply to women. And though the condition did not apply to women, yet these women were only granted protection after their dowry was returned to their husbands, who were not allowed to suffer a loss. The acceptance of the dowry by the husband brought about a divorce, and these women could then be married by the Muslims.

2490 Whereas payment of a dowry to the first husband marked the termination of the marriage relationship with him, the payment of a dowry to the wife was necessary for the new conjugal relationship.

2491 The state of permanent warfare maintained between the Muslims and the unbelievers did not allow of any social relationships to be established between the two parties; hence the marriage relationships between Muslim men and unbelieving women as well as those between the Muslim women and the unbelieving men could no longer be maintained: each party having returned the dowry, divorce, ipso facto, automatically resulted.

2492 It is a case in which a Muslim husband is allowed to recoup the loss sustained of an unbelieving wife's dowry who has deserted him, from the sum due for the payment of a Muslim woman's dowry who has fled from the unbelievers and joined the Muslims, or from the acquisition gained in war (Kf). This was necessary because the unbelievers refused to return the dowries of women who had gone over to them. It should be noted, however, that, notwithstanding this treatment which the Muslims suffered at the hands of the unbelievers, the Muslims were enjoined to make over to the unbelievers the dowries of the women who came over to them.

2493 Most of the commentators think that the pledge spoken of in this verse was only taken by the Holy Prophet after the conquest of Mecca, when large numbers of women as well as men embraced Islam. Rz relates the whole of this incident in detail, in which some lively responses by Hind, wife of Abu Sufyan, are given.

2494 The reference is to the Jews. One sect of the Jews denied resurrection, to which reference is contained in the concluding words of the verse.

Abstract:

Sec. 1. Triumph of Islam.

Sec. 2. Great sacrifices must be made.

General remarks.

THE Muslims, having been enjoined in the last chapter to have no friendly relations with the unbelievers, and a hint being given in v. 7 that friendly relations would soon be restored, are herein told that the final triumph of Islam would bring about this restoration, for so long as the unbelievers retained power, their efforts would always be directed to extinguish the light of Islam. Hence, it was only by means of the establishment of a Muslim government that a state of peace would be established in the peninsula. The title of this chapter is taken from the injunction to the Muslims to fight in defence of the faith in ranks, for fighting was now essential for the preservation of the very life of the Muslim community. After giving that injunction, the first section proceeds to cite an example of the persecution of Moses at the hands of his own people, and then a prophecy announced by Jesus as to the Holy Prophet's advent, which made it clear that truth should be finally victorious. Then follows a prophecy of the triumph of Islam over all other religions, the basis of whose fulfilment was laid in the lifetime of the Holy Prophet in the vanquishment of all religions within Arabia. The second section exhorts the Muslims to exert themselves in the cause of truth if they would see that prophecy fulfilled, citing the example of Jesus, whose followers, notwithstanding the apparent triumph of the enemy, finally succeeded in propagating the truth.

2 O you who believe! why do you say that which you do not do?

3 It is most hateful to Allah that you should say that which you do not do.[2495]

4 Surely Allah loves those who fight in His way in ranks as if they were a firm and compact wall.

5 And when Moses said to his people: O my people! why do you give me trouble? and you know indeed that I am Allah's apostle to you; but when they turned aside, Allah made their hearts turn aside, and Allah does not guide the transgressing people.

6 And when Jesus son of Mary said: O children of Israel! surely I am the apostle of Allah to you, verifying that which is before me of the Torah and giving the good news of an Apostle who will come after me, his name being Ahmad;[2496] but when he came to them with clear arguments

Date of revelation.

The chapter is by all authorities admitted to be a Medinian revelation. The actual date is not certain, but it may be approximately assigned to the year 4 A.H.—a time of despondency for the Muslims on account of the loss sustained at Uhud. From the first we find prophecies of the triumph to have been announced at a time when conditions leading to such a triumph were most adverse, and consequently when the assurances were most needed.

2495 It is an exhortation to those who professed belief in the truth to make their actions correspond to their assertions.

2496 Jesus' verification of the Torah, or the books of Moses, here, refers to the prophecy therein about the advent of the Holy Prophet, which is clearly stated in the latter part of the passage, where Jesus is spoken of as prophesying the advent. It should be borne in mind that the Holy Prophet had two names: he was called Muhammad as well as Aḥmad, both names being derived from the same root ḥamd, which signifies praising, the word Muḥammad meaning a man praised much or repeatedly or time after time (LA, Q-LL), and Aḥmad meaning one who praises much. It should not be supposed that Jesus uttered the very words which are reported in the Holy Qur-án, for he spoke the Hebrew language and not Arabic. Another great difficulty is that the actual words of Jesus Christ are not preserved in the Gospels, and we have to depend on a Greek translation, in which we find the word paraclete, which is translated in English as comforter. We are well aware how translations are sometimes misleading, and therefore the use of the word paraclete in the Greek version, or that of comforter in the English version, does not show what the actual word in the language spoken by Jesus was. But all those qualifications which are given in John 14 : 16 and 16 : 7 are met with in the person of the Holy Prophet. He is stated to be one who shall abide for ever, and they said: This is clear enchantment.[2497]

so is the Prophet's law; for after him comes no prophet to promulgate a new law. He is spoken of as teaching all things, and it was with a perfect law that the Holy Prophet came. And clearest of all are the words of John 16:12–14: "I have yet many things to say unto you, but ye cannot bear them now. Howbeit when he, the Spirit of truth, is come, he will guide you into all truth: for he shall not speak of himself, but whatsoever he shall hear, that shall he speak; and he will show you things to come. He shall glorify Me." Now, this prophecy about the spirit of truth, which is the same as the comforter, clearly stated in John 14:17, establishes the following points: (1) Jesus could not guide into all truth, because his teaching was really directed only to the reform of the Israelites, and he denounced only their crying evils; but the teaching of the comforter would be a perfect one, guiding men into all truth, and the Holy Qur-án is the only book which claims to be a perfect law. (2) That the comforter would not himself speak a word, but that which he shall hear he shall speak; the words conveying exactly the same idea as those of Deut. 18:18, "And I will put My words in his mouth," a qualification which is met with only in the person of the Holy Prophet Muhammad. (3) That he will glorify Jesus, and the Holy Prophet did glorify Jesus by denouncing as utterly false all those calumnies which were heaped upon Jesus and his mother. The only Christian objection to this clear fulfilment of the prophecy in the person of the Holy Prophet Muhammad is, that the comforter is here called the spirit of truth, and that hence the words cannot be applicable to a man. But it is equally difficult to see why Jesus should call him another comforter, as he does in John 14:16, thus showing that he would come as a human being as he himself had come; and then, according to all sacred history, the teachers have been always men. Moreover, we cannot imagine a spirit not speaking of himself, but speaking only that which he shall hear, which a comparison with Deut. 18:18 clearly shows to be a prophet like Moses. And it should be noted that the Holy Prophet is frequently called The Truth in the Holy Qur-án, as in 17:81, "And say, The Truth has come and the falsehood vanished."

Another point worth mentioning is that the different prophecies about the Holy Prophet really refer to the different phases of his life. The two aspects of the life of the Holy Prophet are jalál and jamál, i.e. an aspect of glory and an aspect of beauty, the first finding its manifestation in the name Muhammad and the second in Ahmad. Each of the two great prophets, Moses and Jesus, prophesied about the Holy Prophet in words expressing that aspect of his life which was in consonance with his own nature: glory finding greater expression in Moses, who was prophet, law-giver, and king at the same time; and beauty in Jesus, on account of the beauty of his moral teachings, while both these elements were combined in the person of the Holy Prophet.

2497 The Holy Prophet is referred to here, as the next verse clearly shows; see the foot-note that follows.

2498 By the words, "who forges a lie against Allah and he is invited to Islam," are to be understood the rejecters who called the truth an enchantment, as stated at the end of the last verse, and as shown by the words that follow here, And Allah does not guide the unjust people. It was these people that were invited to Islam, while the Prophet was an inviter, as he is elsewhere called; see, for instance, 3:192, 20:108. Their polytheistic beliefs are repeatedly called a forgery in the Holy Qur-án, as, for instance, in 6:138, and again in 6:139.

light, though the unbelievers may be averse.

9 He it is who sent His Apostle with the guidance and the true religion, that He may make it overcome the religions, all of them, though the polytheists may be averse.[2499]

Great Sacrifices must be made

10–13. Necessity of sacrificing life and property in the cause of truth. 14. Example of Jesus' disciples.

10 O you who believe! shall I lead you to a merchandise which may deliver you from a painful chastisement?

11 You shall believe in Allah and His Apostle, and struggle hard in Allah's way with your property and your lives; that is better for you, did you but know!

12 He will forgive you your faults and cause you to enter into gardens, beneath which rivers flow, and goodly dwellings in gardens of perpetuity; that is the mighty achievement;

13 And yet another (blessing) that you love: help from Allah and a victory near at hand; and give good news to the believers.[2500]

14 O you who believe! be helpers (in the cause) of Allah, as Jesus son of Mary said to a 433. (His) disciples[a]: Who are my helpers in the cause of Allah? The disciples said: We are helpers (in the cause) of Allah.

مَنْ أَنْصَارِي إِلَى اللَّهِ ۖ قَالَ
الْحَوَارِيُّونَ نَحْنُ أَنْصَارُ اللَّهِ

2499 Verses 8 and 9 contain two different prophecies. In the first of these we are told that all attempts to annihilate Islam will fail, and they did fail. In the second it is affirmed that Islam will be made the predominant religion, the truth of which was witnessed by Arabia in the lifetime of the Holy Prophet. But both prophecies have a wider significance. Attempts are still being made to annihilate Islam, and the Divine promise is that all these attempts shall be brought to naught; while the predominance of Islam over all the religions of the world would in time be established as clearly as it was in Arabia. The commentators say that this predominance will be brought about through the Promised Messiah (Rz).

2500 The prophecy in the previous verse relates to the hereafter, while that in this verse relates to the victories of the Muslims over the unbelievers.

So a party of the children of Israel believed and another party disbelieved; then We aided those who believed against their enemy, and they became predominant.[2501]

اٰمَنُوْا عَلٰى عَدُوِّهِمْ فَاَصْبَحُوْا ظٰهِرِيْنَ ﴿١٤﴾

2501 The description applies to the triumph of the teachings of Christ over those who opposed the dissemination of his teachings, and speaks prophetically of the ultimate triumph of Islam over all other religions of the world.

Abstract:

Sec. 1. Muslims chosen for Divine favours.

Sec. 2. Friday prayers.

General remarks.

This chapter receives its name from the exhortation to gather together on the day of congregation, or Friday. The first section, after stating that the Prophet was a purifier of his immediate followers as well as of those who would come later on, warns the Muslims of the danger which brought about the downfall of the Jewish nation. They had with them the letter of the law, but were not true to its spirit. The reason of this was that they gave themselves up to worldly occupations and did not even observe their Sabbath, which was set apart for religious devotion. The second section therefore enjoins the Muslims not to neglect their prayers in congregation, and the congregation of Friday is specially spoken of.

The date of the revelation of this chapter may be assigned to about the second year of Hejira.

2502 Ummul-qurá is the name by which Mecca is known, and hence a Meccan is called an ummí (Majma'-ul-Biḥár), the other significance of the word being illiterate. For a full discussion of the meaning of the word see 117, 950.

7 And they will never invoke it because of what their hands have sent before; and Allah is Cognizant of the unjust.

2503 Abu Huraira says: "We were sitting with the Holy Prophet when the chapter entitled Friday was revealed to him, and in it the words others from among them who have not yet joined them. I asked the Holy Prophet: 'Who are these?' He gave no reply until I questioned him thrice. Salmán, the Persian, was sitting among us, and the Holy Prophet placed his hand on Salmán and said, 'Even if faith were near the Pleiades, men (or a man) from among these would surely find it'" (Bkh). This report would show that the verse applies to one man or certain men of Persian descent. But commentators understand that non-Arabs are meant (Rz); others think that all Muslims coming after the time of the Holy Prophet are meant (Rz, JB). But while the general significance of the words must be regarded as true, Bkh's report shows the reference to be to a man in particular. As other reports show that the Messiah would appear among the Muslims at a time when they would have the letter of the law with them but would not be true to its spirit, the reference in the report given here is particularly to the Messiah or to his time. The significance is that after a time, when the true spirit of Islam should have been lost, a man or a people would be raised who, again receiving the light from the Holy Prophet, would spread the light of Islam in the world.

2504 The prayer for death spoken of here is the same as that in 2:94, for which see 138.

SECTION 2

Friday Prayer

9 O you who believe! when the call is made for prayer on Friday, then hasten to the remembrance of Allah and leave off traffic; that is better for you, if you know.[2505]

Or, the day of congregation.

10 But when the prayer is ended, then disperse abroad in the land and seek of Allah's grace, and remember Allah much, that you may be successful.

11 And when they see merchandise or sport they break up for it, and leave you standing. Say: What is with Allah is better than sport and (better) than merchandise, and Allah is the best of Sustainers.

يٰٓاَيُّهَا الَّذِيْنَ اٰمَنُوْٓا اِذَا نُوْدِيَ

فَاِذَا قُضِيَتِ الصَّلٰوةُ فَانْتَشِرُوْا فِي
الْاَرْضِ وَابْتَغُوْا مِنْ فَضْلِ اللّٰهِ وَاذْكُرُوا

اللّٰهِ خَيْرٌ مِّنَ اللَّهْوِ وَمِنَ التِّجَارَةِ
وَاللّٰهُ خَيْرُ الرّٰزِقِيْنَ ۝

2505 The time of the Jumu'ah prayer is just after noon, and the service, which consists only of two rak'ats instead of the four rak'ats of the early afternoon prayer, is preceded by a sermon. The words of this verse and those of the following show that ordinary business may be carried on by a Muslim on Friday before or after the Jumu'ah prayer. Hence, unlike the Jewish and the Christian Sabbaths, it is not necessarily a day of rest. But attendance at the Jumu'ah prayers is obligatory, and as soon as the call to prayer is given, every Muslim is bound to leave business of every kind and immediately to hasten to the mosque. It is a pity that in a country like India, having seventy millions of Muslims, officialdom did not recognize the necessity of the Muslims performing this obligatory duty until a very late date, and even now it is only partially recognized. Every nation has a Sabbath, or a so-called day of Divine service set apart from the ordinary weekdays, but in practice, the whole day is never given to prayer. In fact, a Muslim, who is allowed to do his ordinary work on Friday, gives more time to his prayers than the majority of those who recognize a seventh day as their Sabbath. The idea underlying the Sabbath is, no doubt, a temporary cessation of the material and physical activities, to give place to spiritual exercise and to holding communion with the Divine Being, but in practice that idea is practically non-existent. Islam, on the other hand, requires communion with the Divine Being to be observed throughout the entire week, and five times daily, in the most occupied hours of business; thus it gives a real chance to its followers for the exercise and development of the spiritual faculties which in others lie quite dormant. The Islamic division of prayers is much more suited to elevate a man spiritually, affording true spiritual food to the soul, than is to be discovered in any other form of worship.

CHAPTER LXIII

THE HYPOCRITES

(Al-Munáfiqún)

REVEALED AT MEDINA

(2 sections and 11 verses)

SECTION 1

The Hypocrites

In the name of Allah, the Beneficent, the Merciful.

1 When the hypocrites come
Ar. thee. to you, they say: We bear
Ar. thou art. witness that you are most surely Allah's Apostle; and
Ar. thou art. Allah knows that you are most surely His Apostle, and Allah bears witness that the hypocrites are surely liars.

2 They make their oaths a shelter, and thus turn away from Allah's way; surely evil is that which they do.

3 That is because they believe, then disbelieve, so a seal is set upon their hearts so that they do not understand.[2506]

عَلٰى قُلُوْبِهِمْ فَهُمْ لَا يَفْقَهُوْنَ

Abstract:

Sec. 1. The hypocrites.
Sec. 2. An exhortation.

General remarks.

THE entire chapter, as its name shows, deals with the Hypocrites and condemns hypocrisy. The first section speaks of the hypocrites, their false promises and their desire to see Islam abased and trampled under foot, while the second section concludes with an exhortation to the Muslims to be sincere and not to be led away by the love of wealth and children. The hypocrisy of the upholders of a cause is fatal to its advancement; hence its connection with the last chapter.

The date of revelation may be assigned to a time when the hypocrites became separated from the believers, which first took place in the battle of Uḥud, and therefore it was probably in the third year of Hejira that it was revealed.

2506 Note how the setting of a seal upon the hearts is described here. It is man's own action which is the cause, while the setting of the seal is only the necessary consequence of that action.

Ar. thou seest.
Ar. thee.
Ar. thou wilt.

4 And when you see them, their persons will please you, and if they speak, you will listen to their speech; (they are) as if they were big pieces of wood clad with garments: they think every cry to be against them. They are the enemy, therefore beware of them; may Allah destroy them, whence are they turned back? [2507]

5 And when it is said to them: Come, the Apostle of Allah will ask forgiveness for you, they turn back their heads and you may see them turning away while they are big with pride.

Ar. thou mayest.

6 It is alike to them whether you beg forgiveness for them or do not beg forgiveness for them; Allah will never forgive them; surely Allah does not guide the transgressing people.

Ar. thou.

7 They it is who say: Do not spend upon those who are with the Apostle of Allah until they break up. And Allah's are the treasures of the heavens and the earth, but the hypocrites do not understand.

8 They say: If we return to Medina, the mighty will surely drive out the meaner therefrom; and to Allah belongs the might and to His Apostle and to the believers, but the hypocrites do not know. [2508]

وَإِذَا رَأَيْتَهُمْ تُعْجِبُكَ أَجْسَامُهُمْ
وَإِنْ يَقُولُوا تَسْمَعْ لِقَوْلِهِمْ كَأَنَّهُمْ
خُشُبٌ مُسَنَّدَةٌ يَحْسَبُونَ كُلَّ صَيْحَةٍ

اللَّهُ أَنَّى يُؤْفَكُونَ ۝
وَإِذَا قِيلَ لَهُمْ تَعَالَوْا يَسْتَغْفِرْ لَكُمْ
رَسُولُ اللَّهِ لَوَّوْا رُءُوسَهُمْ وَرَأَيْتَهُمْ
يَصُدُّونَ وَهُمْ مُسْتَكْبِرُونَ ۝
سَوَاءٌ عَلَيْهِمْ أَسْتَغْفَرْتَ لَهُمْ أَمْ لَمْ
تَسْتَغْفِرْ لَهُمْ لَنْ يَغْفِرَ اللَّهُ لَهُمْ إِنَّ
اللَّهَ لَا يَهْدِي الْقَوْمَ الْفٰسِقِينَ ۝
هُمُ الَّذِينَ يَقُولُونَ لَا تُنْفِقُوا عَلَىٰ
مَنْ عِنْدَ رَسُولِ اللَّهِ حَتَّىٰ يَنْفَضُّوا وَ
لِلَّهِ خَزَائِنُ السَّمٰوٰتِ وَالْأَرْضِ وَلٰكِنَّ
الْمُنٰفِقِينَ لَا يَفْقَهُونَ ۝
يَقُولُونَ لَئِنْ رَجَعْنَا إِلَى الْمَدِينَةِ
لَيُخْرِجَنَّ الْأَعَزُّ مِنْهَا الْأَذَلَّ وَ
لِلَّهِ الْعِزَّةُ وَلِرَسُولِهِ وَلِلْمُؤْمِنِينَ
وَلٰكِنَّ الْمُنٰفِقِينَ لَا يَعْلَمُونَ ۝

2507 By the cry is here meant the hostile incursion of the enemy by which the tribes are surprised (TA-LL). Whenever there was an incursion of the enemy they showed cowardice and thought that the Muslims would be crushed by their adversaries.

2508 So late as this revelation, the hypocrites considered themselves, in conjunction with their unbelieving friends, to be the stronger party and the Muslims to be the weaker party, whom they could easily drive out of Medina. But they are told that they themselves shall be disgraced, and so it was, for when the hypocrites were expelled from the mosque, each one's name was called out aloud; ultimately their opposition came to naught. See 1090.

SECTION 2

An Exhortation

Ar. nor.

9 O you who believe! let not your wealth, or your children, divert you from the remembrance of Allah; and whoever does that, these are the losers.

10 And spend out of what We have given you before death comes to one of you, so that he should say: My lord! why didst Thou not respite me to a near term, so that I should have given alms and been of the doers of good deeds?

11 And Allah does not respite a soul when its appointed term has come, and Allah is Aware of what you do.

CHAPTER LXIV

THE MANIFESTATION OF DEFECTS

(At-Taghâbun)

REVEALED AT MEDINA

(2 sections and 18 verses)

Abstract:

Sec. 1. Unbelievers warned.
Sec. 2. An exhortation for believers.

General remarks.

As the previous chapters speak of believers and unbelievers separately, we now arrive at a chapter which speaks of them together, wherein the latter are warned of the consequences of their deeds, and the former are exhorted to continue their march towards spiritual excellence, not permitting worldly attractions to interfere in the necessary attainment of perfection. The reference to both unbelievers and believers is contained in the second verse. The chapter is appropriately entitled The Manifestation of Defects, because, not only will unbelievers find their defects manifested on a certain day, but believers will also find such defects manifested if they have failed in their conduct and have abandoned those principles which have been promulgated for their guidance, allowing worldly attractions to distract their minds from the attainment of religious and moral perfection.

The first section, after referring to Allah as being the Creator of both believers and unbelievers, and to His great knowledge, warns the unbelievers of their fate and of the consequences on a certain day of gathering, the reference being clearly prophetic of the first great gathering of the believers and the unbelievers in the field of Badr, as well as of the day of resurrection. The second section exhorts the Muslims to be obedient to the Apostle, and not to be led into a wrong course by the worldly allurements of wealth and families.

There is a difference of opinion as to whether this chapter is of Meccan or Medinian origin; the majority incline to the latter opinion. Internal evidence shows it to be an early Medinian revelation; so early indeed does its date appear to be that the battle of Badr is still prophetically referred to; the later growth of hypocrisy is, however, only remotely hinted at, in the exhortation against being led away by attractions of wealth and family. It is due to its early revelation at Medina that some have spoken of it as a Meccan revelation. But the weight of opinion is in favour of its Medinian origin.

SECTION 1

Unbelievers warned

1-4. Allah has created believers and unbelievers, and He knows what they do. 5-7. Unbelievers reminded of the fate of opponents of apostles. 8-10. They are warned of a day of gathering which will bring to light their defects.

In the name of Allah, the Beneficent, the Merciful.

1 Whatever is in the heavens and whatever is in the earth declares the glory of Allah; to Him belongs the kingdom, and to Him is due (all) praise, and He has power over all things.

2 He it is who created you, but one of you is an unbeliever and another of you is a believer; and Allah sees what you do.

Ar. from among. Ar. from among.

3 He created the heavens and the earth with truth, and He formed you, then made goodly your forms, and to Him is the ultimate resort.

4 He knows what is in the heavens and the earth, and He knows what you hide and what you manifest; and Allah is Cognizant of what is in the hearts.

Ar. breasts.

5 Has there not come to you the story of those who disbelieved before, then tasted the evil result of their affair, and they had a painful chastisement?

6 That is because there came to them their apostles with clear arguments, but they said: Shall mortals guide us? So they disbelieved and turned back, and Allah does not stand in need (of anything), and Allah is Self-sufficient, Praised.

7 Those who disbelieve think that they shall never be raised. Say: Aye! by my Lord! you shall most certainly be raised, then you shall most certainly be informed of what you did; and that is easy to Allah.

8 Therefore believe in Allah and His Apostle and the Light

2509 The day of resurrection is here called the day of the manifestation of defects, because the hidden defects of man's nature will on that day be completely manifested. But the unbelievers had also their defects manifested in this life, when on the day of gathering (i.e. at Badr) they found to their amazement that their power was so weak that they could not subdue even a third of their number. Hence the manifestation of their defects began in this life.

2510 Note that he who acts righteously will have his evil removed, because a change comes over his life. There is no doubt that when a complete transformation takes place in the life of a man, the consequences of the evil which he might have previously wrought are immediately arrested.

to you ;[2511] therefore beware of them ; and if you pardon and forbear and forgive, then surely Allah is Forgiving, Merciful.

15 Your possessions and your children are only a trial, and Allah it is with Whom is a great reward.

2511 Because it is most often for the sake of one's wife and children that one acts wrongfully towards others. Thus, in some cases the wife or the children become an enemy to man. Note the use of the word min, which shows that wives and children do not necessarily lead man to evil, but that sometimes he inclines to evil on account of them. The next verse speaks of one's possessions and children as a fitnah, or trial, because through these the light of the sincere is manifested or the weakness of the frail becomes clear as the noonday sun.

CHAPTER LXV

THE DIVORCE

(Aṭ-ṭalāq)

REVEALED AT MEDINA

(2 sections and 12 verses)

SECTION 1

Directions for Divorce

In the name of Allah, the Beneficent, the Merciful.

1 O Prophet! when you divorce women, divorce them for their prescribed time,[2512] and calculate the number of the days prescribed, and be careful of (your duty to) Allah, your Lord. Do not drive them out of their houses, nor should they themselves go forth,

بِسْمِ اللّٰهِ الرَّحْمٰنِ الرَّحِيْمِ

يٰۤاَيُّهَا النَّبِيُّ اِذَا طَلَّقْتُمُ النِّسَآءَ
فَطَلِّقُوْهُنَّ لِعِدَّتِهِنَّ وَاَحْصُوا الْعِدَّةَ
وَاتَّقُوا اللّٰهَ رَبَّكُمْ لَا تُخْرِجُوْهُنَّ
مِنْ بُيُوْتِهِنَّ وَلَا يَخْرُجْنَ

Abstract:

Sec. 1. Directions for divorce.
Sec. 2. Mecca warned.

General remarks.

THIS chapter deals with certain rules regarding divorce in its first section, and is accordingly entitled The Divorce. The second gives an unmistakable warning to the Meccans and shows that the Prophet had brought to them light. The law of divorce had already been given to the Muslims in the second chapter, but its misuse called for additional directions (see 2512). These directions were, indeed, given to warn the Muslims against the abuse of the institutions laid down by Islam, and the subject is in consonance with what is said in the previous chapter.

The date of revelation may be assigned approximately to the sixth year of Hejira, when the incident referred to in the first verse is said to have taken place.

2512 The prescribed time is ordinarily, according to 2 : 228, three courses. But in the case of women with child, and in certain other cases, the prescribed time is laid down in v. 4 of this chapter. It should be noted how every direction in connection with the subject of divorce is followed by the injunction, be careful of your duty to Allah, throughout this chapter, from which it may be inferred that the Holy Qur-án requires the utmost carefulness in the matter of divorce. In a saying of the Holy Prophet, divorce is called unless they commit an open indecency; and these are the limits of Allah, and whoever goes beyond the limits of Allah, he indeed does injustice to his own soul. You do not know that Allah may after that bring about reunion.[2513]

Ar. thou dost.

Ar. an event.

2 So when they have reached their prescribed time, then retain them with kindness or separate them with kindness, and call to witness two men of justice from among you, and give upright testimony for Allah. With that is admonished he who believes in Allah and the latter day; and whoever is careful of (his duty to) Allah, He will make for him an outlet,

3 And give him sustenance from whence he thinks not; and whoever trusts in Allah, He is sufficient for him; surely Allah attains His purpose; Allah indeed has appointed a measure for every thing.

4 And (as for) those of your women who have despaired of menstruation, if you have a doubt, their prescribed time shall be three months, and of those too who have not had their courses; and (as for) the pregnant women, their prescribed time is that they lay down their burden; and whoever is careful of (his duty to) Allah, He will make easy for him his affair.

5 That is the command of Allah which He has revealed to you, and whoever is careful of (his duty to) Allah, He will remove from him his evil and give him a big reward.

It is reported that the directions contained in this chapter were needed to correct a mistake made in connection with the law of divorce by Ibn-i-'Umar (Bkh).

2514 Note the directions for the treatment of women contained in this verse as well as the previous one. They should be lodged where a man himself is lodged, no injury is to be inflicted on them, and if a man possesses abundant wealth he must spend on his wife abundantly. All these directions give the wife a position of practical equality with the husband.

2515 Note how directions for the believers are combined with a warning for the opponents.

2516 The statement made here that there are "seven heavens and of the earth the like of them" throws light upon what is meant by heavens where the number seven is mentioned. The seven heavens are elsewhere called the seven ways, and the seven earths may therefore be the seven major planets of the solar system (the earth itself being the eighth), their orbits being spoken of as the seven heavens or seven ways. It should, however, be borne in mind that the heavens are often referred to without a limitation of number, and include the whole of the starry creation. Another point worth noting is that the mention of seven heavens does not preclude the existence of more. For the application of the word seven and for further discussion, see 47.

The descending of the decree among these is interpreted by Mjd as meaning the existence of life and death in them (Rz), and thus the Qur-án supports the theory that there is life in other planets.

CHAPTER LXVI

THE PROHIBITION

(At-Taḥrím)

REVEALED AT MEDINA

(2 sections and 12 verses)

Abstract:

Sec. 1. Prophet's domestic relations.
Sec. 2. Progress to be made by the faithful.

General remarks.

THIS chapter is called The Prohibition, the title being taken from the statement made in the first verse that the Prophet (and those who follow him) should not forbid themselves what Allah has made lawful. The statement has been made the basis of an attack on the character of the Holy Prophet by all Christian writers, and although Sale was compelled to call Dr. Prideaux's version of the story a strange misrepresentation, even he could not avoid the temptation of giving currency to a story which sullied the character of one whose religion has been feared as the greatest antagonist of Christianity. Apart from all other considerations, the sole consideration of the arrangement of chapters is sufficient to show that the story which is made the basis of an attack upon the Holy Prophet, whatever its credentials, is not referred to in this passage of the Holy Qur-án. It is a fact that the story of the Christian critics, though referred to by some commentators, is not credited by trustworthy collections of reports such as Bukharee and Muslim. The incident reported by Bkh, on the other hand, affords clear and conclusive testimony of the falsehood of the story of the Christian writers, for under this verse he mentions two incidents, the more important and more well known of which is the story relating to the Holy Prophet's temporary separation (for one month) from his wives: it was "forbidding oneself of what Allah had made lawful." And, as the last chapter deals with divorce, it is quite natural that it should be followed by one referring to temporary separation. The story of this temporary separation is a well-known historical incident in the Holy Prophet's life, and as it clearly explains the statement made in the Qur-án, there is no reason why we should not consider the reference to relate to this incident.

The first section of this chapter thus speaks of the relations of the Holy Prophet with his wives, while the second speaks of the progress to be made by his faithful followers. The connection between these two sections may not be clear to a superficial reader, and hence a word may be said on the point. The word zauj, which means a wife or a husband, also signifies an associate or a comrade (A-LL), and the spiritual relation between the Prophet and a true follower of his is often metaphorically compared to the relation subsisting between husband and wife. It should also be noted that unbelievers and believers are in the concluding verses of the section compared to women, the wives of Noah and Lot on the one hand, and the wife of Pharaoh and Mary the mother of Jesus on the other.

The date of the revelation of this chapter may be placed about the year 7 A.H., which is the probable date of the separation.

2517 This verse, as already noted, has been utilized to attack the admitted purity of the Holy Prophet's life. It is said to contain a reference to the Prophet's conjugal relations with Mary, the Coptic woman, which, it is alleged, being discovered by his wife Hafsa, the Prophet swore not to have anything more to do with her. And this is claimed to be a case of "gratifying an unholy passion."

How far this story is worthy of credit may be gathered from the fact that this Mary did enjoy the honour of standing in the same relation to the Prophet as his other wives, and that she gave birth to Ibrahim, a son of the Holy Prophet who died in infancy. Why then should the Prophet's conjugal relations with her be regarded with a suspicious eye, and why should the holy relations of husband and wife, on which is based the very existence of human life, be called a gratification of "unholy passions"? Is this not another of the many proofs of Christian bias, and Christian antagonism, of a most cruel and unscrupulous character? Mary was not an Arab lady, and therefore socially her status may not have been the same as that of the other wives, but so far as her relation with the Holy Prophet was concerned, there was nothing in it of a clandestine nature, and as a son's mother (Ar. umm-i-walad) she is ranked equally with the Holy Prophet's wives, for it is a fact that the Prophet never kept a slave. The case of Safiyya illustrates this. She was a prisoner of war and might have been treated as a slave, but from the first she enjoyed the honour of being a wife, and no distinct or separate treatment was ever accorded to her. Nor does it appear that Mary was ever treated otherwise than as a son's mother. The story therefore that Hafsa's discovery of the Prophet having conjugal relations with her upset the Prophet to such a degree that he swore not to have anything more to do with her is a pure invention, and the known facts not only nullify the calumny, but brand it as another of those fables invented by Christian writers who seek to vilify Islam.

The commentators' version is that the Holy Prophet had gone in to Mary when he ought to have been in Hafsa's house, but even such commentators as IJ have held that the reference may as well be to the Prophet's forbidding himself the company of his wives for a month, or to his having forbidden himself the use of honey in deference to the wishes of one of his wives; other commentators are also of the opinion that the reference may be to one of these latter incidents. Sale could have discovered this even in Bḍ, if no other commentary was accessible to him. But strange indeed are the ways of the Christian

2 Allah indeed has sanctioned for you the expiation of your oaths; and Allah is your Protector, and He is the Knowing, the Wise.[2518]

قَدْ فَرَضَ اللّٰهُ لَكُمْ تَحِلَّةَ اَيْمَانِكُمْ ۚ وَاللّٰهُ

critics. One of these calls the latter incident a "ludicrous story," while Noeldeke says that it was probably invented by 'Ayesha, the reason given being that she was chiefly concerned in this quarrel. Strange to say, the reason given is just the opposite of what is held by Noeldeke himself to be true. It was Ḥafṣa that was chiefly concerned in the quarrel, if the story credited by Sale, Muir, and others is to be taken as correct. Again, we do not see what blame rested on either Hafsa or 'Ayesha, if that story is correct, whereas the incident of the honey casts the blame upon both of them. Why should 'Ayesha herself have invented a story which cast a blame (slight though it be) on her? while according to the story of the Christian critics she was blameless. Not only had she no motive in inventing the story, but she should have been the first person to repudiate the incident of the honey if it were false. In fact, it is a proof of the great trustworthiness of the reports relating to the Holy Prophet that 'Ayesha herself is found circulating a report which cast blame on her. It shows how scrupulous, how conscientious, and how true were the companions in reporting sayings and incidents relating to the life of the Holy Prophet. For the incident is thus narrated by 'Ayesha: "The Holy Prophet, may peace and the blessings of Allah be upon him, used to take honey at Zainab's house, and Ḥafṣa and I agreed to tell the Holy Prophet that he smelled as if he had taken Maghâfîr," which being done, the Holy Prophet, accepting their word, solemnly promised that he would eat honey no more. Now this story could not be invented, for the reporter is 'Ayesha, and the report contains some evidence against herself, while what Christian prejudice takes to be the true incident does not cast the least aspersion upon 'Ayesha.

I, however, consider that the reference is to the well-known temporary separation, regarding which the Holy Prophet made a vow, and which is actually spoken of as being referred to in these verses by no less an authority than 'Umar. Bukharee relates the following report of I'Ab in his commentary on this chapter. I'Ab, according to that report, was long doubtful as to the two women spoken of in this chapter, and finding himself alone with 'Umar on a certain day, questioned him thereupon. I'Ab tells us that before he had finished the question 'Umar told him that these were 'Ayesha and Ḥafṣa, and then went on to tell him a long story. 'Umar told I'Ab that they did not customarily give the women any status in the days of ignorance, until Allah revealed concerning them what He revealed in the Holy Qur-án. "One day," said Umar, "my wife said to me that I should take such and such a course in such and such an affair." "It is no concern of yours," was the curt reply. "Why! your daughter [Ḥafṣa] returns the Prophet answer for answer until he becomes displeased, and yet you do not like that I should speak to you in an affair," was the rejoinder. 'Umar at once repaired to Ḥafṣa, and warned her against altercations with the Prophet. "'Ayesha should not mislead you in this matter," was the father's counsel to the daughter. Then he went to Umm-i-Salma, who was equally curt, and told 'Umar that he had no business to interfere in matters between the Holy Prophet and his wives. Soon afterwards the Prophet separated himself temporarily from all of his wives, swearing not to go to the house of any one of them for a month. Whereupon news of this being brought to 'Umar, he immediately went to the Holy Prophet and related what had passed between Ḥafṣa, Umm-i-Salma, and himself, at which the Holy Prophet heartily laughed.

This incident shows clearly that 'Umar understood this verse to refer to this temporary separation, and the incident being a very well known one, of which the truth cannot be doubted, seems to be the real incident referred to in v. 1. Whether it is the incident of the honey or that of the temporary separation, the verse shows the loving and affectionate treatment of his wives by the Holy Prophet; for he was always ready to subject himself to any privation rather than give offence to his wives. This noble treatment made his domestic life the happiest that could be desired. 2518, see next page.

3 And when the Prophet secretly communicated a piece of information to one of his wives—but when she informed (others) of it, and Allah made him to know it, he made known part of it and avoided part: so when he informed her of it, she
Ar. thee. said: Who informed you of this? He said: The Knowing, the one Aware, informed me.[2519]

4 If you both turn to Allah, then indeed your hearts are already inclined (to this); and if you back up each other against him, then surely Allah it is who is his Guardian, and Gabriel and the believers that do good, and the angels after that are the aiders.

5 Maybe, his Lord, if he divorce you,[2520] will give him in your place wives better than you, submissive, faithful, obedient, penitent, adorers, fasters, widows, and virgins.

2518 Dr. Prideaux translates the words قد فرض الله لكم تحلة ايمانكم occurring here as meaning "God hath granted unto you to lie with your maid-servants." If the Doctor did not do this intentionally he was utterly ignorant of the Arabic language, and for such a man to pose as an Arabic scholar, misleading an ignorant public, is, to say the least, shameful.

The expiation of oaths is allowed in 5: 89, which was revealed much earlier than this chapter, and accordingly, it is a distortion of facts to represent this verse as having been revealed to legalize the conjugal relations of the Holy Prophet with the Coptic woman Mary.

2519 There is no trustworthy report showing to what particular incident reference is here made. But really what we stand in need of learning from it is not the actual incident, but the noble moral lesson which it affords. The Prophet's kind treatment of his wives was proverbial, and there is a report extant which attributes to him the following noble words: "The best of you is he who is most kind to his wife, and I am kindest of you all to my wives." In fact, it is difficult to gauge how great was the kindness to woman with which his heart was filled, for from a position of no status at all he raised her to one of practical equality with her "lord and master."

2520 The Holy Prophet, however, did not divorce any of his wives, which shows that all those qualifications were met with in them. He had been given a choice to divorce any of his wives whom he did not desire and to marry another in her place, but when the wives refused to leave him, notwithstanding the extreme austerity of his home life, he refused to divorce them; see 2002.

2521 This shows that, according to the Holy Qur-án, paradise is not only a place to enjoy the blessings and reap the rewards of one's previous good deeds, but it is also the starting-point of a never-ceasing spiritual advancement. The prayer for the perfection of the light is really an unceasing desire for perfection, showing that spiritual progress in that life will be endless. Every stage of excellence to which man shall attain shall seem to be imperfect when compared with the next stage of progress to which man shall aspire. Thus the Holy Qur-án teaches the principle that the development of man's faculties, as it takes place in this life, however unlimited, is not sealed by finality, but is really the starting-point towards an immeasurably wider vista of the realms to be traversed, opening out after death when the soul is liberated from the limitations of its casement of clay, assuming another body, which will be in accord with the deeds performed here below. Hence it is also that those who have wasted their opportunity in this life shall, under the inevitable law which makes every man taste of what he has done, be subjected to a course of treatment for the spiritual diseases which they have brought about with their own hands, and when the effect of the poison which vitiated their system has been nullified and they are fit to start on the onward journey to the great goal, they shall no more be in hell. This is the reason why, according to the Holy Qur-án, no man shall be expelled from paradise, but (as stated very clearly in sayings of the Holy Prophet) all men shall after a time be taken out of hell, for it is only meant to clear a man of the dross which is a hindrance in his spiritual progress, and when that object has been effected its need vanishes.

10 Allah sets forth an example to those who disbelieve the wife of Noah and the wife of Lot: they were both under two of Our righteous servants, but they acted treacherously towards them, so they availed them naught against Allah, and it was said: Enter both the fire with those who enter.[2523]

كَانَتْ مِنَ الْقٰنِتِيْنَ ۝

2522 The verb translated strive hard is jâhid, from which is derived the word jihád, and the context shows that the carrying on of a war is not meant by striving hard, for war was never proclaimed against the hypocrites, who in fact were, for all practical purposes, treated as Muslims. Therefore, when the Prophet is commanded to carry on a jihád against the unbelievers and the hypocrites, it is clear that jihád is something else than mere fighting.

2523 This is an instance of the followers of prophets going against the principles of their teachers; therefore, those prophets will not be able to save them.

2524 This is an example of good men who are not yet made free from the bondage of sin, for which Pharaoh stands here as a typical example; but they ardently desire to be rid of sin, striving hard to free themselves from all trammels.

2525 The example of the righteous given in this parable illustrates how Divine inspiration is granted to the perfect ones. The words "We breathed into him of Our inspiration" are remarkable. Evidently the word him (Ar. hi in fîhi) cannot refer to Mary, and therefore the Christian theory which seeks to draw from these words the conclusion that the soul of God was breathed into Mary falls to the ground. The personal pronoun is taken by some commentators to refer to Jesus (Rz); and thus the meaning is that Mary gave birth to a son who received Divine inspiration. But the reference in the personal pronoun him might as well be to the believer for whom Mary is set as an example, and the object of the change might be to draw attention to the fact that it is really the granting of inspiration to the believer that is meant here and not the breathing of a soul.

CHAPTER LXVII

THE KINGDOM

(Al-Mulk)

REVEALED AT MECCA

(2 sections and 30 verses)

Abstract:

Sec. 1. The kingdom of God.
Sec. 2. The unbelievers' doom.

General remarks.

FROM this point to the end there are forty-eight chapters, and all these were revealed at Mecca, with the single exception of ch. 110, which belongs to the Medinian period of revelation, though it too was revealed at Mecca when the Holy Prophet was there in his last pilgrimage. All of them contain prophecies of the greatness to which Islam should rise and of the failure of its opponents, sometimes in plain and sometimes in metaphorical language. But while they mostly belong to the earliest period of the Holy Prophet's revelation, the prophecies contained in them very often relate to the distant future of Islam, and are certainly not limited to the prevalence of Islam in Arabia or to the lifetime of the Prophet. While the distinct character of each chapter will be dealt with in the usual introductory note, these few words will suffice as to their general character and their relation towards each other.

The title of this chapter is taken from the statement contained in the first verse, that kingdom is in the hands of Allah, the evident conclusion of which is, that that kingdom which was known as the kingdom of God in prophetical language was now about to be established on earth. Attention is then called to the perfect working of Divine laws in physical nature, and from this the inference is drawn that evil must bear evil consequences, while good yields good fruit. The second section speaks of the doom that awaits the unbelievers because of their ungratefulness to the Divine Being, inasmuch as they would not use those very faculties with which Allah has endowed them to distinguish truth from falsehood, and that which is conducive to their good from that which is calculated to bring ultimate ruin.

SECTION 1

The Kingdom of God

1, 2. Kingdom and life are Allah's. 3–5. Uniformity of Divine laws. 6–14. Evil and good requited.

2526 The short Meccan chapters, which are no doubt generally among the earliest revelations of the Holy Prophet, often speak most forcibly of the greatness and glory of Allah. The statement here that the kingdom is Allah's and that He has power over all things is like a prophetical statement as to the establishment of the kingdom of Islam, which was really the kingdom of God. Compare the words in the sayings of Jesus Christ: "The kingdom of God shall be taken from you, and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof" (Matt. 21 : 43).

2527 The law of life and death or growth and decay works throughout nature, but it has a special meaning in reference to man, because death does not end his life, but is really the starting-point for a new life of spiritual progress. Life to him below is, therefore, a trial, i.e. a means of bringing to light his hidden qualifications for the performance of good. But life and death have another and a deeper significance for man in the life and death of nations, and it is of this life and death of the nations that the Holy Qur-án speaks more frequently. Nations that work evil are swept away, and others are raised in their place that they may do good. They live only so long as they do more good than harm to humanity; but when they begin to devote their lives to luxury and to indulge in evil, decay overtakes them. Compare the form adopted here with that in 7 : 129, where the Jews are addressed: "It may be that your Lord will destroy your enemy and make you rulers in the land, then He will see how you act"; and that in 10 : 14, where the Muslims are addressed: "Then We made you (their) successors in the land after them, so that We may see how you act."

2528 My translation of ṭibáqá differs from the ordinary translations, and is based on the saying mentioned by LL on the authority of IA'r and others under the word ṭabq as follows: هذا الشئ طبق هذا او طباقه i.e. this thing is the match of this, or conforms or corresponds with this, or is the like of this. This significance, moreover, suits the context, for the verse goes on to describe the uniformity prevailing in nature.

2529 Attention is here called to the regularity and uniformity of the laws working in nature; neither is there incongruity, so that things belonging to the same class should be subject to different laws, nor is there a disorder (fuṭúr, which Rgh translates as meaning ikhtilál, i.e. disorder and laxity), so that a law should not work uniformly. The verse, while no doubt calling attention to the existence of a Supreme Being as witnessed in the regularity and uniformity of the laws working in creation, draws special attention to the spiritual laws, which should also work uniformly, and thus evil and good must each bring its special reward.

2530 The lights with which the lower heaven is lighted, i.e. the stars, are made the means of conjectures regarding the future by the astrologers. This is the plain meaning of the words. Rujúm is the plural of rajm, and explaining it IAs says: "Rajm means conjectures about what Allah has not stated." And classing the munajjim, i.e. the astrologer, and the káhin, i.e. the diviner, and the sáḥir, i.e. the magician, as one, he goes on to say: "Thus he [i.e. the Prophet, whose saying is explained] considered the astrologer, who learns about stars so that he may judge thereby, and attributes to them the effect of good and evil, to be an unbeliever." And Rgh, explaining these very words, says: "And rajm is used metaphorically to signify conjectures and surmises." LL also gives this significance of the verse on the authority of Bḍ and TA: "We have made them to be means of conjectures to the devils of mankind, i.e. to the astrologers." Thus the astrologers, who deceived people by telling them many things which they posed as having learned from the stars, are referred to here. They are told that they shall have the punishment of burning for these false conjectures.

11 So they shall own their faults, so far be the inmates of the burning fire (from good).

2532 The withholding of the birds signifies the delay of the conquests of Islam, for the birds are spoken of as following a victorious army (see 1387). The question in the next verse as to who shall assist them corroborates this significance.

2533 This is also a prophecy. Their sustenance was withheld in the great famine which prevailed at Mecca, prophecies regarding which abound in the Holy Qur-án in early as well as later revelation. See 2269.

2534 One going "prone upon his face" is one who stumbles and falls at every step, not being guided by truth.

2535 The meaning is that the guilty will by all means be called to account and suffer the evil consequences of what they have done, whether the Prophet and his companions live or die, but the uncertainty as to the reward of the righteous is at once removed by the words rather He will have mercy on us. For au, meaning rather, see LL, which quotes Mgh.

CHAPTER LXVIII

THE PEN

(Al-Qalam)

REVEALED AT MECCA

(2 sections and 52 verses)

Abstract:

Sec. 1. Not a madman's message.
Sec. 2. A reminder for the nations.

General remarks.

WHEN the Holy Prophet delivered his message, the unbelievers first called him a madman, and this chapter is taken up with a consideration of this allegation. The inkstand and the pen and what they write are called to bear witness to the fact that the utterances of the Prophet are not those of a madman; it is from this circumstance that the chapter receives its title. How these things bear witness to the Prophet's truth is shown in 2536. The first section closes with a parable clearly foretelling that all the struggles of the Meccans against the Holy Prophet will be a complete failure, and that they will in the end regret what they do. The second section lays stress on the knowledge of the future which was revealed through the Holy Qur-án, and the Holy Prophet is told that he should wait patiently for the successful issue of his affair, the example of Jonah being quoted to show how trials and sufferings sometimes make the issue doubtful, notwithstanding its certainty, and the chapter concludes with the statement that not only is the Prophet not a madman, but his message, being a reminder for all the nations, will ultimately raise the whole of humanity to eminence. It should be noted that the message of the Holy Qur-án is declared to be meant for all nations in this chapter, which is admittedly one of the earliest revelations.

Date of revelation.

As regards the time of revelation, learned opinion is admittedly in favour of a very early date, so much so that it is generally considered to be the second chapter in the order of revelation. But as the 74th chapter is shown by trustworthy reports to have been the second revelation, we can place it only after that chapter. Muir and those who follow him consider it to have been revealed towards the close of the early Meccan period, but that is surely a mistake. There is no doubt that the first allegation of the unbelievers against the Holy Prophet was that he was a madman, and it is with this allegation, and this only, that the chapter deals, the reference in the second verse and the last but one being conclusive on this point. This consideration shows it to be clearly one of the earliest revelations.

SECTION 1

Not a Madman's Message

1–7. Prophet's high morals and their evidence. 8–16. Proud ones shall be brought low. 17–33. A parable showing that opposition will not prosper.

In the name of Allah, the Beneficent, the Merciful.

بِسْمِ اللّٰهِ الرَّحْمٰنِ الرَّحِيْمِ

1 (Consider) the inkstand[2536] and the pen and what they write,

نٓ وَالْقَلَمِ وَمَا يَسْطُرُوْنَ ۝

2 By the grace of your Lord you are not mad.[2537]

مَآ اَنْتَ بِنِعْمَةِ رَبِّكَ بِمَجْنُوْنٍ ۝

Ar. thy. Ar. thou art.

2536 Nún is not an abbreviation, but a word meaning inkstand. Az objects to this in the TA, on the ground that when meaning an inkstand nún is written as a word and not as a letter; but the Qur-án makes a departure from the ordinary method of writing in several places and preserves the form of writing met with in the first manuscript, from which all copies were made. Moreover, there is the authority of the earliest commentators that the letter nún here stands for the word nún, for both Hasan and Qatada regard it as meaning inkstand, while I'Ab considers the meaning to be fish; the context, which mentions the pen and writing, clearly favouring the former interpretation (JB).

Rodwell's note here, that "the meaning of this and the similar symbols throughout the Qur-án was unknown to the Muhammadans themselves even in the first century," shows a lamentable ignorance on the part of a translator of the Holy Qur-án. The abbreviations in the beginning of chapters are in many cases explained by the companions of the Holy Prophet, Ibn-i-'Abbás being the chief authority. Qatada, who was a disciple of I'Ab, decidedly lived in the first century, and he handed down to posterity most of the interpretations of the Holy Qur-án by I'Ab.

2537 The first allegation of the unbelieving Meccans against the Holy Prophet was that he was majnún, i.e. mad, and this allegation is dealt with in this chapter, and the first answer to it is contained in the first two verses. By mentioning the inkstand and the pen and what they write, attention is really called to the fact that his prophecies about his own future and the fate of the Meccans, which were already put down in writing, would prove that the Prophet was not mad, for the ravings of a madman could not bear fruit. It should be noted that the Holy Qur-án again and again challenges its opponents to write down their prophecies about the Holy Prophet, thus showing that its own were actually written down from the first; and thus this chapter, which is one of the earliest, conclusively establishes the truth that every revelation of the Holy Qur-án was put down in writing as soon as it was communicated to the Holy Prophet. For the assertion made here see v. 47, and 52:41, "Or have they the knowledge of the unseen so that they write it down?" Hence the inkstand and the pen and what they write stands for the prophecies which are mentioned as regards the Holy Prophet in v. 3 and as regards the opponents in vv. 17–33, while they are called upon to write down the prophecies of their own diviners.

But the words have a wider significance, indicating that the Qur-án will always continue to occupy a unique position among all the books which are ever written, and thus there will always be a conclusive proof that the Prophet to whom it was revealed was not a madman. The unique position of the Holy Qur-án among all the books of the world consists in its completeness and exhaustive dealing with all the truths about religion, so that every religious truth is found within its covers, and every false doctrine is condemned therein. See 1785.

Ar. thou shalt.	3 And most surely you shall have a reward never to be cut off.[2538]	وَإِنَّ لَكَ لَأَجْرًا غَيْرَ مَمْنُونٍ ۝
Ar. thou dost.	4 And most surely you conform (yourself) to sublime morality.[2539]	وَإِنَّكَ لَعَلَىٰ خُلُقٍ عَظِيمٍ ۝
Ar. thou shalt.	5 So you shall see, and they (too) shall see,	فَسَتُبْصِرُ وَيُبْصِرُونَ ۝
	6 Which of you is afflicted with madness.	بِأَييِّكُمُ الْمَفْتُونُ ۝
Ar. thy.	7 Surely your Lord best knows him who errs from His way, and He best knows the followers of the right course.	إِنَّ رَبَّكَ هُوَ أَعْلَمُ بِمَن ضَلَّ عَن سَبِيلِهِ وَهُوَ أَعْلَمُ بِالْمُهْتَدِينَ ۝
	8 So do not yield to the rejecters.	فَلَا تُطِعِ الْمُكَذِّبِينَ ۝
Ar. thou shouldst.	9 They wish that you should be pliant so they (too) would be pliant.[2540]	وَدُّوا لَوْ تُدْهِنُ فَيُدْهِنُونَ ۝

2538 As proof of the assertion contained in the previous verse, the Prophet is told that his exertions shall be followed by a reward which shall never be cut off, i.e. he shall be successful in establishing a religion which shall never cease to exist, whereas a madman's actions do not bear any fruit even in his lifetime. Thus there is not only a clear prophecy here of the final triumph of the Prophet over his enemies, but there is also a prophecy that what is stated in the Qur-án rests on such a firm foundation that it shall never prove untrue.

2539 The Prophet's conforming to the sublimest morality is a further proof that he cannot be a madman. This was not only an assertion, but the Holy Prophet had already won from them the recognition of his sublime morality, inasmuch as he had won the title of Al-amín, a title which not only was never given by the Arabs to anybody, but one which has never been conferred by any nation as a whole upon an individual in the history of the world. The Arabs, on account of their haughty spirit and tribal and family feuds, were perhaps the last nation that would have thus recognized the high qualities of a man who was neither a king, nor the chief of a tribe, nor a great warrior, nor a famous poet; so that flattery would have been the motive of the people in according him an unparalleled honour. Al-amín signifies the one who may be trusted (LL), and by giving the Prophet that title the people expressed their high appreciation of his sublime morality, as if he were the one, and only one, as indicated by prefixing al, who could be trusted in all matters. His moral greatness was thus testified to by 'Ayesha, than whom none was more intimate with the Holy Prophet : كان خلقه القرآن or his morals are the Qur-án, meaning that all pictures of sublime morality depicted by the Holy Qur-án afford really a glimpse of the moral greatness of the Prophet. The Holy Qur-án plainly calls him an exemplar (33 : 21). The one thing which places him high above all other prophets and great men is that his moral sublimity found an expression in every phase of life, whereas the life of every other prophet affords an instance of moral greatness only in one or more particular aspects of life.

2540 The first desire of the Quraish was no doubt, owing to their great respect for the Holy Prophet, that he should not condemn their evil deeds in strong language, and thus they too would not be severe in opposition to him. This circumstance also shows this chapter to be one of the earliest revelations, for in later years the opposition of the Quraish became very severe.

2541 The person alluded to is Walid bin Mughira (JB), or Abu Jahl, or Aswad bin 'Abd-i-Yaghus, or Akhnas bin Shuraiq (Rz). In fact, the description applies to all the leaders of opposition to the Holy Prophet, as the words of v. 8, "so do not yield to the rejecters," show.

2542 Branding on the nose is equivalent to bringing a man to disgrace which shall stick to him (Rgh). Khurṭûm signifies really "the proboscis of an elephant (Rgh), or the nose of a beast of prey (TA), or a large or an elevated nose (MA)" (LL), and the word is here applied to the nose of a man to indicate its ugliness (Rgh). The anaf, or nose, being the most prominent part of the face, is looked upon as standing for al-ḥamiyyat (Rz), i.e. disdain. Hence also anfat-un signifies disdain (LL). Those who apply this description to Walid bin Mughira in particular take the branding of the nose literally, a prophecy fulfilled in the battle of Badr, where Walid received a wound on his nose, the mark of which remained till his death (Bd, Rz). Bd also adds : And it is said to express that He will bring him to the utmost disgrace.

2543 This is a parable which sets forth the ultimate fate of the Quraish, viz. that they shall not reap the advantage of what they sow. Stated as it is in unmistakable terms, it is one of the earliest prophecies, when opposition to the Holy Prophet had not yet assumed that severity which characterized it during his latter days at Mecca.

25 And in the morning they went, having the power to prevent.

26 But when they saw it, they said: Most surely we have gone astray:

27 Nay! we are made to suffer privation.

28 The best of them said: Did I not say to you, Why do you not glorify (Allah)?

29 They said: Glory be to our Lord, surely we were unjust.

30 Then some of them advanced against others, blaming each other.

31 Said they: O woe to us! surely we were inordinate:

32 Maybe, our Lord will give us instead one better than it; surely to our Lord do we make our humble petition.[2544]

33 Such is the chastisement, and certainly the chastisement of the hereafter is greater, did they but know![2545]

2544 It shows that while the Qur-án threatened the Meccans with punishment, it foretold at the same time that they would accept the truth ultimately. What is foretold here happened about twenty years afterwards in the conquest of Mecca. They lost what they had so long contended for against the Holy Prophet; all their exertions came to naught and their power in the land was frustrated, but they then saw their error, came over to Islam, and were made the rulers of vast kingdoms; thus their Lord gave them instead one better, because they made their humble petition to Him.

2545 The separate mention of the chastisement of the hereafter is a clear evidence that the punishment spoken of in the previous verses, which is referred to at the commencement of this verse in the words such is the chastisement, was a punishment which was to overtake them in this life, and thus to afford a proof of the truth of the chastisement of the hereafter.

36 What has happened to you? How do you judge?
37 Or have you a book wherein you read,
38 That you have surely therein what you choose?
39 Or have you received from Us an agreement confirmed by an oath extending to the day of resurrection that you shall surely have what you judge?
40 Ask them which of them will vouch for that.
41 Or have they associates? Then let them bring their associates if they are truthful.
42 On the day when there shall be a severe affliction, and they shall be called upon to make obeisance, but they shall not be able,[2546]
43 Their looks cast down, abasement shall overtake them; and they were called upon to make obeisance indeed while yet they were safe.
44 So leave Me and him who rejects this announcement; We will overtake them by degrees, from whence they know not;

سَنَسْتَدْرِجُهُم مِّنْ حَيْثُ لَا يَعْلَمُونَ ۝

2546 The meaning of كشف عن الساق has been fully explained with reference to the lexicons in 1855. I may add here a few words from the commentaries. Bd interprets يوم يكشف عن ساق as meaning يوم يشتد الامر, i.e. on the day when there shall be a severe affliction, giving the alternative significance as يوم يكشف عن اصل الامر, i.e. when the truth of the matter shall be laid bare. Kf says: "الكشف عن الساق (lit., laying bare of the shank), and الابداء عن الخدام (lit., disclosing the anklet) is a proverb signifying the hardness of an affair and the severity of a calamity, and the origin of it is in the fright and the flight and the tucking up of their garments by women from their shanks in fleeing, and the disclosing of their anklets"; and then, quoting two verses as his authority for the statement made, he adds: "يوم يكشف عن ساق means the day on which the affair shall become hard and formidable, and there is neither any laying bare nor a shank." IAs when explaining the similar words يكشف عن ساق occurring in a saying of the Holy Prophet, almost repeats the words of Kf. Rz holds the meaning of as-sáq to be ash-shiddat, and quotes five verses, rejecting at the same time the opinion of the Mushabbihah, who take the words literally.

Commentators also differ as to whether this severity will be brought about in this life or in the life after death, Abu Muslim holding the first opinion, which Rz admits. But, as I have often stated, the severity and distress with which the unbelievers were threatened overtook them in this life, though a more complete manifestation of it will take place in the life after death.

45 And I do bear with them, surely My plan[a] is firm.[2547]

46 Or do you ask from them a reward, so that they are burdened with debt?

47 Or have they (the knowledge of) the unseen, so that they write (it) down?[2548]

48 So wait patiently for the judgment of your Lord, and be not like the companion of the fish, when he cried while he was in distress.[2549]

49 Were it not that favour from his Lord had overtaken him, he would certainly have been cast down upon the naked ground while he was blamed.

50 Then his Lord chose him, and He made him of the good.

51 And those who disbelieve would almost smite you with their eyes when they hear the reminder, and they say: Most surely he is mad.[2550]

52 And it is naught but a reminder to the nations.

2547 They are given respite, but their punishment is sure.

2548 Writing is always mentioned in connection with the knowledge of the unseen, because it is writing alone that makes the truth of a prophecy sure. Such verses are a clear proof that the Qur-án itself, containing as it did numerous prophecies, was written from the first, otherwise a challenge to the opponents in these early revelations to write down the knowledge of the future which they had through their diviners would be meaningless.

2549 The Prophet Jonah is here called the companion of the fish, because of the incident mentioned in 37 : 142.

2550 The chapter ends with exactly the same allegation on the part of the unbelievers as the one with which it opened. And the last verse, and it is naught but a reminder to the nations, thus sums up the arguments advanced against that allegation. In fact, the arguments advanced in this chapter are equally true in all ages and for all nations. Note that even so early as the revelation of this chapter the Prophet's message is declared to be meant for all people. In fact, a saying of the Holy Prophet shows it to have been the very first message delivered by him. Thus, speaking of Abu Bakr, the first convert to Islam, the Holy Prophet is reported to have said: "I said to the people, I am the apostle of Allah to you all; but you said, You lie, and Abu Bakr said, You speak the truth" (Bkh, commentary on ch. 7).

Abstract:

Sec. 1. The doom.
Sec. 2. False allegations refuted.

General remarks.

THIS chapter is clearly later in revelation than its predecessor, because it deals with the later allegations of the unbelievers that the Prophet is a poet, or a diviner, and last of all that he is an impostor (vv. 41-44), the last chapter dealing with their first allegation that the Prophet is a madman. Al-ḥâqqah or the Sure Calamity, with which the Quraish are threatened in the opening verse, and which gives its name to this chapter, is the doom of the Quraish, and the warning is followed by a reference to the fate of the earlier nations. The latter half of the first section states that the sure calamity means the time of the reward of the faithful and of the punishment of the evil-doers. The second section shows that the allegations of the opponents in which they aver that the Prophet is a poet, or a diviner, or an impostor, are all false.

2551 Al-ḥâqqah is derived from the root ḥaqq, meaning the truth, and is interpreted in several ways, in all of which the sense of the root word is present. Thus it is synonymous with ḥaqîqat, meaning truth, as in the saying لما رأى الحاقة منى هرب i.e. when he saw the truth from me, he fled (TA). It also signifies a severe calamity the happening

4 Samood and 'Ad called the

of which is fixed or established (Q-LL), or the hour which must come to pass, or the hour in which shall be حواق الامور i.e. severe calamities (Rz), or the hour in which things shall be surely known (LL), or the hour in which deeds shall be requited (Rz). According to Az, al-ḥáqqah is the hour in which the truth shall be triumphant, the reason given being that it is so called because it shall overcome every one who contends falsely in the matter of the religion of Allah.

The commentators say that by this hour the resurrection is meant, but I see no reason why, in any one of the numerous senses of the word given above, it is not also applicable to the hour of the doom of a nation which overtakes it in this life. In fact, the instances given about 'Ad, and Samood, and Pharaoh, and the Sodomites, all show that the sure calamity spoken of here as al-ḥáqqah is the sure fate which must overtake the Meccans, there being no doubt that a fuller manifestation of the truth, of the requital, of the calamity, or of the triumph of truth which comes to pass in this life shall take place hereafter, and hence the word signifies both the doom of a nation in this life and the resurrection.

2552 Al-qári'ah is derived from qar', which signifies the striking of one thing over another (Rgh); hence al-qári'ah is the striking calamity or the calamity that will strike terror into the hearts of the people (Rz), and here it signifies the calamity of which 'Ad and Samood were warned, but which they called a lie.

2553 Aṭ-ṭághiyah is derived from the root ṭaghá, meaning he exceeded the limit, and means either an excessively severe punishment (Rz's interpretation of it being an event exceeding all limits in severity), or it is here a substantive and means ṭughyán, or inordinacy. The latter is the interpretation of I'Ab and Mjd and Ibn-i-Zaid (AH).

17 And the angels shall be on the sides thereof; and above them eight shall bear on that
Ar. thy. day your Lord's power.[2555]
18 On that day you shall be exposed to view—no secret of yours shall remain hidden.[2556]

يَوْمَئِذٍ تُعْرَضُونَ لَا تَخْفَىٰ مِنْكُمْ خَافِيَةٌ

2554 The consequences of this great event are described in 56:3; see 2425 and 2426, where it is shown that the great event, alwáqi'ah, signifies the doom of the Meccans in this life, while it is true that a full manifestation of these events will take place in the life after death. The passing away of the earth and the mountains and their being crushed, signifies the fall of the small and great men in connection with that doom.

2555 As I have said so often, a full manifestation of such events on the day of resurrection does not preclude the possibility of a certain manifestation of them taking place in this life. In fact, such manifestation affords a proof of the greater manifestation hereafter, and this is a distinctive feature of the Quaranic prophecies relating to the hereafter. Thus the cleaving asunder of heaven took place in a certain sense in the battle of Badr (984), and the angels also were there helping the cause of the Muslims.

The bearing of the power on that day by eight is a point attended with some difficulty. In the first place, above them means above the angels spoken of in the previous verse (Rz). From this we may conclude that the eight bearers of the power either represent something above the angels, or particular angels above the ordinary angels. It is noteworthy that the word samániyah, or eight, is not followed by any word which shows who or what these eight are. The commentators generally suppose them to be angels, but the more cautious among them refrain from even specifying the number. Some say the meaning may be eight thousand, others say eight ranks (Kf, the latter being Dk's opinion). Kf adds: "And maybe these eight are from among the spirit or some other creation." Now the one thing that should be borne in mind in interpreting such allegorical words is that the Divine Being Himself is Al-qayyúm, or the Self-subsisting by whom all things subsist (2:255). This being taken as the basis, it is clear that other things are not a support for the Divine Being, but all created things, whether angels or any beings above angels, subsist by God. Another consideration which helps us in understanding what is meant by these bearers is a saying of the Holy Prophet, reported by all commentators, that at present such bearers are four (Rz, Kf, Bḍ). Now, are there any four attributes of the Divine Being which are specially connected with the maintenance of the world? The opening chapter of the Holy Qur-án is, as shown in the preliminary note to that chapter, the essence of the whole of the Qur-án, and that chapter speaks of four attributes of the Divine Being in connection with the maintenance of al-'álamín, i.e. the whole of the creation. These attributes are mentioned in the names Rabb, Raḥmán, Raḥím, and Málik, and a reference to the notes on these four words in the opening chapter will show that these four attributes, providence, beneficence, mercy, and requital, are really the chief attributes which bring the creation to perfection and from which all other attributes may be inferred. These four are thus the Personal attributes of the Divine Being which precede all, encompass all, make all to attain to their goal of perfection and remain after all. Hence these are the four ḥamalat-ul-'arsh, or the bearers of the power so far as this world is concerned.

How do they become eight on the day of resurrection? The other world is a complete, but at the same time a new, manifestation of the spiritual realities of this life. Hence, there is a new manifestation of the four attributes of the Divine Being by which the world subsists, and thus these four attributes become eight on the day of resurrection. To clear any misunderstanding I may add that, as Divine attributes are brought into action through the agency of angels, the four or eight attributes that are considered the bearers of the power would also be manifested through angels, and in this sense we may look upon the bearers of the power as being four or eight angels.

2556 This verse speaks clearly of the manifestation of the hidden realities on the day of resurrection to which I have referred in the above note.

2557 These fruits are the manifestation of the fruits of righteous deeds that remained hidden from the ordinary eye in this life.

2558 He would wish that death had made an end of him, it referring to death. Or the meaning may be that this state had been my death (Rz), or that the life of the world had never come to pass (Bd).

2559 It should be noted that in these verses the spiritual torture of this world is represented as a physical punishment in the next. The chain to be put upon the neck, for instance, represents the desires of this world, which keep a man with his head bent upon the earth, and it is these desires that shall assume the shape of a chain.

33 Surely he did not believe in Allah, the Great,
34 Nor did he urge the feeding of the poor.
35 Therefore he has not here to-day a true friend,
36 Nor any food except refuse,[2560]
37 Which none but the wrong-doers eat.

False Allegations refuted

38–43. The Prophet is not a poet or a soothsayer. 44–52. The Qur-án is not a fabrication.

b 2438.

38 But nay![a] I call to witness[b] that which you see,
39 And that which you do not see.
40 Most surely, it is the word of an honoured Apostle,
41 And it is not the word of a poet; little is it that you believe;
42 Nor the word of a soothsayer; little is it that you mind.
43 It is a revelation from the Lord of the worlds.

فَلَا أُقْسِمُ بِمَا تُبْصِرُونَ ۝
وَمَا لَا تُبْصِرُونَ ۝
إِنَّهُ لَقَوْلُ رَسُولٍ كَرِيمٍ ۝
وَمَا هُوَ بِقَوْلِ شَاعِرٍ ۚ قَلِيلًا مَا تُؤْمِنُونَ ۝
وَلَا بِقَوْلِ كَاهِنٍ ۚ قَلِيلًا مَا تَذَكَّرُونَ ۝
تَنْزِيلٌ مِنْ رَبِّ الْعَالَمِينَ ۝

Similarly, the entanglements of this world shall be seen as chains on the feet. The heartburnings of this world shall likewise be clearly seen as flames of burning fire. The wicked one has, in fact, in this very world within himself a hell of the passions and inextinguishable desires of this world, and feels the burning of that hell in the failures he encounters. When, therefore, he shall be cast farther off from his temporal desires and shall see an everlasting despair before him, his heartburnings and bitter sighs for his dear desires shall assume the shape of burning fire. The Holy Qur-án says: "And a barrier shall be passed between them and that which they desire" (34 : 54), and this shall be the beginning of their torture.

The thrusting into a chain of the length of seventy cubits reveals the same deep secret. The limit of age may as a general rule be fixed at seventy, and a wicked person may live up to that age in his wickedness. He may sometimes even enjoy seventy years, excluding the periods of childhood and decrepitude. These seventy years during which he could work with honesty, wisdom, and zeal are wasted away only in the entanglements of the world and in following the sensual passions. He does not try to free himself from the chain of desires, and therefore in the next world the chain of the desires which he indulged in for seventy years shall be embodied into a chain of seventy cubits length, every cubit representing a year, in which the wicked one shall be fettered.

2560 I'Ab, being questioned as to what ghislīn was, replied that he did not know (Rz). Mjd says it is a certain food of the inmates of the fire. According to Dk it is a species of trees in the fire, while Ls considers ghislīn to be any thing that is intensely hot (TA-LL). Literally it signifies what is washed off, to which the commentators add from the bodies of the unbelievers. I think refuse the best word for it.

44 And if he had fabricated against Us some of the sayings,
45 We would certainly have seized him by the right hand,
46 Then We would certainly have cut off his aorta.
47 And not one of you could have withheld Us from him.[2561]
48 And most surely it is a reminder for those who guard (against evil).
49 And most surely We know that some of you are rejecters.
50 And most surely it is a great grief to the unbelievers.[2562]
51 And most surely it is the true certainty.[2563]
52 Therefore glorify the name
Ar. thy. of your Lord, the Great.

وَلَوْ تَقَوَّلَ عَلَيْنَا بَعْضَ الْأَقَاوِيلِ ۙ
لَأَخَذْنَا مِنْهُ بِالْيَمِينِ ۙ
ثُمَّ لَقَطَعْنَا مِنْهُ الْوَتِينَ ۖ
فَمَا مِنْكُمْ مِنْ أَحَدٍ عَنْهُ حَاجِزِينَ
وَإِنَّهُ لَتَذْكِرَةٌ لِلْمُتَّقِينَ
وَإِنَّا لَنَعْلَمُ أَنَّ مِنْكُمْ مُكَذِّبِينَ
وَإِنَّهُ لَحَسْرَةٌ عَلَى الْكَافِرِينَ
وَإِنَّهُ لَحَقُّ الْيَقِينِ
فَسَبِّحْ بِاسْمِ رَبِّكَ الْعَظِيمِ ع

2561 This verse and the three preceding it show that one who fabricates Divine revelation does not prosper. Compare Deut. 18: 20, where the prophecy of the advent of a Prophet like Moses is followed by these words: "But the Prophet which shall presume to speak a word in My name, which I have not commanded him to speak, or that shall speak in the name of other gods, even that prophet shall die." Jesus' words in Matt. 7: 19: "Every tree that bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down and cast into the fire," after comparing a false prophet with a corrupt tree that does not bring forth good fruit, point to a like effect.

2562 Because the punishment of which it warns them must surely overtake them.

2563 The ḥaqq-ul-yaqīn or true certainty of this verse is not different from al-ḥāqqah of the opening verse. Note that it is the punishment of the unbelievers which is called here the true certainty.

CHAPTER LXX

THE WAYS OF ASCENT

(Al-Ma'árij)

REVEALED AT MECCA

(2 sections and 44 verses)

SECTION 1

Certainty of the Punishment

1–21. The punishment is sure but not immediate. 22–35. Ways of ascent to God.

In the name of Allah, the Beneficent, the Merciful.

بِسْمِ اللّٰهِ الرَّحْمٰنِ الرَّحِيْمِ

1 One demanding, demanded the chastisement which must befall

سَاَلَ سَآئِلٌۢ بِعَذَابٍ وَّاقِعٍ ۙ

2 The unbelievers—there is none to avert it[2564]—

لِّلْكٰفِرِيْنَ لَيْسَ لَهٗ دَافِعٌ ۙ

Abstract:

Sec. 1. Certainty of the punishment.

Sec. 2. A new nation shall be raised.

General remarks.

THE title of this chapter is taken from v. 3, where Allah is called the Lord of the Ways of Ascent. While holding out the certainty of the punishment in the clearest and most emphatic words, this chapter points out at first that great ends are achieved in a long period of time, so much so that a period, or a yaum, of fifty thousand years is mentioned, and the Holy Prophet is then told to wait patiently for the day which must overtake the opponents. Towards the close of the first section we are told what the ways or means are by which the faithful attain the nearness of the Divine Being, and the reference in v. 3 may be to these means of ascent. The second section speaks very clearly of the disgrace which the opponents shall meet with, a new nation being raised in their place.

The revelation of this chapter is considered by all authorities to be not later than the close of the early Meccan period. The allegations of the unbelieving Quraish having been dealt with in the two previous chapters, we are here told that the punishment of the opponents, although very certain, must take some time.

2564 There is no reason that one man should be particularized as demanding the threatened punishment. The prophecies of the final triumph of the Holy Prophet and of the doom of his opponents were so frequently announced in the Holy Qur-án that the question was often asked: "When will this threat come to pass if you are truthful?" (36:

3 From Allah, the Lord of the ways of Ascent.[2565]
4 To Him ascend the angels and the Spirit in a day the measure of which is fifty thousand years.[2566]
5 Therefore endure with a goodly patience.
6 Surely they think it to be far off,
7 And We see it nigh.
8 On the day when the heaven shall be as molten brass,
9 And the mountains shall be as tufts of wool;
10 And friend shall not ask of friend,
11 (Though) they shall be made to see each other. The guilty one would fain redeem himself from the chastisement of that day by his children,
12 And his wife and his brother,
13 And the nearest of his kinsfolk who gave him shelter,
14 And all those that are in the earth, (wishing) then (that) this might deliver him.
15 By no means! Surely it is a flaming fire,
16 Dragging by the head,
17 It shall claim him who retreats and turns the back,

Ar. them.

48, 67: 25, etc.). And their prayer on a similar occasion is thus referred to in 8 : 32 : "And when they said : O Allah ! if this is the truth from Thee, then rain upon us stones from heaven or inflict on us a painful chastisement."

2565 Several explanations are given of the words zil-ma'árij or Lord of the ways of ascent, but I think the reference is to the exaltation of the Prophet along with the punishment of his opponents. The Divine Being is here stated to be the Lord of the ways of ascent as indicating that, while punishing the Prophet's opponents, He will grant to his followers the means of ascent, or the means of exaltation. Compare 56 : 3, where the great event is spoken of as being abasing, exalting. The means of exaltation of the believers are pointed out further ; see vv. 22-35.

2566 A day is here spoken of as being equal to fifty thousand years. Whether that would be the period in which the final triumph of truth would be brought about in the whole world, or whether it is a cycle of 50,000 years, in the same manner as a cycle of a thousand years is mentioned in 32 : 5, it is difficult to say. It shows at any rate that the Holy Qur-án does not accept the theory of seven thousand years being the world's age. The words being followed by an injunction to the Holy Prophet, therefore endure with a goodly patience, show at any rate that the day spoken of here is a period of time with reference to this life.

2567 Note the clear prophecies that the power of the Meccans shall be brought to naught and another people (the Muslims) shall be made the rulers of the land in their stead.

2568 The picture of the final defeat of the Quraish at the conquest of Mecca could not be drawn in clearer words. Their homes are here designated as graves because they were dead spiritually.

Abstract:

Sec. 1. Noah preaches.
Sec. 2. Noah's prayer for destruction of transgressors.

General remarks.

THE threat of certain punishment contained in the last chapter is herein followed by an example. The entire chapter is devoted to the preaching of Noah, after whom it is named, and his prayer that the transgressors may be destroyed, so that evil may not prosper on earth, the two subjects being dealt with respectively in the two sections. As regards the date of revelation, the chapter may be classed with the group with which it is associated.

6 But my call has only made them flee the more :[2569]

7 And whenever I have called them that Thou mayest forgive them, they put their fingers in their ears and cover themselves with their garments,[2570] and persist and are puffed up with pride :

Ar. proud.

8 Then surely I called to them aloud :

9 Then surely I spoke to them in public and I spoke to them in secret :

10 Then I said, Ask forgiveness of your Lord : surely He is the most Forgiving :

11 He will send down upon you the cloud, pouring down abundance of rain :

12 And help you with wealth and sons, and make for you gardens, and make for you rivers.[2571]

13 What is the matter with you that you hope not for greatness from Allah?[2572]

Or, fear not the greatness of Allah.

فَلَمْ يَزِدْهُمْ دُعَآءِيْٓ اِلَّا فِرَارًا ○
وَاِنِّيْ كُلَّمَا دَعَوْتُهُمْ لِتَغْفِرَ لَهُمْ
جَعَلُوْٓا اَصَابِعَهُمْ فِيْٓ اٰذَانِهِمْ وَاسْتَغْشَوْا
ثِيَابَهُمْ وَاَصَرُّوْا وَاسْتَكْبَرُوا اسْتِكْبَارًا ○
ثُمَّ اِنِّيْ دَعَوْتُهُمْ جِهَارًا ○
ثُمَّ اِنِّيْٓ اَعْلَنْتُ لَهُمْ وَاَسْرَرْتُ
لَهُمْ اِسْرَارًا ○
فَقُلْتُ اسْتَغْفِرُوْا رَبَّكُمْ اِنَّهٗ كَانَ
غَفَّارًا ○
يُّرْسِلِ السَّمَآءَ عَلَيْكُمْ مِّدْرَارًا ○
وَّيُمْدِدْكُمْ بِاَمْوَالٍ وَّبَنِيْنَ وَ
يَجْعَلْ لَّكُمْ جَنّٰتٍ وَّيَجْعَلْ لَّكُمْ اَنْهٰرًا ○
مَا لَكُمْ لَا تَرْجُوْنَ لِلّٰهِ وَقَارًا ○

2569 The meaning is really, the more I call them, the more they flee, but the call is here made the nominative, though it is not the immediate and effective cause of their flight, which is really due to the stubbornness of their hearts. Exactly in the same sense a chapter of the Qur-án is spoken of as "adding uncleanness" to the uncleanness of those in whose hearts is a disease (8 : 125) ; and on another occasion, exactly in the same sense, Allah is spoken of as adding to the disease of those in whose hearts is a disease (2 : 10). In all these cases the nominative is not the real doer or the effective cause of the thing, but is really in some way remotely connected with the consequence. This explanation is given by the Qur-án itself in the words that immediately follow this verse: "Whenever I have called them that Thou mayest forgive them, they put their fingers in their ears and cover themselves with their garments, and persist and are puffed up with pride." Thus all those actions which amount to their fleeing the more are their own actions voluntarily committed.

2570 The phrase استغشوا ثيابهم is variously explained. Rgh gives two explanations. The first is "they put them (i.e. their garments) as a covering over their ears, and this denotes their holding back from giving ear." The other explanation is that it is "an allusion to running away," and as instances of this he mentions the phrases شمر ذيلا and القى ثوبه and after giving the literal meaning adds as an explanation, in order that he might not see nor hear (LL). Some take siáb as meaning the heart, as in 74 : 4, the meaning being that they cover their hearts, refusing to ponder over what is said.

2571 They are promised various blessings if they turn to Allah, which really means that their doom shall be averted, for nations are no doubt destroyed when they indulge in evil inordinately, and they prosper so long as their good qualities preponderate.

2572 The words may be taken either as a continuation of Noah's preaching or as being addressed to the Quraish. Even in the former case, the Meccans are told in the story of

Or, by various steps, or in various conditions.
a 46, 2516.
Or, one above another (2528).

14 And indeed He has created you through various grades :[2573]
15 Do you not see how Allah has created the seven heavens alike,[a]
16 And made the moon therein a light, and made the sun a lamp :
17 And Allah has made you grow out of the earth as a growth :[2574]
18 Then He returns you to it, then will He bring you forth a (new) bringing forth :[2575]
19 And Allah has made for you the earth a wide expanse,
20 That you may go along therein in wide paths.[2576]

SECTION II

Noah's Prayer for Destruction of Transgressors

21 Noah said : My Lord ! surely they have disobeyed me and followed him whose wealth and children have added to him nothing but loss.
22 And they have planned a very great plan.
23 And they say : By no means leave your gods, nor leave Wadd, nor Suwá'; nor Yaghus, and Ya'úq and Nasr.[2577]

قَالَ نُوحٌ رَّبِّ إِنَّهُمْ عَصَوْنِي وَاتَّبَعُوا مَنْ

Noah that if they follow the Prophet they will be made a great nation. Rz favours the interpretation of Kf, which I have adopted, and rejects the other, which I give in the margin. Kf says : "The meaning is, What is the matter with you that you are not in a state in which you should hope for Allah making you great ?"

2573 The words may be taken as alluding to the theory of evolution. The commentators generally take them to refer to the various conditions through which the fœtus passes. But they may as well imply that man has been brought to the present state of physical perfection after passing through various conditions.

2574 Note here again that man is described as having grown out of the earth as a growth, i.e. by a process of development. This is no doubt true, even in the process of creation which we daily observe working before our eyes. Vegetables grow out of earth : from these man obtains food, and from the food which he eats is produced the life-germ, which itself goes through a further process of development. But more probably the reference in this growth, and in the grades spoken of in v. 14, is to that great process of development through which man has attained to the present stage of physical perfection.

2575 The new bringing forth refers either to the rise of a new nation after one has been swept away, or to the new spiritual growth in the life after death.

2576 The wide paths made for man's earthly existence are an indication of the spiritual paths wherein God-fearing man attains to spiritual perfection.

2577 The strangest of all criticisms is that directed against certain names, of persons or idols, occurring in the Holy Qur-án, as if names of the time of the Holy Prophet were

24 And indeed they have led astray many, and do not increase the unjust in aught but perdition.[2578]

Or, error.

25 Because of their wrongs they were drowned, then made to enter fire, so they did not find any helpers besides Allah.

Or, shall be.
Or, shall.

26 And Noah said : My Lord! leave not upon the land any dweller from among the unbelievers :[2579]

27 For surely if Thou leave them they will lead astray Thy servants, and will not beget any but immoral, ungrateful (children) :

وَقَدْ أَضَلُّوا كَثِيرًا ۚ وَلَا تَزِدِ الظّٰلِمِينَ إِلَّا ضَلٰلًا ○

مِمَّا خَطِيْٓـٰٔتِهِمْ أُغْرِقُوا فَأُدْخِلُوا نَارًا ۙ فَلَمْ يَجِدُوا لَهُمْ مِّنْ دُوْنِ اللّٰهِ أَنْصَارًا ○

وَقَالَ نُوحٌ رَّبِّ لَا تَذَرْ عَلَى الْأَرْضِ مِنَ الْكٰفِرِيْنَ دَيَّارًا ○

إِنَّكَ إِنْ تَذَرْهُمْ يُضِلُّوا عِبَادَكَ وَلَا يَلِدُوْٓا إِلَّا فَاجِرًا كَفَّارًا ○ logically a bar to similar names having existed three or four thousand years before his time. It is said that because the Arabs had certain idols of these names, therefore it is an anachronism to have asserted that these idols were identical in name with those of the people of Noah. But why? Look at any other idol-worshipping nation; take the Hindus, for example, and you find the same names of idols going on through thousands of years. And yet Arabia was not more distantly situated from the territory of Noah's people than are any two parts of India from each other. Moreover, there is reason to believe that the Arabs obtained most of their idols from foreign countries. Thus Hubal, the chief Arab idol in the Ka'ba, "was brought from Belka in Syria into Arabia by 'Amr ibn-i-Lohay, pretending it would procure them rain when they wanted it." Usáf and Náila are also said to have been brought from Syria (Sale's Preliminary Discourse, sec. 1). There is nothing strange, therefore, in the circumstance that the Arab idols were imported from some ancient nations. But it should be borne in mind that vv. 22–25 may be parenthetical, like vv. 13–20; and the address here may be to the Arabian idolaters. The Qur-án frequently adopts this mode of addressing and warning the opponents of the Holy Prophet in the midst of an account relating to a former prophet or a former people. This interpretation is favoured by the fact that both vv. 21 and 26 begin with the words Noah said. The only difficulty would be about v. 25, which speaks of the drowning, but any punishment which destroys a people may be spoken of as gharq (lit. drowning), as you say : غرق في البلاد meaning he went downwards and disappeared in the lands or tracts of land (TA-LL). Similarly you say اغرق اعماله meaning he destroyed his works (by doing evil) (TA). As regards the use of the past tense in that verse, it is frequently adopted in prophetical language to indicate the great certainty of an event.

Wadd was worshipped in the form of a man, Suwá' in that of a woman, Yaghús in that of a lion, Ya'úq in that of a horse, and Nasr in that of an eagle (Rz), and these were worshipped respectively by the tribes of Kalb, Hamdan, Mazhaj, Murad, and Hamyar (Rz, AH, the latter having Huzail instead of Hamdan).

2578 Several explanations of ḍalál are given. Kf says it means khuzlán, i.e. their being forsaken by Allah, or hilák, i.e. loss and perdition, which is supported by the concluding verses of the chapter; Ibn-i-Bahr says it means 'azáb, i.e. chastisement, as in في ضلال و سعر in 54:24 and 77; others say it means loss, and others still, going astray in their plans (AH). For ḍalál meaning perdition we have also the authority of the lexicons (S, Q-LL).

2579 It should be noted that Noah was speaking only of his own people and praying against them only. All his statements and prayers refer to them, and not to the whole world. Hence al-arḍ simply signifies the land in which they lived, and not the earth.

28 My Lord! forgive me and my parents and him who enters my house believing, and the believing men and the believing women: and do not increase the unjust in aught but destruction!

CHAPTER LXXII

THE JINN

(Al-jinn)

REVEALED AT MECCA

(2 sections and 28 verses)

SECTION 1

Foreign Believers

In the name of Allah, the Beneficent, the Merciful.

1 Say: It has been revealed to me that a party of the jinn[2580] listened, and they said: Surely we have heard a wonderful Qur-án,

بِسْمِ اللّٰهِ الرَّحْمٰنِ الرَّحِيْمِ
قُلْ أُوْحِيَ إِلَيَّ أَنَّهُ اسْتَمَعَ نَفَرٌ مِّنَ الْجِنِّ
فَقَالُوْا إِنَّا سَمِعْنَا قُرْاٰنًا عَجَبًا ۝

Abstract:

Sec. 1. Foreign believers.
Sec. 2. Protection of revelation.

General remarks.

THIS chapter speaks of the protection which is granted to the prophets against their enemies, and the subject, hinted at in v. 8 of the first section, is made clear in the second section. The title is taken from the mention in v. 1 of certain believers in the Holy Prophet's truth called jinn.

The revelation of this chapter is generally ascribed to the time of the Holy Prophet's return from Ṭáif, which took place two years before the Hejira, and thus the chapter belongs to a time when opposition had reached its climax. Abu Ṭalib and Khadija had died; a ban had been put in force against the Prophet and the families of Hashim and Abd-ul-Muttalab; the believers had fled to Abyssinia, and those that remained were severely persecuted; the Quraish were deaf to all preaching and warning, and finally a visit to Ṭáif had resulted only in adding to the circumstances which would have most assuredly driven an ordinary individual to despair. Under these circumstances an assurance was sorely needed, and a very emphatic assurance is indeed given in this chapter. But beyond an assurance, we are told here that there are other believers, and thus if the Arabs persisted in unbelief Islam was making other spiritual conquests which unquestionably foreshadowed its vast conquests outside Arabia.

2580 The existence of jinn, or ethereal beings like the angels (the former being the spirits of evil and the latter the spirits of good), is a question quite distinct, but it is clear that the jinn spoken of here did not belong to this class. This very party is also

3 And that He—exalted be the majesty of our Lord—has not taken a consort, nor a son :

5 And that we thought that men and jinn did not utter a lie against Allah :

6 And that persons from among men used to seek refuge with persons from among jinn, so they increased them in wrong-doing :

7 And that they thought as you think, that Allah would not raise any one :[2581]

8 And that we sought to reach heaven,[2582] but we found it filled with strong guards[a] and flames :[b]

9 And that we used to sit in some of the sitting-places thereof to steal a hearing, but he referred to in 46 : 29–31, where they are made to say : " O our people! we have listened to a book revealed after Moses, verifying that which is before it." This shows that they were Jews. The commentators cite a report to this effect. Rz says : " It is reported that these people were Jews." Rz again narrates a report by IMsd, saying that he heard them beating their drums, يقرعون في دفوفهم كما تقرع النساء في دفوفها and that he saw them hiding the Holy Prophet in their midst, حتى غشوه نغاب عن بصري These words show that they were in all respects like other men. Again, the word jinn is applied to a man. LL quotes Ham : " The Arabs liken a man who is sharp and effective in affairs to a jinni." But stranger than this is the fact that the word jinn is recognized by lexicologists as signifying معظم الناس (Q, TA, etc.), i.e. the main body of men or the bulk of mankind (LL). Now what is meant by the bulk of mankind ? In the mouth of an Arab, who considers his own people as distinct from the rest of the world, it would mean only foreigners, and I am of the opinion that this is the meaning of the word jinn here. And why were foreigners called jinn ? Because they were concealed from the eye of an Arab ; the primary significance of the word jann (from which jinn is derived) being concealing or veiling (Rgh). Hence the party of the Jews of Nisibus who came to the Holy Prophet are here spoken of as jinn because they were non-Arabs. For this very reason the Amalekites and other non-Israelites who were forced into labour by Solomon to build the Temple are called jinn in 34 : 12. See 2027.

2581 This means either the raising of a prophet or the raising to life of those spiritually dead. One sect of the Jews did not believe in resurrection.

2582 By reaching heaven is meant learning secrets of the heaven or news of the future. It shows that there were diviners and astrologers among them who thought that they could read the secrets of the future from the stars. See 2530.

2583 عذابا صعدا signifies literally a punishment so distressing as to overcome the sufferer thereof.

2584 The servant of Allah is the Holy Prophet Muhammad. There may be a hint here of the Prophet being mobbed by the people of Ṭáif.

2585 A solitary man left to himself without a friend, without helper, rejected at home and cruelly treated abroad (as he was at Ṭáif, to which period this chapter belongs), could not speak these words. And thus did he pour out his soul in this state of utter helplessness before his Divine Master: "O Lord! I make my complaint unto Thee of my helplessness and frailty and my insignificance before mankind. But Thou art the Lord of the poor and feeble, and Thou art my Lord. Into whose hands wilt Thou abandon me? Into the hands of the strangers that beset me round about? Or of the enemy Thou hast given at home to have the mastery over me? . . . I seek for refuge in the light of Thy countenance . . ." (Muir). Now contrast with it the revelation which he received, just then, which speaks of his opponents as weak and few, who would soon be brought low, and it is clear as daylight that the source of the Holy Prophet's revelation was other than his own heart, for the same heart could not simultaneously vent feelings of utter helplessness and weakness and those of the most unbounded confidence in his ultimate triumph.

2586 The reformers promised for the Muslims at the commencement of every century, being representatives of the apostles, have also secrets of the future revealed to them, so that by the signs manifested through them they may establish true faith in the hearts of men. But note that the ghaib (or secrets) spoken of here refer particularly to the expression of the Divine will, to what are called the messages of their Lord in the next verse, being the commandments revealed through the prophets. The secrets on the other hand which are made known to the reformers in Islam are prophecies, not messages, because, the Holy Qur-án being a perfect expression of Divine will and containing all that is necessary for the guidance of humanity, no new message is needed. The prophecies made known to the righteous Muslims are only meant to confirm the truth of the final message known as the Holy Qur-án.

2587 Note the firm tone of these revelations under the disheartening circumstances to which attention has been drawn in 2585. Could these words proceed from any but the All-Powerful Divine source? The message must be delivered—Allah encompasses all.

قُمِ الَّيْلَ اِلَّا قَلِيْلًا ۝

Abstract:

Sec. 1. The Prophet is enjoined to pray.
Sec. 2. Prayer enjoined on Muslims.

General remarks.

THE chapter receives its title from the Holy Prophet's description in the first verse as one who had wrapped up himself. The various significances of that word are given in the foot-note on that verse, but having regard to the subject-matter of this chapter, which enjoins prayer, the word Muzzammil signifies one who has prepared himself for prayer. The chapter opens with an injunction to the Holy Prophet to pass the night in prayer, ending with a general injunction to all believers to be ever mindful of prayer. The latter part of the first section enjoins the Holy Prophet to bear patiently the ill-treatment of his enemies, who should soon receive their due punishment, as did Pharaoh when in opposition to Moses. The previous chapter not only promises protection, but, as is clearly indicated in v. 9, the Prophet is told to seek protection in constant prayer.

The revelation of this chapter belongs to the early Meccan period, and the commentators generally think it to be one of the very early revelations. General opinion, however, represents the last verse, which forms the second section of this chapter, to have been revealed at Medina, because fighting in the way of Allah is mentioned therein. See also 2595, where it is shown that the reference may be prophetical, and therefore that verse may also belong to the same early period.

2588 The Prophet is here called Muzzammil, or one who has wrapped up himself. The ordinary explanation is that the Holy Prophet had wrapped himself up in clothes on receiving his first revelation, or a call to messengership. But various other explanations are given. Rgh says that it is an allusion to one who considers an affair to be easy: Kalbi and Farra state that the word signifies his preparation for prayers (Rz). 'Ikrama says it means one who was burdened with a great affair, for zaml means 'amal (Rz). In all its senses, and particularly in the last mentioned, every follower is addressed through the Holy Prophet.

2589 قول ثقيل or a weighty word, is in consonance with the significance of muzzammil given by 'Ikrama, as stated in the previous note. Being burdened with the guidance of the whole world was indeed a weighty word.

2590 A reason is here given for maintaining a prayerful attitude during the night. It is the firmest way to tread, i.e. to tread every evil under the feet, and the best corrective of speech, and thus it accomplishes correction of deeds as well as correction of speech.

2591 Reading vv. 12-14 along with v. 11, where the Prophet is told to give them a little respite to continue in their mischiefs, it becomes clear that those verses speak of the wretched condition in which the erstwhile possessors of ease and plenty would find themselves, and how the great difficulties attendant upon the spread of truth would be dispersed before the advance of truth. See also 1604.

16 But Pharaoh disobeyed the apostle, so We laid on him a violent hold.
17 How, then, will you guard yourselves, if you disbelieve, on the day which shall make children grey-headed?
18 The heaven shall rend asunder thereby; His promise is ever brought to fulfilment.[2593]
19 Surely this is a reminder, then let him, who will, take the way to his Lord.

Prayer enjoined on Muslims

الَّذِينَ مَعَكَ ۚ وَاللَّهُ يُقَدِّرُ اللَّيْلَ وَ
النَّهَارَ ۚ عَلِمَ أَن لَّن تُحْصُوهُ

2592 The Holy Prophet's likeness to Moses is stated in the clearest terms in this, one of the earliest revelations, and thus the Holy Prophet's claim to be the promised prophet of Deut. 18:18, who is expressly stated to be the "like" of Moses, is as old as his revelation. Is it not wonderful in the case of one who had never read the Torah? Hence it is that the Holy Qur-án is in all later revelations described as verifying what is before it, or coming in fulfilment of earlier prophecy, the truth of which is thus confirmed.

2593 Note the clear and decided tone of these verses, which at so early a period warned the Quraish of the evil fate which they were destined to meet. The horrors of that day are spoken of as making the children grey-headed and rending asunder heaven. Now, even if the words be taken as applying solely to the day of resurrection, the first description cannot be taken literally, for children would not be made actually grey-headed on the resurrection day. And the commentators therefore admit that it is an allegorical description of the horrors of the day, for you say, speaking of a terrible day يوم يشيب نواصى الاطفال i.e. a day which makes grey the forelocks of the children (Rz). The coupling of this decidedly allegorical description with the rending asunder of heaven is conclusive proof that the latter description must also be taken allegorically; in fact, as such, the description is applicable to both the day of resurrection and the doom of the opponents in this life, whereas, taken literally, it cannot apply to either of the two. Such phrases as the rolling up of heaven (21:104), rending asunder of heaven (as here and in 82:1), removing the covering of heaven (81:11), and similar other phrases, all really speak of the sweeping off of an old order of things to give place to a new, attended with the necessary terrors and disasters, and hence the description applies to the doom of a nation in this world as well as to the entirely new order of things which will be ushered in with the resurrection. See also 1665 and 2677.

turned to you (mercifully),[2594] therefore read what is easy of the Qur-án. He knows that there must be among you sick, and others who travel in the land seeking of the bounty of Allah, and others who fight in Allah's way,[2595] therefore read as much of it as is easy (to you), and keep up prayer and pay the poor-rate and offer to Allah a

اسْتَغْفِرُوا اللّٰهَ اِنَّ اللّٰهَ غَفُوْرٌ رَّحِيْمٌ

2594 The first portion of the verse contains no commandment for the believers to pass such and such a part of the night in prayer; it simply states the fact that the Holy Prophet and those with him pass sometimes two-thirds, sometimes a half, and sometimes a third of the night in prayer; and hence it is meaningless to say that the first portion of the verse is abrogated by the second. A statement cannot be abrogated. The latter portion of the verse only states that though the Holy Prophet and his early zealous companions passed a great part of the night in prayer (instead of the revelries in which their opponents indulged), yet all Muslims could not follow their example, and hence they are told that they might pray by night so long as it was easy to them and not a burden. By you, in "you are not able to do it," are meant the Muslims in general. Note that the word tába (infinitive noun taubah), meaning He turned mercifully, occurs here, though there is no sin on the part of those to whom Allah turns mercifully. This shows that the word taubah has a much wider significance in the Holy Qur-án than its English equivalent repentance.

2595 The mention of fighting in this revelation is very probably a prophetical statement, as we find in many other places in the Holy Qur-án; hence the occurrence of the word is no argument that the verse was not revealed at Mecca.

CHAPTER LXXIV

THE CLOTHED ONE

(Al-Muddassir)

REVEALED AT MECCA

(2 sections and 56 verses)

Abstract:

Sec. 1. The Prophet is enjoined to warn.
Sec. 2. The warning.

General remarks.

THE previous chapter tells the Prophet how to attain to perfection. Here he is told to get out of solitude so as to make others perfect. This chapter is by general consent admitted to be the second in the order of revelation, and the circumstances relating to its revelation are given in trustworthy reports. A period probably of six months had elapsed since the first revelation before the second was received, and this period is known as the fatrah or intermission. It is remarkable that a period of full six centuries of fatrah or intermission had elapsed before the advent of the Holy Prophet, for the six centuries from the appearance of Jesus to that of the Holy Prophet himself did not witness the appearance of any prophet in any part of the world, and in the Prophet's short fatrah there may be a reminder of the six centuries for which the whole of the world had to wait the appearance of the last and the greatest of the prophets, the Prophet, not of one nation or one age, but of all nations and all ages. This period of fatrah pressed heavily on the Holy Prophet, and he was very grieved on account of this intermission. Once more, however, after the fatrah had passed away, the angel of the Lord appeared to him, and the Prophet sought to cover himself with his clothes; but it was not the Divine will that he should remain in seclusion, and he was at once commanded to rise and warn. The clothed one was clothed with absorption in contemplation of the Divine Being, and he was enjoined now to leave the corner of solitude. The whole of this chapter, which clearly belongs to the early Meccan period, was evidently not revealed at one time, but there is nothing to show that any part was revealed at Medina.

The solitary report giving the impression of Jábir, through Abu Salma bin Abdur Raḥmán, that this chapter is the very first revelation is no doubt an error. It was first only in the sense that it was first after the period of fatrah, but not actually the first of all the revelations granted to the Holy Prophet. The premier position is universally accorded to the opening verses of the 96th chapter.

SECTION 1

The Prophet is enjoined to warn

1-7. Prophet should warn and be patient. 8-31. The opponents and their fate.

In the name of Allah, the Beneficent, the Merciful.

1 O you who are clothed ![2596]
2 Arise and warn,[2597]
Ar. thy. 3 And your Lord do magnify,
Ar. thy. 4 And your garments do purify,[2598]
5 And uncleanness do shun,
6 And bestow not favours
Ar. thou mayest. that you may receive again with increase,[2599]
Ar. thy. 7 And for the sake of your Lord, be patient.
8 For when the trumpet is sounded,
9 That, at that time, shall be a difficult day
10 For the unbelievers, anything but easy.
11 Leave Me and him whom I created alone,
12 And gave him vast riches,
13 And sons dwelling in his presence,
14 And I adjusted affairs for him adjustably;
15 And yet he desires that I should add more ![2600]

2596 Al-muddassir is one wearing a disār, i.e. any garment (LL). Some take the word literally, others metaphorically, the meaning according to the latter being one clad in the garments of prophethood or one obscure, as he was in the Hira (Rz).

2597 Compare with the address contained in the last chapter: there the Holy Prophet is commanded to engage himself in devotion so that he should attain to perfection; here he is commanded to convey the message and to warn, thus making others perfect.

2598 The purification of the garments does not relate only to the outward act of purification, but also to the purification of the heart, as is shown in the next verse, where he is commanded to shun every kind of uncleanness. This interpretation is accepted by most of the commentators (Rz).

2599 Either do not expect, when bestowing a favour, that you will receive much from the person whom you have laid under an obligation, or do not recount what little you have done, accounting it much.

2600 This description applies generally, but the case of Walid bin Mughira is specially noticed by almost all commentators. Rz notices the report giving details of an occurrence in which Walid was specially concerned. Abu Jahl and other leaders in the persecution of the Holy Prophet, assembled together to ponder what name to give to the Holy Prophet, as in the pilgrimage season people could not see their way to the acceptance of one particular epithet for the Holy Prophet. Somebody suggested that he was a poet, but Walid answered that his word was not like that of a poet. Then another suggested that he was a soothsayer, but Walid rejected this too on the ground that Muhammad never spoke a lie, whereas the soothsayers often proved liars. A third suggestion was that he was a madman, but this too was found inconsistent with the circumstances of the Holy Prophet's life. Then Walid left the company, his comrades thinking that he was going over to Islam. Abu Jahl followed him to question him about the matter, and was told that after pondering deeply on the question he had come to the conclusion that the Prophet was a sâḥir, i.e. an enchanter, because, he said, "It is the enchanter who separates the father from the son, the brother from the brother, and the husband from the wife." Thereupon a proclamation was made in the streets of Mecca that the Prophet was a sâḥir. To this the verses that follow refer.

24 Then He said: This is naught but enchantment, narrated (from others);[2602]

2601 ارهقته صعودا signifies I made him to do a difficult or troublesome thing. The reference is to the fate of Walid, three of whose sons became converts to Islam, and the rest perished, his wealth began to diminish, and ultimately he himself died in great disgrace and poverty.

2602 Siḥr here means the same as in the Prophet's saying ان من البيان لسحرا i.e. skilful eloquence. See 148 for full explanation of the word. The Qur-án was called an enchantment because it was enchanting in its attraction.

2602A It should be noted that this is called a parable in the next verse: what does

38 Every soul is held in pledge for what it earns,
39 Except the people of the right hand,
40 In gardens, they shall ask each other
41 About the guilty:
42 What has brought you into hell?
43 They shall say: We were not of those who prayed;

مَا سَلَكَكُمْ فِي سَقَرَ ۝
قَالُوا لَمْ نَكُ مِنَ الْمُصَلِّينَ ۝

Allah mean by this parable? All that the Qur-án says is that over it are nineteen. The commentators think that nineteen angels, or nineteen classes, or nineteen ranks may be meant (Rz). The particular number is considered to be due to the misuse of nineteen faculties which are enumerated by the commentators (Rz).

2603 The moon, or qamar, as I have stated in 2388, represents the power of the Arabs. The night in the next verse represents the ignorance in which the Arabs were involved: this ignorance would pass away, but along with it would also pass away the power of the Meccans. The light of truth would shine forth, but not without a grave misfortune to those who refuse to go forward, and this is a warning. Those who go forward, on the other hand, will not be affected by that, the gravest of misfortunes, for the people of the right hand shall be in gardens, every soul being pledged for what it earns. The prophetical strain adopted here regarding the doom of the Meccans is continued to the end of the chapter.

44 And we used not to feed the poor;

45 And we used to enter into vain discourse with those who entered into vain discourses;

46 And we used to call the day of judgment a lie;

47 Till death overtook us. (Ar. certainty.)

48 So the intercession of intercessors shall not avail them.

49 What is then the matter with them, that they turn aside from the reminder, (Ar. turning.)

50 As if they were asses taking fright

51 That had fled from a lion?

52 Nay; every one of them desires that he may be given pages spread out;[2604]

53 Nay! but they do not fear the hereafter.

54 Nay! it is surely a reminder.[2605]

55 So whoever pleases may mind it.

56 And they will not mind unless Allah please.[2605A] He is worthy to be feared and worthy to forgive.

وَلَمْ نَكُ نُطْعِمُ الْمِسْكِينَ

كَلَّا إِنَّهُ تَذْكِرَةٌ
فَمَن شَاءَ ذَكَرَهُ
وَمَا يَذْكُرُونَ إِلَّا أَن يَشَاءَ اللَّهُ
هُوَ أَهْلُ التَّقْوَىٰ وَأَهْلُ الْمَغْفِرَةِ

2604 Every one of them would have a revelation granted to him direct from heaven. To this they gave expression repeatedly: Why does not Allah speak to us? (2:118).

2605 The Qur-án is called a tazkirah, which signifies, like zikr, a reminder, but at the same time carries a deeper significance, indicating glory and honour for those who shall follow it.

2605A The Qur-án has repeatedly asserted that God does not compel men to adopt one way or another; it points out the right course from the wrong and leaves it to the choice of the individual. Even here it is plainly stated: so whoever pleases may mind it (v. 55). And in 86:3 we have: Surely we have shown him the way—he may be thankful or unthankful. Similar verses abound in the Holy Qur-án. What does, then, the statement, and they will not mind unless Allah please, mean? This statement is subject to the Divine laws already explained. Allah is pleased to guide those in the right way and to make those "mind" who open their hearts to receive it. Note how clearly the verses preceding it depict the peculiar condition of those who do not even listen to the reminder: What is then the matter with them, that they turn aside from the reminder, as if they were asses taking fright that had fled from a lion? (vv. 49–51.) The pleasure of Allah is itself a law, not an arbitrary thing, so that He should turn away those from minding who are anxious to receive the truth. It is in accordance with Divine laws, so frequently referred to in the Holy Qur-án, that the Divine pleasure guides some and leaves others in error. We have here, in fact, a prophecy that Allah will be pleased to make even those mind the warning who now turn aside, and the same subject is continued in the next chapter.

For a similar statement occurring in 76:30, see 2633A.

Abstract:

Sec. 1. The truth of the resurrection.
Sec. 2. The dead shall rise.

General remarks.

THIS chapter continues the subject dealt with at the end of the last, namely, that the Qur-án is a reminder which will raise to eminence those who follow it. As proof of this, the day of spiritual rising, or the Resurrection, which gives its name to this chapter, and the self-accusing spirit are called to witness, which means that the eminence of the faithful will be marked by a general rising of those who are now dead spiritually and by the self-accusations of those who did not benefit by the reminder. The chapter thus speaks of the rising to life of the dead.

Its revelation belongs to the early Meccan period, and may be assigned to about the fourth year of the Prophet's call.

2606 By the resurrection is here meant the spiritual resurrection of the Arabs, as also the greater Resurrection. The primary significance of qiyámah is only rising. Thus Raghib says: "Al-qiyámah originally signifies the rising of a man all at once." Al-qiyámah is now a term which is synonymous with the great Resurrection, but it has not lost its original significance, and means also the rising to life of those who are spiritually dead. The lá in the beginning of this verse and the next carries the same significance as in فلا و ربك لا يؤمنون in 4:65, and the verse of Imra ul Qais: لا و ابيك ابنة العامرى ∴ لا يدعى القوم انى افر According to Kf, lá in such cases is for تأكيد القسم i.e. to give emphasis to the oath. The wáv in the latter two cases stands for uqsimu, and hence the two forms are equivalent.

Or, whole make.

وَجُمِعَ الشَّمْسُ وَالْقَمَرُ ۝

2607 There is no reason why the opponents should deny Allah's power to make a people great: can He not give life to dry bones? (to which the Prophet's case is likened from the point of view of the opponents); nay, more than this, he has the power to make man attain perfection, completing all the members of his body, even to the ends of his fingers. The word banán primarily means only the fingers, or the ends of the fingers, but is also applicable to all members of the body (Aboo-Isḥáq, M-LL), and therefore might also be translated as the whole make of his body. But even if the primary significance, fingers, be adopted, the meaning will still be the same, because the superiority of man lies in his hand, and especially in the make of his fingers, without which his advancement would have been impossible. The root word baná signifies he remained in the place, and the fingers are according to Msb called banán "because by their means are ordered those circumstances whereby man continues in existence" (LL), or according to Rgh and TA, because therewith one fights and defends oneself. Both verses therefore prophesy a great future for the Holy Prophet, and the verse that follows makes this clear: But man desires to give the lie to what is before him, i.e. he is not willing to believe that such a thing can ever take place.

2608 Here follow some signs of the day of rising. برق البصر signifies the sight becomes confused, or according to Rz, he became confounded; and bariqa alone signifies much the same: he became confounded and unable to see his right course, or he became frightened (Q, TA-LL). Therefore some great calamity is implied which would confound the opponents. Some commentators take these to be the signs of the approach of the death of a person (Rz).

2609 The darkening of the moon implies the departure of the power of the Meccans (as against the Holy Prophet) or of the Semitic races in general (referring to the latter days): see 2388.

2610 The bringing together of the sun and the moon implies the disappearance of the light of both (Rz). If the reference is to the final disruption of the solar system, the meaning is clear: but besides that it seems to signify metaphorically the departure of the power of Persia, of which the sun was the special symbol, along with that of the Meccans—see 1930, where it is shown that the discomfiture of the Meccans and the Persians began and ended simultaneously. It should be noted that all these verses also refer to the general Resurrection of the dead, but their fulfilment, which was metaphorically accomplished in this very life, was intended as a sign of the truth of the promises relating 10 Man shall say on that day: Whither to fly to?

11 By no means! there shall be no place of refuge!
Ar. thy. 12 With your Lord alone shall on that day be the place of rest.[2611]
13 Man shall on that day be informed of what he sent before and (what he) put off.[2612]
14 Nay! man is evidence against himself,
15 Though he puts forth his excuses.[2613]
Ar. thy. 16 Do not move your tongue with it to make haste with it.[2614]
17 Surely on Us (devolves) to the hereafter, and this indication is made clear by what follows. Those commentators who consider these signs to be the signs of the approach of death understand the bringing together of the sun and the moon as meaning the departure of the soul (which is compared to the moon) to the hereafter (which is compared to the sun because of the removal of every obscurity and doubt in the life to come).

2611 This and the two preceding verses show that the reference is clearly to the utter discomfiture of the opponents, because it tells a powerful enemy that the day is coming when no place of refuge shall be left for them except with your Lord, i.e. under the banner of the Holy Prophet.

2612 What he sent before implies the evil deeds which he did but ought not to have done; what he put off being the good deeds which he failed to do but which he ought to have done.

2613 Man has not been made in such a manner as to be unable to distinguish between right and wrong, but he always " puts forth excuses " for leaving the right and adopting the wrong course.

2614 Verses 16–19 are thought by some to have no connection with the context. Rodwell regards them parenthetical. But, as I have shown in commenting upon the first verse of this chapter, the Qur-án is really the subject, and the mention of the day of rising is only proof that those who follow the Qur-án will be made to rise by its means and become triumphant as against their opponents. But the connection is made apparent in another way. The preceding verses speak of the distress which must befall those who do not forsake the wrong course. The Prophet naturally desired to make it clear to them, and therefore he was anxious that the warning should be given immediately in plainer words. Therefore, he is told not to make haste with it, for in the first place they could distinguish between right and wrong, and secondly, the Prophet must remain contented with what was revealed to him from time to time. Hence the statements made in the verses that follow, viz. that the recitation and collection of the whole of the Qur-án, together with its effective explanation to the opponents, were matters which Alláh had decided to bring about, and the Prophet should experience no anxiety on that account; compare 20: 113, 114 with the statement made here and this exposition becomes clear : " And thus have We revealed it an Arabic Qur-án, and have distinctly set forth therein of threats that they may guard against evil, or that it may produce a reminder for them. . . . And do not make haste with the Qur-án before its revelation is made complete to you and say, O my Lord! increase me in knowledge." It should also be noted that, as opposition to the Holy Prophet became stronger, the warning became clearer.

the collecting of it and the reciting of it.[2615]

18 Therefore when We have recited it, follow its recitation.

19 Again on Us (devolves) the explaining of it.

20 Nay! But you love the present life,

21 And neglect the hereafter.

22 (Some) faces on that day shall be bright,

23 Looking to their Lord.[2616]

24 And (other) faces on that day shall be gloomy,

25 Knowing that there will be made to befall them some great calamity.[2617]

26 Nay! When it comes up to the throat,

27 And it is said: Who will be a charmer ?[2618]

Or ascend (with it).

28 And he is sure that it is the (hour of) parting,

جَمْعَهُ وَقُرْآنَهُ ۝

كَلَّا إِذَا بَلَغَتِ التَّرَاقِيَ ۝

وَقِيلَ مَنْ ۜ رَاقٍ ۝

وَظَنَّ أَنَّهُ الْفِرَاقُ ۝

2615 There can be no clearer evidence that the collection of the verses into chapters and of the chapters into one whole is here claimed by the Qur-án to be a matter which, like its revelation, was to be entirely carried out under Divine guidance by the Holy Prophet himself. The Holy Book was thus from the first intended to be arranged and collected into one whole. It is curious to observe that Rodwell, who has paid little regard to the proper and orderly arrangement of the Qur-án, is constrained to remark in a foot-note to this verse: "In either case we are led to the conclusion that from the first Muhammad had formed the plan of promulgating a written book." But the words of the Qur-án clearly indicate much more: the collection of the Qur-án was to be accomplished under Divine guidance, and collection includes the arrangement of the parts. In fact, it could not be called a book unless its various portions were arranged into one whole. On the other hand, if the order of revelation were to be followed in the arrangement of its parts, its collection would not have been spoken of as something distinct from its revelation, which is implied in the word recitation.

2617 Note that this great calamity also befell them in this life, and thus it demonstrated the truth of the calamity in the hereafter.

2618 Man Ráq-in has two significances. It either means who will ascend with it? i.e. shall the angels of mercy ascend with it or shall the angels of punishment? (TA, Rz.) Or the meaning is, where is the charmer that would now avert the doom? because they trusted in their soothsayers and charmers that they could avert their doom. A poet says: لقد علمت و الاجل الباقي ∴ ان لن يرد القدر الرواقي "Assuredly thou knowest, by the most Majestic, the Everlasting, that the potent charmers will not avert that which is decreed." I prefer the second significance, for the calamities and afflictions spoken of no doubt refer to the punishment of the evil-doers when they are overtaken by their doom.

29 And affliction is combined with affliction ;[2619]

2619 For sâq, meaning affliction, see 1855. The meaning suits the context.

2620 The opponent is spoken of as an individual person throughout. This does not mean that allusion is made to one particular man, as some suppose. The description applies to every opponent.

2621 It is related that Abu Jahl said to the Holy Prophet that he and his Lord had not the power to do him any harm (Rz). The haughty opponent is warned that destruction is very near. Or, the meaning is, Woe to you! The commentators admit here that the repetition shows that the opponents were threatened with a double punishment, viz. in this life and in the hereafter (Rz). In fact, the double punishment is spoken of throughout the chapter, as I have shown in the notes ; here it is made plainer.

2622 The verse draws attention to the seriousness of life and to man's responsibility for his actions—a doctrine denied as much to-day as it was by the Arabs.

2623 The giving of "life to the dead" not only signifies raising after death, but also spiritually raising a dead nation to life.

Abstract:

Sec. 1. Attainment of perfection.

Sec. 2. Another generation will be raised.

General remarks.

THE last chapter having shown the truth of the resurrection which stands for the spiritual life of man, this deals with man's attainment to perfection, which is the true object of that life, and is accordingly called The Man, the word itself occurring in the opening verse of the chapter. The first section shows how man is created out of nothing, and then the way to perfection is pointed out to him. It is then shown that in the attainment of perfection there are two stages, the first stage being the perfect suppression of all evil tendencies or the stage of attaining to sinlessness, but this is not the goal to which the spiritual wayfarer should aspire. The goal lies far beyond. It is the way uphill, as it is termed elsewhere and briefly hinted here. The pilgrim must be prepared to accomplish the most difficult tasks and to perform astonishing deeds of sacrifice in the way of Allah. The two stages of perfection are called respectively the káfúr and the zanjabeel. The second section shows that if those addressed by the Holy Prophet do not accept his message and try to attain to the perfection to which he would have them attain, Allah will cause another people to take their place, for the Qur-án, being the perfect revelation of the Almighty, must accomplish the object which it has set before itself, and that object is none other than to enable man to attain to perfection.

Or, have chosen him (above other creatures).

Or, accept or reject.

2 Surely We have created man from a small life-germ uniting (itself): We mean to try him, so We have made him hearing, seeing.

3 Surely We have shown him the way: he may be thankful or unthankful.[2624]

4 Surely We have prepared for the unbelievers chains and shackles and a burning fire.[2625]

5 Surely the righteous shall drink of a cup the admixture of which is camphor,[2626]

6 A fountain from which the servants of Allah shall drink; they make it to flow a (goodly) flowing forth.

7 They fulfil vows and fear a day the evil of which shall be spreading far and wide.

8 And they give food out of love for Him to the poor and the orphan and the captive:

9 We only feed you for Allah's sake; we desire from you neither reward nor thanks:

10 Surely we fear from our Lord a stern, distressful day.

11 Therefore Allah will guard them from the evil of that day and cause them to meet with ease and happiness;

As regards the date of revelation, nothing can be said beyond the fact that it belongs to the early Meccan period. Mujáhid and Qatada are, however, of opinion that it is a Medinian revelation. Some hold it to be in part Meccan and in part Medinian. But there is nothing to support these allegations.

2624 The right way is shown clearly; it is for man himself to walk in it, and thus be thankful, or away from it, and thus be unthankful. Or the meaning given in the margin may be adopted.

2625 As to how these chains represent man's own actions, see 2559.

2626 The word káfúr, used in connection with the state of the just, is derived from kafr, meaning to cover and to suppress, and refers to the total extinction of worldly love and the complete suppression of all the worldly desires of those who have drunk of the cup of love of Allah, and a truly sincere severance from all other connections. The more a man leans towards Allah, the farther off he is from carnal passions, and therefore the righteous, who trust only to Allah for support, have their hearts cooled from the fire of passion, and their sensual desires as completely suppressed as poisonous matter is dispersed by camphor.

In the spiritual advancement of man this is the first stage, because it is not until the evil tendencies of man are completely suppressed that he is able to advance to the higher stages of spiritual perfection. Sinlessness, according to the Holy Qur-án, is not the goal of perfection, but only the first stage of the way to that goal.

2627 That is, every one shall receive them according to the measure of his deeds.

2628 Zanjabeel is a compound of zana'a and jabal. Of these component parts the first means he ascended, and the second mountain. The compound word zanjabeel therefore means he ascended the mountain. Now, from a severe attack of a poisonous disease to perfect restoration of health there are two stages. In the first stage the poisonous germs are completely destroyed, the violence of the attack is mitigated, and the danger which threatened life itself is over. But the weakness which is the result of the attack does not vanish with the poison. The second stage of restoration is therefore that in which the patient regains his strength. The body is again full of life and vigour, and he is not only able to walk with firm legs upon even ground, but has courage and strength to try the ascent of a steep mountain, and scale the heights cheerfully and without any fear. It is in reference to this stage that Almighty God says of the perfectly righteous that they are made to drink of a cup tempered with zanjabeel; i.e. having attained full spiritual strength, they are able to go up steep mountainous paths, accomplish most difficult tasks, and perform astonishing deeds of sacrifice in the path of Allah. It should also be borne in mind in connection with this point that zanjabeel (ginger) is the root of a plant very useful in promoting the natural heat of the body. The name given to it points to this property, for it gives strength to and generates heat in the weak body so as to enable a man to ascend precipitous heights.

2629 For the meaning of mukhalladún see 2430. Degeneration and decay stop with this life.

2630 A great kingdom was granted to the companions of the Holy Prophet in this life.

21 Upon them shall be garments of fine green silk and thick silk interwoven with gold, and they shall be adorned with bracelets of silver, and their Lord shall make them drink a pure drink.[2631]

Another Generation will be raised up

23 Surely We Ourselves have
Ar. thee. revealed the Qur-án to you, revealing (it) in portions.

24 Therefore wait patiently
Ar. thy. for the judgment of your Lord,[2632] and obey not from among them a sinner or an ungrateful one.

فَاصْبِرْ لِحُكْمِ رَبِّكَ وَلَا تُطِعْ مِنْهُمْ اٰثِمًا اَوْ كَفُوْرًا ۝

25 And glorify the name of
Ar. thy. your Lord morning and evening.

وَاذْكُرِ اسْمَ رَبِّكَ بُكْرَةً وَّاَصِيْلًا ۝

26 And during part of the night adore Him, and give glory to Him (a) long (part of the) night.

وَمِنَ الَّيْلِ فَاسْجُدْ لَهٗ وَسَبِّحْهُ لَيْلًا طَوِيْلًا ۝

27 Surely these love the transitory and neglect a grievous day before them.

اِنَّ هٰٓؤُلَآءِ يُحِبُّوْنَ الْعَاجِلَةَ وَيَذَرُوْنَ وَرَآءَهُمْ يَوْمًا ثَقِيْلًا ۝

28 We created them and made firm their make, and when We please We will bring in their place the likes of them by a change.[2633]

نَحْنُ خَلَقْنٰهُمْ وَشَدَدْنَآ اَسْرَهُمْ ۚ وَاِذَا شِئْنَا بَدَّلْنَآ اَمْثَالَهُمْ تَبْدِيْلًا ۝

29 Surely this is a reminder, so whoever pleases takes to his Lord a way.

اِنَّ هٰذِهٖ تَذْكِرَةٌ ۚ فَمَنْ شَآءَ اتَّخَذَ اِلٰى رَبِّهٖ سَبِيْلًا ۝

30 And you do not please except that Allah please;[2633A] surely Allah is Knowing, Wise;

وَمَا تَشَآءُوْنَ اِلَّآ اَنْ يَّشَآءَ اللّٰهُ ۗ اِنَّ اللّٰهَ كَانَ عَلِيْمًا حَكِيْمًا ۝

2631 As they led pure lives here, they shall have a pure drink in the hereafter.

2632 This shows that the blessings mentioned in the previous section would also find a manifestation in this life; the Divine judgment will bring about the fall of one party and the rise of another.

2633 The mention of the grievous day in the previous verse and the statement here that another people will take the place of these are clear prophecies for this life. Hence it is called a warning in the verse that follows.

2633A As the context clearly shows, the faithful are spoken of here; the previous verse states that whoever pleases takes to his Lord a way, and the verse that follows refers to the faithful in the words, He makes whom He pleases to enter into His mercy. The meaning

31 He makes whom He pleases to enter into His mercy; and (as for) the unjust, He has prepared for them a painful chastisement.

يُدْخِلُ مَنْ يَّشَآءُ فِيْ رَحْمَتِهٖ ؕ وَ الظّٰلِمِيْنَ اَعَدَّ لَهُمْ عَذَابًا اَلِيْمًا ۟ is that true and sincere believers have so completely submitted themselves to the Divine will and are so completely resigned that they have no desires of their own, and all their desires are in accordance with Allah's pleasure. Hence they are made to enter into Divine mercy.

Taking the words as a general statement, there can still be little doubt as to their real significance. The chapter opens with the clear statement, Surely We have shown him the way: he may accept or reject; so that man has not been constrained by the Divine Being to adopt a particular course, whether for good or for evil. The end of the chapter is equally clear: Surely this is a reminder, so whoever pleases takes to his Lord a way. And notwithstanding those clear statements, we are told that you do not please except that Allah please, which is equivalent to saying that man's choice would have no effect if it did not please Allah. The first thing to be borne in mind is that the two verses, so closely following each other, cannot be set against each other. Verse 29 is clear and decisive that man is not constrained to one course: whoever pleases takes to his Lord a way. And therefore the words that follow this statement cannot be so interpreted as to negative it. And it is remarkable that almost the same words occur again in ch. 81, and there too they are preceded by similar words. Thus in 81 : 27, 28, we have: It is naught but a reminder for the nations, for him among you who pleases to go straight. And those words are followed by the statement: And you do not please except that Allah please (81 : 29).

This repetition makes it clear that the words whoever pleases takes to his Lord a way cannot be ignored in interpreting the statement, you do not please except that Allah please. In fact, the latter statement is qualified by the former, and this is the reason that it is preceded by it on both occasions. And we can easily see that there are two things necessary for the guidance of man: firstly, the revelation of the reminder by Allah, and secondly, the acceptance of that reminder by man. If Allah had not pleased to reveal the reminder, man's choice would have been nowhere. This is what is meant by the words you do not please except that Allah please, i.e. man's choice to adopt one way or another would have no effect unless Allah had first pleased to point out the way and reveal the reminder.

It may also be added that every benefit is ascribed to Allah in the Holy Qur-án. Thus we are plainly told: "Whatever benefit comes to you, O man, it is from Allah, and whatever misfortune befalls you, it is from yourself" (4 : 79). And Abraham's prayer is thus quoted: "And when I am sick then He restores me to health" (26 : 80), where Abraham attributes sickness to his own doing, but ascribes healing to Allah. Hence, even if we take the words under discussion as meaning that man's choice to accept the reminder does not take place unless Allah is pleased, this statement would only mean that the good to which man thus attains is ascribable to Allah. Abstract:

Sec. 1. Consequences of rejection.

Sec. 2. Consequences of rejection—continued.

General remarks.

THIS chapter is, as it were, a supplement to the one that precedes it, for while it is shown therein how the righteous attain to perfection—being the accepters of the message—here the fate of the rejecters is made clear. The Sent forth are the apostles, the rejection of whose message brings evil consequences, and that word, occurring in the first verse, gives its name to this chapter.

The fourth year of the call is regarded as the probable date of the revelation of this chapter.

2634 As stated in 2099, attention is drawn in what are called oaths to certain indisputable facts which lead to a conclusion. The conclusion here is that what the opponents are threatened with, i.e. their doom (as clearly stated in v. 12), is sure to take place, and the characteristics described in the first six verses apply to prophets whose opponents

8 So when the stars are made
Or, lose their light. to disappear, 9 And when the heaven is rent asunder,
10 And when the mountains are carried away as dust,[2635]
11 And when the apostles are made to reach their appointed time,
12 To what day is the doom fixed?
13 To the day of decision.
Ar. thee. 14 And what will make you comprehend what the day of decision is?
15 Woe on that day to the
rejecters.
16 Did We not destroy the former generations?
17 Then did We follow them up with later ones.
18 Even thus shall We deal with the guilty.
19 Woe on that day to the
rejecters.[2636]
20 Did We not create you from contemptible water?
21 Then We placed it in a secure resting-place,
22 Till an appointed term,

فَإِذَا النُّجُومُ طُمِسَتْ ﴿٨﴾
وَإِذَا السَّمَاءُ فُرِجَتْ ﴿٩﴾
وَإِذَا الْجِبَالُ نُسِفَتْ ﴿١٠﴾
وَإِذَا الرُّسُلُ أُقِّتَتْ ﴿١١﴾
لِأَيِّ يَوْمٍ أُجِّلَتْ ﴿١٢﴾
لِيَوْمِ الْفَصْلِ ۞
وَمَا أَدْرَاكَ مَا يَوْمُ الْفَصْلِ ﴿١٤﴾
وَيْلٌ يَوْمَئِذٍ لِّلْمُكَذِّبِينَ ۞
أَلَمْ نُهْلِكِ الْأَوَّلِينَ ۞
ثُمَّ نُتْبِعُهُمُ الْآخِرِينَ ۞
كَذَٰلِكَ نَفْعَلُ بِالْمُجْرِمِينَ ۞
وَيْلٌ يَوْمَئِذٍ لِّلْمُكَذِّبِينَ ۞
أَلَمْ نَخْلُقكُّم مِّن مَّاءٍ مَّهِينٍ ۞
فَجَعَلْنَاهُ فِي قَرَارٍ مَّكِينٍ ۞
إِلَىٰ قَدَرٍ مَّعْلُومٍ ﴿٢٢﴾

were similarly destroyed. This is made clear by the mention of the appointed time of the apostles in v. 11, by which, of course, is meant the appointed time of the destruction of their enemies. The opponents of the Holy Prophet are told that they should consider how the truth was spread by former prophets. In the first verse they are spoken of as being sent with ma'rúf, i.e. goodness; in the second, as "driving off the chaff" of falsehood before them; in the third, as scattering the seed of goodness far and wide or giving life to dead earth; in the fourth, as ultimately bringing about a distinction (farq or furqán) between truth and falsehood, and they give the reminder that one party may be cleared and the other warned. These considerations about the former prophets should lead the opponents to the certain conclusion that as the same Divine law was being followed in the case of the Holy Prophet, their doom was also a certain thing, as was that of those before them who opposed the prophets.

2635 The disappearance of the stars (v. 8) was a sign for the Arabs of the befalling of a calamity (2371); the rending asunder of the heaven (v. 9) indicated the same, because the heaven was considered a protection. Compare 21:32, And We have made the heaven a guarded canopy. And see 2593. The passing away of the mountains signified the disappearance from among them of their great men, whose protection they sought in time of distress. All these things, as the next verse shows, would be brought about when the appointed time of the apostles, i.e. the time of the destruction of their opponents, came.

2636 Note the clear words of this and the three previous verses. The former generations were destroyed because of their wickedness and others were brought up in their place; the like shall be the fate of the guilty Meccans: the day of their doom is the day of the decision.

23 So We proportion it—how well are We at proportioning (things).

فَقَدَرْنَا فَنِعْمَ الْقٰدِرُوْنَ

24 Woe on that day to the rejecters.

وَيْلٌ يَّوْمَئِذٍ لِّلْمُكَذِّبِيْنَ

25 Have We not made the earth to draw together to itself

اَلَمْ نَجْعَلِ الْاَرْضَ كِفَاتًا

26 The living and the dead,[2637]

اَحْيَآءً وَّاَمْوَاتًا

27 And made therein lofty mountains, and given you to drink of sweet water?

وَّجَعَلْنَا فِيْهَا رَوَاسِيَ شٰمِخٰتٍ وَّاَسْقَيْنٰكُمْ مَّآءً فُرَاتًا

28 Woe on that day to the rejecters.

وَيْلٌ يَّوْمَئِذٍ لِّلْمُكَذِّبِيْنَ

29 Walk on to that which you called a lie.

اِنْطَلِقُوْٓا اِلٰى مَا كُنْتُمْ بِهٖ تُكَذِّبُوْنَ

30 Walk on to the covering having three branches,

اِنْطَلِقُوْٓا اِلٰى ظِلٍّ ذِيْ ثَلٰثِ شُعَبٍ

31 Neither having the coolness of the shade nor availing against the flame.

لَّا ظَلِيْلٍ وَّلَا يُغْنِيْ مِنَ اللَّهَبِ

Or, large trees.

32 Surely it sends up sparks like palaces,

اِنَّهَا تَرْمِيْ بِشَرَرٍ كَالْقَصْرِ

Or, yellow palm-trees.

33 As if they were tawny camels.[2638]

كَاَنَّهٗ جِمٰلَتٌ صُفْرٌ

34 Woe on that day to the rejecters.

وَيْلٌ يَّوْمَئِذٍ لِّلْمُكَذِّبِيْنَ

35 This is the day on which they shall not speak,

هٰذَا يَوْمُ لَا يَنْطِقُوْنَ

36 And permission shall not be given to them so that they should offer excuses.

وَلَا يُؤْذَنُ لَهُمْ فَيَعْتَذِرُوْنَ

37 Woe on that day to the rejecters.

وَيْلٌ يَّوْمَئِذٍ لِّلْمُكَذِّبِيْنَ

38 This is the day of decision: We have gathered you and those of yore.

هٰذَا يَوْمُ الْفَصْلِ جَمَعْنٰكُمْ وَالْاَوَّلِيْنَ

2637 This shows that all mortals, living or dead, must remain on earth, and that the belief of the ascent of Jesus to the fourth heaven is an error.

2638 It is most likely that by the three branches of the covering of fire are meant its three characteristics stated in the verses that follow. Here it is called ẓill, which ordinarily means shadow, but a covering (of fire) seems to be more suitable to the context. The three qualifications are that it gives no shade and does not avail against the flames and itself sends up sparks. ظل الشيء means that which serves for the covering or protecting of a thing (M-LL). Hence one says: فلان يعيش في ظل فلان i.e. such a one lives in the protection of such a one (S, O, Msb-LL). Thus the very thing which should have served them for protection proves not only devoid of comfort (giving no shade), but also does not avail against calamity—nay, it turns out to be itself a source of distress. The sparks are likened to qaṣr, i.e. palaces, and to tawny camels in colour, signifying that it is inordinate love of these things that will take the shape of such sparks on the day of resurrection.

39 So if you have a plan, plan against me (now).[2639]

Abstract:

Sec. 1. The day of decision.

Sec. 2. The day of decision—continued.

General remarks.

THE doom of the unbelievers being certain, they ask, When will it come? This doom is the Announcement which gives its title to, and forms the subject-matter of, this chapter. It is regarded as one of the earlier revelations in the early Meccan period.

2640 The original words are نبإ عظيم which also occur in 38 : 67, and it is shown in 2150 that this great announcement is the prophecy of the utter discomfiture of the opponents of the Holy Prophet. Some commentators take it to signify the Holy Qur-án, others the prophethood of Muhammad, and still others the day of resurrection (Rz). This last significance is quite in consonance with the first, while the other two are equally evident. According to Rgh, naba' is an announcement of great utility conveying knowledge or probability. This significance, too, is in accordance with any of the three explanations given above.

4 Nay! they shall soon come to know; كَلَّا سَيَعْلَمُونَ ۝

Ar. again. 5 Nay! Nay! they shall soon know. ثُمَّ كَلَّا سَيَعْلَمُونَ ۝

6 Have We not made the earth an even expanse? أَلَمْ نَجْعَلِ الْأَرْضَ مِهَادًا ۝

7 And the mountains as projections (thereon)?[2641] وَالْجِبَالَ أَوْتَادًا ۝

8 And We created you in pairs, وَخَلَقْنَاكُمْ أَزْوَاجًا ۝

9 And We made your sleep to be rest (to you), وَجَعَلْنَا نَوْمَكُمْ سُبَاتًا ۝

10 And We made the night to be a covering, وَجَعَلْنَا اللَّيْلَ لِبَاسًا ۝

11 And We made the day for seeking livelihood. وَجَعَلْنَا النَّهَارَ مَعَاشًا ۝

12 And We made above you seven strong ones, وَبَنَيْنَا فَوْقَكُمْ سَبْعًا شِدَادًا ۝

13 And We made a shining lamp,[2642] وَجَعَلْنَا سِرَاجًا وَهَّاجًا ۝

14 And We send down from the clouds water pouring forth vehemently, وَأَنْزَلْنَا مِنَ الْمُعْصِرَاتِ مَاءً ثَجَّاجًا ۝

15 That We may bring forth thereby corn and herbs, لِنُخْرِجَ بِهِ حَبًّا وَنَبَاتًا ۝

16 And gardens dense and luxuriant. وَجَنَّاتٍ أَلْفَافًا ۝

17 Surely the day of decision is (a day) appointed:[2643] إِنَّ يَوْمَ الْفَصْلِ كَانَ مِيقَاتًا ۝

a 789. 18 The day on which the trumpet shall be blown[a] so you shall come forth in hosts, يَوْمَ يُنْفَخُ فِي الصُّورِ فَتَأْتُونَ أَفْوَاجًا ۝

19 And the heaven shall be opened so that it shall be all openings, وَفُتِحَتِ السَّمَاءُ فَكَانَتْ أَبْوَابًا ۝

b 1604. 20 And the mountains[b] shall be moved off so that they shall remain a mere semblance.[2644] وَسُيِّرَتِ الْجِبَالُ فَكَانَتْ سَرَابًا ۝

2641 The earth is called mihād and the mountains are called autād. Rgh explains mihād as a place made even for walking upon; and explains مهدت لك كذا as meaning I prepared it and made it even. He also says that the words here are similar to what is said in 2:22, where the earth is spoken of as being made a firāsh, i.e. an expanse. Watid (plural autād) is a peg or a stake fixed in the ground or in a wall, and the mountains are likened to pegs on the surface of the earth. And, in fact, watid is anything projecting from the surface; thus the teeth are called the اوتاد الفم (literally pegs of the mouth), and watid also signifies the prominent part next the temple (LA–LL).

2642 The seven strong ones of the previous verse are apparently the seven major planets of the solar system, the words above you clearly showing that the earth itself belongs to the same class, and the sun, the centre of the solar system, is spoken of in the words a shining lamp.

2643 The day of decision was witnessed by the opponents in this life in the field of Badr, and thus it demonstrated the truth of a day of decision in the next life.

2644 The description contained in vv. 18–20 is an excellent prophetical description

21 Surely hell lies in wait,
22 A place of resort for the inordinate,
23 Living therein for long years.[2645]
24 They shall not taste therein cool nor drink
25 But boiling and intensely cold water,
26 Requital corresponding.[2646]
27 Surely they feared not the account,
28 And called Our communications a lie, giving the lie (to the truth).
29 And We have recorded everything in a book.
30 So taste! for We will not add to you aught but chastisement.[2647]

Or, writing it down.

إِنَّ جَهَنَّمَ كَانَتْ مِرْصَادًا ۝
لِّلطَّاغِينَ مَآبًا ۝
لَّابِثِينَ فِيهَا أَحْقَابًا ۝
لَّا يَذُوقُونَ فِيهَا بَرْدًا وَلَا شَرَابًا ۝
إِلَّا حَمِيمًا وَغَسَّاقًا ۝
جَزَاءً وِفَاقًا ۝
إِنَّهُمْ كَانُوا لَا يَرْجُونَ حِسَابًا ۝
وَكَذَّبُوا بِآيَاتِنَا كِذَّابًا ۝
وَكُلَّ شَيْءٍ أَحْصَيْنَاهُ كِتَابًا ۝
فَذُوقُوا فَلَن نَّزِيدَكُمْ إِلَّا عَذَابًا ۝

applying to the meeting of the armies (v. 18) on the day of Badr, to the rain poured forth (v. 19), and to the chiefs of the Quraish killed (v. 20). That these things will take place at the greater resurrection goes without saying. The opening of heaven signifies metaphorically the descent of the threatened punishment.

2645 Ḥuqub, of which aḥqáb is a plural, denotes eighty years, or seventy years, or a year or years, or a long time (see LL, which quotes various authorities for each of these meanings). Whatever significance may be adopted, the use of the word leaves no doubt that the punishment of hell shall not continue for an unlimited time. The use of a word which signifies a limited period in the case of the punishment of hell, while such words are never used regarding the bliss of heavenly life, is a clear indication that the latter shall never come to an end, while the former shall. To escape the difficulty of the punishment of hell being for a limited period, some commentators say the verse is abrogated, others think that it applies not to unbelievers, but only to the sinful among the Muslims (an opinion quite untenable in face of what is said in vv. 27, 28); and again, that the limited period is only that during which they shall not be made to taste o cool or drink. But all these explanations are unnecessary and unsatisfactory, the limited duration of the punishment of hell being quite in accordance with the entire spirit of the Holy Qur-án and with its description elsewhere; see 1201.

2646 The description of the punishment of hell as corresponding requital throws a flood of light on the Islamic doctrine of hell. It may have been noted that various names are given to hell itself, and various sorts of punishment are spoken of. It is, in fact, the different nature of the sin that produces a difference in the nature of the punishment, which, being really the consequence of the sin, corresponds to the sin. For instance, the punishment spoken of here is for those who are called the inordinate or those exceeding the limits in disobedience (LL). The punishment of their exceeding the limits is correspondingly either too hot or too cold drink or air, i.e. excess of heat and excess of cold.

It may be added that the word ghassáq signifies the cold thing which is so cold that it is unbearable (Rz). It is interpreted in other ways too, but he significance adopted is the one that best suits the context.

2647 As they in their inordinacy added evil to evil, they shall have correspondingly punishment added to punishment. It is not stated here that this shall go on for ever, for elsewhere it is said: "And he who brings an evil deed shall not be recompensed but with the like of it, and they shall not be dealt with unjustly" (6:161). Thus the addition in punishment will last only till the evil deeds of the doer are exhausted.

The Day of Decision

31-36. Reward of the faithful. 37-39. Allah is the only refuge. 40. Unbelievers shall regret.

31 Surely for those who guard (against evil) is achievement,[2648]

33 And those showing freshness of youth,[2649] equals in age,[a]
34 And a pure cup.[2650]
35 They shall not hear therein any vain words nor lying.
36 A reward from your Lord, a gift according to a reckoning:[2651]
37 The Lord of the heavens and the earth and what is between them, the Beneficent God, they shall not be able to address Him.
38 The day on which the spirit and the angels shall stand in ranks; they shall not speak except he whom the Beneficent God permits and who speaks the right thing.
39 That is the sure day, so whoever desires may take refuge with his Lord.
40 Surely We have warned you of a chastisement near at hand:[2652] the day when man shall see what his two hands have sent before, and the unbeliever shall say: O! would that I were dust!

ذَٰلِكَ الْيَوْمُ الْحَقُّ ۖ فَمَنْ شَاءَ اتَّخَذَ إِلَىٰ رَبِّهِ مَآبًا ۝
إِنَّا أَنْذَرْنَاكُمْ عَذَابًا قَرِيبًا ۚ يَوْمَ

الْكَافِرُ يَا لَيْتَنِي كُنْتُ تُرَابًا ۝

2648 Note that the reward of good is achievement, as repeatedly described in the Holy Qur-án; it is an achievement of the object of this life as also of the great goal of the next life. It is this achievement which becomes a garden for a man.

2649 The word Ka'aba literally signifies, when applied to a girl's breast, its swelling when she grows youthful, and a girl is said to be Ká'ib (plural Kawá'ib) when she grows youthful, or nears maturity, and her breasts begin to swell (LL). But it should be noted that neither the word kawá'ib nor atráb is preceded or followed by the word járiyah (i.e. girl), and hence as a qualifying word kawá'ib only means showing freshness of youth. I have already stated, in 2356, why some of the blessings of paradise are described in words usually applicable to women, but as these are only fruits of the righteous deeds, we are not justified in saying what these blessings actually are. The description given here probably indicates that the fruits of deeds will appear in their full freshness.

2650 Diháq means either pure, for which we have 'Ikrama's authority, or it means full, which is the interpretation adopted by I'Ab (Rz).

2651 Note as the punishment of evil is called a corresponding requital, so the reward of the good is called a gift according to a reckoning, i.e. in accordance with the good done.

2652 The punishment of which the unbelievers are warned throughout this chapter is a punishment near at hand, which term, like the nearer punishment of 23:21, indicates the punishment of this life.

Abstract:

Sec. 1. The great commotion.
Sec. 2. The great calamity.

General remarks.

THIS chapter receives its title from the description of the believers as drawing forth to the full, the reference being to the later wars and the drawing of bows, thus indicating that the fall of the unbelievers, their doom, with which the last chapter deals, was to be brought about in wars. The fate of Pharaoh, who was drowned while pursuing the Israelites, is referred to, while the second section, after recounting Divine benefits, speaks of the certainty of the punishment, here as well as hereafter.

About its date of revelation it can be said with certainty that it belongs to the early Meccan period.

2653 We shall first consider the plain meaning of these five verses. Názi'át is the plural of Názi', which is derived from naza'a, signifying he drew, and نزع فى القوس means he drew the bow (Q-LL). Gharqan bears the significance to the full, also in connection with the bow, for you say غرق فى القوس meaning he drew the bow to the full (LL). "According to ISh ighráq signifies the sending the arrow far by vehement drawing (of the

Or, preparers shall prepare for war.

12 They said: That then would be a return occasioning loss.

bow); according to Useyd-al Ghanawee, the drawing of the bow so that it brings the sinews that are wound upon the socket of the arrow, so far as the iron head, to the part that is grasped by the hand" (LL). Nashaṭa- signifies he was brisk, or he went forth (TA-LL). Sab-ḥ signifies the running of a horse, in which the forelegs are stretched forth well (like as are the arms of a man in swimming) (TA-LL), and the act of being quick or swift (Mft-LL). The remaining words need no explanation. The commencement of the early Meccan suras very often refers prophetically to later Medina events, the occurrence of which served as a proof of the truth of the statements made. Those that draw forth to the full are the archers, those that go forth briskly are the arrows, those that run swiftly and go ahead are the horses, and those that regulate the affair are either the angels or the leaders who have control, the affair undoubtedly being the victory of the Muslims and the destruction of the enemy, as the subsequent verses show. This explanation agrees generally with that of Abu Muslim, as quoted by Rz, and is the one that best agrees with the context and the similar commencement of other chapters.

2654 Rajafa signifies it was in a state of commotion, agitation, or convulsion (Q-LL), but رجفت القوم means the people or party prepared themselves for war (Lth, O, Q-LL). As rájifah is not followed by any qualifying words, it may as well signify the party preparing for war as the quaking earth. Though the first meaning suits the context and the mention of the archers and the horses in the previous verses, I leave it for the margin, for even the significance adopted leads to the conclusion that wars are prophetically spoken of here, for the quaking of the land or its being in a state of commotion would signify the commotion or disturbance among the inhabitants. A general war brings about a greater commotion in the land than an earthquake. See 33 : 11, where, a great battle being forced upon the Muslims, they are spoken of as being shaken with a severe shaking.

2655 What must happen afterwards in the translation stands for the single word ar-rádifah in the original, as this is the literal significance of the nominative from radifa, meaning he or it followed or came after it or him (LL). In fact, rádifah would mean the consequence of an affair, a significance given under the word ridf by the lexicologists (S, O, Q-LL). The thing that must happen afterwards is the departure of the power of the Meccan opponents, or the destruction of the enemy, and this appears to be the true aim of the prophecies contained in these verses, as the mention of the palpitating hearts and cast-down eyes in the next two verses shows.

2656 It is the opponents who are referred to in they say. It is not meant that they shall say it when all the events spoken of in the previous verses have come to pass, but that they say this now, being deniers of the resurrection.

14 When lo! they shall be wakeful.

SECTION 2

The Great Calamity

27–33. Divine benefits on man. 34–41. The befalling of calamity. 42–46. The hour of doom.

27 Are you the stronger in creation or the heaven? He made it.

أَأَنْتُمْ أَشَدُّ خَلْقًا أَمِ السَّمَاءُ ۚ
بَنَاهَا ۝

28 He raised high its height,[2658] then put it into a right good state.

29 And He made dark its night and brought out its light.

وَأَغْطَشَ لَيْلَهَا وَأَخْرَجَ ضُحَاهَا ۝

2657 The Holy Qur-án always makes itself clear by quoting instances of the fate of the previous peoples. The nature of the punishment in store for the Meccans is made clear by citing the example of Pharaoh, the opponent of Moses, whose resemblance to the Holy Prophet is stated in 73:15, and elsewhere. And how distinctly is it stated that Pharaoh's punishment was the punishment of the hereafter as well as the former life. Even such was to be the punishment of the Meccan opponents, hence there was a sure lesson for them in Pharaoh's fate as stated in the next verse.

2658 Samk means the extent of a thing from the bottom to the top of it, as opposed to 'umq, which signifies the extent of a thing from the top to the bottom of it (Rz). Hence samk signifies height and 'umq depth. The raising high of the height is, says Rz, an allusion to its extremely great height.

30 And the earth, He expanded it after that.[2659]

وَالْاَرْضَ بَعْدَ ذٰلِكَ دَحٰىهَا ۝

31 He brought forth from it its water and its pasturage.

32 And the mountains, He made them firm,

وَالْجِبَالَ اَرْسٰىهَا ۝

33 A provision for you and for your cattle.

مَتَاعًا لَّكُمْ وَلِاَنْعَامِكُمْ ۝

34 But when the great predominating calamity[2660] comes;

فَاِذَا جَآءَتِ الطَّآمَّةُ الْكُبْرٰى ۝

35 The day on which man shall recollect what he strove after,

يَوْمَ يَتَذَكَّرُ الْاِنْسَانُ مَا سَعٰى ۝

36 And the hell shall be made manifest to him who sees.

وَبُرِّزَتِ الْجَحِيْمُ لِمَنْ يَّرٰى ۝

37 Then as for him who is inordinate,

فَاَمَّا مَنْ طَغٰى ۝

38 And prefers the life of this world,

وَاٰثَرَ الْحَيٰوةَ الدُّنْيَا ۝

39 Then surely the hell, that is the abode.

فَاِنَّ الْجَحِيْمَ هِيَ الْمَاْوٰى ۝

40 And as for him who fears to stand in the presence of his Lord and forbids the soul from low desires,[2661]

وَاَمَّا مَنْ خَافَ مَقَامَ رَبِّهٖ وَنَهَى النَّفْسَ عَنِ الْهَوٰى ۝

41 Then surely the garden—that is the abode.

فَاِنَّ الْجَنَّةَ هِيَ الْمَاْوٰى ۝

Ar. thee. Or, when will be its taking place?

42 They ask you about the hour, whither is its destination?

يَسْـَٔلُوْنَكَ عَنِ السَّاعَةِ اَيَّانَ مُرْسٰىهَا ۝

Ar. thou art.

43 About what? You are one to remind of it.

فِيْمَ اَنْتَ مِنْ ذِكْرٰىهَا ۝

Ar. thy.

44 To your Lord is the goal of it.

اِلٰى رَبِّكَ مُنْتَهٰىهَا ۝

Ar. thou art.

45 You are only a warner to him who would fear it.

اِنَّمَآ اَنْتَ مُنْذِرُ مَنْ يَّخْشٰىهَا ۝

46 On the day that they see it, it will be as though they had not tarried but the latter part of a day or the early part of it.

كَاَنَّهُمْ يَوْمَ يَرَوْنَهَا لَمْ يَلْبَثُوْٓا اِلَّا عَشِيَّةً اَوْ ضُحٰىهَا ۝

2659 This is a clear statement that the earth was made after the heaven. No statement elsewhere should be so interpreted as to contradict this clear statement.

2660 Ṭámmah signifies a calamity that predominates over others (Q, Har-LL) or a great or formidable thing (TA-LL). By the aṭ-ṭámmah is generally understood only the Resurrection, but it would be equally applicable to any great calamity such as overtakes a whole nation, for instance. And, as I have shown, such words when used in the Holy Qur-án convey a double meaning, signifying the calamity that was to happen in this life as well as the greater calamity in the hereafter. The words of v. 36, in fact, show that the reference is more to the calamity of this life, for there it is said that hell shall on that day be made manifest to him who sees, not to all, so that it will be only a partial manifestation such as often occurs in this life. The hell of the next life is spoken of in v. 39.

2661 Refraining from going after low desires is the chief source from which grows a paradise.

CHAPTER LXXX

HE FROWNED

('Abasa)

REVEALED AT MECCA

(42 verses)

SECTION 1

1–10. Prophet's frowning at the blind man. 11–16. Those who accepted the truth shall be made eminent. 17–32. Divine blessings on man. 33–42. The deafening cry.

In the name of Allah, the Beneficent, the Merciful.

بِسْمِ اللّٰهِ الرَّحْمٰنِ الرَّحِيْمِ ۝

1 He frowned and turned (his) back,

عَبَسَ وَتَوَلّٰىٓ ۝

2 Because there came to him the blind man.[2662]

اَنْ جَآءَهُ الْاَعْمٰى ۝

Ar. thee. 3 And what would make you know that he would purify himself,

وَمَا يُدْرِيْكَ لَعَلَّهٗ يَزَّكّٰىٓ ۝

General remarks.

OPENING with a touching incident as to how a blind man interfered with the Holy Prophet's conversation with some of the chiefs of the Quraish, and how he frowned at this interference, this chapter, to which the incident gives its title, really states that those poor and humble followers who had accepted the truth would be raised to eminence, and therefore the Prophet should not be anxious if eminent men did not listen to his message, for while these humble Muslims would be raised to high positions, the eminent men who rejected the message would be abased. The chapter thus speaks of the greatness to which the Qur-án would raise its followers, and of its conquests in the far future. It is admittedly one of the very early revelations, and as such its announcements relating to the future deserve to be especially noted.

2662 The very words of these verses show that they relate an incident which had actually taken place. And the story of the blind man finds a place in the most trustworthy accounts, so that there is not the least reason to doubt it. The blind man was Ibn-i-Umm-i-Maktum (Abdulla son of Shuraih), who came to the Holy Prophet while he was explaining the doctrines of Islam to an assembly made up of the leaders of the Quraish, hoping that the conversion of eminent men would end the troubles of Islam. The blind man, interrupting, asked to be taught what Allah had revealed to the Holy Prophet. The Holy Prophet took this untimely interruption ill—he frowned and turned his back; on which he received this revelation.

4 Or become reminded so that the reminder should profit him?

5 As for him who considers himself free from need (of you),

Ar. dost thou. Ar. thyself.
6 To him do you address yourself.

Ar. thee.
7 And no blame is on you if he would not purify himself.[2663]

Ar. thee.
8 And as to him who comes to you striving hard,

9 And he fears,

Ar. wilt thou. Ar. thyself.
10 From him will you divert yourself.

11 Nay! surely it is (a source of) eminence.

12 So let him who pleases mind it.

13 In honoured books,

14 Exalted, purified,

15 In the hands of scribes,

أَوْ يَذَّكَّرُ فَتَنْفَعَهُ الذِّكْرٰى ○
أَمَّا مَنِ اسْتَغْنٰى ○
فَأَنْتَ لَهُ تَصَدّٰى ○
وَمَا عَلَيْكَ أَلَّا يَزَّكّٰى ○
وَأَمَّا مَنْ جَآءَكَ يَسْعٰى ○
وَهُوَ يَخْشٰى ○
فَأَنْتَ عَنْهُ تَلَهّٰى ○
كَلَّآ إِنَّهَا تَذْكِرَةٌ ○

فِيْ صُحُفٍ مُّكَرَّمَةٍ ○
مَّرْفُوْعَةٍ مُّطَهَّرَةٍ ○
بِأَيْدِيْ سَفَرَةٍ ○

This incident shows that the source of the Holy Prophet's revelation was other than his own heart, for in the first place there was no ill-treatment for which the Holy Prophet should have repented, as Rodwell supposes him to have done. In fact, the Prophet's inattention to an intruder while he had not yet finished his conversation was quite natural; he did not chide the intruder for his interruption, but only disliked it and gave him no answer, as the words of the Qur-án plainly show. Secondly, even if he may be supposed to have repented for not having given an answer to the blind man, it would have been sufficient to have recalled him and treated him more gently. At any rate, if it were left to the option of an individual, he himself would be the last person to give permanence to a reproval for his own act. However much a man may disapprove of what he has himself done, he will never consent to such disapproval being made an incident that should be repeated day and night by his own followers. Hence the source from which the Holy Prophet received his revelation was outside his own heart or his own inclinations. It is quite sufficient to show the magnanimity of the Prophet's heart that he never thought of suppressing a passage like this, but gave it the same wide publicity as he gave the passages containing his praise.

It may be noted that the chief trait of the Holy Prophet's character was his great regard for the poor. There are numerous incidents on record showing how he would do an old woman's work for her, and how he, even when the head of a State at Medina, would carry the load for one too weak to bear it; but no better description of this trait can be given than that contained in those words of comfort addressed by Khadija, the most intimate companion of his youth: "Never, never will Allah bring you to disgrace, for you are true to ties of relationship, and you honour your guest and you earn for the indigent and you help all in their real distresses" (Bkh). He not only loved the poor from his youth to his old age, from the time that he was an ordinary citizen to the time that he became the ruler of the whole of Arabia, but he himself chose to be classed among the poor in his life as well as in his death. Even when the wealth of Arabia lay at his feet, and his wives claimed a share in that wealth, he showed his readiness to sacrifice every comfort, but not the honour of remaining a poor man.

2663 If the Quraish leaders would not come out of the impurities of sin, the Prophet was not to blame for it, so that on their account he should even neglect the poor who came to him earnestly desirous to be delivered from the bondage of sin.

16 Noble, virtuous.[2664]

17 Cursed be man! how ungrateful is he!

18 Of what thing did He create him?

19 Of a small life-germ; He created him, then He empowered him,[2665]

Or made him according to a measure.

20 Then (as for) the way— He has made it easy (for him),

21 Then He causes him to die, then assigns to him a grave,

22 Then, when He pleases, He will raise him to life again.

23 Nay! but he has not done what He bade him.

24 Then let man look to his food,

25 That We pour down the water, pouring (it) down in abundance,

26 Then We cleave the earth, cleaving (it) asunder,

27 Then We cause to grow therein the grain,

28 And grapes and clover,

29 And the olive and the palm,

30 And thick gardens,

31 And fruits and herbage,

كِرَامٍۭ بَرَرَةٍ ۝

قُتِلَ الْإِنْسَانُ مَا أَكْفَرَهُ ۝

ثُمَّ أَمَاتَهُ فَأَقْبَرَهُ ۝

ثُمَّ إِذَا شَاءَ أَنْشَرَهُ ۝

كَلَّا لَمَّا يَقْضِ مَا أَمَرَهُ ۝

فَلْيَنْظُرِ الْإِنْسَانُ إِلَىٰ طَعَامِهِ ۝

أَنَّا صَبَبْنَا الْمَاءَ صَبًّا ۝

ثُمَّ شَقَقْنَا الْأَرْضَ شَقًّا ۝

فَأَنْبَتْنَا فِيهَا حَبًّا ۝

وَعِنَبًا وَقَضْبًا ۝

وَزَيْتُونًا وَنَخْلًا ۝

وَحَدَائِقَ غُلْبًا ۝

وَفَاكِهَةً وَأَبًّا ۝

2664 The six verses from 11 to 16 are really a comfort to the Holy Prophet for the hint contained in the first ten, that the leaders would not mind his warning or accept his message, and that therefore he must apply himself to the poor, who would be raised to eminence by the Qur-án. These verses tell him that the Qur-án is a tazkirah, which is generally translated a reminder; but see 855, where it is shown that the word zikr, with which tazkirah is really synonymous, signifies a source of eminence. In fact, the context here makes this meaning clear, for vv. 15 and 16 clearly state that its scribes shall be virtuous men, who shall be honoured in the world. Not only was this true of men like Abu Bakr, 'Umar, 'Usman, and 'Ali, who were among the first scribes of the Holy Qur-án, but even in its later history great rulers of empires earned their livelihood by writing copies of the Holy Qur-án. Hence the prophecy was given as a comfort to the Holy Prophet that he should not be grieved because the rich and the leaders did not accept him, for the poor who accepted him would be raised to eminence through the Holy Qur-án.

2665 Qaddara-hú sometimes carries the same significance as aqdara-hú, viz. he empowered him, enabled him, rendered him able (Msb, Q, LL), and the meaning here seems to be that Allah has not only created man, but has also given him power and ability, so that he can make progress if he likes. Or, the meaning may be as given in the margin, in which case the significance would be that He has allotted to man a certain sphere, as He has done to everything else, in which he can make progress. It does not mean that Allah has decreed that such and such a man should do such and such good and such and such evil deeds.

32 A provision for you and for your cattle.

33 But when the deafening cry comes,[2666]

34 The day on which a man shall fly from his brother,

35 And his mother and his father,

36 And his spouse and his sons—

37 Every man of them shall on that day have an affair which will occupy him.

38 (Many) faces on that day shall be bright,

39 Laughing, joyous.

40 And (many) faces on that day, on them shall be dust,

41 Darkness shall cover them.[2667]

42 These are they who are unbelievers, the wicked.

2666 Ṣâkhkhah is derived from صخ الاذن meaning it (a sound) deafened the ear by its vehemence, and hence it literally signifies a cry that deafens by its vehemence (S, Q-LL). Hence it is made to apply to the day of resurrection; but it also means any calamity or misfortune (Q-LL), or a severe calamity (TA-LL).

2667 The brightness of the faces spoken of here indicates their joy; their being covered by the darkness indicates sorrow or gloom.

CHAPTER LXXXI

THE FOLDING UP

(At-Takwir)

REVEALED AT MECCA

(29 verses)

In the name of Allah, the Beneficent, the Merciful.	بِسْمِ اللّٰهِ الرَّحْمٰنِ الرَّحِيْمِ ۝
1 When the sun is covered,[2668]	إِذَا الشَّمْسُ كُوِّرَتْ ۝
2 And when the stars darken,[2669]	وَإِذَا النُّجُوْمُ انْكَدَرَتْ ۝

General remarks.

THIS chapter, whose title is taken from the statement made in the first verse relating to the folding up of the sun (for the significance of which see 2668), also speaks prophetically of the greatness to which Islam would rise, and of the utter failure of all opposition to it. It speaks of many things which took place in the lifetime of the Holy Prophet, but at the same time it contains many references to the distant future, and refers to things which are clearly being witnessed in our own time. The consequence of all that is stated is that the final triumph of Islam in Arabia, and through Arabia over the whole world, is the greatest of all certainties. The chapter is one of the earliest revelations of the Holy Prophet. There being no doubt regarding its early revelation, the concluding statement that the Qur-án was a reminder for the whole world, i.e. for all nations and all ages, deserves to be specially noted.

2668 The first thirteen verses contain twelve signs of what is generally supposed to be the resurrection, but which I think to be prophetical references, in metaphorical language, pointing to the final subjugation of the powerful opponents of the Holy Prophet (including his contemporaries who opposed him personally and those more distant ones who are inimical to the cause of the truth he taught), the result being stated in the words, it is the word of an honoured Apostle, possessor of strength, one to be obeyed; and from v. 19 onwards the significance is that the happening of all these things would establish that the Holy Prophet is an honoured Apostle, who is not weak as the opponents think, but the possessor of strength, and that he is one who shall be obeyed. The covering of the sun is an indication that the day of the good fortune of the opponents of Islam would be over, and that they would be in the darkness of difficulties and distress.

2669 The darkening of the stars indicates complete darkness, for when the sun is set the light of the stars helps men. But here we are told that not only would the light of their day disappear, but even the small lights, to which the traveller looks on in the darkness of the night, would become so dark that not the faintest ray of light would be left for them.

3 And when the mountains are made to pass away,[2670]
4 And when the camels are left,[2671]
5 And when the wild animals are made to go forth,[2672]
6 And when the cities are set on fire,[2673]

Or, seas.
Or, made to swell.

وَإِذَا الْجِبَالُ سُيِّرَتْ ۝
وَإِذَا الْعِشَارُ عُطِّلَتْ ۝
وَإِذَا الْوُحُوشُ حُشِرَتْ ۝
وَإِذَا الْبِحَارُ سُجِّرَتْ ۝

2670 The passing away of the mountains signifies the passing away of the great men, the leaders of the opponents ; see 1604.

2671 This draws attention to the horrors of war, the meaning being that when there is a state of general warfare the camels are left without a herd to tend them. Thus عطلت الابل means I left the camels without a herd to tend them (Msb-LL). Or because the 'Ishár or she-camels (that have been ten months pregnant) are most precious to their owners, their being left indicates the terrors of the disaster, or because the horses, and not the camels, are needed in wars. But it may be added that similar words occur in a saying of the Holy Prophet as one of the signs of the latter days, when Islam would be once more trampled under feet, and when the Messiah would be raised among the Muslims to establish the superiority of Islam over all other religions of the world. The words of this saying are ليتركن القلاص فلا يسعى عليها i.e. the camels shall certainly be neglected so that they shall not be used for going swiftly (from place to place). The reference in this saying seems clearly to be to the time when a swifter mode of journeying will come into existence. The railway systems of the world, and more especially the extension of that system into Arabia itself, clearly fulfils this prophecy. It would thus appear that the prophecies announced here relate to the time of the Holy Prophet as well as to future ages. It may, however, be noted that the neglecting of the camels cannot happen on the day of the resurrection.

2672 Ḥashara-hú signifies he made him to go forth (LL). The going forth of the wild animals is also in reference to battles, because when men assemble for war in the deserts the wild animals take flight.

2673 I make a departure here from the ordinary translations, leaving the usual significance adopted by interpreters for the margin, but which I may explain first. Taking the ordinary significance of the words, it may be noted that the words used are almost the same as in 52 : 6, where البحر المسجور or the swollen sea, is mentioned, as indicating the frustration of the power of the opponents of the Holy Prophet by calling attention to the fate of the opponents of Moses, who were drowned in the swollen sea.

Apart from that, the word baḥr stands for destruction in Arab proverbs, the reason being that unforeseen destruction is more frequently associated with the sea than with the land, for in the former case there is no help near at hand, and because there was very little hope of the safe return of those who travelled by the sea in early days, for whom a swollen sea meant almost a sure destruction. Thus we have the Arab saying, يا هادي الليل جرت انما هو البحر او الفجر which TA explains thus: O guide of the night, thou hast deviated from the right way, it is only destruction, or thou wilt see the daybreak (LL). Exactly in the same way may be explained the phrase و اذا البحار فجرت occurring in 82 : 3, the word fujjirat carrying the same significance as the word sujjirat here. Ka'b's interpretation that by al-biḥár, or the seas, is here meant hell (LL) supports the view advanced here, that by the swelling of the seas, if that interpretation is adopted, is meant the destruction of the enemy. Another interpretation (see the significance of sujjirat in what follows) would be, when the seas are set on fire, the allusion in this case being to some such general conflagration as should set the very seas on fire. Such a conflagration took place

7 And when men are united,[2674]	وَإِذَا النُّفُوسُ زُوِّجَتْ ۝
8 And when the one buried alive is asked	وَإِذَا الْمَوْءُدَةُ سُئِلَتْ ۝
9 For what sin she was killed,[2675]	بِأَيِّ ذَنْبٍ قُتِلَتْ ۝
10 And when the books are spread,[2676]	وَإِذَا الصُّحُفُ نُشِرَتْ ۝
11 And when the heaven has its covering removed,[2677]	وَإِذَا السَّمَآءُ كُشِطَتْ ۝

in Arabia in the lifetime of the Holy Prophet, and at the present time the world has been caught in such another conflagration in the great European war which has actually set the seas on fire.

As for the translation I have adopted, it is based on an equally literal interpretation of the words. The word biḥár is the plural of baḥr as well as of baḥrah (TA-LL), and baḥrah is synonymous with baldah or arḍ (S, Q, TA, IAs), and it signifies a town or a village, "and the plural biḥár they apply to cities as well as towns or villages" (TA-LL). See also IAs, who says و العرب تسمى المدن و القرى البحار i.e. the Arabs call the cities and the towns al-biḥár. The words baḥrah (singular of biḥár) and buḥairah (diminutive of baḥrah) are also applied in a saying of the Holy Prophet to Medina. This would leave no doubt that cities is as literal a significance of the word biḥár as seas. As regards sujjirat, its interpretation as set on fire (LL) is accepted by all commentators, the fire representing the wars in which the Arab cities were soon to be engaged as a consequence of their strong opposition to the truth. For fire representing war see 5 : 64. The alternative meaning of sujjirat is mixed together (LL), and the reference in this case, too, is to the mixing together in wars, as is also indicated by the uniting of men in the verse that follows. Whatever interpretation may be adopted, the significance is either the destruction of the powerful enemy or the occurrence of wars.

2674 The meaning is, when each sect or party shall be united with those whom it has followed (TA-LL) in preparing for the war.

2675 The reference here is to the burying alive of the daughters, a practice common among the pre-Islamic Arabs, who, either for fear of hunger or disgrace, buried alive their female children. The questioning refers to the time when, with the predominance of Islam in Arabia, this barbarous practice was to be abolished.

2676 Ṣuḥuf is the plural of ṣaḥífah, which means a written piece of paper or of skin. The reference seems to be to the circulation of written copies of the Holy Qur-án or its portions, as it is these that are called honoured books in 80 : 13. To bring it about it was necessary that the forces of opposition should first be made to vanish. This may also be a prophetic reference to the distant future, which has witnessed the circulation of books and papers to an almost incredible extent. The Muslim world did immense service to the cause of the circulation of literature in the days of its prosperity, and it is recognized on all hands that the revival of learning in Europe, which has brought about the great circulation of books and papers, was itself a direct result of the impetus which Islam gave to the study of letters. Thus there seems to be a double reference in these prophetic utterances: a reference to the time of the Holy Prophet and a reference to what are called the latter days in prophetic language. And the wonderful fulfilment of these prophecies in our own days is an indisputable proof of the Divine origin of the Holy Qur-án, for none but the Omniscient God could reveal such deep secrets of the future with such clearness at such a distance of time.

2677 For an explanation of this and similar phrases see 2593. The removal of the covering of the heaven signifies the uncovering of the punishment, for the heaven, as it were, stands for protection against disasters, or because great calamities are spoken of as coming

20 The possessor of strength, having an honourable place with the Lord of the Dominion,
21 One (to be) obeyed, and faithful in trust.[2683] down from heaven. The same significance attaches to such forms as اذا السماء انفطرت i.e. when the heaven is cleft asunder (82 : 1) and اذا السماء انشقت i.e. when the heaven (or cloud) is burst asunder (84 : 1). Compare 21 : 32 and 104, and see 1665.

2678 The kindling up of the hell signifies its being made ready to receive those opponents of the truth who will be punished in this life. Or it signifies the raging of war, which should destroy the enemies of truth.

2679 The bringing nigh of the garden signifies fulfilment, in part, of the prophecies relating to the reward of the faithful, for they were promised gardens in this life as well as in the next. Their triumph over the unbelievers was thus an indication of the nearness of the gardens promised to them.

2680 The Holy Prophet's words addressed to the slain from among the unbelievers at Badr explain this as regards this life : " Surely we have found what our Lord promised to us to be true : Have you also found what your Lord promised to you to be true ? "

2681 Al-khunnas is the plural of khânis (from khanasa, meaning he went back), meaning going backward, and signifies the stars in general, because they retire or hide themselves at setting, or because they become concealed in the day-time (S-LL), or the planets (Saturn, Jupiter, Mars, Venus, and Mercury), because of their retrogression (S, Q-LL). Al-kunnas is the plural of kânis (from kanasa, meaning he, an antelope, entered his kinâs, i.e. his hiding-place), meaning an antelope entering his hiding-place (S-LL), and signifies the stars that hide themselves in their places of setting (TA-LL), or the planets, for a similar reason (TA-LL). The calling to witness of the stars that run their course and hide themselves also draws attention to the disasters that awaited the opponents of the truth, for which significance see 2371.

2682 The departing of the night and the rise of the bright morning is clearly the disappearance of the darkness of ignorance, giving place to the bright light of the sun of Islam.

2683 The commentators generally suppose the angel Gabriel to be referred to in vv. 19–21, because they think that the reference in v. 23 is to the angel Gabriel. But the only conclusion to which the words of the Qur-án lead is that the reference is to the Holy Prophet himself, who is clearly spoken of as your companion. He had earned the reputation of being al-amîn, i.e. the faithful one, in Arabia. His being a muṭâ' or one to be

22 And your companion is not gone mad.
23 And of a truth he saw himself on the clear horizon.[2684]
24 Nor of the unseen is he a tenacious concealer.[2685]
25 Nor is it the word of the cursed devil,[2686]
26 Whither then will you go ?[2687]

obeyed, is also spoken of elsewhere in the Holy Qur-án in 4: 64, "And we did not send any apostle but that he should be obeyed by Allah's permission." His being possessor of strength and honourable prophetically refers to his future career and to his ultimate triumph over his enemies.

2684 The Prophet's seeing himself on the clear horizon is in reference to the resplendence of his light, for which compare 53 : 7, and see 2376.

2685 The Prophet (not Gabriel) is here declared to be not a tenacious concealer of the unseen, showing that there are some great prophecies relating to the future in what has gone before. And in fact, as I have shown, the chapter opens with prophecies of the disasters in store for the opponents, while the latter part speaks clearly of the great and triumphant future of the Holy Prophet.

2686 It is not the word of the devil, i.e. these are not the conjectures of a soothsayer: the prophecies of the Qur-án shall be duly fulfilled. Sale's comment is worthy of note: "The verse is an answer to a calumny of the infidels, who said the Qur-án was only a piece of divination or magic; for the Arabs suppose the soothsayer or magician receives his intelligence from those evil spirits who are continually listening to learn what they can from the inhabitants of heaven." It should be borne in mind that where the Qur-án speaks of the listening by stealth of the devils, it is in reference to this old Arab belief. It nowhere refers to this belief in words which would show that it upholds this old Arab belief; on the other hand, there are ample indications that it rejects this belief.

2687 When the prophecies are brought to fulfilment, no refuge shall be left for you.

2688 How beautifully clear are the words of the Qur-án! It is a source of eminence for all the nations of the world, yet, not unless people will follow its directions; hence it adds the words, For him among you who pleases to go straight.

CHAPTER LXXXII

THE CLEAVING ASUNDER

(Al-Infiṭár)

REVEALED AT MECCA

(19 verses)

	In the name of Allah, the Beneficent, the Merciful.	بِسْمِ اللّٰهِ الرَّحْمٰنِ الرَّحِيْمِ ۝
Or, cloud.	1 When the heaven becomes cleft asunder,	إِذَا السَّمَآءُ انْفَطَرَتْ ۝

	4 And when the graves are laid open,[2689]	وَإِذَا الْقُبُوْرُ بُعْثِرَتْ ۝

General remarks.

THIS chapter, which receives its title from a statement made in its opening verses as to heaven being cleft asunder, is, as it were, a counterpart of the one preceding it; for while that chapter, after mentioning certain signs, draws the conclusion of the final triumph of Islam, this refers to that triumph in its opening verses, and as a result of that triumph speaks also of the utter helplessness in which the opponents would find themselves. Its date of revelation does not differ much from that of the preceding chapter.

2689 The first four verses here tell us how a great spiritual rising would be brought about. The cleaving asunder of the heaven stands for the descent of the punishment on the opponents (see 2593), or if samá is taken here as meaning cloud, as noted in the margin, the meaning may be when the cloud bursts asunder and pours forth water on the dead earth; the reference in this case being to the revelation, which is likened to rain. The dispersing of the stars either signifies their disappearance, in which case the reference is to the disasters that should overtake the opponents (see 2371), or it is in reference to the spreading forth of the teachers of Islam, who are likened to stars. The indication is that a time would come when the teachers of truth would disperse themselves in Arabia, and then throughout the whole of the world. The flowing forth of the rivers is in accordance with what is stated elsewhere in the Holy Qur-án in a parable in 13 : 17 : "He sends down water from the clouds, then watercourses flow with water according to their measure. . . . Thus does Allah set forth parables." The rivers flowing forth were the righteous followers of the Prophet, who, being filled with Divine knowledge, made it reach the dry lands within and without Arabia. (But see also 2673.) The laying open of the graves signifies the spiritual resurrection which was to be brought about by the Holy Prophet, for the reprobates are clearly spoken of as being in the graves (35 : 22). Thus all these four verses speak of the great change that was to be brought about in Arabia by the preaching of the Prophet, while it need not be denied that there may be a deeper reference to the great Resurrection of the dead.

5 Every soul shall know what it has sent before and held back.[2690]

يَوْمَ لَا تَمْلِكُ نَفْسٌ لِّنَفْسٍ شَيْئًا ط
وَالْأَمْرُ يَوْمَئِذٍ لِّلَّهِ ۝

2690 This verse supports what is said in the previous note. Qaffal holds that the knowledge spoken of here will accrue before the day of resurrection (Rz). A greater manifestation of the same will, however, take place in the life after death.

2691 That every action of man is recorded and bears fruit is one of the principal doctrines of the religion of Islam. Of course, it is not meant that angels are sitting with pens in their hands and inkstands before them, on desks, like copyists, noting down that at such and such a time such a one did such a good or such a bad deed. That would be a distortion of the teaching of the Qur-án. The terminology of writing down, books, and recorders is only meant to show that every deed is preserved so that it has a certain effect, for the best method known to man of preserving what has happened is writing. In what manner it is preserved, who the angels are that are charged with the duty of preserving it, in what form the books will appear as evidence against the guilty, are circumstances which are beyond the compass of the present state of our knowledge. But that all our actions are preserved, the effect of which we must fully witness, is a truth which cannot be denied. If the gramophone can record our very words as we utter them, in a manner previously unknown, why should it be regarded as strange that the recording of our actions is being done in some manner which we are unable to guess at present?

لِيَوْمٍ عَظِيْمٍ ○
يَّوْمَ يَقُوْمُ النَّاسُ لِرَبِّ الْعٰلَمِيْنَ ○

General remarks.

THIS chapter condemns the defaulters, and is accordingly so called. On the other hand, those who fulfil their duties shall be exalted. Thus it continues the subject-matter of the preceding chapters. Why do the righteous prosper? Because they fulfil their duties and are true to their obligations. Why do the guilty suffer and perish? Because they are defaulters and are not true to their responsibilities. It teaches the utmost rectitude in one's dealings. Its revelation belongs to the early Meccan period.

2692 By al-muṭaffifīn are not only meant those who give short measure in weighing or use false weights and measures. Muṭaffif, of which the word here used is a plural, is the nominative form of ṭaffafa, which signifies he made defective or deficient (TA-LL) in a general sense, and hence you say طفف على عياله meaning he scanted his household or stinted them in expenditure (TA-LL). And similarly طفف على الرجل signifies he gave to the man less than he had taken from him (TA-LL). A saying of 'Umar is recorded by IAs giving us an idea of the use of the word ṭaffafa. A man did not attend the prayer in time, and being questioned by 'Umar, offered some excuse, to which 'Umar replied, ṭaffafta, which IAs explains as meaning naqaṣta, i.e. you have made a default. Hence the muṭaffifīn are the defaulters, who make a default in any of their duties. The taking of the measure and the measuring out, in the next two verses, must also be read in a general sense.

كَلَّآ اِنَّ كِتٰبَ الْاَبْرَارِ لَفِيْ عِلِّيِّيْنَ ؕ

2693 Sijjín is supposed by some to be the name of a place of the most degraded nature, but the occurrence of the word with al in a report shows that it is a common noun: و يوتى بكتابه مختوما فيوضع في السجين (IAs). And LA gives sijjín as the equivalent of sijn, meaning a prison; this is also the interpretation preferred by Zj, A'Ub and Mubarrad (Rz). But this prison should not be taken as signifying a gaol, for the Qur-án itself explains what this prison is in the verses that follow. It is said to be a written book. This written book or record, which preserves the deeds of the evil-doers, is called a prison because it keeps their faculties for the doing of good shut up as within a prison, and the very consequences of their evil deeds hamper their progress. See vv. 14 and 15, where the actions of the evil-doers are spoken of as becoming a rust on their hearts, and they are further referred to as being debarred from their Lord.

2694 The punishment of the wicked is here described as their being debarred from their Lord. That is their punishment in this life as well as their hell in the next, as plainly stated in the next verse.

2695 'Illiyyún is said by some to be the plural of 'illiy, and by others to be that of 'illiyyah, while still others hold that it has no singular (TA-LL). Like sijjín, some would make it a proper name, but others rightly consider it to mean (from 'alá, meaning it was high) اعلى الا مكنة و اشرف المراتب و اقربها من الله في الدار الآخرة i.e. the highest of places and the most exalted of grades and the one (bringing a man) nearest to Allah in the latter abode (IAs). But note that, like sijjín, it is not the name of a place but that of a record (v. 20); Q and Az give similar explanations. The highest places are thus the records of the best deeds, which enable a man to soar high and cut off the chains which bind him to low desires.

2696 Tasnim is generally taken to be a proper name, but bearing in mind what has been said regarding sijjin and 'illiyyûn, Zj's interpretation, a water coming upon them from above (LL), is preferable. The water coming from above signifies spiritually the knowledge of Allah (Rz), because it is from this source that those who are drawn nigh to Allah (v. 28) are made to drink. The nature of drinking and of water with regard to the next life cannot be explained in view of what the Holy Prophet said regarding the blessings of paradise: "which neither man's eye has seen, nor has man's ear heard, nor has it entered into the heart of a mortal to conceive of them."

2697 The laughing of the believers is not to be taken literally. The word dâḥikah, which literally means laughing, also occurs elsewhere regarding the faces of the righteous

35 On raised couches, they will look.	عَلَى الْأَرَآئِكِ يَنْظُرُوْنَ ۝

(80:39), and signifies only the brightness of hope in their faces. The laughing in this case simply expresses a condition of joy which should make one laugh. The reversal of the condition of the believers and the unbelievers, in fact, took place in this life, and though the Muslims were entitled to laugh at those who erstwhile laughed at them, they did not actually do so, but showed sympathy with them. This shows that their laughing in the hereafter is also spoken of metaphorically; the indication simply being that their position regarding supremacy would be such as was that of their enemies, who in that condition laughed at the believers.

Or, levelled.	3 And when the earth is stretched,[2700]	وَإِذَا الْأَرْضُ مُدَّتْ ۝

General remarks.

THIS chapter also receives its title from the statement made in the opening verse as to the bursting asunder of the cloud. The subject-matter is similar to that of the previous chapter: the reward of the righteous and the evil condition of those who indulge in evil is also asserted. It is regarded as one of the earliest revelations.

2698 The first five verses of this chapter speak of an ordinary phenomenon of nature, viz. the coming down of rain and the growth of vegetation, as a reference to the transformation which was to be brought about by the Divine revelation. For as-samá, meaning cloud, see 33. As attention is called to this phenomenon very often in the Holy Qur-án, when as-sama and al-arḍ are spoken of together, I leave the ordinary meaning for the margin, the significance of the words in the latter case being explained in 2593.

2699 أذن له signifies he listened to him (LL). By the cloud or heaven listening to its Lord here, and the earth listening to its Lord in v. 5, is meant their obedience to His commandment. To both phrases is added the word ḥuqqat, signifying that they are made suitable or fit for listening to and obeying the Divine commandments, i.e. it is their very nature to be entirely submissive to the Divine commandments.

2700 Maddahú signifies he pulled it, strained it, extended it by drawing or pulling, stretched it, extended it (LL). The stretching of the earth signifies the same as its stirring and swelling in 22 : 5 and 41 : 39, " And among His signs is that you see the earth still, but when We send down on it the water, it stirs and swells " (41 : 39) ; see 2210, where the meaning is explained to be the producing of herbage, the expression here as there signifying metaphorically that Divine revelation gives spiritual life to men. The meaning of the earth being stretched is cleared up in the next verse: it casts forth what is in it and becomes empty, i.e. the treasures of life latent within it are brought to light by the coming down of the rain. In case the alternative meaning given in the margin is adopted, the levelling of the earth would mean the sweeping away of the great men who considered themselves as firm mountains, and its listening to the Lord would indicate the ultimate obedience of the people to the Divine commandments. That is, if we take the description to apply to this life. As regards the final disruption of the heaven and the earth no explanation is needed.

2701 This is the conclusion to which a consideration of the first five verses leads. Man must strive hard to attain to his Lord. Those who do this are ultimately joyful (v. 9), but those who give themselves up to the pleasures of this life (v. 13) shall afterwards be in a sad plight (v. 11).

2702 Verses 16–18 draw attention to another phenomenon of nature, thereby indicating the departure of the power of the Arabs. The shafaq, or the sunset redness, stands here for the disappearing sun of the power of the Arabs, the night of adversity which was now to overtake them, driving before it what vestige of light had remained. But they were not to remain submerged in darkness for ever, for the moon (the Holy Prophet) had already made its appearance and would soon grow full, when the Arab nation was to march forth to conquer the world.

2703 These words make the meaning of the first three verses clearer still. Their first state was one of power, which was now to wane before the Holy Prophet, being likened to the evening glow which remains for a short while and then departs; then there was to follow the night of adversity, entirely driving away the light, i.e. sweeping away every vestige of power before it; this was to be followed by a new state, in which the moon (the symbol of the Arab nation) was to appear in its full lustre. The commentators understand in this verse a prophecy of the final triumph of the Holy Prophet (Rz).

General remarks.

THIS chapter takes its title from the mention in the first verse of heaven full of stars, as referring to the prosperity of the Arab nation. Reference to past history shows that if they reject their prophet the star of their good fortune will set with the rejection. In the early Meccan period this chapter may be placed among the earlier revelations.

2704 The three opening verses draw a comparison between the first condition of the opponents of the Holy Prophet and their final state as predicted by the Holy Prophet. The heaven full of stars stands for a prosperous nation, for which see 2371. As against this prosperous state of the nation is the threatened day, i.e. the day of the downfall of their power, because it was with that that they were again and again threatened. The bearer of the witness is the prophet of a nation, and those against whom the witness is borne are the rejecters of the prophet (Rz). Attention is thus called to the fate of the previous opponents of the prophets, and the Arabs are told that the star of their good fortune is bound to disappear.

2705 The commentators give three different versions of the story supposed to be referred to in this verse, the most well known being that the reference is to the persecution of some Christians by Zu Nawas, a king of Yemen, who was of the Jewish religion (Rz). But Al-Baghwi thinks that the reference is to Nebuchadnezzar's casting Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego into the fiery furnace (Dan. 3 : 19–21). I think there may, as well, be a prophetical reference here to the great Arab army against which the Muslims were compelled to defend themselves by means of a trench, in what is called the battle of the Allies or the battle of the Ditch. The words of v. 7, and particularly of v. 10, clearly show that the reference here is to the enemies of the Holy Prophet, who persecuted the believing men and the believing women. The fire kept burning with the fuel need not be taken literally, for the fire stands for war.

8 And they did not take vengeance on them for aught except that they believed in Allah, the Mighty, the Praised,

9 Whose is the kingdom of the heavens and the earth; and Allah is a Witness of all things.

10 Surely (as for) those who persecute the believing men and the believing women, then do not repent, they shall have the chastisement of hell, and they shall have the chastisement of burning.

11 Surely (as for) those who believe and do good, they shall have gardens beneath which rivers flow, that is the great achievement.

2706 The word lauḥ, or tablet, occurring here, is the same as the alwáḥ (singular, lauḥ), or tablets, occurring regarding the book given to Moses (7 : 145, 150, 154). But whereas Moses' book was simply in some tablets, the Qur-án, to which the qualifying word glorious is added, as indicating that its followers shall be made great and glorious, is here spoken of as being in a guarded tablet. The significance of these words is simply this, that the Holy Qur-án shall be guarded against all attacks. There is no mention here or anywhere else in the Qur-án of the lauḥ-i-maḥfúẓ on which the decrees of God are written; but even if the reference here be to it, the significance is still the same, viz., that the Qur-án shall be fully guarded. Thus we have a promise regarding the protection of the Holy Qur-án from every kind of corruption in one of the earliest Meccan chapters. Rz also considers this to be the significance:

ان هذا قران مجيد مصئون عن التغير و التبدل

i.e. that this is a glorious Qur-án, protected against change and alteration.

وَالسَّمَآءِ وَالطَّارِقِ ○

وَمَآ اَدْرٰىكَ مَا الطَّارِقُ ○

النَّجْمُ الثَّاقِبُ ○

General remarks.

THIS chapter states how great was the difficulty which the Prophet had before him in bringing light to his benighted countrymen, and it is for this reason that he is called the comer by night in the first verse (which description gives the chapter its name), i.e. one who appeared at a time of total darkness and one who stood in need of knocking at the doors which were shut against him. But he is given the comfort that a spiritual resurrection will be brought about. Before his advent the whole world had been submerged in a gulf of ignorance, and the night had lasted for fully six hundred years, and it was no easy task to awaken the world from such a long and deep sleep. That the Holy Prophet was acquainted with the difficulties of his task is borne out in this chapter, which is classed among the earliest revelations. The reference to plans in vv. 15, 16 does not show that that part was revealed later, for while it is true that plans against the Prophet's life were formed very early, the reference in these verses may be prophetical.

2707 Táriq (from ṭarq, primarily meaning the striking a thing) originally signifies a comer by night, because one who comes by night finds the doors shut, and knocking at the doors becomes necessary (IAs). The comer by night is here the Holy Prophet; the revelation of the Qur-án is also spoken of as taking place on a blessed night (44 : 3 and 97 : 1). The reason is that the Holy Prophet appeared when total darkness spread on the earth, and no one ever stood more in need of knocking at the doors which were shut against him and fastened with strong bolts. It is noteworthy that Jesus compares his advent to that of a thief: "If the goodman of the house had known in what watch the thief would come, he would have watched. . . . Therefore be ye also ready: for in such an hour as ye think not the son of man cometh" (Matt. 24 : 43, 44). It may also be added that aṭ-ṭáriq is also the name given to the morning star (S, O, Q-LL), because it

4 There is not a soul but over it is a keeper.[2708]
5 So let man consider of what he is created:
6 He is created of water pouring forth,
7 Coming from between the back and the ribs.[2709]
8 Most surely He is able to return him (to life).
9 On the day when hidden things shall be made manifest,[2710]
10 He shall have neither strength nor helper.
a 2099. 11 Consider[a] the cloud pouring rain,[2711]
12 And the earth splitting (with plants);
13 Most surely it is a decisive word,[2712]

إِنْ كُلُّ نَفْسٍ لَّمَّا عَلَيْهَا حَافِظٌ ۝
فَلْيَنْظُرِ الْإِنْسَانُ مِمَّ خُلِقَ ۝

وَالسَّمَآءِ ذَاتِ الرَّجْعِ ۝
وَالْأَرْضِ ذَاتِ الصَّدْعِ ۝ إِنَّهُ لَقَوْلٌ فَصْلٌ ۝ comes in the end of the night. But in that sense too the word is applicable to a great man or a chief, as in the saying of Hind on the day of Uhud, quoting proverbially what was said by Az-Zarqa Al-Iyadeeyeh when Kisra warred with Iyad:

نحن بنات طارق + لا ننثنى لوامق + نمشى على النمارق

i.e. "We are the daughters of the morning-star: we bend not to a lover: we walk upon pillows, where the meaning is that we are the daughters of a chief, likening him to the star in elevation" (O, TA-LL).

In the third verse "the comer by night" is called النجم الثاقب or the star of piercing brightness (in reference to the other significance of aṭ-ṭáriq), indicating that the comer by night is a star of such resplendent brightness that all darkness will be dispelled before him.

2708 Though the words are general, and signify that the deeds done by man are guarded so that he cannot escape their consequences, there is also a comfort for the Holy Prophet here that his opponents shall not be able to harm him and that in time they shall meet their doom. This is made very clear at the end of the chapter.

2709 ماء دافق which may signify either water poured forth or water pouring forth, means the sperma genitale. The expression between the back and the ribs is a euphemism. A similar expression occurs in a saying of the Holy Prophet:

من يضمن لى ما بين لحييه و ما بين رجليه فاضمن له الجنة

i.e. Whoever gives me a guarantee as to what is between his two jaws and what is between his two feet I will guarantee for him the paradise; where what is between his two feet is a euphemism. Delicate subjects relating to sexual relations or sexual desires are never referred to in blunt words in the Holy Qur-án.

2710 Note this description of the day of resurrection. The hidden things are the consequences of one's good or evil deeds, which will be made palpably manifest in the shape of gardens and fruits or chains and fire.

2711 Raj' signifies matr, or rain (Zj-Rz), and this interpretation is generally accepted by the commentators; the connection with the root, meaning returning, is explained variously: "Because God returns it time after time, or because the clouds raise water from the seas and then return it to the earth" (Bḍ-LL).

2712 The decisive word is the Holy Qur-án. Just as when rain comes down, the earth

14 And it is no joke.

15 Surely they will fight a fight, — Or, make a scheme.

16 And I (too) will fight a fight. — Or, make a scheme.

17 So grant the unbelievers a respite: let them alone for a while :[2713]

وَمَا هُوَ بِالْهَزْلِ ۝

إِنَّهُمْ يَكِيدُونَ كَيْدًا ۝

وَأَكِيدُ كَيْدًا ۝

must produce vegetation, so the coming of the Divine revelation is bound to raise a dead nation to life, and no efforts against it would hamper its progress. There is also a reference to the doom of the unbelievers in v. 10 in the words he shall have neither strength nor helper.

2713 Whatever doubt there may be as to the significance of this chapter is dispelled by the last three verses, which speak of the plans of the opponents to destroy the Holy Prophet and the Divine promise that their doom will soon overtake them.

General remarks.

ATTENTION having been drawn to the difficulties of the Holy Prophet, we have here a promise that those difficulties will be made easy ; He will make your way smooth to a state of ease. The title of this chapter is taken from the injunction to the Prophet to glorify the Most High Lord, thus indicating the high position to which he would rise. The reference to the scriptures of Abraham and Moses in the concluding verse is to show not only that the Holy Qur-án agrees with previous scriptures in essential principles, but also that those scriptures contain prophecies of the Holy Prophet's advent. The chapter belongs to the early period of the Prophet's revelation at Mecca.

2714 The glorification of the Most High is an allusion to the high eminence to which the Prophet himself was to be raised.

2715 The making complete of the creation in v. 2 signifies its making such that it is adapted to the requirements of wisdom, which is the real meaning of the word sawwá. The third verse states that everything is made according to a certain measure so that it cannot go beyond that limit, and then Allah has shown to every created thing the way by which it can attain the perfection which is destined for it. The whole is in special reference to the Holy Prophet's attaining to the goal of his perfection, while the two verses that follow point to the fact that as herbage is dried up after a certain period, so the opponents of the Holy Prophet shall also be brought to naught.

2716 The illá (except) is here an استثناء منقطع the meaning being that the Prophet shall not forsake (or forget) anything which Allah has taught him, but he should the manifest, and what is hidden.

8 And We will make your way smooth to a state of ease.[2717] (Ar. thy.)

10 He who fears will mind,

12 Who shall enter the great fire;

14 He indeed shall be successful who purifies himself,
15 And magnifies the name of his Lord and prays.
16 Nay! you prefer the life of this world,
17 While the hereafter is better and more lasting.
18 Most surely this is in the earlier scriptures,
19 The scriptures of Abraham and Moses.[2720]

forsake such things as Allah pleases. For nisyán not only signifies actually forgetting a thing, but also forsaking it intentionally, for, as Rgh says, nisyán may be applied to that which is done intentionally. He says that nisyán is of three kinds, the last of which is described as being عن قصد حتى يحذف عن القلب ذكره i.e. purposely, so that man turns it out of his mind altogether. And even if the meaning of nisyán may be taken to be the forgetting of a thing, the 6th verse is, as Rgh holds, a guarantee from Allah that He will so ordain that the Prophet shall not forget what he hears of the truth. The words what Allah pleases therefore refer not to that which the Prophet learns from Allah, but that which he was made to forget, or forsake, because Divine revelation brought something better in its place. There is no mention of any doctrine of abrogation here. Compare 2 : 106 and see 152.

Moreover, it is absurd to suppose that any verse which the Prophet was made to forget was removed also from the writing to which it was consigned as soon as revealed or from the memories of the numerous companions who committed it to memory and recited it in their prayers. In fact, the chapter belongs to so early a period, that even if it be supposed for the sake of argument that abrogation was needed at a later period, it was not necessary at the time of the revelation of this chapter.

2717 The words predict the Prophet's triumph and the removal of the distress in which Islam was.

2718 For in, meaning qad, i.e. surely, see LL, which quotes numerous instances from the Qur-án as well as from Arabic literature and poetry.

2719 There is no life in hell, for life is only for the righteous; neither is there death, because death signifies a state of complete rest.

2720 The preference of the good of the hereafter to the transitory advantages of this life is the one great truth preached by all the Prophets. But the reference here is to the prophecies concerning the Holy Prophet which are to be found clearly indicated in the revelations granted respectively to Abraham and to Moses; see 168 and 70. Or, the essential principles of religion are meant, which are common to all the great religions.

General remarks.

THE overwhelming event, whose mention in the first verse supplies a name to this chapter, is the doom of the opponents in this life and their punishment hereafter. The date of revelation is placed about the fourth year of the Prophet's call, and all that we can safely do is to assign it to the early Meccan period of the Holy Prophet's revelation.

2721 The great "overwhelming event" is no doubt the resurrection, but the punishment of the opponents of the Holy Prophet is, it is equally true, the overwhelming event of this life, and the two descriptions of the two parties that follow apply to an utterly discomfited and disappointed enemy and to the faithful in the hour of their triumph.

13 Therein are thrones raised high,
فِيهَا سُرُرٌ مَّرْفُوعَةٌ

14 And drinking-cups ready placed,
وَأَكْوَابٌ مَّوْضُوعَةٌ

15 And cushions set in a row,
وَنَمَارِقُ مَصْفُوفَةٌ

16 And carpets spread out.
وَزَرَابِيُّ مَبْثُوثَةٌ

17 Will they not then consider the clouds, how they are created?[2722]
(Or, camels.)
أَفَلَا يَنظُرُونَ إِلَى الْإِبِلِ كَيْفَ خُلِقَتْ

19 And the mountains, how they are raised high,
(Or, set down.)
وَإِلَى الْجِبَالِ كَيْفَ نُصِبَتْ

20 And the earth, how it is made a vast expanse?
وَإِلَى الْأَرْضِ كَيْفَ سُطِحَتْ

21 Therefore do remind, for you are only a reminder.
(Ar. thou art.)
فَذَكِّرْ إِنَّمَا أَنتَ مُذَكِّرٌ

22 You are not a watcher over them;
(Ar. thou art.)
لَّسْتَ عَلَيْهِم بِمُصَيْطِرٍ

23 But whoever turns back and disbelieves,
إِلَّا مَن تَوَلَّىٰ وَكَفَرَ

24 Allah will chastise him with the greatest chastisement.
فَيُعَذِّبُهُ اللَّهُ الْعَذَابَ الْأَكْبَرَ

25 Surely to Us is their turning back,
إِنَّ إِلَيْنَا إِيَابَهُمْ

26 Then surely upon Us is the taking of their account.
ثُمَّ إِنَّ عَلَيْنَا حِسَابَهُم

2722 Ibil means, according to Abu 'Amr Ibnul 'Ala, clouds that bear the water for rain (TA-LL). As this significance suits the context better, I adopt this instead of the usual rendering, the camels, the mention of the clouds along with heaven, where they exist, and with mountains, which cool the vapours so that they pour down water, and the earth, which benefits by that water, being in accordance with what is said in many other places.

CHAPTER LXXXIX

THE DAYBREAK

(Al-Fajr)

REVEALED AT MECCA

(30 verses)

	In the name of Allah, the Beneficent, the Merciful.	بِسْمِ اللّٰهِ الرَّحْمٰنِ الرَّحِيْمِ
a 2099.	1 Consider[a] the daybreak,	وَالْفَجْرِ ۝
	2 And the ten nights,	وَلَيَالٍ عَشْرٍ ۝
	3 And the even and the odd,	وَّالشَّفْعِ وَالْوَتْرِ ۝

	5 Truly in that there is an oath for those who possess understanding.	هَلْ فِيْ ذٰلِكَ قَسَمٌ لِّذِيْ حِجْرٍ ۝

General remarks.

THE important Daybreak which gives its name to this chapter is the first morning of the month of Zulḥaj, or the month of the pilgrimage, because pilgrimage gave Mecca a great importance as a trade centre and made its residents enjoy a life of ease, the trade of the whole country being brought to their very doors. A warning is given here of punishment that must overtake the city, as the cities of previous nations, 'Ád, Samood, etc., had been destroyed. It is one of the earliest revelations, though the opinion of one writer as to its being a Medinian revelation is not wanting.

2723 There is a great variety of opinion as to what is meant by the daybreak, the ten nights, and the even and the odd. I think the reference is to the importance attached to Mecca (which is mentioned as the city in the commencement of the next chapter), because it was made the centre by pilgrims resorting to it from all parts of Arabia, a circumstance which contributed to its becoming a trade centre. The daybreak would thus signify the daybreak of the first of the month of Zulḥijja; the ten nights would stand for the first ten nights, the tenth day being the day of sacrifices; the even would stand for the two days following the tenth of Zulḥijja, during which certain rites of the pilgrimage were performed, the odd signifying the thirteenth day, which was also a day for the performance of certain rites, but it is distinctly mentioned because those who desired could depart on the evening of the twelfth. See 2 : 203. Mecca, on account of the pilgrimage, had become not only the religious metropolis of Arabia, but also the centre of its trade, and its prosperity therefore depended on the pilgrimage, and it is of this that the Meccans are reminded, being told in the verses that follow how mightier nations than they were previously destroyed on account of their wickedness.

2724 Aram was, according to one account, the name of the grandfather of 'Ád, from whom the tribe took its name (see 903), and according to another, the name of a city in which it lived (Rz).

2725 Saut signifies primarily the mixing of one thing with another (Rgh). It then comes to signify a whip, but here means a portion or a share (S, Q-LL), the significance being that they received a portion of the punishment here, the other portion overtaking them after death. Or, in consonance with the root-meaning, it may be interpreted as meaning a mixture prepared for them of various punishments (LL).

2726 The watching of the Lord refers to the punishment in store for the Meccans: the Lord is watching their deeds and will soon overtake them.

2726A The statement in v. 15 relates to the state of affluence of the Meccans, and that in v. 16 to their disgrace, which was to be brought about in this very life because of the wrong they did to the poor and the weak out of the desire to hoard wealth, as the verses that follow show.

2727 Verses 17 and 18 (as also the 19th) show how the Prophet felt for the orphans, the poor, and the weak, so much so that he warns his powerful and wealthy opponents that their indifference to the orphans and the poor and their injustice to the weak shall bring down upon them the Divine judgment, which shall shatter their power. As he was in the beginning so he remained to the end, a true well-wisher of the weak and the oppressed. And when he had the power he brought into practice what he taught in theory before, by providing for the orphans and the poor out of the public funds, thus forestalling the Poor Laws and Old Age Pension systems by thirteen centuries. See 9 : 60.

2728 Among the Arabs women and young children were not allowed to have any share in the inheritance, because they could not fight the enemy.

2729 The crumbling to pieces of the earth, the coming of the Lord with angels, and the appearance of the hell, equally refer to the portion of punishment in this life as to that in the next. The earth crumbled, the angels came, and hell appeared in those great battles which, commenced by the unbelievers themselves, ultimately brought utter discomfiture to them, and swept them off the face of the earth. It should be noted that the coming of the angels to assist the Muslim cause in the battles is repeatedly spoken of in the Holy Qur-án. Fire signifies war.

2730 Being "mindful" is of little avail to a man when the thing he is warned of has made its appearance.

2731 Every one shall be bound by the consequences of his deeds, and this will no doubt be a unique punishment and a unique "binding."

2732 The concluding verses of this chapter refer to the highest stage of the spiritual development of man, the stage in which he rests contented with his Lord, and finds his quietude, his happiness, and his delight in Him. This is the stage of life which we term the heavenly life. The pure and perfect sincerity, truth, and righteousness of a person are rewarded by Almighty God by granting him a heaven upon this earth. All others look to a prospective paradise, but he enters paradise in this very life. It is at this stage, too, that a person realizes that the prayers and worship which at first appeared to him as a burden are really a nourishment on which the growth of his soul depends, and that this is the basis of his spiritual development. He then sees that the fruit of his efforts is not to be reaped in a future life only. The spirit—which in the second stage, although blaming a man for the impurities of life, was yet powerless to resist the evil tendencies, or to blot them out wholly, and too infirm to establish a man upon the principle of virtue with firmness—now reaches a stage of development in which its efforts are crowned with success. The state of struggle with sinful propensities passes away, an entire change comes over the nature of man, and the former habits undergo a complete transformation.

CHAPTER XC

THE CITY

(Al-Balad)

REVEALED AT MECCA

(20 verses)

	In the name of Allah, the Beneficent, the Merciful.	بِسْمِ اللّٰهِ الرَّحْمٰنِ الرَّحِيْمِ
a 2606. b 2438.	1 Nay![a] I call to witness[b] this city[2733]—	لَآ اُقْسِمُ بِهٰذَا الْبَلَدِ ۙ
Ar. thou shalt.	2 And you shall be made free from obligation in this city[2734]—	وَاَنْتَ حِلٌّۢ بِهٰذَا الْبَلَدِ ۙ

General remarks.

THE city spoken of in the first verse, from which this chapter receives its name, is Mecca—the city which had been warned in the last chapter of punishment overtaking it as it had overtaken former nations. But it was to be the Prophet's city, and there is a clear prophecy in the second verse that a time would come when not only would the Muslims be not persecuted in that city, but they would even enjoy freedom from all obligations in it; the clear reference being to the establishment of their rule therein. Thus there is a clear prophecy here of the conquest of Mecca by the Holy Prophet, and this was necessary because the Prophet was the true well-wisher of the poor, the oppressed, and the orphans. By general consent the chapter is regarded as one of the very earliest revelations, so much so, that it is assigned to the first year of the call.

2733 By this city is meant Mecca (Rz), where the Prophet was at the time of the revelation of this chapter. The very existence of Mecca was a witness of the great power and knowledge of the Divine Being, and particularly to an Arab, who knew for certain how thousands of years before Abraham had prayed for a city to be raised in that wilderness where he had left one branch of his descendants. It was also a witness of the truth of the Holy Prophet, for the prayer of Abraham also included the raising of a prophet from among the posterity of Ishmael; see 168.

2734 The words انت حل بهذا البلد are parenthetical. Ḥill is an infinitive noun, and signifies the same as ḥalāl, meaning in a state which is the opposite of ḥarām, and hence it signifies free from obligation or responsibility with respect to a thing.

English translators have generally adopted a different translation: And thou a dweller in this land (Palmer); and thou residest in this territory (Sale); the soil on which thou dost dwell (Rodwell); which is wrong, because ḥalla, as meaning nazala, i.e. he alighted, or abode, or lodged in a place, has its infinitive ḥulūl or ḥull (LL) and not ḥill, which is the word occurring here. Some commentators have also been led into this error. The significance

4 Certainly We have created man to be in distress.[2736]
5 Does he think that no one has power over him?
6 He shall say: I have wasted much wealth.[2737]
7 Does he think that no one sees him?
8 Have We not given him two eyes,
9 And a tongue and two lips,
10 And pointed out to him the two conspicuous ways?[2738]

وَوَالِدٍ وَّمَا وَلَدَ ۝
لَقَدْ خَلَقْنَا الْاِنْسَانَ فِيْ كَبَدٍ ۝

اَيَحْسَبُ اَنْ لَّمْ يَرَهٗۤ اَحَدٌ ۝

وَلِسَانًا وَّشَفَتَيْنِ ۝ وَهَدَيْنٰهُ النَّجْدَيْنِ ۝

which I adopt is in accordance with the true significance of the word ḥill, for you say انت فى حل من كذا meaning you are free from obligation or responsibility with respect to such a thing. The statement in this case is prophetical, indicating that the Prophet would be made free from obligation in respect to the sacredness of the territory of Mecca, being allowed to enter it by force (Bd), as he did at the conquest of Mecca, to which, in fact, the words refer. There is also a saying of the Holy Prophet in support of this, according to which, while speaking of the sacredness of Mecca, he said: و لن تحل لى الا ساعة من نهار i.e. and even I was made free of obligation with respect to it only for an hour of the day.

Some commentators consider the significance to be, you are made lawful in this city, by which is to be understood the legalization of the Holy Prophet's persecution in the sacred territory of Mecca, which was looked upon as inviolable, so much so that even its game was not killed nor were its trees cut (Bd).

2735 The great begetter is none other than Abraham, the progenitor of the Arabs, and by whom he begot is meant either Ishmael, who assisted Abraham in raising the foundations of the Sacred House at Mecca, or the Holy Prophet himself, who was the object of Abraham's prayer. Both Abraham and Ishmael were witnesses to the truth of the Holy Prophet.

2736 Kabad means distress or difficulty, and the allusion here seems to be to the powerful opponents, who are in the next verse spoken of in general terms of a similar character, thinking that "no one has power over" them; the words thus refer prophetically to the distress in store for them, and this is in fact what is aimed at in this chapter. But the words may also be taken generally, the significance being that man's existence is necessarily one of struggle with difficulties in this life, and notwithstanding this, he thinks that no one has power over him.

2737 The reference is apparently to the ultimate state of the opponents when, after spending all their wealth in opposition to the Holy Prophet, they should find that the Prophet's cause has triumphed, and would then say that they really wasted their wealth in opposition to him. A similar statement is contained in 8:36, "Surely those who disbelieve spend their wealth to hinder (people) from the way of Allah; so they shall spend it, then it shall be to them an intense regret, then they shall be overcome."

2738 Najd signifies المكان الرفيع (Rgh), or according to others الطريق فى ارتفاع (Rz), i.e. a conspicuous way. The two conspicuous ways are, by the general consent of the commentators and according to a saying of the Holy Prophet, نجد الخير and نجد الشر i.e. the way of good and the way of evil (Rz). Both ways are pointed out to man, and he is at liberty to choose which he will. The two eyes (v. 8) will enable him to distinguish good from evil, while with the tongue and the lips (v. 9) he can ask, if he cannot see, for himself.

2739 The doing of good to the oppressed, the poor, and the orphans is called an uphill road, because of the difficulty of doing it. The constant reference to the helping of the poor and the orphans and the setting free of slaves brings to light the real character of the Holy Prophet, who is described by one knowing him most intimately as one who earned for those who had no means themselves. Islam is the only religion which enjoins the duty of granting freedom to slaves, and the Holy Prophet Muhammad, may peace and the blessings of Allah be upon him, is the only founder of a religion who showed the noble example of freeing all slaves that he ever had and helping in the freedom of others: yet the Christian missionaries laud the anti-slavery endeavours of Christianity and blame Islam for not taking any steps to uproot slavery. There is even a suggestion that such precepts regarding the nobility of liberating slaves as exist in the Meccan chapters were abrogated by later revelation (see Wherry), a preposterous statement in view of the plain directions given in 9:60 (the latest revelation) to spend a part of the public funds in purchasing freedom for slaves.

	4 And the night when it draws a veil over it,[2743]	وَالَّيْلِ اِذَا يَغْشٰهَا ○

General remarks.
THE Prophet is the Sun of righteousness (the word giving its title to this chapter), with whose rising the way to perfection is pointed out to man, but only those who purify themselves are really successful, while those who give themselves over to corruption fail to attain the object. The case of Samood is given as an illustration. Like the last chapter, it is one of the earliest revelations.

2740 Ash-shams, or the sun, is feminine, and al-qamar, or the moon, masculine, in the Arabic language, as opposed to English. Duḥá, though generally applied to the early part of the forenoon after sunrise, also signifies light, which is the meaning here.

2741 Talá-há literally signifies it followed him, but according to Rgh this is sometimes (in one thing following another) in body, and sometimes in imitating in respect of predicament. Hence he explains talá-há in this verse as meaning following it in the way of imitation and in respect of rank, because it borrows light from the sun. Farra takes this to be the real meaning, for he says : such a one follows such a one in respect of such a thing, meaning he takes from him (Rz). Hence the real significance of the words is, when she borrows light from the sun.

2742 By the generality of the commentators the personal pronoun in jallá-há is taken to refer to ad-dunyá, i.e. the world, though it is not mentioned here, because, as Kf says, in such cases the meaning is clear, as they say: اصبحت باردة i.e. it was cold, meaning the morning, though they do not mention it in words (Rz).

2743 The personal pronoun in yaghsháhá also refers to ad-dunyá (i.e. the world), though some would interpret it as referring to the sun.

Or, Him who made it.
Or, Him who extended it.
Or, Him who made it perfect.

5 And the heaven and its make,
6 And the earth and its extension,
7 And the soul and its perfection,[2744]
8 So He intimated to it by inspiration its deviating from truth and its guarding (against evil) ;[2745]
9 He will indeed be successful who purifies it,
10 And he will indeed fail who corrupts it.[2746]

وَالسَّمَاءِ وَمَا بَنٰىهَا ۝
وَالْاَرْضِ وَمَا طَحٰىهَا ۝
وَنَفْسٍ وَّمَا سَوّٰىهَا ۝
فَاَلْهَمَهَا فُجُوْرَهَا وَتَقْوٰىهَا ۝
قَدْ اَفْلَحَ مَنْ زَكّٰىهَا ۝
وَقَدْ خَابَ مَنْ دَسّٰىهَا ۝

2744 I take the má in vv. 5–7 as being maṣdariyyah, and hence the translation. The difficulty suggested by Kf is not a real one, because the nominative in alhamahá, in v. 8, may be taken to be the Divine Being. But even if the má may be taken to be mauṣúlah, the meaning is clear as given in the margin, the má referring to the Divine Being in all three cases, for not only is má very often used for man in the Arabic language, as in 4 : 22, but the reference in the use of má is also to the majesty of the person spoken of, the statement being equivalent to consider heaven and that great Omnipotent Being who made it.

Attention is drawn in this, the 7th, verse to the perfection of the soul, and thus to its spiritual and moral requirements, as the first six verses speak of its physical requirements. The Almighty Being has made the sun and his light, the moon, the day and the night, the high heaven and the vast earth, all for the benefit of man ; yet these things only serve his physical necessities. As to the arrangements for the perfection of the soul, the spiritual requirements must also be fulfilled, and this is stated in vv. 8–10.

2745 The verse is a fitting sequel to the statement made in the previous verse as regards the perfection of the soul, as it points out the way to perfection. The connection in shown by the fá, which is used for ta'qíb. It is through inspiration that the soul is made perfect, because inspiration makes clear the two ways, fujúr, or the way of deviation from the truth, i.e. the way of evil, and taqwá, or the way of guarding against evil, or the way of good. It is by avoiding the former and walking in the latter that perfection can be attained. It should be clearly understood that both Rodwell and Palmer are wrong here in translating the verse as meaning, And breathed into it its wickedness and its piety (Rodwell) or, And taught it its sin and its piety (Palmer), for the statement in this form is not only contradicted by the whole of the Qur-án, but is also self-contradictory and meaningless ; because the words would thus imply that when a man left evil and did good, it was Allah who breathed it into him to do so, and when he left good and did evil, it was again Allah who taught him to do so, which is manifestly absurd. The next two verses also belie such a statement. Nor do we stand in need of adding anything to the original to arrive at the true significance, as Sale has done by inserting the words faculty of distinguishing and power of choosing, which are wanting in the original. Al-hama-hú signifies he suggested to him (LL), and the statement thus corresponds with 90 : 10, "And pointed out to him the two conspicuous ways." I have added the words by inspiration because ilhám always signifies an intimation by inspiration from the Divine Being, as Rgh says : "And this is peculiar to that which is intimated by Allah." Rz says the intimation by inspiration of good and evil means the making a man to understand and know them both, and he adds that this explanation is accepted by Ibn-i-'Abbas and the most trustworthy of the commentators.

2746 Zakká-há is from zaká, meaning it increased, and therefore primarily the word signifies he made it to increase or thrive (Msb, TA-LL), and dassá-há is from dassa-hú, meaning primarily he hid it or concealed it. The secondary meaning of the former is

11 Samood gave the lie (to the truth) in their inordinacy,[2747]
12 When the most unfortunate of them broke forth with mischief,
13 So Allah's apostle said to them: (Leave alone) Allah's she-camel, and (give) her (to) drink.
14 But they called him a liar and slaughtered her, therefore their Lord crushed them for their sin and levelled them (with the ground).
15 And He fears not its consequence.[2748]

كَذَّبَتْ ثَمُوْدُ بِطَغْوٰىهَآ ۝
اِذِ انْبَعَثَ اَشْقٰىهَا ۝
فَقَالَ لَهُمْ رَسُوْلُ اللّٰهِ نَاقَةَ اللّٰهِ
وَسُقْيٰهَا ۝
فَكَذَّبُوْهُ فَعَقَرُوْهَا فَدَمْدَمَ عَلَيْهِمْ
رَبُّهُمْ بِذَنْۢبِهِمْ فَسَوّٰىهَا ۝ وَلَا يَخَافُ عُقْبٰهَا ۝

he purified it, and that of the latter he corrupted it. The adoption of these two words really indicates that the faculties necessary for perfection are given to every man, but there are some who make them thrive by their development and others who corrupt them by allowing them to remain concealed, not displaying them to their advantage.

Note the Quranic law of salvation: it is the purification of the soul from all dross that makes a man attain the goal, and its corruption by indulging in evil that makes him fail in attaining the true object of his life. This verse gives us a clear indication of the true condition of the Prophet's mind.

2747 The verse gives an instance of those whose end is failure on account of the corrupt manner of their lives, giving at the same time a warning to the Meccans that if they continued in their evil course and did not turn to righteousness, following the call of the Prophet, but molested him as Samood molested their prophet, their end would be the same. If they followed the Prophet they would attain to perfection, but if they went against him they would be given over to destruction as were the former people, who, heedless of the warning of their prophets, indulged in evil.

2748 Allah does not care for the consequences of the punishment to a people when they are found deserving of such punishment. The consequences include their children being left without protectors and supporters.

CHAPTER XCI

THE NIGHT

(Al-Lail)

REVEALED AT MECCA

(21 verses)

	In the name of Allah, the Beneficent, the Merciful.	بِسْمِ اللّٰهِ الرَّحْمٰنِ الرَّحِيْمِ
a 2099.	1 (Consider)[a] the night when it draws a veil,	وَالَّيْلِ اِذَا يَغْشٰى
	2 And the day when it shines in brightness,	وَالنَّهَارِ اِذَا تَجَلّٰى
	3 And the creating of the male and the female,	وَمَا خَلَقَ الذَّكَرَ وَالْاُنْثٰى
	4 Your striving is most surely (directed to) various (ends).[2749]	اِنَّ سَعْيَكُمْ لَشَتّٰى
	5 Then as for him who gives away and guards (against evil),	فَاَمَّا مَنْ اَعْطٰى وَاتَّقٰى
	6 And accepts the best,	وَصَدَّقَ بِالْحُسْنٰى
	7 We will facilitate for him the easy end.	فَسَنُيَسِّرُهٗ لِلْيُسْرٰى

General remarks.

THE object of this chapter is to show that the Night of unbelief and ignorance (hence the title of it) will give place to the light of the day, for inasmuch as men strive after different objects, those who strive to establish good shall have facility, while those who go after evil shall find themselves in difficulties. It is also one of the earliest revelations. The statement that the chapter was revealed on account of Abu Bakr and Umayya bin Khalf can only be accepted as meaning that Abu Bakr and Umayya are the two most prominent examples of the strivers after good and the strivers after evil respectively in the early history of Islam.

2749 The fourth verse describes the consequence to which a consideration of the circumstances in the first three verses leads. The night draws a veil over all things, while the day sheds light upon them, and these two serve as an evidence that as the variation of darkness and light leads to different ends, so man's striving for good and his striving for bad must lead to different consequences, the one being compared to the light of the day and the other to the darkness of the night. The creation of the male and the female, which stands for the creation of the whole of animate nature, because all living beings are created either male or female, is also a witness to the same truth, for there we find every one striving for an end, and every one reaping according to the manner of his striving.

8 And as for him who is niggardly and considers himself free from need (of Allah),

وَاَمَّا مَنْۢ بَخِلَ وَاسْتَغْنٰى ۝

9 And rejects the best,

وَكَذَّبَ بِالْحُسْنٰى ۝

10 We will facilitate for him the difficult end.

فَسَنُيَسِّرُهٗ لِلْعُسْرٰى ۝

11 And his wealth will not avail him when he perishes.[2750]

وَمَا يُغْنِيْ عَنْهُ مَالُهٗۤ اِذَا تَرَدّٰى ۝

12 Surely Ours is it to show the way,

اِنَّ عَلَيْنَا لَلْهُدٰى ۝

13 And most surely Ours is the hereafter and the former.[2751]

وَاِنَّ لَنَا لَلْاٰخِرَةَ وَالْاُوْلٰى ۝

14 Therefore I warn you of the fire that flames:

فَاَنْذَرْتُكُمْ نَارًا تَلَظّٰى ۝

15 None shall enter it but the most unhappy,

لَا يَصْلٰىهَاۤ اِلَّا الْاَشْقَى ۝

16 Who gives the lie (to the truth) and turns (his) back.

الَّذِيْ كَذَّبَ وَتَوَلّٰى ۝

17 And away from it shall be kept the one who guards most (against evil),

وَسَيُجَنَّبُهَا الْاَتْقَى ۝

18 Who gives away his wealth, purifying himself.

الَّذِيْ يُؤْتِيْ مَالَهٗ يَتَزَكّٰى ۝

19 And no one has with him any boon for which he should be rewarded,

وَمَا لِاَحَدٍ عِنْدَهٗ مِنْ نِّعْمَةٍ تُجْزٰۤى ۝

20 Except the seeking of the pleasure of his Lord,[2752] the Most High.

اِلَّا ابْتِغَآءَ وَجْهِ رَبِّهِ الْاَعْلٰى ۝

21 And he shall soon be well-pleased.

وَلَسَوْفَ يَرْضٰى ۝

2750 The two examples given in these verses represent those who accept and those who reject the Holy Prophet respectively. The end of the former is easy, the end of the latter difficult, being nothing other than perdition. If the verses refer to Abu Bakr and Umayya bin Khalf respectively, as asserted by Qaffal, these are only two typical cases; the end of the former was ease, in that he was made the ruler of Arabia, and the end of the latter was clearly perdition, and his wealth did not avail him when Divine judgment overtook him.

2751 The hereafter includes the life after death as well as the future of this life, while the former refers to the past.

2752 The pleasure of the Lord is the only boon for which a man should hope, and hence this is the goal of a Muslim's life—his paradise in this as well as the next life. This is in accordance with what is said in 9:72, one of the latest revelations: "And Allah's goodly pleasure is the greatest (bliss): that is the mighty achievement." Let those ponder who hanker after showing differences in the earlier and the later revelations of the Holy Prophet. The object and aim of Islam, the goal to which it invited people, remained one and the same under all the varying circumstances of the Holy Prophet's life.

CHAPTER XCIII

THE EARLY HOURS

(Aḍ-Ḍuḥā)

REVEALED AT MECCA

(11 verses)

	In the name of Allah, the Beneficent, the Merciful.	بِسۡمِ اللّٰہِ الرَّحۡمٰنِ الرَّحِیۡمِ ۞
a 2099.	1 Consider[a] the early hours of the day,	وَ الضُّحٰی ۞
	2 And the night when it covers with darkness.	وَ الَّیۡلِ اِذَا سَجٰی ۞
Ar. thy. Ar. thee.	3 Your Lord has not forsaken you, nor has He become displeased,[2753]	مَا وَدَّعَکَ رَبُّکَ وَ مَا قَلٰی ۞

General remarks.

THIS chapter draws attention to the gradual spreading of the light of the sun of Islam, and is therefore given the title of The Early Hours of the day. The last two chapters metaphorically speak of the advent of the Holy Prophet as the rising of the sun, and the metaphor is continued here. As the sunshine is not fully resplendent immediately after the rising of the sun, so the truth would only shine in its full brightness gradually. It is on all hands considered to be one of the earliest revelations.

2753 Though the light of the sun is not resplendent during the early hours of the day, yet its comparison with the darkness of the night is sufficient to show the change brought about. Even so was the case of the Holy Prophet. In the early days of his mission, though his truth was manifest from the light which shone on Arabia by his advent, as compared with the total darkness that prevailed in the peninsula before his coming, it had not yet shone like the midday sun, and the resplendence of his light was to be brought about gradually, as the next verse shows. The commentators narrate varying reports to the effect that the verse was revealed on the occasion of a long pause in the descent of revelation to the Holy Prophet, two or three days according to Bkh, the unbelievers saying, according to one of these reports, that Allah had forsaken Muhammad and become displeased with him (Rz). That revelation was sent down to the Holy Prophet at intervals is a fact, and the verse may have been revealed to him as a solace, that the pause in revelation was not to be attributed to Divine displeasure; or the words may have been addressed in a general sense, that the Prophet would never be forsaken, but that his cause would grow stronger day by day and triumph in the end, as shown in the verses that follow.

Ar. thee.	4 And surely what comes after is better for you than that which has gone before.[2754]	وَلَلْاٰخِرَةُ خَيْرٌ لَّكَ مِنَ الْاُوْلٰى ۝
Ar. thy. Ar. thee. Ar. thou shalt.	5 And soon will your Lord give you so that you shall be well pleased.	وَلَسَوْفَ يُعْطِيْكَ رَبُّكَ فَتَرْضٰى ۝
Ar. thee. Ar. thee.	6 Did he not find you an orphan[2755] and give you shelter?	اَلَمْ يَجِدْكَ يَتِيْمًا فَاٰوٰى ۝
Ar. thee. Ar. lost (in quest).	7 And find you unable to see and show the way?[2756]	وَوَجَدَكَ ضَآلًّا فَهَدٰى ۝

2754 Such is truth that, although it may gain ground only inch by inch, after severe struggle with the forces of falsehood, yet it does continue to advance. Every succeeding movement was to be better for the Holy Prophet than the last, and this not only proved true in his lifetime, but remains true to this day, and shall remain true for ever.

2755 Abdulla, the Holy Prophet's father, died about three months before he was born; his mother, Amina, died when he was six years old. His grandfather, Abdul Muttalab, who took care of him after his mother, died two years later, and from that time he remained in charge of Abu Talib, his uncle, who was alive when the Holy Prophet received the Divine message for the regeneration of mankind.

2756 This verse is for the Christian missionary the crowning evidence of the Holy Prophet's "sinfulness." He would not for a minute consider what the Holy Qur-án says elsewhere. That erring is not the significance of ḍáll here is shown conclusively by 53 : 2, which says: "Your companion did not err." Now, one who is spoken of as never having erred in one place could not be described as erring in another, while both revelations belong to about the same period, ch. 93 being, if anything, earlier than ch. 53. Nor do the two verses contradict each other. The mistake arises from not paying attention to the breadth of conception of the words, and insisting on attaching always the same significance to a word, whether the context allows it or not. As for the assertion that the Holy Prophet was a worshipper of idols before he was called to prophethood, it is absolutely false. There are authoritative reports that as early as his journey to Syria in the company of his uncle he expressed his strong hatred for idol-worship. Of his childhood many anecdotes are related by his uncle, Abu Talib—whose great affection for the Prophet withstood the opposition of the whole of his nation later on, when the Quraish rose up against him to a man—which afford strong evidence of this abhorrence of idol-worship. Abu Talib told his brother Abbas that he never found Muhammad (may peace and the blessings of Allah be upon him) telling a lie, nor did he ever witness in him derisiveness or ignorance (jáhiliyyat); nor did he ever go out with children, taking part in their sports. Let us first consider the context. Vv. 6, 7, 8 stand in close relation respectively to vv. 9, 10, and 11; v. 6 tells the Prophet that he was himself an orphan, and the conclusion that he should not therefore oppress the orphan is drawn in v. 9; similarly, v. 8 speaks of the Divine favour on him in making him free of want, and the conclusion is drawn in v. 11 that he should therefore announce the Divine favour on him. Thus it is clear that v. 6 stands in close relation to v. 9, and v. 8 to v. 11, and the conclusion is evident that vv. 7 and 10 refer to the same subject. Now, v. 10 plainly speaks of one who asks to be guided to the truth, or a petitioner generally who needs the help of another, being unable himself to do a thing or undertake a task (see next note). The Holy Prophet was no doubt a sáil in this sense. He did not worship idols, but neither could he, without the help of Allah, find out the way for the regeneration of his people, for which his soul yearned so eagerly. Hence he was unable to see the way by himself, and the word ḍáll signifies one who is perplexed and unable to see the way for himself, for the verb ḍalla, of which ḍáll is a nominative, signifies he was perplexed and unable to see his right course (Ibn us Saeed, TA-LL). The true significance of the word is thus that Allah found the Prophet in quest of the way, but unable to chalk out a way for himself, and therefore He guided him by Divine light. In this manner was the Prophet told not to chide any

Ar. thee. 8 And find you in want and
Ar. thee. make you to be free from want ?[2757]
9 Therefore, as for the orphan, do not oppress (him).[2758]
10 And as for him who asks, do not chide (him),[2759]
11 And as for the favour of
Ar. thy. your Lord, do announce (it).[2760]

وَوَجَدَكَ عَآئِلًا فَأَغْنٰى ۝
فَأَمَّا الْيَتِيْمَ فَلَا تَقْهَرْ ۝
وَأَمَّا السَّآئِلَ فَلَا تَنْهَرْ ۝ وَأَمَّا بِنِعْمَةِ رَبِّكَ فَحَدِّثْ ۝

petitioner, and to render help to him as Allah had helped him. Or ḍáll also signifies one who becomes lost (TA-LL) in the pursuit of some object, as Jacob's children speak of their father as being in ḍalál (Rgh), i.e. lost in the love of Joseph, and thus the meaning may be that the Holy Prophet had so devoted himself to the quest of the right way for the world that he had lost himself in that quest.

Rz gives twenty different explanations of these words. In addition to what has been said, I may notice the first of these, which is based on the authority of Ibn-i-'Abbas, Hasan, Dk, and others, according to which ḍáll means ghẚfil, i.e. not knowing prophecy and the injunctions of law; and this explanation is in accordance with what is said in 42 : 52 : " And thus did We reveal to you an inspired book by Our command ; you did not know what the book was, nor what the faith was, but We made it a light, guiding thereby whom We please of Our servants."

The verse quoted above also corroborates the explanations given above, for the gist of these explanations is the same as that of 42 : 52, viz. that he did not know how to guide others to the right path, but he was anxious for them, and so Allah showed him the way.

2757 Finding the Holy Prophet in want, and freeing him of want, do not refer to his temporal or pecuniary circumstances only (if they refer to them at all), but also to his spiritual needs and the satisfaction of the same; or they refer to his loneliness at first and the gathering round him of men afterwards to help his cause (Rz).

2758 No other teacher in the world has laid such great stress upon the care of orphans. In one of the many of his sayings he says: He who takes care of the orphan and I are like these two (showing his two fingers close to each other). In another he says : When the orphan weeps, his tears fall into the hand of the Beneficent God (Rz).

2759 The word sáil occurring in this verse is interpreted generally as meaning a beggar. But petitioner, or one who asks, is a much better rendering, for it retains the breadth of the original conception. Hasan, however, interpreted the word as meaning من يسأل العلم i.e. he who asks about knowledge, and this interpretation is corroborated by what is related in the opening verses of ch. 80 (Rz). This interpretation is, moreover, in consonance with the chief object of a prophet's mission, which aims at spreading true knowledge.

2760 The ni'mat, or the favour, is no other than revelation, the greatest of all Divine favours, as it is recognized to be throughout the Holy Qur-án ; and, in fact, this was the favour which the Holy Prophet continued to announce throughout his life. Mujahid says تلك النعمة هي القرآن i.e. this favour is the Qur-án (Rz).

CHAPTER XCIV

THE EXPANSION

(Al-Inshirāḥ)

REVEALED AT MECCA

(8 verses)

	In the name of Allah, the Beneficent, the Merciful.	بِسۡمِ اللّٰهِ الرَّحۡمٰنِ الرَّحِیۡمِ
Ar. thee. Ar. thy.	1 Have We not expanded for you your breast,[2761]	اَلَمۡ نَشۡرَحۡ لَکَ صَدۡرَکَ ۙ
Ar. thee. Ar. thy.	2 And taken off from you your burden,	وَ وَضَعۡنَا عَنۡکَ وِزۡرَکَ ۙ

General remarks.

THIS chapter, like its predecessors, also comforts the Prophet. His difficulties were not to continue, but would soon be followed by ease, and it was a sufficient indication of this that his breast was opened or expanded for the truth (whence the title of this chapter). The great burden which almost broke his back, his deep anxiety for humanity, had been removed by the Divine grant of revelation to him. In fact, this chapter is closely connected with the preceding one, as both show that the Holy Prophet had suffered great anxiety on account of fallen humanity, and it was Divine revelation that ultimately took him by the hand, thus guiding his steps and relieving his great anxiety.

2761 What is meant by شرح الصدر or the expanding of the breast, becomes clear by a reference to Moses' prayer in 20 : 25, where exactly the same words occur: رب اشرح لی صدری "O my Lord! expand my breast for me." The same words occur also in 6 : 126, with the same significance: "Therefore (for) whomsoever Allah intends that He should guide aright, He expands his breast for Islam," and as opposed to this it is added: "And (for) whomsoever He intends that He should cause him to err, He makes his breast strait and narrow." There is a report according to which Gabriel opened the breast of the Holy Prophet while he was yet a boy in the charge of his nurse, and washed his heart; the authenticity of this has been questioned on critical grounds by Qazi (Rz). But even that criticism, I think, is due to a misconception, for the same incident is related to have taken place again when the Holy Prophet was entrusted with his Divine mission. The incident was therefore evidently a kashf, or a clear vision, which signifies exactly what the expanding of the breast signifies on the several occasions mentioned above. AH says: "The expanding of the breast signifies its illumination with wisdom and its vastness for the reception of what was to be revealed to him." This is what is accepted generally, but it is better to give the words a wider significance, including what is said here, as well as the severe struggles which he was to meet in inviting men to unity and the possibility of afflictions arising from the persecutions of the unbelievers. Raghib gives a similar explanation, viz. its expansion with Divine light and tranquillity. Proof of the breast expansion in this sense is abundantly met with in the Prophet's later life: (1) In his praying for the forgiveness of his enemies after their persecutions had reached the utmost limit, while other prophets, as Noah (71 : 26) and Moses (10 : 88), prayed for the destruction of their enemies. (2) In his actually forgiving his severest enemies when he conquered Mecca, an incident unparalleled in temporal or sacred history. (3) In the broadness of his morals. (4) In enduring the hardest trials with the greatest forbearance and without ever uttering words of impatience such as are met with in the lives of other prophets, as the words, Eli, Eli, lama Sabachtani, uttered by Jesus. (5) In the complete trust which he retained in the Divine Being when facing the greatest dangers. (6) In the great fortitude shown on various occasions. (7) In performing with the utmost exactitude his multifarious duties as a spiritual teacher and guide, as a legislator, as a judge, as a general leading his forces to war, as a king and ruler, as a loving husband, as an affectionate father, as a friend, as a guardian of the interests of the poor and the orphans, and as occupying a number of other capacities. The expansion of the breast stands, in one word, for the greatness of the heart of the Prophet.

2762 The burden which pressed heavily upon his back signifies anxiety for raising his people from the ignorance and superstitions in which they were involved. Compare 26 : 3 : " Perhaps you will kill yourself with grief because they will not believe." It may refer to his anxiety as to how he would be able to bear the heavy burden of prophethood (Rz), (also compare Moses' prayer in 20 : 26, " And make my affair easy to me," uttered along with his prayer for the expansion of his breast); or as to his protection from every sin and purification from every dross. The removal of the burden signifies the relief of anxiety by way of mubálagha, or exaggeration, as you say رفعت عنك مشقة الزيارة i.e. I have removed from you the suffering of the visit, though there was no visit and consequently no suffering (AH).

2763 This is a clear prophecy of the glorious eminence to which the Holy Prophet was to be raised, being uttered at a time when he was alone and unknown. For zikr, meaning eminence, see 855; but even if zikr may be interpreted as meaning mention, the significance of the verse still remains the same.

2764 In consonance with what is said in v. 4, the ease refers to the ultimate triumph of the Holy Prophet, and the difficulty to the trials which he was then undergoing, though the passage as well reveals a general law of nature that difficulty is followed by ease. The statement is repeated, showing that Islam would twice be under great difficulties and trials, and that on both occasions it would come out with ultimate triumph. There are clear indications in the Holy Qur-án and in the sayings of the Holy Prophet of the trials and difficulties of Islam in the latter days, as great as those at the time of its birth, and the reference in the repetition here is probably to that, and to its final predominance over the religions of the world.

2765 Faragha must be followed by a word to make clear its significance. Thus فرغ من الشغل means he was free, or vacant, from occupation; and فرغ من الامر

Ar thy. Ar. thy.	8 And make your Lord your exclusive object.	وَإِلَىٰ رَبِّكَ فَارْغَبْ ۝ means he had finished the affair; and فرغ له means he applied himself exclusively to him (LL). As faraghta in this verse is not followed by any such word, the commentators make various suggestions, some taking the meaning to be, he had finished the worldly affairs, some the prayers, some the obligatory prayers, and so on (Rz). I think the Prophet's being free signifies his freedom from anxiety, in reference to what is said in the previous verses, because all those verses show that the Prophet's anxiety was completely removed. Hence, being now free from all anxiety, he was to strive hard for the regeneration of his people and make his Lord his exclusive object. The derived word fárigh, occurring regarding Moses' mother in 28:10, also signifies free from anxiety; see 1872.

General remarks.

THIS chapter shows—by drawing a comparison between the Mosaic dispensation (of which the Fig is a symbol, thus giving its name to this chapter), which was to wither away like the fig in the Gospel, and the Islamic dispensation, which is represented by the olive (which being neither Eastern nor Western, its oil would light the world for ever)—that man is so created that he can rise to the highest degree of eminence if he sets before himself the right principles and acts on them, and that he degrades himself to the lowest position in creation if he is not guided by right principles, or, being so guided, fails to act upon them. Thus it refers to the perfection to which the superstitious Arabs should be raised through the Holy Prophet, as a nation reduced to the abject condition of slavery in Egypt had been made a ruling nation by Moses; at the same time giving a warning that, as the Israelites had failed to abide by those noble principles which had been the means of their exaltation and had again been subjected to disgrace, a similar fate would befall the Muslims if they did not abide by those noble rules of conduct through which they attained to greatness and glory. The chapter belongs to the same early period as the other chapters preceding it, though suggestions have not been wanting as to its being a Medinian revelation, which, however, being devoid of foundation, need not be taken seriously.

2766 The fig and the olive stand respectively for the law given on mount Sinai and that revealed in the sacred city of Mecca; and the two verses that follow make it clear. It must be remembered that a comparison between Moses and the Holy Prophet Muhammad is introduced in very early revelations, as here and in 52:1–6 and 73:15. That the fig stands for the Jewish dispensation is a fact admitted by all commentators of the Bible, and this is the significance underlying that otherwise inexplicable circumstance relating to Jesus cursing the fig-tree and its withering away. It is said in Matt. 21:19 that Jesus, coming from Bethany early in the morning and finding himself to be hungry, drew near to a fig-tree so that he might gather some figs; and seeing nothing but leaves upon it, he cursed the tree, and immediately it withered to the root. Even the Christian commentators of the Bible have had to admit that this action of فَمَا يُكَذِّبُكَ بَعْدُ بِالدِّيْنِ ۟

أَلَيْسَ اللّٰهُ بِأَحْكَمِ الْحٰكِمِيْنَ ۟

Jesus signified the rejection of the Jews. Jesus' action really meant that the Jews resembled the fig-tree, which had only leaves but no fruit, and even the leaves, representing as they did their outward actions of piety, should now wither away. The rejection of the Jews is more plainly referred to by Jesus in the parable of the garden (Matt. 21 : 33), which ends with the significant words: "The kingdom of God shall be taken from you and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof" (Matt. 21 : 43). The words of the Holy Qur-án we are commenting upon give us to understand that the Muslims are that other nation. It may be added that the prophet Jeremiah also compares the Jewish nation to two baskets of figs, the good figs standing for the righteous from among the Jews and the vile figs for the wicked ones (Jer. ch. 24).

As regards the olive, some Bible references no doubt hint at that also as being a symbol of the Jewish nation, but the Holy Qur-án compares it here to the law of the Holy Prophet Muhammad, may peace and the blessings of Allah be upon him, and this is explained and clarified by a later revelation: "A likeness of His light is as a pillar on which is a lamp, the lamp is in a glass, (and) the glass is as it were a brightly shining star, lit from a blessed olive-tree, neither eastern nor western" (24 : 35). Here clearly Islam is represented by the olive-tree and hence the olive must be taken for a symbol of Islam.

The comparison shows that whereas the law given on mount Sinai passed away like the fig-tree in Jesus' parable, the new light, lit from the blessed olive-tree, was never to be extinguished, because it belonged neither to the East nor to the West, but was meant for all men in all ages, while Moses' law was limited by considerations both of time and place. Thus, in this place, there is a hint touching the universality of the Holy Prophet's mission.

2767 The consideration of the mission of Moses as well as that of Muhammad (peace be on them) leads to one and the same conclusion, viz. that man has been created in the best of moulds, i.e. with enormous capability for progress, but he abases himself so as to make himself the lowest of the low, as the idol-worshippers by bowing low before such inanimate objects as stones, or as the Israelites by neglecting the injunctions which had been given to them through the prophets. All the prophets from Moses down to Jesus, and the Holy Prophet Muhammad, laid stress upon the fact that obedience to Divine commandments was the true source of man's greatness. The words contain a general law for the advancement of man as well as a prophecy relating to the high degree of perfection to which the Arabs were to be raised by the Holy Prophet, and the impending fate of the Meccan opponents, who were to be abased and brought low in the land if they did not respond to the Prophet's call. Only by a wild stretch of imagination could the words be applied to the so-called fall of Adam and its supposed consequences. Adam's departure from the garden could not be described as the lowest of the low, and the exception regarding believers shows the reference to be to the general condition of man.

2768 Both this verse and the one preceding it refer to the Divine judgment awaiting the rejecters of the Holy Prophet. The Judgment is as well a judgment of the guilty in this life as in the next.

THE CLOT

Or, out of love.

2 He created man from a clot.[2770]

خَلَقَ الْاِنْسَانَ مِنْ عَلَقٍ ۚ

General remarks.

THE first five verses of this chapter are by universal admission the first revelation which the Holy Prophet received. In the arrangement of chapters, however, it is given its present place because the chapters preceding it lay the greatest stress upon the perfection and eminence to which the Holy Prophet was to rise, as well as the perfection and eminence to which he was to raise those who followed him—a goal which could not be attained by human effort; and hence the opening words of this chapter tell him to seek the assistance of the Divine Being. The chapter is called The Clot because of the statement made in the second verse that Allah created man from a clot of blood, which contains a hint that, as a beautiful human form is evolved out of such a humble origin, even so the Holy Prophet would be made to rise to the greatest eminence from the humble circumstances in which he was placed.

2769 On the authority of Bkh as well as other reliable reports, the first five verses of this chapter are agreed to be the first revelation that was received by the Holy Prophet in the Hira, though suggestions are not wanting that it was preceded by the Fátiḥah, or that the opening verses of the 74th chapter form the first revelation. The latter statement has been shown to be erroneous in the introductory note to the 74th chapter, while the former is also unsupported by sufficient authority. The words in the name of your Lord signify by the assistance of your Lord. The circumstances attending this first revelation are met with in trustworthy reports, and from these it appears that the Holy Prophet's first reply to the angel who brought this message was, that he was unable to read. This leaves no doubt as to the Holy Prophet being unable to read or write.

2770 'Alaq signifies a clot of blood as well as attachment and love (TA-LL). The former significance is the one generally adopted, because of the mention of 'alaqah in the process of the creation of man in other places in the Holy Qur-án. While there can be no objection to this significance, as indicating the insignificance of man's origin, thereby referring to the greatness to which the Prophet was to be raised from a humble beginning, I note in the margin the other significance of the word. There is also a report according to which Almighty God said: I loved that I should be known, so I created man. Hence the creation of man, or more properly of the Perfect Man, in the image of the Divine Being is due to the attribute of love in Him. This attribute is the groundwork of sufi-ism in Islam. In the mention of man I think there is a special reference to the Perfect Man, or the Holy Prophet.

أَرَأَيْتَ إِن كَذَّبَ وَتَوَلَّىٰ ۝

2771 Rabb, as explained in 5, is the Fosterer, and being such, enables a person or thing to attain one stage after another, until it reaches its goal of completion, and hence in ربك الاكرم there is a reference to the great goal of honour and glory which the Prophet was to be made to attain.

2772 The mention of the pen in this the very first revelation of the Holy Prophet is significant, and it not only indicates "the powerful help for propagating the knowledge of the Divine Unity" which the Holy Prophet was to find in the pen (Rodwell), but signifies as well that the pen should be specially used in guarding the revelation which was to be granted to the Holy Prophet—in guarding what was before unknown to the perfect man and which the Lord was now about to teach him (v. 5). It is a fact that the pen has played an important part in the propagation of Islam as well as in the protection of the Qur-án against corruption of every sort. The frequent mention of writing and pen in the Holy Qur-án, and particularly in connection with the revelation of the Holy Prophet, is rather striking when it is borne in mind that not only was the use of writing a rare novelty in the Arabian peninsula, but the man who is the apparent speaker of the words was himself unacquainted with either writing or reading.

2773 Some reports apply the words from here to the end of this chapter to Abu Jahl, as he was the man who, in particular, forbade the Holy Prophet to pray near the Ka'ba, but the fact is as stated on many similar occasions, that general words cannot be exclusively applied to particular persons. In Abu Jahl we no doubt meet with a most prominent example of the description given, because he was the leader of the opponents of the Holy Prophet at Mecca, and his end is an example to all leaders of evil and mischief.

2774 There is special reference in the indefinite form to the Holy Prophet.

14 Does he not know that Allah does see?
15 Nay! if he desist not, We would certainly smite his forehead,[2775]
16 A lying, sinful forehead.

سَنَدْعُ الزَّبَانِيَةَ ۝
كَلَّا لَا تُطِعْهُ وَاسْجُدْ وَاقْتَرِب ۝

2775 The foreheads of the leading Quraish opponents of the Holy Prophet, Abu Jahl among them, were smitten on the day of Badr.

2776 An-nádi signifies al-majlis or the council. The dárun-nadwah at Mecca (from the same root nada) was the great council hall of the nation, where the chief men assembled together in consultation over matters of importance relating to the whole of the nation, the undertaking of wars, etc. Rz paraphrases فليدع ناديه as follows: Gather together those whom you consider honourable and able to defend, so that they shall help you. The zabániyah "with the Arabs of the classical age" signifies the shurat (LL, so also Kf, Bḍ, Rz), "applied in the earlier sense of the braves of an army, or in the later sense of the armed attendants of the prefect of the police (S). This is the primary significance" (LL). The two verses thus clearly speak of the battles in which the mighty men of both sides were to be brought into conflict. Even taking the zabániyah as signifying the angels of punishment, the words may apply as well to this life as to the hereafter. Thus Rz says: "It is said that this is an announcement from Allah that he shall be dragged in this world like a dog, and he received this punishment on the day of Badr, and it is said that this is rather an announcement that the angels of punishment will drag him to fire in the hereafter." It is also related that Abu Jahl had once boasted, when addressing the Holy Prophet: وما بالوادى اكبر ناديا منى "And there is none in the valley who has a greater council than I," and that there is a reference to this in v. 17 (AH), which also makes the challenge applicable to this life.

CHAPTER XCVII

THE MAJESTY

(Al-Qadr)

REVEALED AT MECCA

(5 verses)

In the name of Allah, the Beneficent, the Merciful.

بِسْمِ اللّٰهِ الرَّحْمٰنِ الرَّحِيْمِ ۝

1 Surely We revealed it on the grand night.[2777]

2 And what will make you comprehend what the grand night is?

وَمَآ اَدْرٰىكَ مَا لَيْلَةُ الْقَدْرِ ۝

Ar. night of majesty.
Ar. thee.
Ar. night of majesty.

General remarks.

THE very first revelation of the Holy Qur-án contained in the last chapter is suitably followed in arrangement by one that relates when the revelation of the Qur-án began. It was the night of Majesty (one of the last ten nights of the month of Ramaḍan) which first witnessed the shining of that light which was destined to illumine the whole world. And the coming of the first revelation on the night of Majesty, which gives its name to this chapter, contained a clear indication that the most majestic of all revelations was now being granted to the world, and that the majesty of this revelation, as well as of its recipient, should be established in the world. The chapter is unquestionably one of the very earliest revelations.

2777 Lailat-ul-qadr, which I have rendered as the grand night, and which literally means the night of majesty or grandeur or greatness, is a well-known night in the month of Ramaḍan, being the 21st or 23rd or 25th or 27th or 29th night of the month, or more probably one of the latter three. In 44 : 3 it is called the blessed night. From 2 : 185 it appears that the Holy Qur-án was revealed in the month of Ramaḍan, and from the above it appears to have been revealed on the grand night; by revelation of course being meant its first revelation, because the whole was revealed in portions during twenty-three years, and the word Qur-án is applicable as well to a portion as to the whole. It is for this reason that the i'tikáf, or adhering to the mosques, is fixed for the last ten days of the month of Ramaḍan, and in fact lailat-ul-qadr owes its importance to the fact that it was on this night that the most blessed and perfect of all revelations was vouchsafed to the world. Moses' fasting for forty days previous to the receipt of revelation (Exod. 24 : 18), and Jesus' keeping fast for the same number of days before he was called upon to undertake the office of prophethood (Matt. 4 : 2), show that the gift of revelation comes with fasting; hence the Muslims are required to fast every year for thirty days, and special Divine blessings are promised to them in the concluding days of the fasts.

Ar. night of majesty.	3 The grand night is better than a thousand months.[2778]	لَيْلَةُ الْقَدْرِ ۙ خَيْرٌ مِّنْ اَلْفِ شَهْرٍ ۝
Or, spirit.	4 The angels and the inspiration descend in it by the permission of their Lord for every affair,[2779]	تَنَزَّلُ الْمَلٰٓئِكَةُ وَالرُّوْحُ فِيْهَا بِاِذْنِ رَبِّهِمْ ۚ مِنْ كُلِّ اَمْرٍ ۝
	5 Peace! it is till the break of the morning.[2780]	سَلٰمٌ ۛ هِيَ حَتّٰى مَطْلَعِ الْفَجْرِ ۝

But the lailat-ul-qadr carries another and deeper significance. The time during which a prophet appears is usually a time of darkness, and, as such, is often compared to a night in the Holy Qur-án ; but as in this darkness comes a blessing from on high in the person of a Divine messenger, this night is a blessed and majestic night. Hence the period of the advent of a Divine messenger may also be metaphorically called lailat-ul-qadr. Its designation as the blessed night in 44 : 3, followed as it is by the statement that in it " every wise affair is made distinct," shows clearly that the other significance of the word is based on the Holy Qur-án itself, because it is during the time of a prophet's advent that true wisdom is distinctly established.

2778 A thousand months are equal to about 83 years, leaving 17 years to complete a century. There is a saying of the Holy Prophet according to which a mujaddid, or a reformer, will appear among the Muslims at the commencement of every century. The deeper significance of lailat-ul-qadr given in the previous note finds additional support in the circumstance that such a reformer would, under ordinary circumstances, work for some twenty years, and this period is therefore better and richer than the remaining eighty years marked by the absence of a reformer.

2779 The descent of the angels and the " inspiration " also show that lailat-ul-qadr has a deeper significance, for though a particular night in the month of Ramaḍan may be characterized by great Divine blessings, it is more especially in connection with the mission of one appointed by Allah for the regeneration of the world that " the angels and inspiration " come down from heaven, such being the Divine support of his cause. For the meaning of rúḥ see 653, 2183.

2780 " Peace " is the chief distinction of lailat-ul-qadr. This peace comes to the hearts of the true devotees in the form of a tranquillity of mind which makes them fit to receive Divine blessings. Its continuance " till the break of the morning " is quite clear when the night is taken literally ; the break of morning would signify the approaching end of the reformer, when truth, like the light of the day, has made itself fully manifest.

CHAPTER XCVIII

THE CLEAR EVIDENCE

(Al-Bayyinah)

REVEALED AT MECCA

(8 verses)

In the name of Allah, the Beneficent, the Merciful.	بِسْمِ اللّٰهِ الرَّحْمٰنِ الرَّحِيْمِ
1 Those who disbelieved from among the followers of the Book and the polytheists could not have separated (from the faithful) until there had come to them the clear evidence:[2781]	لَمْ يَكُنِ الَّذِيْنَ كَفَرُوْا مِنْ اَهْلِ الْكِتٰبِ وَالْمُشْرِكِيْنَ مُنْفَكِّيْنَ حَتّٰى تَاْتِيَهُمُ الْبَيِّنَةُ ۙ
2 An apostle from Allah, reciting pure pages,[2782]	رَسُوْلٌ مِّنَ اللّٰهِ يَتْلُوْا صُحُفًا مُّطَهَّرَةً ۙ

General remarks.

THE Holy Prophet, who received the mightiest of the revelations, is here called the Clear Evidence (the words supplying the name to this chapter), who distinguished truth from falsehood, because his revelation, as this chapter shows, contained all the pure and essential teachings of the previous scriptures. It may not be one of the early revelations, but there seems to be no doubt that it is a Meccan revelation, such being the opinion of the majority.

2781 There is a difficulty in this passage about the word munfakkin, which is ordinarily followed by the object from which the separation is declared. Thus you say: انفك الشيء من الشيء i.e. the thing became separated from the thing, and انفككت منك signifies I became separated from you (TA-LL). The commentators have felt a difficulty in supplying the omission, and they generally suppose عن كفرهم i.e. from their disbelief, to be understood after the word munfakkin. But this introduces new difficulties (Rz). The omission is really, as in the case of all omissions in the Holy Qur-án, suggested by the context. Those who disbelieved from among the people of the Book and the polytheists clearly suggests two parties of the people, those who disbelieved in the Holy Prophet and those who believed in him, and the mention of one in such a case is always sufficient. The good ones or the faithful could not be distinguished from the evil ones or those who disbelieved until the Distinguisher—al bayyinah, or the Clear Evidence—had made his appearance. What the bayyinah is, is explained in the next verse: it is an apostle from Allah.

2782 It should be noted that the Apostle is here described as reciting pure pages, thus showing clearly that the Qur-án existed in a written form at the time of the revelation of this chapter; and if the earlier revelations were so systematically written down, it is a clear proof that the later revelation was also regularly consigned to writing.

Or, ordinances.

3 Wherein are all the right books.[2783]

4 And those who were given the Book did not become divided except after clear evidence had come to them.[2784]

5 And they were not enjoined anything except that they should serve Allah, being sincere to Him in obedience, upright, and keep up prayer and pay the poor-rate, and that is the right religion.

6 Surely those who disbelieve from among the followers of the Book and the polytheists shall be in the fire of hell, abiding therein; they are the worst of men.

7 (As for) those who believe and do good, surely they are the best of men.

8 Their reward with their Lord is gardens of perpetuity beneath which rivers flow, abiding therein for ever; Allah is well pleased with them and they are well pleased with Him;[2785] that is for him who fears his Lord.

رَضِيَ اللّٰهُ عَنْهُمْ وَرَضُوْا عَنْهُ ؕ ذٰلِكَ لِمَنْ خَشِيَ رَبَّهٗ

2783 Kutub, plural of kitáb, signifies ordinances as well as books. Whichever significance may be adopted, the meaning of the passage is that in the Holy Qur-án all those right directions are to be met with which were revealed in any other book, as well as those which may not have been previously revealed, but which are necessary for the guidance of man. The Qur-án thus claims to contain all the good points of other sacred books, and, in addition, to supply their deficiencies. The addition of the word qayyimah, or right, to kutub, is to show that the Holy Book is freed from all the errors which crept into other sacred books; to the same purpose is the use of the word mutaharah (as qualifying the Qur-án), which signifies مطهرة عن الباطل i.e. purified from falsehood (Rz).

2784 The division into parties mentioned here is either the same as that spoken of in v. 1, or else it means that the people of the Book aforetime became divided into parties, some accepting and others rejecting, some following the good and others the evil, until clear evidence came to them; and thus it is affirmed that the separation of the good and the evil always followed the coming of a separator, and that what happened now also happened before when apostles appeared among the followers of the Book.

2785 This description of the companions of the Holy Prophet is a conclusive proof of the falsity of the abuses levelled at them.

CHAPTER XCIX

THE SHAKING

(Az-Zilzál)

REVEALED AT MECCA

(8 verses)

General remarks.

THE shaking spoken of in the first verse of this chapter, from which it receives its title, is a prophecy of the great disasters which shook Arabia at the advent of the Holy Prophet, and of the unprecedented disasters which are shaking the whole world now. As a transformation was brought about as the result of these disasters in the time of the Holy Prophet, a great spiritual awakening is expected even now. The chapter is one of the earliest revelations.

2786 Considered in connection with this life, the prophecies refer to the time when, after being severely shaken, as Arabia was, the earth was to bring forth its dead, who would then be raised spiritually to life. For this significance of zalzalah, or shaking, see 1668. The telling of her news by the earth signifies the appearance of circumstances which would make manifest what evil and injustice had been wrought on her, as is shown by the confession of the Meccans that they had been evil-doers. Some consider the verses to describe the signs of the latter days, or of the approach of the judgment day, the words indicating in that case that great earthquakes and other disasters would shake the whole of the earth. These disasters in the form of earthquakes and wars, culminating in the mighty European conflict of our own times, are quite unprecedented in the history of the world, and have shaken the earth almost to its foundations, and are a clear sign that we are living in days which are spoken of in the sacred writings as the latter days. The bringing forth of its burdens would in that case signify the laying open of its great treasures in the form of its mineral and other productions. Others, still, think that the whole only applies to the last, or the resurrection day, but man's saying what has befallen her is better explained if the verses are taken as relating to this life.

2786A The consequences of the good and the evil that a man works are often shown to him in this life, though their perfect manifestation must no doubt take place hereafter. The Holy Prophet's followers and his opponents were, however, made to taste of the good and the evil respectively which they had done in this very life, as a proof that the reward and the punishment of the hereafter was also a truth.

CHAPTER C

THE ASSAULTERS

(Al-'Ádiyát)

REVEALED AT MECCA

(11 verses)

	In the name of Allah, the Beneficent, the Merciful.	بِسْمِ اللّٰهِ الرَّحْمٰنِ الرَّحِيْمِ
a 2099. Or, assaulters uttering cries.	1 Consider[a] the runners breathing pantingly,	وَالْعٰدِيٰتِ ضَبْحًا

	6 Most surely man is ungrateful to his Lord.[2787]	اِنَّ الْاِنْسَانَ لِرَبِّهٖ لَكَنُوْدٌ

General remarks.

THIS chapter receives its title from the prophetic mention of the Assaulters in the first verse, showing that the great disasters spoken of in the last chapter were to be brought about by means of wars. This proved true not only in the time of our Holy Prophet, but its truth shines still more clearly in our own day, and the unprecedented wars of our time are no doubt a precursor of a great spiritual awakening, even as they proved in Arabia thirteen centuries ago. And as in its subject-matter, so also in its date of revelation, this chapter may be classed with the one preceding it.

2787 According to most commentators, the description in the first five verses is applicable either to camels or to horses. The former view is based on Ali's interpretation, who said that by al-'ádiyát were meant the camels that run from Arafat to Muzdalfa, two places in connection with the pilgrimage ceremonial. الموريات قدحا in this case means the striking of their hoofs against stones in running so hard as to produce fire; المغيرات صبحا refers to their running fast on the morning of the day of sacrifices to Mina; while وسطن به جمعا signifies their coming into Muzdalfa, which is called al-jam'a, on account of the gathering of the pilgrims there (Rz). The other interpretation, according to which horses are meant, is based on the authority of I'Ab, Dk, and most other commentators, and refers to the horses employed in wars, the reference being of course prophetical. The reference may as well be to the warriors themselves, and the 7 And most surely he is a witness of that.

8 And most surely he is tenacious in the love of wealth.

9 Does he not then know when what is in the graves is raised,

10 And what is in the breasts is made apparent?

11 Most surely their Lord that day shall be fully aware of them.[2787A]

وَإِنَّهُ عَلَىٰ ذَٰلِكَ لَشَهِيدٌ ۝
وَإِنَّهُ لِحُبِّ الْخَيْرِ لَشَدِيدٌ ۝
أَفَلَا يَعْلَمُ إِذَا بُعْثِرَ مَا فِي
الْقُبُورِ ۝
وَحُصِّلَ مَا فِي الصُّدُورِ ۝
إِنَّ رَبَّهُمْ بِهِمْ يَوْمَئِذٍ لَّخَبِيرٌ ۝

word ḍab-ḥa, which is considered to be applicable primarily to a panting horse, signifies as well the uttering of a cry (TA-LL), and والعاديات ضبحا may therefore signify, consider the assaulters uttering cries, and thus the warriors instead of the war-horses may be meant. The producing of fire in this case stands for the waging of war, and al-mughírát signifies the raiders; the five verses thus giving a description of the waging of war by the Meccans against the Muslims.

The sixth verse calls attention to the ungratefulness of the Meccans in rejecting the Holy Prophet; the reference in the first five verses (in case the first interpretation is adopted) being to the arguments of his truth, as made manifest in the running of camels to Mecca with pilgrims on them, as Abraham, who had prayed for Mecca to be made a resort for men, had also prayed for a prophet to be raised among them from among his posterity. And in the event of either of the other two interpretations being adopted, the reference is to the evidence of his truth, which would be made manifest in the wars that would be waged against him by the ungrateful Meccans, to whom he brought the truth, but who met him with the sword.

2787A The Lord being Aware on that day stands for the coming down of the punishment upon the guilty, as in this world a man can avoid punishment only so long as his guilt is not known to the proper authorities. But the Lord is aware at all times, hence the peculiar mention of that day is to characterize it as being the day of punishment, whether in this life or in the hereafter. Similarly the words what is in the graves is raised refers to the spiritual resurrection to be brought about after the wars.

THE REPELLING CALAMITY

a 859, 1732.	6 Then as for him whose measure of good deeds[a] is heavy,	فَاَمَّا مَنْ ثَقُلَتْ مَوَازِيْنُهٗ ۝

General remarks.

THE repelling calamity of this chapter, which gives it its title, is the same as the shaking of the last chapter but one. The date of revelation is also about the same.

2788 Al-Qári'ah (from qar', meaning striking with severity) signifies الحادثة العظيمة or a very great calamity, and the word occurs without the definite article al in 13 : 31, where it is said: "And as for those who disbelieve, there will not cease to afflict them, because of what they do, a repelling calamity (qári'ah) . . . until the promise of Allah comes about." This use of the word qári'ah shows that the word signifies one of those great calamities which befell the Quraish from time to time. And although it cannot be denied that al-qári'ah is one of the names of the day of resurrection, the mere addition of al does not make any change in the meaning, but simply adds definiteness to the meaning of qári'ah, the word thus signifying the promised or threatened calamity; and thus it includes both the threatened calamity of this life and that of the hereafter. In 76 : 4 al-qári'ah signifies the great calamity which destroys a nation from the face of the earth, i.e. their doom.

2789 The opponents of the Holy Prophet became like scattered moths, and their great leaders, who were compared to mountains, lost their places in the battles, which are called a repelling calamity in 13 : 31; see 1282.

7 He shall live a pleasant life.

8 And as for him whose measure of good deeds is light,

9 His abode shall be the abyss.[2790]

Ar. thee. 10 And what will make you know what it is?—

11 A burning fire.

فَهُوَ فِي عِيشَةٍ رَّاضِيَةٍ ۝
وَأَمَّا مَنْ خَفَّتْ مَوَازِينُهُ ۝
فَأُمُّهُ هَاوِيَةٌ ۝
وَمَا أَدْرَاكَ مَا هِيَهْ ۝
نَارٌ حَامِيَةٌ ۝

2790 The original words are فامه هاوية Háwiyah is from هوى به meaning he made it to fall down (LL), and it signifies a deep place of which the bottom cannot be reached or abyss (TA-LL). The word umm means primarily a mother, and in all secondary significances some idea of the primary significance is retained. Thus among its various secondary significances are source, origin, foundation, support, efficient cause of subsistence, anything to which other things are collected together, the main part of a thing, a man who has the charge of the food and service of a people (LL). A place of habitation or abode is also called umm (Q-LL), because it grants protection to a man as does the mother to a babe. The abyss or hell is here called a mother to indicate that man's connection with hell is similar to that of a baby with its mother, viz. that his abode there fits him for progress in the spiritual world, he being brought up, as it were, in the bosom of hell as a child is brought up in the bosom of its mother, and that his stay in hell shall only be for a time, as the child draws nourishment from his mother for a time. Kf says: "Some, however, consider امه هاوية to be equivalent to هوت امه which is an Arab proverb calling for perdition on a man, and hence they regard the meaning to be: And as for him whose measure of good deeds is light, he shall perish (Kf, Rz).

THE MULTIPLICATION OF WEALTH

(At-Takás̤ur)

	7 Then you shall most certainly see it with the eye of certainty;	ثُمَّ لَتَرَوُنَّهَا عَيْنَ الْيَقِيْنِ ○

General remarks.

THIS chapter, which is appropriately entitled The Multiplication of Wealth, from the occurrence of that word in the first verse, states that abundance of worldly goods and of the comforts of this life is the great impediment which keeps men away from the real object of life, and therefore, to make them realize it, it has always been necessary to divest them of some of these comforts. It is for this reason that Divine wisdom sometimes requires disasters to be brought upon men. Hence this chapter is closely connected with the previous chapters which speak of disasters. The truth of what is stated here was never so clearly realized by the world as it is to-day. The chapter is one of the earliest revelations.

2791 At-takás̤ur is of the measure of tafá'ul, from al-kas̤rah, or abundance, and besides implying contending or vying with one another in the multiplication of wealth, etc., sometimes implies the doing of a thing with difficulty, and sometimes stands for the fi'l itself (Rz). Hence I take at-takás̤ur as signifying simply abundance. The word alhá always requires an object following it with 'an, to show what it is from which the attention is diverted. This object is omitted here because the statement itself is sufficient to show that diversion from the real object of life is meant. According to Rz, coming to

8 Then on that day you shall most certainly be questioned about the boons.[2792]

ثُمَّ لَتُسْـَٔلُنَّ يَوْمَئِذٍ عَنِ النَّعِيمِ

the graves signifies death, for it is said of one who dies زار قبره i.e. he visited, or came to, his grave. The statement is general, though made with reference to the unbelieving Meccans, for just as abundance diverted the Meccans from the real object of life, so does it divert always, and diverts the world even to-day.

2792 Verses 5–8 are considered as disclosing three degrees of certainty—'ilm-ul-yaqīn, 'ain-ul-yaqīn, and ḥaqq-ul-yaqīn, i.e. certainty by inference, certainty by sight, and certainty by realization. A man can by inference attain to a certainty of the existence of hell in this very life (vv. 5 and 6), but after his death he sees hell with his own eye (v. 7); but a perfect manifestation of it will be realized by him on the day of resurrection (v. 8), for being questioned about the boons implies tasting of the punishment for failing to make right use of what was granted to man. But the words may also be taken as applying to this life. By pondering on the very nature of evil a man can become certain of hell, this being the certainty by inference. Then he can acquire a certain knowledge by sight, by seeing the fate of others. Lastly, he is made to realize it by disasters being brought upon his head. It is of this that the Meccans are warned.

REVEALED AT MECCA

بِالْحَقِّ ۙ وَتَوَاصَوْا بِالصَّبْرِ ۝

General remarks.

THIS chapter draws attention to the testimony of Time in showing that those alone shall prosper who accept the truth, the rejecters being utterly lost, and hence its title. The testimony of time is threefold; the flight of time affords the testimony that it is only those who do not waste the opportunity of doing good that will reap the advantage; the light which shines along the path of bygone ages shows us that those who did good and enjoined good on others prospered, while the evil-doers have always been brought to naught; and lastly, the time of the Holy Prophet afforded the clearest and most conclusive evidence that the believers and doers of good were successful, while their opponents sustained evident loss. The chapter is one of the earliest revelations.

2793 'Aṣr signifies time or succession of ages (TA-LL). Taking the second significance first, which is considered by Fr to be the meaning here (LL), the statement made calls attention to the succession of ages already past, the study of which is sufficient to show one that the end of man is nothing but perdition unless he believes and acts according to truth and enjoins it upon others. It is only truth that gives real life to mankind, and the Meccans are told that the same truth will be found prominent in the ages that have passed away. If, however, 'aṣr is taken as meaning time, attention is here called to the flight of time, which is a clear indication that every man who is not engaged in doing some permanent and lasting good is really losing every minute that passes away. Some, however, understand by al-'aṣr the time of the Holy Prophet, and an authentic saying of his, in which he compares his own time to 'aṣr, or the afternoon, supports this interpretation. The meaning in that case would be that the time of the Holy Prophet would be a self-evident indication that those who did not believe and do good would be the losers; this proof is clearly afforded by the life of the Prophet. According to I'Ab, al-insán here means a party of the idolaters who were most severe in their opposition to the Holy Prophet (Rz).

The enjoining of patience upon each other follows the direction to enjoin truth, because the preaching of truth brings man face to face with difficulties, and unless he is patient and forbearing under hardships, he cannot adhere to the truth.

THE SLANDERER

REVEALED AT MECCA

(9 verses)

In the name of Allah, the Beneficent, the Merciful.

1 Woe to every slanderer, defamer,[2794]

2 Who amasses wealth and considers it a provision (against mishap);[2795]

يَحْسَبُ اَنَّ مَالَهٗٓ اَخْلَدَهٗ ○

كَلَّا لَيُنْۢبَذَنَّ فِي الْحُطَمَةِ ○

General remarks.

As opposed to those who are spoken of in the last chapter as believing, doing good, and enjoining truth and patience, we have here a description of those who, instead of doing any permanent good, amass wealth, and instead of enjoining truth, slander others. There is also a prophecy here that woe shall be the end of the Holy Prophet's slanderers. It is one of the earliest revelations.

2794 The slanderers and defamers are condemned here generally, with particular reference to the Meccans, who started their persecution of the Holy Prophet by bitterly slandering and defaming him, so that the pilgrims coming to Mecca from afar should not listen to his teaching.

2795 'Addada-hū signifies, he considered it a provision against the casualties of fortune (S, Q-LL), from al-'uddah (Rz). The enemies of the Holy Prophet thought that his prophecies of their approaching doom could not be fulfilled, because their wealth was considered sufficient to avail them against any disaster which time might have in store for them.

2796 The meaning is, he thinks that he would abide in prosperity, or in the place he occupies, because of his wealth.

2797 The coming of the crushing disaster implied in the previous verses is plainly affirmed here. Al-ḥuṭamah is derived from ḥaṭima, meaning it became broken in pieces (LL). The name is applied to the second stage of hell (Rz), a gate of hell (Q-LL), because it crushes everything that is cast into it. I translate it as the crushing disaster, so that it may include both hell and the other disasters which were prophesied to crush the wealthy defamers of the Holy Prophet, their punishment being called by this name because they wanted to crush the Holy Prophet and the truth he brought.

Ar. thee.

2798 It should be noted that the fire of hell is described as rising over the hearts, showing that it is within the heart of man that the origin of hell-fire lies. A man's hell is thus within his own heart in this life, and it will assume a more palpable shape in the life to come.

2799 The extended columns of the fire that rises over the hearts arise from the inordinate desires in which man indulges, which, never being satisfied, become a source of torture for man in this life.

THE ELEPHANT

2 Did He not cause their war to end in confusion,

اَلَمْ يَجْعَلْ كَيْدَهُمْ فِيْ تَضْلِيْلٍ ○

General remarks.

THIS chapter shows that if Allah was so jealous for the protection of a mere emblem of His Unity, a building of stones, the Ka'ba, that He destroyed a most powerful army for its sake, though the Ka'ba was then in possession of idolaters, He would be still more jealous for His chosen Prophet, whom He had selected to proclaim His Unity throughout the whole world. The chapter is entitled The Elephant on account of the presence of elephants in the invading army. It is one of the earliest revelations, and shows how early the enemy had made his plans to destroy the Muslims.

2800 The reference is to the memorable invasion of Mecca by Abraha, the Christian viceroy of the king of Abyssinia at Yemen. Abraha's object was to destroy the Ka'ba so as to divert the Arab religious enthusiasm to San'aa, where he had built a magnificent cathedral for the purpose, as well as the Arab trade. This army is known in Arabia as the aṣḥāb-ul-fil, or the possessors of the elephant, because of the presence of one or more elephants. The year in which the invasion took place is known as the year of the elephant, being the year 570 of the Christian era, and coinciding with the year of the Holy Prophet's birth. Unable to defend the Holy Place against the huge army, and failing to dissuade Abraha, who was now encamped some three days' march from Mecca, from his sacrilegious purpose, Abdul Mutallab thus prayed aloud, leaning upon the door of the Ka'ba: "Defend, O Lord! Thine own House; and suffer not the Cross to triumph over the Ka'ba!" and then the whole population of Mecca repaired to the hills around the holy city. Meanwhile a virulent form of small-pox or some other pestilence broke out in Abraha's army, with such severity that the army retreated "in confusion and dismay," many of them, being unable to find their way back, perishing in the valleys, while a part was swept away by floods (see Muir's Life of Muhammad, Introduction, p. c).

The incident is referred to here to show how Allah protected the Ka'ba against the designs of its powerful enemies, and thus maintained the supremacy of the Quraish over

3 And send down (to prey) upon them birds in flocks,	وَّاَرْسَلَ عَلَيْهِمْ طَيْرًا اَبَابِيْلَ ۙ

5 So He rendered them like straw eaten up? 2801	فَجَعَلَهُمْ كَعَصْفٍ مَّاْكُوْلٍ ۠

the whole of Arabia. Should they not then be grateful for this favour, and serve the Lord of the House, as clearly stated in the next chapter? There seems to be also an allusion to the circumstance that, in protecting the Ka'ba against an enemy, though it was then devoted to the worship of idols, Almighty God had shown a purpose in its preservation. The coincidence of this year with the year of the Prophet's birth no doubt furnishes the key to that purpose, because the Arabs not only knew that the Sacred House had Abraham's blessing, but also that Abraham had prayed for the appearance of a prophet from among them who should purify the House. The mention of the incident thus conveyed a warning to the Quraish that if the Lord had destroyed an army on account of its intention to demolish His Sacred House, would He leave those alone who wanted to destroy His Holy Prophet?

2801 The commentators relate some curious stories as to how Abraha's army was destroyed, but the historians only attribute the cause of its confusion to small-pox or pestilence (see Waqidi and Hishami). The Qur-án does not state how the destruction was wrought. The mention of birds is merely intended to show that they were destroyed and the birds feasted on their corpses, tearing off flesh from the dead bodies and casting it on stones. (For birds as evidence of the destruction of an enemy, see 1387.) Hence it is that in the concluding words their dead bodies are compared to straw (that is) eaten up. The stories credited by the commentators are so ridiculous that I need not mention them; besides, they are not referred to in any authentic report.

CHAPTER CVI

THE QURAISH

(Al-Quraish)

REVEALED AT MECCA

1 For the protection of the Quraish[2802]—	لِاِيْلٰفِ قُرَيْشٍ ۝
2 Their protection during their journey in the winter and the summer[2803]—	اٖلٰفِهِمْ رِحْلَةَ الشِّتَآءِ وَالصَّيْفِ ۝

General remarks.

THIS chapter is closely connected with the last, and in fact continues the subject-matter, reminding the Quraish of the great benefits conferred on them because of their guardianship of the Ka'ba. For this reason the two chapters were sometimes read together, leading some to think that this is a portion of the previous chapter. The date of revelation is also the same.

2802 Quraish is the name given to the tribe descended from Nadr bin Kananah (Rz). According to some the word Quraish is the diminutive of qarsh, a big animal of the sea which eats others, but is not itself eaten. This is the explanation given by I'Ab, who recited in support of this statement the verse و قريش هى التى تسكن البحر + بها سميت قريش قريشا meaning: "And Quraish is that which lives in the sea, and hence the Quraish were called Quraish." Others suggest other derivations (Rz). The Quraish were settled at Mecca and had charge of the Sacred House, to which pilgrims resorted from all parts of Arabia, and therefore, being guardians of the Holy House, they enjoyed special honour among the tribes of Arabia.

The first verse of this chapter is connected with the last chapter, and it was only to make this connection prominent that some of the companions of the Holy Prophet read these two chapters sometimes without connecting them with Bismillah. The meaning thus is that Divine protection of the Ka'ba and destruction of its enemies was a special favour granted to the Quraish, for it led to their protection. It is a fact that, being guardians of the Ka'ba, they were respected when they set out on their journeys, while within the sacred territory they enjoyed an unparalleled safety, as is also stated elsewhere in the Holy Qur-án itself: "Do they not see that We have made a sacred territory secure,

2803, see next page.

3 So let them serve the Lord of this House,

4 Who feeds them against hunger and gives them security against fear.[2804]

فَلْيَعْبُدُوْا رَبَّ هٰذَا الْبَيْتِ ۙ

الَّذِيْٓ اَطْعَمَهُمْ مِّنْ جُوْعٍ ۙ وَّاٰمَنَهُمْ

مِّنْ خَوْفٍ ۠

while men are carried off by force from around them?" (29 : 67.) But if the Ka'ba had been destroyed, the Quraish would certainly have lost their importance, and, with it, the special protection which they enjoyed.

2803 The protection mentioned in the last note was of special use to them in their journeys northward to Syria and southward to Yemen, the former of which was undertaken in the summer and the latter in winter, to carry on their trade.

2804 Feeding against hunger and granting security against fear were the two special favours conferred on the Quraish through the sacredness of the Ka'ba, because the pilgrimage gave a special impetus to their trade and the necessaries of life were brought to their very doors, while they were totally secure from all fear of attack, to which the other Arab tribes were constantly exposed.

THE ALMS

3 And does not urge (others) to feed the poor.[2805]
4 So woe to the praying ones,
5 Who are unmindful of their prayers,
6 Who do (good) to be seen,
7 And withhold alms.[2806]

اَرَءَيْتَ الَّذِىْ يُكَذِّبُ بِالدِّيْنِ ۝
فَذٰلِكَ الَّذِىْ يَدُعُّ الْيَتِيْمَ ۝

فَوَيْلٌ لِّلْمُصَلِّيْنَ ۝
الَّذِيْنَ هُمْ عَنْ صَلَاتِهِمْ سَاهُوْنَ ۝
الَّذِيْنَ هُمْ يُرَآءُوْنَ ۝
وَيَمْنَعُوْنَ الْمَاعُوْنَ ۝

General remarks.

NOTWITHSTANDING the favours conferred upon the Quraish, spoken of in the last two chapters, they denied judgment, and trampled upon the rights of the orphans and the poor. It is on account of their withholding the alms from the poor that the chapter is entitled The Alms. It is an error to regard it as a Medina revelation. It may not be as early as the last two chapters, but it undoubtedly belongs to the early Meccan period.

2805 Ad-dín here signifies judgment, i.e. the principle that every deed shall be followed by its consequence. Hence the strong one who treats his weaker and helpless brother with harshness, and who does not devote a part of his wealth to the help of his poorer brethren, is condemned as being the one who gives the lie to the judgment. How anxious the Holy Prophet was for the welfare of the poor and the orphans is proved by this.

2806 Al-má'ún is derived from ma'n, which signifies an insignificant or small thing (Rz), and is considered to signify zakát, i.e. the alms, on the authority of Abu Bakr, 'Ali, I'Ab, 'Ik, Qtd, Dk, and others, probably because zakát forms a small portion of the whole property (Rz, Kf, etc.), while its primary significance is said to be the small household necessaries, such as fire, water, salt, a hatchet, a pot, a dish, etc. (Rz). The first significance is preferable.

The mention of those who do good to be seen does not lead to the conclusion that this portion of the chapter was revealed at Medina, because the unbelievers are apparently addressed, as the first verse shows.

CHAPTER CVIII

THE ABUNDANCE OF GOOD

(Al-Kausar)

REVEALED AT MECCA

(3 verses)

In the name of Allah, the Beneficent, the Merciful.

بِسْمِ اللّٰهِ الرَّحْمٰنِ الرَّحِيْمِ

Ar. thee.

1 Surely We have given you abundance of good,[2807]

إِنَّآ أَعْطَيْنٰكَ الْكَوْثَرَ

Ar. thy.

2 Therefore pray to your Lord and make a sacrifice.[2808]

فَصَلِّ لِرَبِّكَ وَانْحَرْ

Ar. thy.

3 Surely your enemy is the one cut off (from good).[2809]

إِنَّ شَانِئَكَ هُوَ الْأَبْتَرُ

General remarks.

THIS is one of the earliest of revelations, and promises abundance of good of every kind to the Holy Prophet, while it shows that his enemies shall be deprived even of that good which was given to them as a favour in this life.

2807 Al-kausar signifies abundance, specially of good, and according to Rz includes the good of this life and the good of the hereafter. The existence in paradise of a river of this name, from which all other rivers flow, only shows that the abundant good granted to the Holy Prophet is such that others will also draw their good from him. It is related that I'Ab explained kausar as meaning abundant good, and when it was said to him that people say it is a river in paradise, he replied: هو من الخير الكثير i.e. "That too is of the abundant good." The marvellous success which the Holy Prophet attained in regenerating a fallen nation, which is an unparalleled event in the history of the world, is one of the features of abundant good promised to him in this life.

2808 To be entitled to receive the abundant good promised to him, the Holy Prophet is told to pray to his Lord and to make a sacrifice, thus showing that any one who is desirous of obtaining the good of this life and the good of the hereafter should pray and make a sacrifice.

2809 The word abtar (from batr, meaning the cutting off of a thing entirely), as applied to a beast, means one whose tail is cut off. As applied to a man it conveys several significances, for instance, in want or poor, suffering loss, one from whom all good or prosperity is cut off, having no offspring or progeny (LL).

The wording of this verse shows that the statement is a retort against the opponents who called the Holy Prophet an abtar. It means that when the opponent dies no one shall succeed him; that he shall be cut off in failure and without attaining his object; that he shall have no helpers, and that he shall remain in contempt and abasement (Rz). Hence the verse contains a prophecy that as on the one hand the Prophet shall have abundance of all good, on the other his enemies shall be cut off from all good, not being able to attain their object in opposing the Holy Prophet, nor shall their children be their successors in their unbelief and opposition to the Holy Prophet.

CHAPTER CIX

THE UNBELIEVERS

(Al-Káfirún)

REVEALED AT MECCA

(6 verses)

In the name of Allah, the Beneficent, the Merciful.

1 Say: O unbelievers!
2 I do not serve that which you serve,
3 Nor do you serve Him whom I serve:
4 Nor am I going to serve that which you serve,
5 Nor are you going to serve Him whom I serve:
6 You shall have your recompense and I shall have my recompense.[2810]

بِسْمِ اللّٰهِ الرَّحْمٰنِ الرَّحِيْمِ
قُلْ يٰٓاَيُّهَا الْكٰفِرُوْنَ
لَآ اَعْبُدُ مَا تَعْبُدُوْنَ
وَلَآ اَنْتُمْ عٰبِدُوْنَ مَآ اَعْبُدُ
وَلَآ اَنَا عَابِدٌ مَّا عَبَدْتُّمْ
وَلَآ اَنْتُمْ عٰبِدُوْنَ مَآ اَعْبُدُ
لَكُمْ دِيْنُكُمْ وَلِيَ دِيْنِ

General remarks.

THE Unbelievers (hence the title) are told in this chapter that they shall be requited for their misdeeds, while the Prophet shall reap the reward of his deeds. It belongs to the early Meccan period.

2810 The word dín signifies recompense or reward. It is a prophecy that those who serve Allah shall have a goodly reward from Him, while those who serve idols shall not obtain any help from their false gods. The next chapter refers to the reward of the truthful, Divine help and victory, and men entering into Islam in hosts, while the one following shows that the recompense of the idol-worshippers is that their wealth and all their efforts shall be entirely unavailing. Those who think that these words indicate that the Holy Prophet had despaired of the unbelievers and left them to their religion are mistaken. Not for a single moment did he cease to invite the unbelievers to accept Islam and to forsake the worship of the idols.

CHAPTER CX

THE HELP

(An-Naṣr)

General remarks.

THIS chapter speaks of the great Divine Help and victory (from which it receives its title) with which the Holy Prophet's endeavours in the cause of truth were crowned. According to I'Ab it was an indication of the Holy Prophet's approaching end (Bkh). And Ibn-i-'Umar is reported as saying that this chapter was revealed during the last pilgrimage of the Holy Prophet, and that he lived only eighty days after its revelation (AH). Hence, though classed with the Medinian revelation, it was actually revealed at Mecca. As a complete chapter it may be said to be the last revelation of the Holy Prophet, and, coming down at Mecca, it showed how those wonderful prophecies, announced in utter loneliness and helplessness, were now fulfilled at Mecca by the Prophet visiting that sacred city with over a hundred thousand followers.

2811 The great victory which had come, and been followed by the conversion of Arabs in companies, was the conquest of Mecca in the year 8 A.H., while the next year was the year of deputations from Arab tribes embracing Islam one after another. The great and wonderful prophecies of the conversion of Arabia and of its subjugation being thus clearly fulfilled, the Prophet was given to understand that the time had now come when he should prepare to meet the Lord.

2812 Here the Prophet is told that when that great victory is attained which will make the truth of Islam shine as the midday sun, so that people would enter into the religion of Islam not by ones and twos but in whole companies, as happened after the conquest of Mecca, then he should give glory to Allah for bringing about this wonderful change and fulfilling his promises, at the same time asking Divine forgiveness for the people who would then enter Islam. For the truth is, not only were those people guilty of the gravest atrocities against the Holy Prophet, but they had also wrought many other wicked deeds, and deserved to be severely punished by the Lord; but as the Holy Prophet himself forgave them all their tyrannies against him and his companions with a magnanimity of which history cannot present another single instance—the victor passing over all the atrocities of his cruellest oppressors just at the time of the greatest excitement, the hour of victory, when all those tyrants lay at his mercy, and when the most humane general could not but punish those who had spent their whole lives in striving for the utter extinction of the victor and his followers—at such a moment, when the Holy Prophet was to lay open the unique vastness of his compassionate mind in forgiving his deadliest foes, he was further required to ask Divine forgiveness for his very oppressors. "Forgive thine enemy" is an easy injunction to utter, but let history be searched if it can present another instance of the forgiveness of one's deadliest enemies under such circumstances; a forgiveness not only of their crimes against the Prophet and his companions, but also a forgiveness, through prayer to the Lord, of all the enormities and sins which those enemies had committed against the Divine Being, and for which Divine punishment would surely have overtaken them, had it not been for the Prophet's intercession, which he is here commanded to exercise on their behalf. And how peaceful the end of one who departs from this world not only with the satisfaction that he had achieved the great goal of his life and raised his friends and followers to the highest position to which man can aspire, but with even a greater satisfaction than that, that he had not taken revenge upon his oppressors, but had forgiven them without uttering a word of reproof, and even interceded on their behalf! Here is an example of intercession not on behalf of friends but on behalf of foes! Does history present any other single instance of this kind?

CHAPTER CXI

THE FLAME

(Al-Lahab)

REVEALED AT MECCA

(5 verses)

In the name of Allah, the Beneficent, the Merciful.	بِسْمِ اللّٰهِ الرَّحْمٰنِ الرَّحِيْمِ
1 Perdition overtake both hands of the father of the flame, and he will perish.[2813]	تَبَّتْ يَدَآ اَبِيْ لَهَبٍ وَّتَبَّ ۝
2 His wealth and what he earns will not avail him.	مَآ اَغْنٰى عَنْهُ مَالُهٗ وَمَا كَسَبَ ۝
3 He shall soon burn in fire that flames,[2814]	سَيَصْلٰى نَارًا ذَاتَ لَهَبٍ ۝

General remarks.

WHILE the last chapter speaks of the peaceful end of a righteous man, because he attains the great object of his life, the present chapter shows that the fiery-tempered opponents of truth led their lives in heart-burning, which assumes the palpable shape of flames of fire in another life. It is therefore entitled the Flame. The chapter is one of the earliest revelations, according to all authorities.

2813 A man of a fiery temper may be called abú-lahab or father of flame, as a sharír or a mischievous man may be called abush-sharr or father of mischief, and a good man may be called abul-khair, i.e. father of goodness (Rz, AH). Abdul 'Uzza, an uncle of the Holy Prophet, being a cousin of his grandfather Abdul Muttalab, was known by this name, perhaps on account of his severe opposition to the Holy Prophet. It is related that the Holy Prophet, being commanded to warn his near relatives, called them together and delivered the Divine message, at which Abdul 'Uzza cried out: "May you perish! was it for this that you summoned us?" (Bkh). It is also related that he followed the Prophet when he went forth to preach, saying to the people that the Prophet was a mad relative of his. He is related to have died seven days after hearing of the defeat of the Meccans at Badr.

By both hands is meant, according to some, al-jumlah, i.e. Abu Lahab himself, as is stated elsewhere in the Holy Qur-án: "This is due to what your two hands have sent before" (22:10), meaning, of course, what you have sent before. Others, however, say that both hands mean his religion and his worldly hopes (Rz).

2814 The fire that flames is fittingly described as the punishment of the father of the flame, being a punishment corresponding to the sin, as is indicated in 78 : 26.

Or, fuel.

4 And his wife, the bearer of slander,[2815]

5 Upon her neck a halter of strongly twisted rope.[2816]

وَّامۡرَاَتُهٗ ؕ حَمَّالَةَ الۡحَطَبِ ۚ

فِىۡ جِيۡدِهَا حَبۡلٌ مِّنۡ مَّسَدٍ ۟

2815 Abu Lahab's wife was Umm-i-Jameela, the sister of Abu Sufyan. She is called here ḥammálat-ul-ḥaṭab, whose literal rendering, bearer of fuel, is generally adopted. The explanation given is that she was guilty of many mischievous deeds in her opposition to the Holy Prophet, these deeds serving as the fuel which should ultimately kindle the fire which was her destination. This is the view taken by Abu Muslim and Sa'íd bin Jubair (Rz). But Bukharee accepts Mjd's explanation of ḥammálat-ul-ḥaṭab, or fuel-bearer, as meaning تمشى بالنميمة i.e. she used to spread evil reports against the Holy Prophet. And ḥaṭab means calumny or slander (Mgh, TA-LL). Further than that we have a proverb similar to the phrase used here. You say يحمل الحطب بين الناس meaning he goes about with calumny among the people (A-LL). And ḥáṭib-ul-lail is one who speaks what is bad and what is good (TA-LL). A similar explanation is given by Qatada, who adds that she used to spread evil reports about the Holy Prophet (Rz).

2816 The halter of strongly twisted rope also represents a punishment corresponding to sin, for it is related that she used to gather thorns bound with a rope, which she brought on her own head to spread in the Prophet's way.

CHAPTER CXII

THE UNITY

(Al-Ikhlâṣ)

REVEALED AT MECCA

(4 verses)

In the name of Allah, the Beneficent, the Merciful.	بِسْمِ اللّٰهِ الرَّحْمٰنِ الرَّحِيْمِ ○
1 Say: He, Allah, is One.	قُلْ هُوَ اللّٰهُ اَحَدٌ ○
2 Allah is He on whom all depend.	اَللّٰهُ الصَّمَدُ ○
3 He begets not, nor is He begotten :	لَمْ يَلِدْ ۙ وَلَمْ يُوْلَدْ ○
4 And none is like Him.[2817]	وَلَمْ يَكُنْ لَّهٗ كُفُوًا اَحَدٌ ○

General remarks.

THIS is really the concluding chapter of the Holy Qur-án—the two chapters that follow only show how the protection of the Lord is to be sought—and it gives the sum and substance of the teachings of the Holy Qur-án, which is the declaration of the Unity of the Divine Being, the chapter receiving its title from that circumstance. All other objects are secondary as compared with this. The chapter is one of the earliest revelations, and contains a refutation not only of idolatry and Christianity, but of every polytheistic doctrine.

2817 It is noteworthy that this earliest Meccan chapter points out the fundamental errors of many religions, including Christianity, in its four short sentences. It proclaims in the first place the absolute Unity of the Divine Being, and thus deals a death-blow to all forms of polytheism, including the doctrine of the Trinity; for the Unity it enjoins is absolute and admits of no plurality of gods of any kind.

In the second verse Allah is said to be Aṣ-Ṣamad, of which a large number of significances is given, but the best is the one adopted here, because the Holy Prophet is reported to have said, when asked what Aṣ-Ṣamad was: هو السيد الذى يصمد اليه فى الحوائج i.e. He is the Lord to whom recourse is had in every need (AH, Rz). The statement that nothing is independent of Him aims at the correction of the error of those who consider certain things, such as matter and soul, to have existed independently of the Creator. This doctrine prevails in India, and could not have been known to the Holy Prophet, for it was not known to any of the religions with which he came in direct contact.

The third verse points out the error of those religions which describe God as being the father or son, such as the Christian religion, which teaches both forms of this doctrine, or as the Meccan idolatry, according to which angels were daughters of Allah.

The fourth verse negatives such doctrines as the doctrine of incarnation, according to which a mere man is likened to God.

Again, shirk, or the setting up of equals with the Divine Being, is of four kinds, viz. a belief in the plurality of gods, a belief that other things may possess the perfect attributes of the Divine Being, a belief that any thing may be related to him, and a belief that others may do what is ascribable only to the Divine Being. These four kinds of shirk are rejected in the four verses of this chapter.

CHAPTER CXIII

THE DAWN

(Al-Falaq)

REVEALED AT MECCA

(5 verses)

In the name of Allah, the Beneficent, the Merciful.

1 Say : I seek refuge in the Lord of the dawn,[2818]
2 From the evil of what He has created,
3 And from the evil of the utterly dark night when it comes,[2819]
4 And from the evil of those who cast (evil suggestions) in firm resolutions,[2820]

بِسْمِ اللّٰهِ الرَّحْمٰنِ الرَّحِيْمِ ○

قُلْ اَعُوْذُ بِرَبِّ الْفَلَقِ ○

مِنْ شَرِّ مَا خَلَقَ ○

وَمِنْ شَرِّ غَاسِقٍ اِذَا وَقَبَ ○

وَمِنْ شَرِّ النَّفّٰثٰتِ فِي الْعُقَدِ ○

General remarks.

THIS chapter and the one that follows teach man how to seek refuge in Allah and how to betake himself to His protection. This subject being referred to in Meccan revelations, as in ch. 16 and 41, the two chapters must have been revealed at Mecca, and most probably they belong to the early Meccan period. The many stories regarding their origin, as stated by some commentators, are not to be found in any authentic report, and consequently such stories must be rejected. Thus, the Qur-án opens with the seeking of assistance from the Divine Being in Bismillah, and ends with the seeking of refuge in Him in the Mu'awwazatain (from ma'ázah, meaning refuge), as these two chapters are together known.

2818 Falaq signifies the day-break (LL), meaning primarily cleaving or splitting, the daybreak being so called because it cleaves through the darkness. Hence it comes to signify the plain appearing of the truth after its having been dubious (TA-LL). The reference in the Lord of the daybreak is no doubt to the gradual manifestation of the truth and the triumph of the cause of the Holy Prophet.

2819 Ghásiq is derived from ghasaq, which signifies intense darkness (Rgh), and hence ghásiq signifies the night when the shafaq (or redness in the horizon after sunset) disappears (S, O, Q-LL), hence darkness in which there is no ray of light, and stands for the dark difficulties with which an affair is sometimes attended—difficulties through which a man is unable to see his way. It is therefore meant that the advent of truth, which was now becoming manifest, will not be attended with dark difficulties which may make it dubious.

2820 The two words occurring here which require to be explained are naffáṡát and 'Uqad. The former is the plural of naffáṡ, which is an intensive nominative from nafaṡa,

5 And from the evil of the envious when he envies.[2821]	وَمِن شَرِّ حَاسِدٍ إِذَا حَسَدَ meaning primarily he blew. But followed by fi it conveys another significance. Thus نفث الله الشئ فى قلبه means God cast or put the thing into his heart (Msb-LL); and نفث فى روعى means he inspired or put into my mind (Ib, As). 'Uqad is the plural of 'uqdah, which signifies a tie (LL), and judgment and consideration of one's affairs (TA-LL), and management, regulating and ordering of one's affairs (LL). It also signifies a promise of obedience or vow of allegiance (LA, TA-LL). Hence, النفّثٰت فى العقد are really those who put evil suggestions into the resolution of men or into the management of their affairs. Note that naffáṣát are not necessarily women; the word equally applies to al-jamá'át, or companies of men (Rz). The explanation I have adopted is, with some difference, the same as that adopted by Abu Muslim, which Rz pronounces to be a good explanation.

This verse deals with the second difficulty in the spread of truth or in the management of any affair generally. The first difficulty was its being enveloped with utter gloom; the second is that darkness is dispelled, but still the resolution to adhere to the truth is subject to the evil suggestions of those who would mislead others.

2821 This is the third difficulty. Truth has now become triumphant, but there are those who envy its success and who would not have its triumph maintained over falsehood. Therefore, Divine protection has still to be sought when truth has ultimately become triumphant.

General remark.

THE introductory note on the last chapter may also be read here.

2822 These verses are, as it were, a complement to the previous chapter. Three kinds of mischief are pointed out there which may be done to the cause of truth. Here a fourth, but the gravest mischief of all, is pointed out. This is the mischief of the slinking devil who comes stealthily and casts evil suggestions into the hearts of men. The whispering of the evil one is the greatest mischief because its source is in the hearts of men (v. 5). The word khannás is derived from khanasa, meaning he held back or hung back, and also he hid himself (TA-LL), and al-khannás is the devil, because he retires or shrinks or hides himself (Msb-LL).

The Lord is here called the Lord, the King and the God of men, Lordship implying a certain control, as that of a master over a servant, Kingship implying the next higher degree of it, as that of a ruler over his subjects; while Godhead implies a complete control and a thorough knowledge of the whole of creation. Or, Rabb is the nourisher and sustainer of men, Malik is the holder of control over them, and iláh is the one who deserves to be worshipped, i.e. to be made the goal of one's life.
